Washington. — One of the longest endurance horseback rides ever taken by a woman has just been finished by Miss Marion Oliver, daughter of the acting secretary of war. Miss Oliver, who returned here, spoke in enthusiastic enjoyment of her long ride. With her, besides her father, on the trip, were Mrs. Herbert Wadsworth, the society cross-country rider, and Captain Cheney of the White House staff. Three hundred and fifty miles of hard riding over the ragged Indian trails of Arizona and New Mexico made Miss Oliver's ride noteworthy. On account of the rough character of the riding Mrs. Wadsworth's feat of riding 212 miles in twenty hours was not excelled.

KILLED BY FALLING ROCKS

Ten Workmen Are Dead, Nine Injured in Erie Railroad Tunnels at Jersey City.

Jersey City, N. J.—By the fall of hundreds of tons of Palisade rock through the broken roof of the old Erie railroad trunnels ten workmen were crushed to death Sunday and nine others were seriously injured, five of them probably fatally.

The dead and injured formed part of a gang of twenty-eight hard rock men who were removing the mountain of stone above the tunnels to transform them into open "cuts" as was recently completed on other tracks adjacent. Somebody either blundered in blasting which weakened the brick roof of the tubes, or there was an unsuspected fault in the rock.

Ptomaines Kill Rich Man.

Salt Lake City.—David F. Walker, prominent business man, died Monday of ptomaine poisoning at his home in this city. He was one of four brothers who left the Mormon church in the early days and became the richest men in the community.

Two Men Drown at Kankakee.

Kankakee, Ill.—While canoeing on the Kankakee river Sunday Otis Brady and William Loberman of this city were drowned by the capsizing of their canoe.

EXPLOSION IN MINE

FRIGHTFUL HORROR NARROWLY AVERTED IN INDIANA COAL MINE.

ONE DEAD AND EIGHT HURT

Transfer a Few Hours Before Saved Hundreds From an Awful Death—Mine Did Not Catch Fire—Other News of Interest.

Linton, Ind.—One dead, one fatally injured and eight seriously hurt is the result of a gas explosion caused by a miner's defective lamp in [illegible] mine No. 10, nine miles [illegible]

There were 300 men working in the mine but they had been changed to another part of the mine in accordance and this fact alone prevented a great disaster. Andrew Baxter is dead, David Reese is lying at the point of death with a fractured skull, and Wm. [illegible]ty, Charles Young, Ora Parks, Frank Stewart, David Huston, James [illegible]on, William Cleland and George [illegible] are seriously burned.

It is impossible to tell as yet just how serious these latter injuries may prove. The mine did not catch fire, as was reported, and the fans have already put the shaft in working order.

Relief parties including practically all the doctors in Linton, hurried to the mine, as the first reports had it that more than a score were dead and as many more injured. The mine is nine miles from Linton and as the only telephone wire running to the mine is owned by the coal company, which had it in constant use, it was hard to get reports of the explosion and considerable excitement prevailed.

Fought Blaze Aboard Ship 12 Days.

Havre, France.—The French freight and pasenger steamer California arrived from New York with a fire that had been fought for twelve days still burning briskly in her hold. The crew was pretty well exhausted and called upon the city firemen to finish the job. The steamer California had sixteen passengers, who were glad to get ashore unharmed.

The steamer, which carried only second class passengers and not many of them, is owned by the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique and sailed from New York for Havre on August 27 with a load of merchandise. The fire started September 1.

Three Killed by Wreck of Special.

Bluefield, W. Va.—President L. E. Johnson and General Manager N. D. Maher of the Norfolk & Western railroad had a narrow escape from death when their special train crashed into the little station of Delorme, 91 miles west of here. Both Mr. Johnson and Mr. Maher were unhurt, but Fayette L. Woolwine, road foreman of engines, E. D. Burlon, the engineer, and John Roland, the fireman, were pinioned under the engine and killed and Station Agent H. O. Hughes of Delorme was injured by flying timbers and died on a train while being taken to a hospital.

Burglars Make Rich Haul.

Mattapoisette, Mass.—Ten thousand dollars' worth of jewelry was reported stolen from two summer homes on Lighthouse road in this town. Mrs. A. L. Dekoven of Chicago and Mrs. Arthur W. Blake of Boston were the sufferers from the breaks, which are thought to have been made by the professional burglars who are working along the shore of Buzzard's bay. Mrs. Dekoven reported over $6,000 worth of jewelry stolen and Mrs. Blake stated that her loss would be about half as heavy.

More Bullion Disappears.

Seattle, Wash.—A registered mail pouch containing several thousand dollars in gold bullion shipped from Fairbanks for Seattle is missing and is supposed by local postal authorities to have been stolen. The package was sent over the government trail to Valdez. Secret service men have been at work on the mystery for several days.

Canada Wheat Yield Lower.

Ottawa, Ont.—Canada's total wheat crop this year is 122,785,000 bushels, according to the estimate of the government statistician's office announced recently. This is 43,959,000 bushels less than the yield of 1909.

Rob Kentucky Bank.

Trenton, Ky.—Robbers forced an entrance into the bank of Trenton and got away with $100, all in copper cents. The other funds inthe safe were not disturbed.

Two Killed in Collapse of Building.

Charlerol, Belgium.—One of the exposition buildings in process of construction, collapsed. Two workmen were killed and several others were injured.

Clemenson Is Sentenced.

Chicago, Ill.—Motion for an arrest of judgment in the case of Dr. Haldane Clemenson, found guilty of murdering his wife a year ago, was denied by Judge McSurely and the prisoner was formally sentenced to imprisonment for life.

Will Wed Explorer.

London, Eng.—It is announced that early in December Mrs. Summer Clark of Peoria, Ill., will marry Col. J. J. Harrison, the explorer, and discoverer of pygmies on the Congo.

MRS. FENTON

BY

Here Mrs. Fenton, who had begun her narrative in listless, dispiriting accents, but had continued it with something more of animation, paused. She shrank from mentioning Fred's name to the vulgar, brutal wretch whom she associated with all that had been most detestable and degrading in her life, and who, she felt sure, would only see in her engagement an additional proof of her cleverness. Nevertheless, she had to tell him about it, because in no other way could she place before him a statement by which she hoped that he might be influenced.

"Of course," she said, after a brief narration of the facts, "you will not try to prevent my marriage; for that would do you no good at all. I know I shall have to pay you heavily; but I want you to understand that you will gain nothing—absolutely nothing—by threatening me with exposure after I am married. I have already made arrangements by which all that I possess will become my husband's property on my wedding-day; therefore, from the moment that I am Mrs. Musgrave I shall no longer be in a position to buy you off, and if you were to go and denounce me to my husband, he certainly would not give you any reward for your pains. Now, how much do you want?"

"Shall we say five thousand down?" questioned Mr. Dodd. "You will hardly call that exorbitant, I hope."

"Very well—on the condition that you are never to come near me again."

"My charming Letitia, it is for me to make conditions, not for you." I will think over your offer, and I will call to-morrow about the same hour. You had better have the amount agreed upon in bank-notes; for everybody's sake, it would be wiser to avoid checks in this instance. I only wish that I could afford to let you off scot-free; but in the present depressed state of business that is, unfortunately, out of the question. Farewell, Letitia, and don't forget to return thanks in the proper quarter for your good fortune."

As soon as he was gone the unhappy woman burst into tears. She did not believe that her secret could be kept. It was true that, when once she should be married, she would be able to defy Dodd; but it was also true that, if he chose to make subsequent demands upon her, she would do all in her power to meet them rather than be exposed. Perhaps the best and safest plan would be to confess all to Fred at once. If he loved her, surely he would forgive them! He would get the money in any case; the only difference would be that his wife's name would be Letitia, instead of Laura. That any man's love could be killed by such a disclosure as she proposed to make did not strike her as possible. But what caused her to hesitate was that she feared he did not really love her yet. Some day, perhaps, he would, and then she might discourden her conscience. When she went to bed, after many hours of doubt and thought, her mind was not yet made up. Whether Fred loved her or not, she loved him, and, although she had never felt any great compunction about deceiving him, she dreaded inexpressibly the reproaches which he might heap upon her when he should be enlightened, and when he should be bound to her for life. "I think I will tell him to-morrow," was the last thing that she murmured before she fell asleep.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Undecided people never abide by the resolutions of the previous night. In the morning everything looks different, and it is especially in the morning that common-sense is wont to assert its supremacy over impulse. When Mrs. Fenton woke and collected her ideas, she saw very clearly how tremendous would be the risk of immediate confession, and how much more probable it was that confession would be rewarded by absolution a few months later than at that particular moment. The upshot of her cogitations was that she made up her mind to be guided by circumstances. The first circumstance that occurred was the arrival of Fred Musgrave at 11 o'clock, in accordance with custom, and Fred was not in a very cheerful mood. The fact was that on the preceding afternoon he had had a short conversation with Susie Moore which had disturbed his mind. For Susie had confided to him that she was anxious to take up nursing the sick as an occupation, and that although her father and her step-mother were at present strongly opposed to her doing anything of the sort, she hoped in time to overcome their prejudices. Hence he was a little absent-minded, and quite failed to catch the drift of the tentative observations which his betrothed addressed to him.

In reply to certain questions of hers, he said, somewhat indifferently, what he had said once before, that, in his opinion, it was better that married people should not inquire too closely into the episodes of each other's past lives.

"But there might be a good deal to forgive," Mrs. Fenton suggested.

"I don't see that," he answered. "I shouldn't feel that I had a right to complain of anything that my wife had done before I met her."

"Not even if it was something disgraceful?"

"I have complete trust in you, Laura. If there were anything that I really ought to hear about, I am sure you wouldn't conceal it from me. As for bygone flirtations, I haven't confessed all mine to you, and I don't expect you to confess yours to me."

He would not understand, and when she tried to put him upon the right tack her courage failed her, and the words died away upon her lips. At length she said: "Men are less inquisitive than women, I suppose. I should like to hear everything that you had ever done from your school days, but I haven't asked many questions or obliged you to tell any lies, have I?"

"I certainly haven't told you any lies."

"Ah, that's an unpardonable offense, isn't it?"

"Well, I think it is," he answered, a little curtly. "At any rate, it's the one offense which I could never pardon."

After that, she gave it up and changed the subject. All the passion of her nature revolted against the yoke which her conscience sought to lay upon her, and revolted successfully. She knew that sooner or later a battle would have to be fought which must be decisive as to her chance of earthly happiness; but she determined that she would fight it upon ground of her own choosing, not under the most disadvantageous conditions possible. Presently Fred took his leave, having ascertained that she would not want him that afternoon.

Later in the day Mr. Breffit called in Albemarle street, bringing with him certain documents to which Mrs. Fenton's signature was required. She was at home, he was told, but the waiter believed she was engaged; in fact, there was a gentleman with her.

"Oh, a gentleman?" said Mr. Breffit, laughing (for so great was his acuteness that he thought he could guess who the gentleman was likely to be). "Well, you had better put me in the dining-room then; I'm in no great hurry."

Here the lawyer seated himself and began to arrange his papers, thinking it not unlikely that he might have to wait a quarter of an hour or so. The arrangements of the papers, however, did not take more than a minute or two, and when that was completed he could not help listening to the sound of the voices in the next room. First he noticed that the masculine voice was not Fred's; then he became aware that it was a very angry voice; and then he distinctly heard the words, "What I want to know is why you haven't got the money ready?"

There was an indistinguishable murmru from Mrs. Fenton; after which the man's voice resumed loudly: "Forgot! Now, look here, my dear; this sort of thing won't do with me. I'll give you another twenty-four hours; but at the end of that time I must be paid, or I'll know the reason why."

Mr. Breffit was an honorable man. He was startled, and his curiosity was much excited; but, since he did not relish the character of an involuntary eavesdropper, he coughed, pushed his chair about and finally knocked at the folding-doors. After a momentary pause, he was told to come in, and as he obeyed this summons he caught a glimpse of the retreating form of Mr. Dodd.

Mrs. Fenton's face displayed some signs of recent agitation; but her manner was perfectly self-possessed. She said: "I didn't know you were here, Mr. Breffit; I hope you haven't been kept waiting long."

"Only a very few minutes," answered the lawyer, considerately averting his eyes. "I have brought you the papers that I told you about."

He proceeded without further delay to explain the matters of business which had occasioned his visit, and found her as sensible and intelligent as she always was. "I wish all the ladies whom I have to deal with had heads like yours, Mrs. Fenton," he remarked.

"Well," she answered, "I dare say I am as stuped as the others; for there is one thing that I am not quite clear about. Can I do just what I please with my money until I am married?"

"Undoubtedly. Who is to prevent you?"

"What I mean is that I haven't bound myself to hand over any specified sum to Fred, have I? On my wedding-day I shall simply transfer to him all that I possess, whatever that may be. I ask because I may have to make some rather large payments between this and then."

"Until then," answered Mr. Breffit, looking a little grave, "you will of course be free to do what you choose with your own. When you speak of large payments," he added, presently, "you are alluding, I presume, to purchases that you have made."

This not being a question, Mrs. Fenton did not think herself compelled to make any reply, and a rather long period of silence followed. It was broken at last by the lawyer, who said abruptly: "I am going to be impertinent; but I must trust to your kindness to excuse me. That man who was here just now—wasn't he trying to extort money from you upon some pretext or other?"

"Did you hear anything when you were in the next room?"

"I overheard a word or two, I couldn't help it. Now, Mrs. Fenton, will you do we a great favor and refer this rascal to me? Depend upon it, I shall be able to deal with him much better than you will, and most likely it will turn out that you have been scared by a shadow."

But she shook her head. 'He has a claim upon me," she answered; "it would be useless to deny it, because you wouldn't believe me if I did. I shall have to buy him off. I am much obliged to you for offering to help me, only the case is not one in which I could ask for your help."

Mr. Breffit looked distressed and doubtful. "If," he began, 'this matter is in any way avowable——"

"But it isn't," she interrupted, smiling. "It isn't in the least avowable. How old was I when I ran away from Oxford? Seventeen? Eighteen? And now I am getting on for thirty-one. For a woman that is a whole lifetime, and all sorts of unavowable things may have occurred in the course of it. Well, good-by, Mr. Breffit; I mustn't detain you any longer. I dare say you have business to attend to, and, as for me, I ought to be shopping. Thank you for all your kindness to me."

She got up and extended her hand to him, so that he could only accept his dismissal.

Instead of going out to do her shopping, after his departure she sank back in her chair and sat for a long time gazing out of the window. Nowadays London is never empty; in the autumn especially plenty of people come up to buy their winter clothes and see the new plays, and Albemarle street was almost as thronged with carriages as if it had been the height of the season. By-and-by one of them stopped at the door of the hotel, soon after which the waiter delivered a card and a note in a coroneted envelope to Mrs. Fenton. The missive was from one of Lady Clamborough's distinguished friends, who had just heard that Mrs. Fenton was in town, and who wrote to beg her to join a small dinner-party and meet a certain celebrated statesman.

She tossed this invitation aside with a bitter little laugh. "How near I have been to getting all, and more than all, that I ever hoped for in my wildest dreams!" she murmured. "It seems hard to have braved the battle and the breeze for so many years and to founder in harbor at last; but I have deserved it, no doubt. Perhaps that is what Fred will say, and I am sure that is what Mr. Breffit will say. Poor Mr. Breffit! He is not at all happy at this minute. He is thinking that it is rather shabby to take advantage of what one has accidentally overheard; but then again, he can't disguise from himself that things look uncommonly fishy, and that poor young Musgrave ought not to be allowed to rush blindfold into a marriage which may have the most disastrous consequences. He can't decide as to what step it is his duty to take; but his indecision won't last long."

She did not finish her soliloquy, but rose and walked to a side-table upon which she had placed a photograph of her betrothed. This she took out of its frame and held close up to her face, gazing at it intently for some minutes. She kissed it passionately once or twice; after which she threw it away from her suddenly, cast herself down upon a sofa and began to cry and sob hysterically. Her tears, no doubt, relieved her and did her good; for at length she dried them, sat up and resumed her articulate musings.

"After all, I have had my day; and nobody ever has more. Nothing lasts—not even love. Love least of all, I dare say, though I know so little about it. Well, I'm glad I forgot to have those bank-notes ready; Dodd will never see his five thousand pounds now."

Cord-Holder Handy Thing.

The butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker, not to speak of scores of other tradespeople who have packages to tie up, will find a great convenience in the cord-holder invented by an Ohio man. It will save them much time and annoyance, and by its aid they will be able to do up a better bundle.

This holder consists of a curved wooden bar, made to fit around the waist, from which there projects a stand to hold a cone or ball of twine. A strong curved wire rises above the twine ball with a circular loop at the end for the string to pass through. It is also equipped with a knife-like arrangement on which the cord can be cut when it is time to tie the knot.

The supporting bar is affixed to a sort of light harness which fits over the shoulders and around the body and holds it in place. Thus any person who has many packages to tie up in the course of the day can have his ball of twine always at hand and will be able to do the work much more easily and rapidly.

How Long Your Nails Grow.

The growth of an average finger nail is about one thirty-second of an inch a week, or nearly one and one-half inches in a year, so those aristocratic Chinese who proudly exhibit nails six to eight inches in length must have refrained from cutting them at least four to six years. Finger nails grow faster in the summer than in winter. The nail on the middle finger grows faster than any of the others, and that of the thumb is slowest in growth. The nails of the right hand grow faster than those of the left. A nail is supposed to reach its full growth in about four and a half months, and at this rate a man 70 years old would have renewed his nails 262 times. On each finger he would have grown nine feet of nail, or on all his fingers and thumbs no less than ninety feet of nail.—St. Louis Republic.

Odd Signs.

A tinman in the south of England has a sign which reads, "Quart Measures of All Shapes and Sizes Sold Here."

At a market town in the midlands the following placard was affixed to the shutters of a watchmaker who had decamped, leaving his confiding creditors mourning: "Wound Up and the Mainspring Broke."

In one of the principal streets of another small town the same shop was occupied by a doctor and a shoemaker, the man of medicine having the rear. Over the door hung the sign, "We Repair Both Body and Sole."

On the window of a coffee room there one day appeared the notice, "This Coffee Room Removed Upstairs Till Repaired."

No Trouble.

"Do you have any trouble in collecting your bills?"

"Not a bit," answered the dentist. "My patients are always relieved when they find that my notices are not reminders of an appointment."

AD FACTS BY JOHN LEE MAHIN

Terse Sayings Taken From a Speech by Man Who Originated the Gold Dust Twins.

A trade mark at its best is an anchor for all creative sales work that a merchant or manufacturer puts out in connection with the goods he is selling.

Salesmanship is essentially an appeal to the mind of the buyer. The sale always takes place in the buyer's mind before he tells the salesman, either by word or letter, to book his order. It follows then that salesmanship should concern itself in discovering the present mental attitude of prospective buyers, both as individuals and as they may be grouped together, and then influencing them by the best means available to accept the seller's viewpoint of the merchandise he is offering to them.

Advertising rests on the fact that buyers can be influenced in groups.

Millions of dollars are being spent today in house to house canvassing, store demonstrating and particularly sampling, that could be more efficiently spent if retail dealers were educated to comprehend the true value of advertising space.

Many retail dealers have bought space from the publisher of a daily newspaper under the assumption that the space itself comprehended the real sales service. In doing this they were naturally disappointed and condemned the value of newspaper space in its entirety.

I am one of those men who believe that truth is stronger than error; that a man gains strength by doing things right, and that it is not necessary for him to organize and agree with this competitors in order to institute a reform.

Real reforms are accomplished by the individual comprehending the truth and successfully living up to it. And it is not necessary for a man to wait until other people do what they ought to do before he does what he should.

You may talk to one man; your advertising talks to the world.—Mahin.

At the Gunshore.

Harker—A man fainted in the dining room at my hotel today.

Parker—Heart trouble?

Harker—No. One of the waiters declined to take a tip from him.

He Didn't Know.

Ramshall—Has Hatley been happy since his marriage?

Millets—I really can't say, and I don't know how I'm going to find out. I feel delicate about asking him, and I'm not uncharitable enough to judge from his appearance.

PERSONALITY IN ADVERTISING.

Have something to say and say it. That's the gist of the whole philosophy of modern advertising.

Details of form, display, type, white and illustrations are simply side issues.

Teddy Roosevelt didn't have to know all the tricks of the printer's trade in order to become one of the greatest advertisers in history. He simply thought something and spat it out. What he said and wrote simply served to express his ideas, his policies, his personality.

And that's what every business man can get into his own advertising.

Your ideas are good or you wouldn't be a success in business.

The dishonest dealer is fast becoming a boneyard fossil. Most dealers are square dealers, and they can afford to say exactly what they mean in their advertising, and say it short, frank, quick and to the point.

Fairbanks on Advertising.

Speaking of advertising, ex-Vice-President Fairbanks said recently:

"Does advertising pay? has been the theme of numerous and labored utterances and there are, no doubt, remote and obscure corners of the country where it is still a vital, living question, but, as a rule, it has become academic, and many of the successes we witness in the market place have been achieved by the fullest recognition in practise of the affirmative of the proposition. The best advertiser and the best merchant are synonymous, and the poorest advertiser is usually the one who finds himself in a court of bankruptcy. Of course, all advertisers do not succeed, but I think it will be generally admitted that there are fewer failures among them than among those who do not possess the faculty of bringing their business fairly and favorably before the public."

The Aeroplane in War.

It takes very little to cause a stampede among cavalry horses; hence the need to tether them on the right principle. In the next war on the continent, where huge masses of cavalry are ever concentrated close to the frontiers ready for an immediate advance, the possibility of airships or aeroplanes dropping explosives among a mass of tethered horses will have to be considered. With horses badly tethered a few small explosives might easily stampede a whole brigade of cavalry.—London Saturday Review.

INJURED IN WRECK.

Conductor Thrown Down 25 Foot Embankment.

George Hahn, C. & N. W. conductor, Arbor Ave., West Chicago, Ill., says: "I was thrown from a car down a 25-foot embankment and my kidneys were badly bruised. Kidney trouble developed and for a whole year, I was unable to work. I suffered agonizing pains in my back and the kidney secretions were in terrible condition. My vitality gradually diminished and the doctor's treatment failed to help. When in despair I began with Doan's Kidney Pills and soon improved. Continued use cured me and at present my health is excellent."

Remember the name—Doan's.

Speaking of Fires.

Roy Bone, a brother of United States District Attorney Harry Bone, several years ago was a reporter on the Wichita Beacon. In going to a fire one of the members of the fire department was thrown from a hose cart and killed. Bone wrote a head, with this as the first deck: "Gone to His Last Fire."

The piece got into the paper and Bone was promptly "fired."—Kansas City Journal.

Don't Throw That Rug Away.

Just because a rug looks old and worn and the dust has been ground into it so deeply that a day's beating will not take it out, do not throw it away. Make a thick white suds with Easy Task soap, scrub the rug flat on the floor, wipe it dry with a clean cloth, and it will surprise you how beautifully new it is. Easy Task soap is an enemy to dirt and a friend to fabric of all kinds. It is the clean, white laundry soap that halves your washing and doubles your satisfaction.

Red Cross Christmas Seals.

Arrangements for the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals for 1910 have been announced by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and the American Red Cross. "A Million for Tuberculosis" will be the slogan of the 1910 campaign. Two features of the sale this year are unique and will bring considerable capital to the tuberculosis fighters. The American National Red Cross is to issue the stamps as in former years, but this organization will work in close co-operation with the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which body will share in the proceeds of the sales. The charge to local associations for the use of the national stamps has been reduced also from 20 per cent. to 12½ per cent., which will mean at least $50,000 more for tuberculosis work in all parts of the United States. The stamps are to be designated as "Red Cross Seals" this year and are to be placed on the back of letter instead of on the front.

Shrewd Scheme Stopped Run.

Many years ago, in consequence of a commercial panic, there was a severe run on a bank in South Wales, and the small farmers jostled each other in crowds to draw out their money. Things were rapidly going from bad to worse, when the bank manager, in a fit of desperation, suddenly bethought him of an expedient. By his directions a clerk, having heated some sovereigns in a frying-pan, paid them over the counter to an anxious applicant. "Why, they're quite hot!" said the latter as he took them up. "Of course," was the reply; "what else could you expect? They are only just out of the mold. We are coining them by hundreds as fast as we can." "Coining them!" thought the simple agriculturists; "then there is no fear of the money running short!" With this their confidence revived, the panic abated, and the bank was enabled to weather the storm.

PRESSED HARD.

Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When prominent men realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

A superintendent of public schools in a Southern state says: "My mother, since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker, had been troubled with her heart for a number of years and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach.

"Some time ago I was making an official visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat peculiar flavor of the coffee, and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum. I was so pleased with it that, after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal; the whole family liked it so well that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was as well and hearty as the rest of us.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but in a more marked degree in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

"Our Kindred Ties"

Address Delivered by S. Sylvester Knisely at the Knisely Family Reunion Held at the Home of Daniel Knisely sr. Allen Co., Ind., September 1st, 1910.

What does the word "Family" imply? If we were to furnish a complete answer to that question, we would find it necessary to produce a rather lengthy discussion which would be somewhat disinteresting on this particular occasion. For instance, think of the many species of animal and plant life that exist, each belonging to some particular family; the members of which are all more or less congenial to each other. That being true in regard to the plant and animal life, it is equally true from a human standpoint.

We have the human family as a whole, all decending from one common ancestor; and it is a well known fact that each member possesses traits that are common to all.

The word "Family" has been defined as "a household establishment; a collective body of persons residing under one roof and under one head or manager." That may be good as far as it goes; but to us who would maintain a substantial family union, that definition seems to be rather narrow: for when one person has occasion to leave his immediate household it is not necessary that he shall no more be considered a member of that family. Gone perhaps only temporarily or it may be to form another branch of the family tree.

Fathers and mothers often make remarks something like this, "Our children are leaving us one by one; our family is getting small," but when some holiday comes, or time for the family reunion is at hand, and all of the children with their respective families have assembled to spend the day at the old home. The parents are apt to arrive at the conclusion that their family has by no means grown small but shows a decided increase: and pity the father and mother that cannot have the privilege of enjoying such an occasion.

The family is well said to be "God's best instrument on earth for the advancement of the great moral and religious interests of mankind," therefore, it has been taken as a model for forming other associations—political, civil and religious.

The family life is based upon the wants and necessities of our nature and is essentially fitted to develope and foster those habits and affections on which the happiness and welfare of mankind depend. In view of these facts then, the family tree should be kept in a thrifty, flourishing condition. Every branch must be carefully trained that it may bud and bring forth fruits that will be a blessing to mankind. To produce these results, there are certain duties that we owe to each other. Requirements that apply to each individual according to the relationship he bears.

In the first place, the two souls that are bound together by the sacred ties of matrimony are the roots of the future family tree whether good or bad; and it is highly important that those contemplating that state should not be too careless or hasty, and never enter that relationship until they are certain that true love has brought them together.

The main design of marriage, so far as the dictionary definition goes, is "to constitute the family for the preservation of moral and social purity, the continuation of the race, the training of the young, etc." Therefore from the time of the ceremony the two souls should be one in purpose and sympathy. Selfishness should be kept in the background, and one of the first lessons to be learned is that of forgiveness. Perhaps there may be little misunderstandings, differences of opinion, frequent heart aches and possibly a few harsh words; but the married life, that has true love for its foundation, may rest assured that all of these unpleasant ruffles are only the result of two souls trying to understand each other better.

Let us not forget that marriage is a sacred provision God made for us all when he said, "It is not good for man to be alone." Therefore, he made him an "helpmate" to walk by his side through life, to kneel with him in prayer, to co-operate with him in his business, sharing his joys and sorrows whenever they occurr; and by this sacred relationship the twain has become one flesh: and although man may have great love for his parents, brothers, sisters and more distant relatives, yet if necessary, he may forsake them in a sense, and love his wife best of all.

Keeping in mind these principles, we must remember too, that it is not only for the good of the husband and wife, but also for the welfare of our posterity; for does not marriage in normal cases, anticipate offspring and possible parenthood? Therefore, there are duties that we, as parents, owe to our children. Just as the gardener trains each branch and twig of the growing plant that it may become a thrifty and useful tree, so must we exercise care over each tender bud that springs from our family tree, if we would maintain its honor.

Children are very impressionable. Their habits are formed with exceeding ease. They are naturally full of bright youthful enthusiasm. Although their childish notions may seem foolish and trifling to those of more mature experience, and the little feats they perform may seem practically worthless, yet to them they are great achievements and deserve our commendation.

See the little six year old barefoot boy. One trouser leg rolled up, one suspender down and a hat bearing the marks of a bumble bee battle, he comes trudging up the hill from yonder stream with fishing rod across his shoulder and one little yellow bullhead hanging from the end of a willow twig. That boy feels just as keen a sense of delight over that one lucky catch as do the fishermen of Lake Erie over a boat load of the finny tribe.

We should sympathize with our children in every worthy achievement giving them every word of encouragement that they deserve. Some children are starved, as it were, for a little hearty praise and a word of commendation given at the right time is meat and drink to the child in preparing him for the next endeavor.

Children are very susceptible to invironment, and a gloomy untidy home will soon crush out all that is lovely and beautiful in their natures, and they will become discontented with their surroundings. The atmosphere of home, then, should be such that the child will regard it as the happiest, the dearest, the most fascinating place on earth. A place where sympathy and affection prevails and where true and noble principles may be learned.

The qualities of every successful life have their foundation in the great and sublime truths that have been unfolded to them; and although study and school training may contribute greatly to this collection of truths yet those gleaned from conversations around our fireside are the ones that will seem more practical and will produce the most lasting impression.

Therefore, it behooves us as parents to practice such things before our children and discuss with them those principles of true nobility that will be the means of awakening in their minds aspirations of success and greater zeal to meet the vicissitudes of life. In that way we may arrest their feet from going astray, and we will live anew in their lives and bring a blessing to them, to our family and to the world, that only eternity can fully reveal.

Remember, too, that the child of today is the material from which the future family is made, and what the present training is the future man or woman will invariably practice, neatness, order, system dispatch, forbearance and love should be in the air he breathes today; then he will breathe these same qualities from his very being in the years to come.

Now children, you who are still under the jurisdiction of your parents and also you who are older and have parents to care for and love. I would have you remember that you owe them something in return for the great affection they have bestowed upon you; and for the pain they have suffered for your sake.

In sorrow they have brought you into the world and with toil and sacrifices, and possibly amid the most trying circumstances they have carefully reared you and (if they have not already done so) are looking forward to the time when they will launch you upon life's stormy ocean with prayers for your safety and future success.

You may think, at times, that your home is gloomy and your surroundings have grown monotonous. Yet remember after all it is "home" and a place where you are always welcome. A place where sympathy and affection are lavished upon you in abundance and where earnest prayers are expressed in your behalf, and in your absence anxious eyes are watching for your return.

No doubt you remember, on some particular occasion or it may be on various occasions, when your weary footsteps were wending their way homeward in the darkness, what a thrill of delight was yours when you caught the faint glimmer of a candle in the distance and knew it was in your cottage window. And well you knew also whose hands placed it there, and that a loving mother was awaiting your return. But remember, some day that light will cease to shine. Soon that home that is so attractive now will be deserted or else occupied by strangers, and there will be no warm welcome to you. Therefore learn to appreciate that home while you have it, and don't be too hasty in departing from it.

Take all good advice that your parents offer you. Although their ideas may not seem practical to your inexperienced nature, yet they know what is best for your good. And if the time comes when you must part from them, and though you may be separated from them by many miles, still it is your duty to remember them and consider their advice and counsel. And when they have become old and subject to those traits of second childhood, then it may be your opportunity to care for them as they once did for you; and this should be bestowed in just as loving a manner. And you should always endeavor to live honest up right lives, lest by some thoughtless act their locks will be prematurely silvered and you send their bowed heads in sorrow to the grave.

Many times we are inclined to be discontented and occasionally find ourselves in a state of despondency because we have hard times. But if we would stop to consider the hardships of our forefathers we can not help but feel that we are in very fortunate circumstances.

They settled here when the country was new and blazed the way for future progress: and e'er the sound of the axe has ceased echoing through the forest we are here to take up the work. They lived in an age of log huts, fireplaces and tallow candles. We live in an age of brick mansions, gas stoves and electric lights. They lived in an age of cycles, sythes and jumping shovels. We live in an age of self binders, mowing machines and gang-plows. They lived in an age of stage coaches, ox carts and saddle horses. We live in an age of express trains, street cars and taxicabs.

Then, why should we consider ourselves so irretrievably separated, when the expenditure of only a little time and money will bring us together in a very short time. However, those are not the only essentials; for although it may be possible for every member of our kin to meet in a reunion once every year, yet we never shall enjoy a true type of unity until our souls have been bound together by that most tender and affectionate tie, Brotherly-love.

It has been truly said that "Love indeed is a simple fireside thing that warms the poorest hovel into a home and radiates from this center to earth's remotest bounds."

True brotherly love prompts us to serve each other, without expectation of gaining returns. I recently read a statement which said that "many a man casts his bread upon the water expecting it to return in a few days in the form of a sardine sandwich." There is a great deal of truth in that statement, for it is often the case that we render so-called kindly services, only for the sole purpose of benefiting ourselves thereby.

Love without service is a very unsubstantial thing, but service without love is like "sounding brass or tinkling cymbal." Real love does not seek its own pleasure, but is kind, patient and unselfish; and the greater the service rendered, the greater the love that is manifested: and where true brotherly love comes from the heart, it never becomes cold and indifferent.

I have in mind a place where there is a beautiful mirror like pool from which flows several streams of clear sparkling water that never freezes: as the water that flows from the spring does not congeal in winter, neither can true brotherly love that flows from the heart become frozen by adversity.

If a brother, sister, cousin or any other relative has erred, true brotherly love does not immediately denounce him; but will endeavor to point out the error of his ways; it may be firmly, but with a true affection that can hardly be misunderstood, and the heart that has become hard and seemingly impenitrable, may be touched by tender brotherly advice.

Remember the love principle is stronger than the force principle and there may be times when it will be necessary to exercise a great deal of patience. It takes the long and steady heat to melt the dross from the gold; it takes the long and steady love to change the heart of stone.

Have we a relative that has had misfortune? If there is no other way that one can be of service to him, brotherly love will utter a few words of sympathy and offer prayers in his behalf. Have we a relative that has climbed the ladder of success? Brotherly love will send him a hearty congratulation.

True brotherly love denotes true honor. It does not mean that one should continually play the hypocrite in order to meet his own selfish ends; ready to praise a friend or brother in the morning and curse him at sun down. But on the contrary it prompts a man to be straight, forward and just; kind and benevolent and as thoughtful for the welfare of others as he is for his own.

What is the use then of kindred ties do you ask? This world would indeed be a lonely place if there were no such thing and we would find ourselves living in crowded solitude. However distant the relationship may be and though we may be separated by hundreds of miles, the thought of a worthy relative or a message from him may be the means of opening a train of thoughts that will relieve any monotony that may exist; and the person that has no relatives with whom he can associate is indeed very unfortunate.

Keeping in mind all of the principles of true relationship that have been discussed we will agree that the best way to develope them is by coming in closer contact with each other; and where is there a better way to do this than to form an affectionate and agreeable association.

We are living in an age of trusts, unions and consolidations. We have fraternal organizations, brotherhoods, merchantile trusts and hardly a branch of business from the most simple partnership to the greatest modern transactions but that are consolidated to some extent. We shall not say much concerning them at present, however, but if it is important that those organizations should be formed, isn't it equally as important that a closer union and more agreeable fellowship should exist in the family life which is the very cornerstone of the social edifice?

To maintain this union, it is extremely imparative that all members shall be agreeable and work together in absolute concordance. No matter how important the issue at stake or how substantial the organization may seem to be, when the members of a union begin to disagree and to use a common expression, cease to pull together the result is immediate failure. Just so with the family, although we may not be organized for any great achievement other than the fellowship and love that such a union should produce, yet we will utterly fail in that issue if we cease to agree. Of course there may be differences of opinion, but let them be discussed in a tender and agreeable manner and let no person think that his brother, sister or cousin is endeavoring to gain advantage.

Are any of our characters crippled by either of those two undesirable traits of human nature? Then let us endeavor to destroy them at once, for we shall never have attained complete success, neither will our family union have reached perfection until the last vestage of those abominable traits have been entirely eliminated.

Therefore let us make strong our kindred ties; work for the good of each other and bind ourselves together in a true and affectionate unity. Then we shall always have friends, warm hearted friends and when trouble visits our hearts there will be sympathizers. When sickness comes to our dwelling there will be watchers. When death claims us, there will be gentle fingers to close the eyes and fold the hands and consoling lips to tell of a resurrection.

We are here today enjoying ourselves as a united family, but the question arises, shall we ever meet just the same again? It may be that e'er another year shall have passed some dear ones will be called to their eternal reward, and at the close of such a family celebration as this, well may each soul contentedly render thanks that so many of our kin have been spared and able to enjoy this day together. And still amid all the comfort and pleasure of this occasion each heart is touched with a feeling of sadness in rememberance of the dear ones who have proceeded us to the better world, and we are reminded of the fact that we too sooner or later must pass to the great beyond. Yet we are comforted by the blessed assurance that, if we choose, we may enter the "City of the New Jerusalem" to meet our loved ones in the Eternal Reunion there.

Great Racer

Hicksville Tribune Gives James McKinley Words of Praise for Excellent Racing Done at Home-Coming.

The details have just leaked over the state line of a great race held at Spencerville on recent home-coming day, that vindicates the championship of Allen county, and gives DeKalb a tired feeling.

The world renowned king of the turf Jimmie McKinley, was the cause of all the commotion.

It had leaked and been spread over the country that DeKalb county had a famous Arabian runner, and would clean up Allen county in particular.

Jimmie is a decendent of wood old north of Ireland royal blood and is game to the core. He was imported into this country while quite young and while yet a suckling, showed wonderful speed qualities.

He was first used on a farm, but eventually drifted westward. Finally he attracted the attention of an Allen county lady, and she, admiring his many fine points and qualifications picked him up for a family nag. She eventually became so infatuated with his beautiful disposition, that she concluded to use him for other purposes as well as a roadster.

He proved so docile and such a high stepper that in time his lady owner became the envy of the whole neighborhood, and came to regard him as invincible in the ring.

The ladies of DeKalb county became envious and concluded to bring forth a stepper that would put Jimmie to the bad. Hence the challenge to Allen county, and hence the thin tailed Arabian pacer, with a wild glint in his off eye, with a few speckled Eppiloosi manifestations to kick and bite.

A challenge from such a quarter and under such conditions was not to be borne with and so Jimmie was brought in from pasture and put in condition to go over to Spencerville and show the deluded DeKalbers what a real Irish thoroughbred runner could do.

There was also a slab-sided, double-gaited runner entered from Posey county, but when his backers clapped eyes on the firey Jimmie, and noted his many fine points and his excellent wind they pulled their favorite and put their long green up on Jimmie.

Jimmie drew great attention in the parade, and at once became a great favorite with the ladies, as indeed he has always been, wherever shown.

The stakes were one-fifty, rules of the Grabill racing association to govern. A six cylinder auto with a mad desire to create a shortage in the gasoline supply was to precede the runners and act as a wind shield.

As the bell tapped and the word was given to go, the Spencerville people were treated to the sight of their lives. The way that Irish runner dug up the turf and threw sand would have made a pennyroyal bull in fly time turn green with envy.

At the first quarter pole, the boasted Arabian of the DeKalbers was trailing; at the half pole Jimmie had passed the six-cylinder auto, with its insatiable appetite for gasoline and innocent pedestrians, and when he cantered up the home stretch, it was hats off to Springfield's pride and joy The celebrated Arabian was coming along, back somewhere, but out of gunshot of the winner.

Jimmie is at home again, with his shoes pulled, and turned out to pasture but if there is any other county or community that think they have a runner, he can be made ready to go on short notice to get their pelts.

At the same time and place the lady had two unmarked youngsters entered, in a single dash against the field, and they won in a walk. They are promising youngsters, sired by Jimmie, and damned by the whole of DeKalb county.

10 CENTS A WEEK

Dissolving all relations with the Kist Agency the Journal-Gazette Company has cut off the 2 cents levied outside of Fort Wayne and reduced the subscription price to 10 cents a week -- seven days -- delivered by mail or carrier everywhere. This places the subscription price on a common basis and offers people the best daily newspaper published in the Middle West for a cent and a fraction an issue, including the Sunday Journal-Gazette.

With the Associated Press wires into its office from all parts of the world, with its state news service, with its Northern Indiana and Western Ohio special news service, its unsurpassed market reports and special features reaching every phrase of life -- the home, the farm, the live stock, and contributions by noted writers, all freely illustrated, the Journal-Gazette is certainly a model newspaper and for the price it cannot be excelled.

Remember that on and after September 1st., 1910, you can order the Journal-Gazette direct from this office or from any of its agents and have it sent or delivered to you for 10 cents a week -- seven newspapers.

Circulation is the real test of a newspaper and the Journal-Gazette leads all Fort Wayne newspapers -- the sworn average daily circulation for August was 16,321.

SULTAN'S PIT GAME IS NOVEL

Prisoners Placed in Labyrinth and Offered Freedom Under Unique Conditions.

A certain Sultan who was fond of all manner of intricate puzzles used to amuse himself by testing the ingenuity and resource of his prisoners of war. Among other buildings about his palace he had a peculiar maze, which consisted of 12 pits, open to the sky above and connected by a series of underground passages, which were quite dark.

Plan of Pit.

Upon one occasion he caused six prisoners to be placed in these pits, three of them dressed in red in the pits numbered 1 2 3, and three more dressed in yellow in the pits numbered 10, 11, 12. The Sultan commanded his vizier to provide each of these prisoners, who were complete strangers to one another, with a rifle and five cartridges, and to inform them separately that any of them who could escape alive under the following conditions should be set free and returned to his own country:

The three dressed in red were to exchange places with the three dressed in yellow, but only one man was to move at a time, upon a given signal, a bell for the red and a whistle for the yellow. Each man could move only from the pit in which he stood to another pit that he could see in a direct line with his own, the passage from one pit to another being always a direct line through the dark.

As each pit commanded a view of two others, each man was told that if he saw another man dressed in a different color from himself standing in any pit he should fire upon him at once and kill him or the man whom he saw would in turn shoot at him. If any survived and got to the other side of the maze they would be set free.

This plan having been explained to the prisoners before the day set for the experiment and each of them having been provided with a plan of the maze it appears that one of them had studied out a plan by which they might all escape with their lives, and when they were placed in the pits, the tops of which were open to the sky, he called to the others in his own language and was delighted to find that they all understood him, whereupon he explained his plan and gave the word of command to each man as to the direction he should take. In 22 moves they had safely changed places, no red man having ever seen a yellow man and no two men having ever been in the same pit at the same time.

How was this accomplished?

A Good Idea.

Said Janey: "I look volumes
And why, I'll tell to you,
I don't know how to read; so that's
The best that I can do."

Rose Guess.

Any one can play this simple game. Take a full-blown rose, hold it up where all can see, then let them write on slips of paper how many petals they think are in the rose. The petals are then counted and the nearest right receives a prize.

OFFENSIVE MANNERS.

How nicely little Cecil sits
And eats his Cake in careful Bits—
A Warning, John, to you,
Whose Mouth is filled with Beef and Egg,
The Remnants of a Turkey's Leg,
And half a dumpling, too.

It really makes me feel quite hurt
To see the Way that you insert
Your Fingers in the Dish;
Such Mouthfuls, too, have ceased to be
Since Prophet Jonah Marv'lously
Was swallowed by the Fish.

Pray from the Joint remove your Fist,
And do not stubbornly persist
Good manners to offend.
Some Day yo'ull choke upon a Slice,
Or suffocate from too much rice,
And that will be your End.

UNIQUE GAME WITH LETTERS

Each Player Is Given a Vowel and Five Minutes to Write Sentence—Longest Wins.

"Now," said Charlie, when everybody was gathered around the table, "let's play the vowel game father told us he used to play when he was a boy."

"How do you play it?" asked everyone at once.

"It's very easy," replied Charlie, distributing pencils and paper impartially among the family group. "You take the five regular vowels, a, e, i, o, u, and, beginning with the first letter, each player writes as long a sentence as he can, using no vowel except 'a' in any word, but repeating that letter as often as he wishes."

"I don't quite understand," said Cousin Lucy. "Please give us an example."

"You'll have to give me a few minutes' grace, then," laughed Charlie, taking his pencil and paper. "Suppose I take 'a.' He wrote industriously a few minutes and then read the result aloud:

"Ah, madam, Frank Farns, a tall, tasty, black man at Panama, has a cat that can catch all bad ants and bats at Nathan's pantry and barn."

"Bravo!" cried uncles and aunts and cousins, as Charlie finished reading the queer sentence.

"You see," continued Charlie, "you may give the players five minutes, or any time you agree on beforehand, to make up the sentence. When the time is up, the sentences are read and the one having the longest sentence of good, plain, commonplace English has gained the first point. You go on this way for each of the five vowels, and when all the sentences are read and compared, the person who has gained the most points wins the game."

A TRIP BEGUN IS HALF DONE.

Willie, Jennie, Mary, Joe,
Decided they would take a row
From Boston down to Tokyo.

Until up spoke the River Man:
"I really do not think you can,
For Tokyo is in Japan."

"But, why,' they asked in great dismay,
"Could we not go a little way,
And start again some other day?"

What happened then, I do not know,
But that was yesterday, and so
They must have gone to Tokyo.

LIFTING CATS AND RABBITS

Mistake to Lift Animal by Nape of Neck Without Supporting Lower Part of Body.

It is a mistaken idea that the proper way to lift a full-grown cat is by the nape of its neck without supporting the lower part of its body with the other hand, says Watchword. It is true that the mother cat carries young kittens by grasping in her mouth the loose skin at the back of her offspring's neck, but a tiny kitten is a very different matter from a large cat, and, indeed, the only way to lift a kitten without squeezing or hurting its soft little body is to lift it by its neck; but after it has grown larger its own weight is too great to be supported by such a bit of skin and fur as is so grasped by the hand, and many a cat suffers perfect tortures by being held in this manner, and is quite helpless to run or struggle, as in such a position certain of its muscles cannot be controlled, and it is absolutely at the mercy of its unconscious tormentor.

The same rule should be observed in lifting rabbits by their ears. They should always be partially supported by the free hand and not allowed to dangle with their whole weight straining from their large but necessarily delicate ears.

An Affair at Rose Manor

By DONALD ALLEN

Copyrighted, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

Miss Melincent Davis, daughter of the widow Davis, of The Beeches manor house, had lived twenty years without in the least suspecting that she was a born artist. She became aware of it at last through her mother. She made a little crayon sketch of the creek and the bridge below the house, and the mother had scarcely glanced at it when she said:

"Well, this settles it. We will sell the place and move into the city where you can attend an art school."

The daughter hesitated until she had made another sketch—this time of an old stub in a field with a woodpecker grubbing at it in search of breakfast. Then the mother said such talent must be cultivated, no matter what the cost—the cook said that the woodpecker looked as natural as an old hen, and the hired man said that any one who took that old stub for a weeping willow would have to settle with him.

"You go right over to Rose Manor tomorrow morning and put the property in the hands of a real estate agent," commanded the mother. After that, the thing was looked upon as good as settled. America was sighing for more landscape artists, and she should have at least one recruit.

Miss Melincent had an electric runabout. It was brought out for her next morning and she started for the village of roses. She remembered having seen a very small real estate man and a very large sign on a street corner, and she decided to call upon him first. If he said that manor houses were a little dull in the market just then she would call on a bigger man with a smaller sign.

She was making good time over the smooth pike, and wondering whether to ask $10,000 or $15,000 for the property, when the unexpected happened.

Mr. Eugene Bamford had returned from Europe. He was fairly rich and fairly lazy. He was no artist, but he knew when his coat set well. He did not know a woodpecker from a robin, but he could run an automobile. Just then he was visiting a sister at Rose Manor and driving himself around the country more or less. He was out on this morning. He thought all the rest of the United States was sitting in its back dooryard, and in making a turn in the road he did not decrease speed, and he did not consider his right hand side from his left.

Miss Melincent was in a hurry to get to that real estate office. Thousands of would-be buyers of manor houses might be waiting there. She was going pretty fast when she reached the turn. She might have been on the right side or the wrong side or in the middle of the road. A good-looking young lady is always entitled to the benefit of the doubt in such cases.

Presently there was a shout from Mr. Eugene Bamford! And there was a scream from Miss Melincent Davis!

Then, a turn of the wheel and both ran into the ditch and things crashed and snapped and sputtered! Both machines were damaged—hers worse than his, but no one was hurt. Mr. Bamford was gentleman enough to ask if she was mortally injured—to insist it was all his fault—to present his card—to climb the roadside fence for her hat—to declare that he would pay all damages and to ask if he couldn't take her home. His machine had lost lamps and mud guards, but was still in running order.

"I wouldn't care so much," replied the girl in a hysterical way, "but I was going to Rose Manor to sell some real estate. It may go down in price now."

"Too bad—too bad! I think I can tow your machine home behind mine, agent myself. If you have property to sell—that is, if you have property to dispose of—that is—"

"Why, how lucky," she replied. "You can go home with me and see mother and ask her a lot of questions. If you have enough money with you we may make a sale right off—today. I assure you we are willing to take a fair price. It isn't possible that you are an artist, too?"

"Yes'm!" he boldly replied, though he wanted to club himself the next instant.

"You may want to change the landscape around the house, if you buy?" was suggested as they were chugging toward The Beeches.

"Yes. I have changed landscapes."

"How splendid! Mamma thinks if the creek had another bend toward the house it would add to the scenery."

"If so, I'll fix it. I am a creek bender. That is, I can put all kinds of twists in a creek."

Miss Melincent was awed. She had taken the young man for a gentleman of leisure and he had turned out to be a real estate man, an artist, a landscape gardener and a creek twister. She was glad of the accident. She was glad she had not gone on to Rose Manor and dealt with the little man with the big sign.

Mr. Eugene Bamford looked at The Beeches through the eyes of a real estate man, and he looked at Miss Melincent Davis through the eyes of a young man rapidly falling in love. He had the mother to deal with, however, and after spending an hour looking over the property and taking his departure she said of him:

"Well, Mr. Bamford is the queerest real estate man I ever saw. We have four acres here and he thought there must be nine. He at first thought the place ought to sell for $20,000, and then came down to $7,000. Didn't you hear him speak of the house as a Queen-Anne?"

"I think the accident must have rattled him, mother."

"It was either that or he is just learning the real estate business."

Mr. Bamford called the next day and brought a man to repair the run about. He wanted to know the lowest cash price for the property; he went down and looked at the creek that needed another twist; he hunted for landmarks and looked over old deeds, and by and by, he was at liberty to look at and criticise Miss Melincent's two sketches. He scratched his ear and looked very serious and finally asked if the creek was not running uphill instead of down. In the other he readily recognized the woodpecker as a quail.

"Can you make him out?" asked the mother after he had gone.

"Why, he seems to be a very nice man," was the reply.

"But he called that woodpecker a quail."

"Perhaps that accident broke a rib for him and he's bravely trying to hide the fact from us," replied the daughter.

In two days Mr. Bamford was back to look over those deeds again. On this occasion he decided that the creek ought to have two twists in it. He also called that woodpecker a blackbird. He thought he could pay $17,000 cash down for The Beeches and then spoke of buying on the installment plan. Then he sat for an hour on the veranda with Miss Melincent and talked about books and poetry and Europe to her, and not one word of real estate. The next time he called in he made the excuse that he was just going past and thought he would stop for a moment to see if that creek didn't want as many as three twists, but he remained for two hours. At his next call he heard a voice saying to him:

"Mr. Bamford, I have heard of your mother and heard of you. You are no real estate agent."

"No, ma'am."

"You are no artist!"

"No, ma'am."

"You are no landscape gardener!"

"No, ma'am."

"You are no creek-twister!"

"No, ma'am."

"Then what are you?"

"Just a young man who admires your daughter, and proposes to fall in love with her, and make her fall in love with him, and then ask your consent to marry her and keep the dear old Beeches in the family."

And impostor that he was, he won the girl in less than a year.

How Dumas Won a Wager.

For rapidity of composition the prize among novelists must be awarded to Alexander Dumas, who died with over three thousand books to his credit, in all of which he had some share. According to Mr. Arthur F. Davidson, one of his biographers, he often declared that when once he had mapped out in his mind the scheme of a novel or a play the work was practically accomplished, since the mere writing of it presented no difficulty and could be performed as fast as the pen could travel. Some one disputed this; the result was a wager.

Dumas had in his head the plan of the "Chevalier de la Maison Rouge," of which he had not yet written a word, and he made a bet of 100 louis that he would write the first volume of the novel in 72 hours. The volume was to be formed by 75 large foolscap pages, each page containing 45 lines and each line 50 letters. In 66 hours Dumas had done the work in his fair flowing hand, disfigured by no erasions—and the bet was won with six hours to spare.

ALL ARE BORROWERS

MRS. CUMBACK TELLS OF HABITS OF NEIGHBORS.

Trails and Tribulations of One Who Tries to Be Accommodating—Loaned Dog Costs Her Husband $14.

"Here's the coffee you so kindly loaned me, Mrs. Witherspoon," said Mrs. Cumback. "I don't make a practise of borrowing, but when I do ask a neighbor for a little acccommodation I return what I borrow promptly.

"Now, Mrs. Wagstaff would be a model neighbor if she wasn't always borrowing and forgetting to pay back. A week ago she came over and borrowed six eggs. I hate to lend eggs. We buy our eggs from a farmer in the country and he brings them in while they are fresh, and all his hens are thoroughbreds, and he feeds them scientific rations, and of course, the eggs are superior. Well, I let Mrs Wagstaff have the six eggs. I just simply can't refuse to accommodate a neighbor.

She said when she got them that she'd return them the next morning. The days went by, and she was in our house a dozen times, and she never mentioned those eggs. I always brought the conversation around to eggs, but she didn't seem to take the hint, so finally I spoke right out and asked her why she didn't return the eggs she borrowed.

"'I have avoided that subject,' says she, as cool as you please, 'in order to spare your feelings. The fact is that they were all bad. Still, if you insist upon having good eggs for them,' says she, 'I'll send them over, but I thought it would be a kindness to drop the subject altogether.'

"Actually, Mrs. Witherspoon, I was so mad that I couldn't say a word. The idea of such an insult, in my own house! And we go to such trouble and expense to get the best eggs in the state!"

"That's always the way when you try to accommodate people," replied Mrs. Witherspoon. "When we were first married my husband set it down as a rule that I should never borrow anything from the neighbors unless it was a case of emergency. I have stuck to that rule as well as I could, but of course a woman who does her own housework simply has to borrow now and then.

"A few days ago I needed an extra saucepan, and I ran over to Mrs. Gooseworthy's to get one. Everybody knows that Mrs. Gooseworthy is the worst borrower in this town.

"Her husband is just as bad as she is. Mr. Witherspoon used to have a valuable watch dog that he prized above everything and Mr. Gooseworthy even borrowed that, saying that he had a lot of money in the house one night and was afraid of burglars. He put the dog in the cellar where I wife had left a lot of poisoned meat to kill rats and in the morning the dog was dead. Mr. Gooseworthy came over and told my husband about it, seeming to think it a great joke.

"Mr. Witherspoon hit him and they fought all over the yard for an hour, and broke down my clothesline and trampled the clothes, and they spoiled all the grapevines and currant bushes and just ruined my bed of asparagus. And Mrs. Gooseworthy telephoned for the police, and an officer came and arrested Mr. Witherspoon, just as if he were to blame, and it cost him $14.

"We didn't speak for a long time after that, but finally Mrs. Gooseworthy began her borrowing again. She had borrowed so much at our place that I naturally went to her when I needed a saucepan, and she let me have it cheerfully enough. When I went home I didn't need to use it for an hour or so, and then when I poured some water into it I found that it leaked. I took it right back and told Mrs. Gooseworthy her saucepan had a hole in it, and she said if it had I must have punched it myself, for when I got the saucepan it was as good as the day she bought it, and if I didn't buy her a new one at once she'd have her opinion of me.

"But I have my opinion of her, so why shouldn't she have her opinion of me? I am awfully liberal about such things, Mrs. Cumback."

He Got the Autograph.

Ellis Parker Butler was a clerk in a Muscatine spice mill when Bill Nye came across his horizon, says Judge. The night Mr. Nye showed at that town Butler occupied a seat in the first gallery—from the roof. The sad-eyed humorist pleased him so that he decided to write for an autograph. He wanted it for the front page of his stamp album. A carefully worded epistle brought no reply. Whereupon the industrious youth wrote another and another. No answers. Undaunted, he got a line on the route of his celebrity and developed an inspiration somewhat as follows: "Edgar Wilson Nye, Esq., Planters Hotel, St. Louis, Mo.: Dear Mr. Nye—I have been writing to you rather persistently. The reason is that I have discovered a new corn cure. I want to name it after you and use your picture on the box. I know that you are a busy man. If I do not hear from you soon I will consider that you have given your consent." By return mail came: "E. P. Butler, Muscatine, Ia.: Sir—Don't you dare to put my picture on any corn salve box! I most certainly do not give my consent to have the stuff named after me. I am commonly considered a good-natured man, but have a care! You'll know the reason if you don't. —Edgar Wilson Nye."

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her

Knoxville, Iowa. — "I suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more and was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and am glad to say that your medicines and kind letters of directions have done more for me than anything else and I had the best physicians here. I can do my work and rest well at night. I believe there is nothing like the Pinkham remedies." — Mrs. CLARA FRANKS, R. F. D., No. 3, Knoxville, Iowa.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills, and suffering women owe it to themselves to at least give this medicine a trial. Proof is abundant that it has cured thousands of others, and why should it not cure you?

If you want special advice write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. It is free and always helpful.

MAIL MEN CONDEMN ROAD TAX LAW

Wish Present "Farming Out" System Abolished.

AT GREENSBURG NEXT YEAR

Elias Frey Delivered an Address and Gave Some Insight of the Business Which the National Convention Will Take Up.

Indianapolis.—The Indiana State Rural Letter Carriers' association, which closed its two days' session, selected Greensburg as the place for holding the 1911 convention. W. J. Ward of Carmel was re-elected president. Other officers elected were J. O. Bonebrake of Veedersburg, vice-president, and W. G. Moulton of Parker, secretary and treasurer.

The following were elected delegates to the national convention, which will be held in Little Rock, Ark., September 20 to 23: G. B. W. Robbins, Rochester; Corwin Overhiser, Bonville; Edward Abel, Shelbyville; L. M. Onyatt, Fort Branch; Glenn C. Crist, Muncie; F. P. Delawater, Logansport; W. W. Lentz, Wabash, and W. J. Ward, as delegate-at-large.

Elias Frey of Pendleton delivered an address and gave some insight of the business which the national convention will take up. J. C. Crabill of Indianapolis gave an instructive talk on good roads, and J. M. Wolts of Hammond, post office inspector in this district, spoke as a representative of the post office department.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we are heartily in favor of the postal savings bank, and recommend its extension to the small offices, and we heartily approve of local parcels post.

Resolved, That we favor the repeal of the present law system of farming out road tax, and that the road tax be paid to township trustee, and the money be expended by him under direction of the county engineer, and we heartily indorse the utilization of convict labor in making road material, and taking the convicts out of competition of common labor. Also, we heartily indorse a vehicle tax.

Resolved, That we recommend the use of the road drag, and also the protection of dirt roads by law, the same as rock roads are protected.

Resolved, That we congratulate our honorable national president, Elias Frey, on his wise and efficient and economical administration of the affairs of the association.

Resolved, That we heartily indorse the good work of our state officials, and approve of the National Letter Carriers' Mutual Benefit association.

Resolved, That we recommend that the national per capita tax be reduced from $1 to 50 cents, and the state association pay the delegates' traveling expenses to the national convention.

Resolved, That we disapprove an attempt to the pension bill known as the Gillet bill, but do recommend the passage of the Goulden bill.

Resolved, That we disapprove an attempt to place rural free delivery under the contract system.

Asserts Loyalty to Senator.

That he had attended any political conference resulting in the recent announcement of the candidacy of Charles S. Hernly, former chairman of the Republican state committee, for representative from Henry county, was emphatically denied by W. N. Harding, president of the Columbia club. According to a report from Newcastle it was said Mr. Harding had attended a conference there on the occasion of the recent "boosters" meeting, at which it had been planned to bring out Mr. Hernly as a move toward the defeat of George Williams, the Republican nominee, who is an avowed Beveridge supporter.

"I was over at Newcastle at the time the new traction line was opened," said Mr. Harding, "having accepted a special invitation to be present on that occasion. Although I met a number of friends there I had no conference with anyone on political matters. I did not even know the name of the Republican nominee mentioned, nor did I know that Hernly contemplated entering the race for the legislature. In fact, I did not know Hernly had become a candidate until I read it in the Star. I have always been for Senator Beveridge; I am for him now, and I expect to continue a Beveridge man until I am convinced that he has done something—which he has not done yet—to lose the confidence of the Republicans of the state. I firmly believe in him, and believe that he is right on all the political issues he has advocated."

Welcome Negro Conference.

The seventy-second annual Indiana conference of the A. M. E. church, which convened at Allen chapel, was formally welcomed in addresses delivered by Luman K. Babcock, secretary to Mayor Shank; Gurley Brewer, Rev. H. J. Callis, J. H. Benson and Mrs. Ella Williams. Others who took part in the program were Hayes Wilson and the Misses Lillian Booker and Adelaide Thomas.

The conference opened with the annual sermon by Rev. W. H. Williamson of Vincennes.

Peyton Scores Critics.

David C. Peyton, superintendent of the Indiana reformatory, at Jeffersonville, has issued an open letter to John Sweeney of Tell City, for several years a member of the state legislature, explaining his attitude as superintendent of the institution to state politics, and replying to a number of criticisms which have been made of him by newspapers of the Third congressional district because he has not discharged a number of Republican employes in the reformatory and given their places to Democrats. The letter was addressed to Mr. Sweeney because Mr. Sweeney had inclosed to Mr. Peyton a collection of clippings from newspapers criticising the superintendent.

Superintendent Peyton's attention was called chiefly to a letter printed in the Telephone of Tell City, written by R. M. Baggerly, in which the governor was sharply criticized for permitting the superintendent to retain the Republican employes, as well as Peyton for keeping them. In an editorial the Telephone indorsed the letter.

In his open letter Superintendent Peyton calls the attention of Mr. Sweeney to the law regulating the employment of assistants in the institution and avers that since he became superintendent the letter and the spirit of the law have both been lived up to in every respect.

"So long as I am superintendent," he wrote, "I expect to conduct the affairs of the institution in accordance with the law governing it, and all the powers that be cannot swerve me one iota.

"It is true, as every one knows, that the Indiana reformatory has never before been conducted on a nonpolitical basis, even though such has been the law for a number of years. But if needs be, let it be shouted from the housetops that during my sojourn here the letter and the spirit of the law shall be the governing force of the affairs of the institution.

"The criticism of some of the newspapers of Governor Marshall because he has refused to interfere in the affairs of this institution because they are not conducted on political lines is almost treason. Why should any man ask or expect the governor of the great state of Indiana to interfere with the honest and legal management of affairs of an institution and thus place himself in the light of interceding in behalf of the violation of the law?"

Model Road Sixty Miles in Length.

A model road, sixty miles in length, from Bloomington to Champaign, is the project which State Highway Engineer A. N. Johnson in endeavoring to get the road commissioners and farmers along the proposed route interested in. Model roads have often been built on a small scale, said Mr. Johnson, but this is the largest thing in road building that has ever been attempted in this state.

It is hoped to get the highway commissioners of the various townships sufficiently interested, so that they will strive to excell the other commissioners in the maintenance of the roads.

For this purpose the co-operation of the different business men's associations have been solicited, and it is now the intention of the Champaign chamber of commerce to offer prizes to the farmers and commissioners for the best kept piece of roadway along the route.

The route will be districted and a man appointed to take care of each division of the road. The whole route will be kept in a uniform condition, the roads evenly dragged and graded, according to the system outlined by the highway engineer, and when completed it will be the best public highway in the state.

Mr. Johnson says that it will not be necessary to expend a great sum of money to accomplish his purpose, and attain the desired road bed conditions. All that is needed is the co-operation of the farmer and township commissioner, getting them working together for the common purpose in keeping the stretches of road assigned to them in a good and uniform condition. The money which is now provided and expended for the maintenance of the roads is sufficient to keep the roads in good condition, if the system prescribed by Mr. Johnson is adopted and adhered to.

Patents for Indianians.

Patents were issued to the following Indianians: Joseph D. and R. E. Adams, Indianapolis, road drag; Harmon Brown, Tell City, scrubbing machine; Edwin M. Campfield, Richmond, building block; Harry E. Carmony, Shelbyville, mail box; Shelton R. Conroy, Gary, rail joint; Joseph F. Crowe, Valparaiso, leaf and rubbish gathering machine; George W. R. Culbertson and S. R. Clark, Gleason, liquid measuring and filling apparatus; Herbert A. Frankenstein and F. H. Amos, South Bend, sand and gravel separator; Isaac Key, Fowlerton, pan lifter; Henry B. Loressel, Howell, weed and grass destroyer; Louis J. Libbing, Fort Wayne pen holder; Vera McLaughlin, Walnut township, Montgomery county, reaper.

A large tent will be set upon the grounds not far from the Coliseum and in the path of the visitors as they enter the fair. The tent will be so locatetd that all going to the exposition con easily find the headquarters of aDn Patch. The horse will be inclosed so that admirers can not place their hands upon him, but hundreds of people may see him at the same time. IHs tent, in which he will live while at the fair, will be decoratetd with his gayly colored silk and wool blankets, his suits of linen which he wears when not on exhibition, and many of the trophies won when he was seeking honors of the turf also will be shown.

The five pacers will appear in the State Fair's night horse shows, and Dan Patch will be jogged on the race track every day by M. W. Savage, his owner. The other four will as teams race Wednesday, and Minor Heir will start against the world's record.

The fair management is preparing for one of the big crowds of the week the first day of the exposition. The pacing stars have this summer been making extraordinary showings. Minor Heir pacing around the two-minute mark, and the others are expected to reel off some sensational miles on the Indianapolis track.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Laporte.—Sheriff Anstiss of this county, who went to Greenville, Ill., on transportation furnished by citizens of that city, who believed they had Mrs. Belle Gunness, multimurderess, under surveillance, has wired back: "Woman not Mrs. Gunness. Came here last spring, bought farm. Name Mrs. Bass; husband living." Mrs. Earp, who conducts a bakery in the Illinois town, wrote for a description and photographs of the former mistress of the murder farm, and, after receiving them, was confident of the woman's identity.

Greenfield.—The rights of so-called "social clubs," where liquor is kept for the use of members, will be tested in the circuit court in this city next week, in the case of the state against Richard Haw and Richard Todd, over whose place of business one of these clubs has flourished since the saloons in this city were closed by county option. The other club was closed by Mayor Meyers, the members making no fight in court.

Evansville.—The meeting of the eight district superintendents of the Indiana Methodist conference and Bishop Anderson of Chattanooga, Tenn., has been postponed, and the place changed from Indianapolis to Evansville. This body of nine men compose the cabinet of the Indiana Methodist conference. It is their business to attend to all matters of importance pertaining to the church, and to select and appoint all ministers.

Bicknell.—The wheat improvement special, sent out by Purdue university, ended its trip of 14 days here. Camby, Mooresville, Brooklyn, Martinsville, Paragon, Gosport, Spencer, Worthington, Lyons and Sanborn were the other stops made. At Worthington the train was greeted by one of the largest crowds of the entire trip. It was so large, in fact, that it was divided into three sections in order that all might hear.

Michigan City.—Michigan City is probably the only place in Indiana that has three feet of snow. Workmen opened a sandpit at the foot of Hoosier slide, a sand hill near the shore of Lake Michigan, on December 5 last. The place became filled with snow during the winter and drifting sand covered the snowdrift. Workmen opened the sand pit and found a bed of snow three feet deep.

Columbus.—Inmates of the Bartholomew county orphans' home are more lucky than many people in this county. They are eating strawberries, while others have none. The home raised berries for market last spring, and now a second crop is coming on. There are plenty of berries for the children, and Mrs. Amanda Brown, the matron, made strawberry shortcake.

Evansville.—Mrs. Zorah Eblen was indicted for alleged willful murder for having shot and killed her husband, B. F. Eblen, a liveryman of Henderson, Ky., in May last. Mrs. Eblen declared at the time that it was because of the incriminating confession of a colored woman servant in the house that she killed Eblen.

Alexandria.—The Ministerial association here has made arrangements with former Gov. J. Frank Hanly of Indianapolis to deliver an address here at Beulah park Sunday evening, September 25. He will talk on local option.

A STUNNER.

Secke—Mrs. Swellington is a stunning woman, isn't she?

Weeks—I should think so. She hit me with her automobile the other day, and it was two hours before I woke up.

BUSY THEN.

TINY BABY'S PITIFUL CASE

"Our baby when two months old was suffering with terrible eczema from head to foot, all over her body. The baby looked just like a skinned rabbit. We were unable to put clothes on her. At first it seemed to be a few mattered pimples. They would break the skin and peel off leaving the underneath skin red as though it were scalds. Then a few more pimples would appear and spread all over the body, leaving the baby all raw without skin from head to foot. On top of her head there appeared a heavy scab a quarter of an inch thick. It was awful to see so small a baby look as she did. Imagine! The doctor was afraid to put his hands to the child. We tried several doctors' remedies but all failed.

"Then we decided to try Cuticura. By using the Cuticura Ointment we softened the scab and it came off. Under this, where the real matter was, by washing with the Cuticura Soap and applying the Cuticura Ointment, a new skin soon appeared. We also gave baby four drops of the Cuticura Resolvent three times daily. After three days you could see the baby gaining a little skin which would peel off and heal underneath. Now the baby is four months old. She is a fine picture of a fat little baby and all is well. We only used one cake of Cuticura Soap, two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent. If people would know what Cuticura is there would be few suffering with eczema. Mrs. Joseph Kossmann, 7 St. John's Place, Ridgewood Heights, N. Y., Apr. 30 and May 4, '09."

Not Impregnable.

Horace Avory, K. C., just appointed a judge, is one of the mordant wits of the British bar. One day, cross-examining a recalcitrant witness, he asked:

"What are you?"

"A retired gentleman," proudly asserted the ex-cheesemonger.

"Well," snarled Avery, "when you achieved the position of gentleman, why did you retire from it?"

WESTERN CANADA'S 1910 CROPS

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

Wheat Yield In Many Districts Will Be From 25 to 35 Bushels Per Acre

Land sales and homestead entries increasing. No cessation in numbers going from United States. Wonderful opportunities remain for those who intend making Canada their home. New districts being opened up for settlement. Many farmers will net, this year, $10 to $15 per acre from their wheat crop. All the advantages of old settled countries are there. Good schools, churches, splendid markets, excellent railway facilities. See the grain exhibit at the different State and scope of the County fairs.

Letters similar to the following are received every day, testifying to satisfactory conditions; other districts are as favorably spoken of:

TENT SENT FOR THREE SON.

Maidstone, Sask., Canada, Aug. 8th, 1910.

"My parents came here from Cedar Falls, Iowa, four years ago, and were so well pleased with this country they sent to Coeur d'Alene for me. I have taken up a homestead near them, and am perfectly satisfied to stop here."
Leonard Douglas.

WANTS SETTLER'S RATE FOR HIS STOCK.

Stettler, Alberta, July 31st, 1910.

"Well I got up here from Forest City, Iowa, last Spring in good shape with the stock and everything. Now, I have got two boys back in Iowa yet, and I am going back there now soon to get them and another car o' g here this fall. What I would like to know is, if there is any chance to get a cheap rate back again, and when we return to Canada I will call at your office for our certificates."
Yours truly,
H. A. Wix.

WILL MAKE HIS HOME IN CANADA.

Brainard, Minn., Aug. 1st, 1910.

"I am going to Canada a week from today and intend to make my home there. My husband has been there six weeks and is well pleased with the country, so he wants me to come as soon as possible. He filed on a claim near Leadle, Sask., and by his description of it it must be a pretty place.

My brother-in-law, Mr. Frank J. Stumer, lives there and it was through him that we decided to locate in Canada."
Yours truly,
Mrs. Richard Henry Hidinger.

TAKES HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW'S WORD FOR IT.

Taylors Falls, Minn., Aug. 7, 1910.

"I shall go to Camrose this Fall with my cattle and household goods. I got a poor crop here this year, and my brother-in-law, Axel Nordstrom in Camrose, wants me to come there. He formerly lived in Wilton, North Dakota. I am going to buy or take homestead when I get there, but I do not want to travel two times there, for I take my brother-in-law's word about the country, and want to get your low rate."
Yours truly,
Peter A. Nelson.

WANTS TO RETURN TO CANADA.

Vesta, Minn., July 30th, 1910.

"I went to Canada nine years ago and took up a quarter section of railroad land and a homestead, but my boys have never taken up any land yet. I still hold the railroad land. I had to come back to the states on account of my health. Please let me know at once if I can get the cheap rate to Pincher, Alberta."
Yours truly,
Geo. Paskowitz.

St. Joe News

St. Joe, Ind. | Thursday, Sept. 22, 1910 | Fred B. Leighty, Pub.

Rep. McKennan's Policy

Mr. McKennan knows more about politics than the average voter. He has the correct idea of the obligation of a candidate on any political party ticket. Any political organization that does not adopt a platform of the principals it intends to follow is not worthy of consideration or support by any intelligent voter. The liquor question has been declared out of politics by both the Democrat and Republican parties, but like Dante's Ghost it will not down, but continually bobs up to disturb the conscience of the temprance voter in both these parties. Not a few of the voters think the platform of their party means what it says but think when a man secures the nomination on a ticket, if he is a good man, he can, of his own will, denounce the wisdom of his party and can do as he pleases and that he can pledge himself to use his power to anact any law he might be asked to. Mr. McKennan makes it clear that the Democrat party makes no promise of any kind as to its attitude toward the liquor question, it is out of politics so the party has declared. Now what comfort does the Democratic temprance voter get out of his temprance principles by voting for Mr. McKennan or any other person on the Democrat ticket who is honest to his party. The Democrat party promises no relief from the burdens of the liquor traffic. Now the Republican party has declared that the liquor traffic is out of politics, stands on the same kind of a platform as the Democrat party, so Temprance Republican where is your hope? If you have nominated good, clean, honest men on your ticket and they are honest to the principles of their party they are in no position to give you any comfort or relief from the oppresive liquor traffic. If the temprance people and the enemies of the liquor traffic are as honest in their purpose as are the candidates on the democrat and republican tickets, there is only one logical solution of the temprance question and that is to give their vote to the only party that declares in its platform absolutely for the supression of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes, the Prohibition party is here to stay and though it is weak in numbers it is the strongest party in principal coming before the American people today. It is the only party today that is feared by the Liquor Power. It is the only party today not supported by the liquor vendors. It is the David of the Israelites going out to battle against the Goliath of the Philistines.

The old parties revel and wallow in the mire of the malt tub, they stand trembling at the shrine of the liquor power, sweltering under the threat that if they make one move in the wrong direction that off goes the political scalp. The liquor traffic has no party, their party is the party that does their bidding and both the old parties are bidding for their support, neither can live long without it. If the temprance voters were as wise as the liquor voters the two old parties would sink into nothingness and all that would be left would be a matter of history, the Prohibition party would be known as the Progressive party and the other would be a (?). Then and not until then will the liquor question be settled.

Ex-prohi doesn't like my style of composition: it's too fiery, pungent and elongated. I know it's not perfumed, polished, profound, and classical like his, but it's strenuous and stabs like a bull-hornet on a bare legged school boy; and like the school, every stab brings a howl. Yes, indeedy!

Ex prohi certainly is a queer duck Nobody can tell whether he is coming or going, afloat or on horseback or in the little red wagon by his "lonesome". From a mass of verbiage I infer that he is an Ex-prohi because that party advocates measures he thinks worse than the evils they propose to cure, and that he has got a divorce and found a new affinity! However, he still makes love to his former spouse, extols her virtues, proudly rides her carriage and plays the political Lotharia to perfection; enjoying all the prerogatives of wedlock, as it were with both, and assuming none of the responsibilities with either! He has one lucid thought at any rate: he says "The citizen should be greater than any political or religious organization" He's doing well for such a short course of instruction. No thanks at all! The course is free. He'll yet learn that personal character and fitness ARE the only things that should recommend anyone for political preferment. He will learn that the independent voter is here, and yearly becoming more numerous, and that the good man theory of government is not a dream.

Ex prohi asks, "Whoever heard of a "Demo" or "Rep" ever being insanely partison?" Never heard anyone say he'd vote for the devil if he were on his ticket, eh? Never heard anyone boast that he never scratched his ticket, and never intended to do so? Never heard of the old codger across the river from St Joe, who by accident voted the wrong ticket and said he would rather have cut off his right hand? Oh no, the Prohibs haven't monopoly of crankism, even if they do carry an unnecessarily large stock.

Ex-prohi calls up the shades of Noah, Columbus, Luther, Fulton and Clay, sets them in a row like a jury and says: "You fellows crowd up a little and make room! There are six of us". And then he becomes prophetically visions and dreams dreams of the day when the wicked "demo" and "repa" will tumultuously clamor that Betty and they killed the bear. All the bears killed or crippled so far were put out of business by "demos" or "reps", while Betty stood by watched the contest, and said, "She never saw a fight she was so little interested in!" Betty has done nothing so far but distract the old man's attention and encourage the bear.

Threshing has been about completed in this neighborhood: Art Bassett Buttermore and Fetters threshed Friday and Saturday of last week..... Corn cutting has commenced and most of the corn is safe from frost.... Miss Letha Coyle is attending the High School at St. Joe.....Ditchers and corn cutters are in demand in this neighborhood; about three jobs for each man.....It is a pleasant sight mornings and evenings to see the little lads and lassies trooping along to school. Indiana's schools cost a mint of money to maintain, but they stand among the very highest in the nation, and they're worth all they cost.....Going to the fair at Fort Wayne, Eh?.....Sunday School next Sunday, at 2 P. Mr. Harry Kees is having a tussle with the rheumatism.

Several from this vicinity are attending the Ft. Wayne fair, this week.

A. Copp was at Ft. Wayne, yesterday the guest of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Ora Copp, who is confined at the hospital.

We thank all those who responded to the call, to pay up their subscription. We hope that several more will fall in line soon. How do you stand?

—Our High School opened Monday under the most favorable auspices. The attendance was as large as could be expected and is increasing every day. Already several from other towns and from different parts of the county have enrolled their names and joined the band of knowledge-seekers, and still others have signified their intention of doing so in the near future. The students, individually and collectively, speak in highest terms of praise of Prof. Leland and of his methods of teaching, and this alone is one great step forward to have so soon gained the good will and affection of those over whose future lives and destinies he will wield such a power. The manager has set the wheel in motion and it is now left with the citizens of our county as to whether it shall continue to move and become a very important factor for good in this community, or whether after struggling for an existence for a time shall die an ignomious death. We think the people will see this in its true light and rally to its support, and soon our town can boast of a school second to none in the state.

Old Man Booze Has Many Children.

(Contributed)

The story of "Old Man Booze", how he came into the world, and the full discription of his character can very well be compared to the creation of the world by the Almighty God.

It may not appear justifyable, however, to use such an Holy example in the exposition and demonstration of such an old crook and his earthly labors but if we will remember that sin can only be exposed by righteous illustrations and explanations we may at once see the signifiance of its use.

After God had finished all the works of the creation he saw that it was good and he said "Let us go down and make man in our own image, after our own likeness and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, over the fowls of the air and over the cattle and over all the earth. So God created man in his own image. But God seeing that it was not good for man to be alone, said "I will make him a helpmate for him, which he called Eve. And God blessed them and said unto them "Be fruitful and multiply and replentish the earth and subdue it and have dominion over the fowls of the air, the fish of the sea and every living thing on the earth. But Adam and Eve sinned by eating of the forbidden fruit and were driven from the garden of Eden. Unto which many children were born.

Now the devil also had an eye on the creation and he also saw that it was good. He saw Adam and Eve having dominion over the beasts of the earth and over the beautiful garden of Eden. He also saw righteousness prevailing on the earth, and Adam and Eve serving God in the beauty of holyness. This greatly displeased the devil and he being a hater of all things beautiful, resolved to destroy these good works. He therefore, entered into the serpent which caused the fall of mankind. But the devil was not satisfied with this task so he resolved to do further devilment. So he said, "Let us go up and create hell on earth, after our image after our own likeness and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, over the fowls of the air, and the cattle and every creeping thing on the earth.

So the devil created "Old Man Booze" in his own image. But the devil seeing that it was not good for Old Man Booze to be alone he made him a helpmate which he called poligamy. And the devil blessed them and said unto them, "Be fruitful and multiply and replentish the earth with toughs, bums, liars, anarchists, ruined men and women, shame, poverty, broken families and criminals and subdue the purity found in our

Beautiful Showing

In view of the fact that the evenings are getting longer and that the time of year is here when the lovers of good reading matter usually look about to increase their supply, Dunkle is making a special effort to cater to the demand that is sure to follow.

He has just received the finest line of books ever put on sale in St. Joe and is devoting his large show windows to make a showing of them this week.

Among them will be found about all the standard classics. They are in splendid bindings and perfectly suitable to make a fine showing in your book cases. The prices of these are so low you will actually be astonished.

He also has an extra large selection of late popular works from the living standard writers of the day. These books have been selling everywhere at from $1.25 to $1.50, and many of them now appear on the market for the first time at the popular price of 50 cents.

The bindings are beautiful specimens of the art of book binding; the print large and clear and the stock upon which they were printed of the very best.

You will want additional reading matter during the long evenings about the warm fireside, and a better opportunity to supply the want you will never have.

Call and see the beautiful assortment.

Big Surprise

A very pleasant surprise party occured at the home of B.F. Walter Wednesday eve in honor of their daughter Edna. The evening was spent in social chat and playing games. ALIMONY AND DIVORCE.

New comes a New York woman who is sure to be charged with "woman's inhumanity for woman," professing to be shocked at the multiplicity of divorces and proposing a remedy in the total abolition of alimony, says Omaha Bee. She conceives the prospect of alimony to be the chief cause of divorces granted to women and denounces the system as nothing but a simple graft. Undoubtedly many designing women can consistently take no exceptions to these charges, and it is not to be questioned that some unscrupulous lawyers will co-operate with women for the purpose of obtaining financial emolument through the operation of the divorce courts, but that alimony, or the desire to obtain alimony, constitutes the prevailing cause and purpose of women seeking legal separations from their husbands, it is hard to believe, any more than it would be wise, safe or just to do away with the law providing for alimony. Society has come to recognize that there is such a thing as a justifiable divorce, and there is certainly such a thing as a woman needing and deserving support from the man from whom she seeks and obtains a divorce, and to abolish alimony would work hardship on many women and children, alike blameless for the causes as well as the fact of the separation.

Has everybody forgotten Halley's comet? There was a reaction after the trepidation and intense curiosity aroused by its approach, and now, instead of piling out of bed at unearthly hours of the early morning in the hope of getting a glimpse of it, there are many who would not, for the promise of a good square look at the wonderer, take the trouble of walking across the street. They have seen it once, and so far as they are concerned, it is an old story. Halley's comet is not beyond viewing distance from the earth; yet it cannot be seen. The reason of its invisibility is its nearness to the sun. It sets in the early evening, while the twilight is strong enough to hide it with a veil of light. At the end of the month it will set before sunset. It is further south in the sky than the sun.

The Canadian authorities have been so much disturbed over the report that 15,000 American farmers have left the Caandian northwest that they have undertaken an inquiry of their own. The result of that is the admission that 261 farmers and their families have returned to the United States. During the same time they claim that over 50,000 settlers have entered Canada from this country. Perhaps it is up to the United States to investigate these last figures.

NO CLOUDS IN SIGHT

COLONEL GEORGE HARVEY SAYS COUNTRY ALL RIGHT.

THE WRITER SEES NO CLOUD

Striking Article in North American Review That is Attracting Wide Attention.

The attention of business and professional men in all portions of the country has been attracted to a strikingly strong article by Col. George Harvey in the September issue of the North American Review in which the writer takes a view of the greatest hopefulness for the future of America and Americans. The article is entitled "A Plea for the Conservation of Common Sense," and it is meeting with the cordial approval of business men of all shades of political opinion throughout the entire country. In part, Colonel Harvey says:

"Unquestionably a spirit of unrest dominates the land. But, if it be true that fundamentally the condition of the country is sound, must we necessarily succumb to despondency, abandon effort looking to retrieval and cringe like cravens before clouds that only threaten? Rather ought we not to analyze conditions, search for causes, find the root of the distress, which even now exists only in men's minds, and then, after the American fashion, apply such remedies as seems most likely to produce beneficent results?

Capital and Labor Not Antagonistic.

"The Link that connects labor with capital is not broken but we may not deny that it is less cohesive than it should be or than conditions warrant. Financially, the country is stronger than ever before in its history. Recovery from a panic so severe as that of three years ago was never before so prompt and comparatively complete. The masses are practically free from debt. Money is held by the banks in abundance and rates are low.

"Why, then, does capital pause upon the threshold of investment? The answer, we believe, to be plain. It awaits adjustment of the relations of government to business. • • • The sole problem consists of determining how government can maintain an even balance between aggregations of interests, on the one hand, and the whole people, on the other, protecting the latter against extortion and saving the former from mad assaults.

"The solution is not easy to find for the simple reason that the situation is without precedent. But is not progress being made along sane and cautious lines? • • •

Conserve Common Sense.

"Is not the present, as we have seen, exceptionally secure? What, then, of preparations for the future? Patriotism is the basis of our institutions. And patriotism in the minds of our youth is no longer linked solely with fireworks and deeds of daring. It is taught in our schools. A new course has been added—a course in loyalty. Methodically, our children learn how to vote, how to conduct primaries, conventions and elections, how to discriminate between qualifications of candidates and, finally, how to govern as well as serve. They are taught to despise bribery and all forms of corruption and fraud as treason. Their creed, which they are made to know by heart, is not complex. It is simple, but comprehensive, no less beautiful in diction than lofty in aspiration. These are the pledges which are graven upon their memories:

"As it is cowardly for a soldier to run away from battle, so it is cowardly for any citizen not to contribute his share to the well-being of his country. America is my own dear land; she nourishes me, and I will love her and do my duty to her, whose child, servant and civil soldier I am.

"As the health and happiness of my body depend upon each muscle and nerve and drop of blood doing its work in its place, so the health and happiness of my country depend upon each citizen doing his work in his place.

"These young citizens are our hostages to fortune. Can we not safely assume that the principles animating their lives augur well for the permanency of the Republic? When before have the foundation stones of continuance been laid with such care and promise of durability?

"The future, then, is bright. And the present? But one thing is needful. No present movement is more laudable than that which looks to conservation of natural resources. But let us never forget that the greatest inherent resource of the American people is Common Sense. Let that be conserved and applied without cessation, and soon it will be found that all the ills of which we complain but know not of are only such as attend upon the growing pains of a great and blessed country.

He Knows the Game.

According to the Metropolitan Magazine, Fire Chief John Conway of Jersey City, has solved the baseball excuse question by the posting of the following printed notice on his desk at fire headquarters:

"All requests for leave of absence owing to grandmothers' funerals, lame back, house cleaning, moving, sore throat, headache, brainstorm, cousins' wedding, general indisposition, etc., must be handed to the chief not later than ten o'clock on the morning of the game."

GETS PRISON TERM

HEIKE SENT TO PENITENTIARY FOR EIGHT MONTHS FOR SUGAR UNDERWEIGHING.

MUST PAY FINE OF $5,000

Climax in Prosecution of Trust and Employes in New York Is Sentencing of Ex-Secretary—Punished as "Man Higher Up."

New York.—Judge Martin in the United States circuit court, Monday, sentenced Charles R. Heike, former secretary and treasurer of the American Sugar Refining company, who has been termned the "man higher up" in the sugar trust, to serve eight months in the New York penitentiary on Blackwell's island and to pay a fine of $5,000. Heike had been convicted with others of conspiring to defraud the government by the underweighing of sugar.

Judge Martin granted a stay of execution of the sentence pending an appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals. The court also reduced Heike's bail, which had been $35,000 since his conviction last June, to $15,000.

Heike's sentence is the climax in the federal government's prosecution of American Sugar Refining company officials and employes, growing out of the extensive underweighing frauds on the Williamsburg pier of the trust, brought to light by Richard Parr's famous raid in 1907. Four weighers for the company and Oliver Spitzer, their superintendent, were convicted on the first criminal trial in connection with the frauds, and the weighers are serving their sentence of a year in the Blackwell's island penitentiary.

SHOOTS RAPIDS LIKE A FURY

Captain Klaus Larsen Makes a Daring and Successful Trip in a Motor Boat.

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—Capt. Klaus Larsen Sunday in his motor boat Ferro made a successful trip through the whirlpool rapids of Niagara.

Because the engine was put out of order in the vicinity of the whirlpool he did not go clear to Lewiston in the boat which, after leaving the pool, drifted into Dead Man's eddy near Niagara university, where it was swung to shore.

Starting at five o'clock, it took Larsen five minutes to reach the railway bridges and the next minute his boat, the Ferro, had ridden the first wave. Then came a frightful tumult of strike after strike. Never before had a motor boat been in such a sea, but it was clear that Larsen was in control as the boat responded nicely to the helm. He shot through the rapids and into the pool like a fury and was soon being rushed across the great river pocket, having failed to make the outlet as he expected. He swung to the Canadian side and into the driftwood. But from this he hurried away under power. He drove his boat away across to the New York side and swung out of the outlet.

It was about this time that the engine went wrong and he drifted into an eddy near Niagara university below the Devil's hole. As the Ferro swung toward shore it seemed as though it would be beaten on the rocks, but people on shore prevented this and helped Larsen land.

IS NOMINATED BY REPUBLICANS IN 11TH KENTUCKY DISTRICT.

Served Eight Years in Prison for Complicity in Murder of Governor Gobel.

Lexington, Ky. — In the primary of the Republicans of the Eleventh congressional district Caleb Powers, who for eight years was a state's prisoner on the charge of complicity in the murder of Gov. William Gobel on the streets of Frankfort January 29, 1900, defeated Don C. Edwards, the present incumbent.

Since Powers was freed by a pardon from Governor Willson, the mountaineers have stood by him, believing him to be a political martyr and despite all influences that could be brought to bear on him by the followers of Edwards they returned Powers the Republican nominee by a large majority. Money was spent freely on both sides, it is said.

The indications are that when all returns are received Powers will be nominated by 5,000. Much trouble was had at the polls among the adherents of the two principals and at Grape Vine, Squire Colwell shot and killed John Holmes. Trouble arose over the election and the killing resulted.

ROOSEVELT DEFIES HIS FOES

Challenges Opponents to Come Out in Open and Fight—Warmly Commends Taft.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Coming into a stronghold of the opposition, former President Roosevelt boldly challenged the opponents of his political doctrines to come out in the open and fight if they dared. He prophesied that if they did they would be beaten.

The colonel also warmly commended President Taft as a public official, and expressed his approval of a number of the accomplishments of the Taft administration. He did not indorse the administration as a whole. What he did have to say, however, placed him on record for the first time in regard to many of the more important features of it, breaking the silence which he had maintained steadfastly on the subject except for his brief references to his successor made while he was on his western trip.

When Colonel Roosevelt arrived here Saturday from New York the state fair grounds where he spoke were thronged with a crowd estimated at 40,000.

BURGLAR SLAYS RAIL CHIEF

Wife and Children Witness Tragedy—Suspect Arrested and Is Identified by Victim's Daughter.

Chicago.—Clarence D. Hiller, chief clerk of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railway, was shot three times and killed by a negro burglar whom he found ransacking the Hiller home early Monday.

The murder was witnessed by the victim's wife and two daughters, who were aroused when Hiller attacked the intruder at the head of the stairs on the second floor. The men fought for several minutes, finally rolling to the foot of the stairs. The negro fled.

Within half an hour Lieut. Charles M. Atkinson and four detectives were scouring the neighborhood and a suspect was arrested. He gave the name of William Jones.

Prominent Educator Dies.

Vienna.—Emperor William arrived here Tuesday and for two days will be the guest of Emperor Francis Joseph at Schoenbrunn.

DEFEAT FOR TAWNEY

MINNESOTA CONGRESSMAN LOSES OUT IN PRIMARY BY SMALL MARGIN.

CAMPAIGN WAS A WARM ONE

Stevens in Fourth District May Be Defeated—Opponent Makes Whirlwind Fight—Other Republican Candidates Are Renominated.

St. Paul, Minn.—Primaries were held throughout Minnesota Tuesday for the nomination of candidates for congress, state legislature and county officers.

Interest centered in the First district and the scattering returns indicate the defeat of Congressman J. A. Tawney by a small margin by Sydney Anderson, a young attorney of Lanesboro. This will probably be the only change in the delegation to congress, although there is a possibility of defeat of C. F. Stevens in the Fourth district by Hugh Halbert.

The fight on Tawney has been the warmest in the state. Anderson was brought out by the progressive league and few thought he had any show. But he made a better campaign than anticipated and unless later returns are different, he wins by a small margin. The winner will be opposed by H. L. Buck of Winona, who had a clear field for the Democratic nomination.

Halbert did not get into the fight until three weeks ago, but has made a whirlwind campaign. The Stevens people did not see any chance of defeat until a couple of weeks ago, but since then Stevens has made a strong fight for renomination.

The winner will have only nominal opposition unless an independent candidate is brought out.

FIRE ON RACING BALLOONS

Aviator Baldwin Tells of Reaching Altitude of Three and a Half Miles to Escape Lightning.

New York.—Capt. Thomas Baldwin, the veteran balloonist, was the most astonished man in the country when he arrived in New York Tuesday from Portsmouth, Ohio, where he and Clifford B. Harmon landed in the balloon New York Sunday evening, to learn that they had not yet been reported.

Allan P. Hawley and Augustus Post of the America II., which landed at Warrenton, Pa., Monday afternoon, were fired upon several times while passing through Ohio.

"We encountered hot sun, cold winds, thunder and lightning, and rain in rapid succession," said Captain Baldwin. "It kept us guessing to manage the ballast under these conditions, and when we dropped Sunday evening at five o'clock, near Portsmouth, Ohio, we had used it all up except a few pounds. Our gas was badly depleted by the constant contrasts of temperature through which we had gone.

"About noon Sunday we encountered one of the worst thunderstorms I have ever seen in the upper air. Only by soaring above it at a height of three and a half miles did we avert the danger of being struck by lightning. At four o'clock Sunday afternoon we found urselves with hardly a pound of ballast left, and began to look about for a good place to drop. We found such a spot on a hillside near Portsmouth."

Indianapolis.—The last of the thirteen balloons which started in the American championship and free-for-all races at the Indianapolis motor speedway last Saturday afternoon has landed and the greatest balloon meet in history is ended.

As both endurance and distance are taken into consideration in deciding the three winners of the championship event, the three to represent America in the international meet to be held in St. Louis October 17 next, the victors will not be known until the Aero Club of America passes on the reports of the pilots.

PACKERS FACE TRIAL NOV. 14

BEEF BARONS SURPRISED IN ISSUE OF SUBPOENAS.

Twenty-five Witnesses Are to Be Summoned—Indicted Men Plan Vigorous Defense.

Chicago. — The trial of the ten meat packers of Chicago indicted on the charge of violating the Sherman anti-trust law, will begin November 14. This was made known when deputy United States marshals were handed twenty-five subpoenas with instructions to serve them upon those witnesses who testified before the federal grand jury that brought in the true bills against the beef barons.

The news came as a distinct surprise to the lawyers for the defense. All the subpoenas are returnable on Nov. 14.

It was reported that additional indictments will be returned when the jury resumes its sessions next Monday.

Messrs. J. Ogden Armour, the three Swifts, Edward Morris, Edward Tilden and the others under indictment as individuals, have made all of their plans for a vigorous defense and their lawyers say they are ready for the fray at any time. Several consultations have been held and the counsel for the defendants say they can see nothing but an acquittal.

It was rumored in the federal building that the government lawyers, two of whom, Pagin and Wilkerson, are here from the attorney general's department in Washington, are drawing the additional indictments which it is believed will be voted and signed on Monday.

Unusual secrecy has been a feature of the investigation thus far and members of the staff have received special instructions not to discuss present grand jury work upon pain of dismissal.

Secrecy marked the issuance of the subpoenas. Many of the government's witnesses will be called from out of town.

CRAZED OVER CRIPPEN LOVE

Woman Testifies That Doctor's Companion Confessed Fears She Might Not Marry Him.

London.—What Ethel Clara Leneve suffered as, half mad with jealousy, she impatiently waited the fulfillment of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen's promise to make her his wife, was revealed Monday at the inquest into the death of Crippen's wife, Belle Elmore, with the murder of whom the doctor and his typist are jointly charged.

In her distress Miss Leneve confided in her landlady, Mrs. Jackson.

Mrs. Jackson said that the accused girl gave up her room March 12, expecting that she was leaving to marry Doctor Crippen.

Until the first week in February Miss Leneve slept regularly at Mrs. Jackson's. After that she stopped at the house only occasionally. She said that she passed the other nights at the homes of friends. Once, early in February, Miss Leneve mentioned having been at the Hilldrop-Crescent home of the Crippens to help the doctor search for a bank book which showed an account of $1,000. A diamond tiara and rings had been found in the house and the doctor raised $850 on them.

About the middle of February, the witness said, Miss Leneve appeared in a "terrfying state of agitation." Her eyes seemed starting out of her head. The landlady insisted on an explanation.

"Would you be surprised if I told you that it was the doctor and Miss Elmore?" the witness quoted Miss Leneve as saying. "He was the cause of my trouble when you first knew me. She is his wife, and when I see them go away together it makes me realize my position as to what she is and what I am."

"What is the use of you worrying about another woman's husband?" Mrs. Jackson had asked.

Miss Leneve answered: "Miss Elmore has been threatening to go away with another man, Doctor Crippen has been waiting for her to do so, when he would divorce her."

TAFT REACHES HOME CITY

Cincinnati Prepares No Extensive Program for Entertainment of President During Stay.

Cincinnati.—No extensive program of entertainment has been arranged for President Taft during his visit to this, his home city.

His coming is said to be merely for the purpose of visiting the Ohio valley exposition, and to attend to some private business. There are also unconfirmed reports in circulation that he will be a party to several important political conferences.

Immediately on his arrival here Tuesday the president was driven to the home of his brother, Charles P. Taft. The latter is in Europe with his family, but his home was thrown open for the accommodation of the president.

Kingsland, Ind., Sept. 21.—Thirty-five were killed, five were injured so that they died soon afterward and ten were seriously injured in the worst wreck in the annals of interurban history which occurred a quarter of a mile north of Kingsland on the Bluffton division of the Fort Wayne & Wabash Valley Traction company, shortly before 1 o'clock this afternoon, when regular north-bound interurban car No. 233, rounded a curve and collided head-on with extra limited car No. 303, south-bound, and running light.

The impact of the two cars was terrific and but one man—a traveling salesman—escaped serious injuries out of the two crews of four men and the forty-two passengers. The smaller car—the regular one, crowded with passengers, mostly Bluffton people, bound for the Fort Wayne fair, was almost completely telescoped by the larger and higher limited car. The report of the collision was heard for three miles and those within a half mile thought it was a gigantic dynamite explosion.

So hard was the impact that the flanges of the front wheels were mashed to pulp.

The north-bound car was in charge of Motorman C. Van Dine and Conductor E. A. Spiller and the south-bound car was in charge of Benjamin Corkwell and Conductor Daniel Wilson.

In this, one of the most terrible accidents in recent history, there was every setting to make for peacefulness and calm. The spot at which the cars came together was in the midst of fields. On each side farmers were plowing their fields. Literally, men deserted their plowhandles to run to the aid of the injured.

The accident occurred on a curve. On both sides, especially on that tangent approaching from the north there was a curve screened by dense woods. Bearing down from the north came the lighter—yet empty of passengers—car. Speeding toward Fort Wayne was the coach filled with men and women bent on a merry-making of a day or two at the Allen county fair.

Even the time of the accident is in doubt. Probably it was about a half hour after noon. Out of the ends of this short curve near Kingsland, 18 miles south of Fort Wayne, came the two cars. It was only a flash; a breath. The cars were together. The south-bound car seemed to take the right of way. Like a giant missile it ploughed its way through the traffic-packed coach in the opposite direction. Its heavier frame cut like a keen knife a pathway half the length of the opposing vehicle. It cut off seats an inch above the floor and smashed and packed in one ghastly mass the whole interior of the car seat, overhead baskets, lighting fixtures, luggage and the bodies of two score passengers.

In the car there were only a few capable of giving aid to the dying. They did what they could and from the fields came the farmers who had witnessed the accident or who had been summoned by neighbors. Word was flashed by telephone to Bluffton and a special car was loaded with all physicians available and sent to the scene. At nightfall all the dead and injured had been removed and the wrecked cars were lying beside the right of way, a bonfire to illuminate the spot of one of the greatest, if not the greatest electric traction wrecks in the history of the country.

The cause of the accident has not been fixed officially. It is certain, however, that the regular crew had orders to meet at siding No. 106, a mile south of Ossian. The limited crew over-ran this siding. Whether this was due to a failure to receive orders or a mistake of the dispatcher in giving a wrong order, must be determined by investigation by the company officials.

That an accident was imminent and could not be averted was known at Ossian and Fort Wayne before the cars came together. This was shown when the dispatcher at Fort Wayne telephoned to Agent Koontz at Ossian, asking if the limited crew had arrived yet. He was told the car had just left without receiving orders. Conductor Wilson had stopped to get some matches, only. Agent Koontz called up the Lake Erie & Western operator and asked him to call the tower man at Kingsland. He did. The regular car had passed and even then the collision which has startled the entire country had occurred.

Scene of the Wreck.

The spot where the disaster took place is isolated. There was not a doctor in Kingsland and the people of the village seemed paralyzed by the immensity and horror of the disaster. They lacked a leader and until the relief cars from Fort Wayne and Bluffton arrived, little was done to take the dead and injured from the wreck.

It was a long, hard task to remove the bodies from the wreckage. The dead and injured were laid in rows at the side of the tracks. Farmers' wives brought sheets to cover the dead and to make bandages for the wounded. The bodies were all horribly mangled. Legs and arms were severed, heads were cut from bodies, and strips were torn from the flesh of the victims. Because of the broken bones, the postures of the victims were terribly distorted, the bodies being entangled with the timbers of the crushed cars.

To add to the horror of the situation flies settled on the long rows of dead and injured in great swarms. The physicians had little assistance from the townspeople and farmers and the injured suffered the extremity of their hurts for two hours before they were relieved by lotions and narcotics brought by the physicians. All the time pending the arrival of the physicians the injured writhed and screamed in pain and the crowd that gathered about them stood awe-stricken and helpless to aid them.

Injured Brought to Fort Wayne.

The injured were placed on the special relief train from Fort Wayne and brought to hospitals in that city.

The Injured.

F. A. Parkhurst, Bluffton, broken spine and head wounds.

C. M. Brown, Warren, both legs broken; may recover.

Margaret Tribolet, Bluffton, concussion of the brain and internal injuries.

John Eichenberger, Berne, legs broken and internally injured.

Mrs. W. D. Burgan, Bluffton, broken leg and numerous body wounds.

J. T. Corkwell, Fort Wayne.

PINNED IN THE WRECKAGE.

Two Lives Lost in Crash of Trains at Hammond, Indiana.

Hammond, Ind.—Geo. Workup, age twenty-eight, of Traverse City, was burned to a crisp and Alfred Davidson, aged thirty, of Benton Harbor, Mich., was fatally injured in a freight wreck near here. Workup was a brakeman and Davidson a conductor. The accident happened during a fog so dense that objects could not be seen 50 feet away.

BOYS AND GIRLS

BOYS' FUN WITH BROOMSTICK

Youth Can Extract More Pleasure With Useful Household Article Than Anything Else.

It is a long time since brooms came into use. Their invention was of great benefit to the world in aiding to keep it clean—but have you ever considered another phase of their usefulness? Since brooms have been in use, just so long have broomsticks ever had a peculiar charm to boys. The average boy can extract more amusement from the broomstick than almost anything else with which he comes in contact, says People's Home Journal.

Divide the players in pairs of teams of two, providing as many broomsticks as there happen to be teams. Then direct them to grasp their respective broomsticks as shown in the accompanying illustration, each facing in the opposite direction. Then line them all up at the starting point ready to run the race.

They're off! But don't think they are going to do a 100-yard dash in record time. The funny part of the fore-and-aft race is that the chap who faces the front invariably tries to carry the boy facing the rear off his feet in his efforts to make speed. He forgets that it is impossible for his team mate to run backward half as fast as he runs forward, so the chances are there will be a good many trip-ups and the race will be won by the pair who can best adapt their irregular gait to each other instead of the swiftest contestants.

Now, as you will see, headwork is more apt to win when it is coupled with the footwork than speedy footwork alone. So use your heads to regulate your feet; in other words, use good "teamwork," as they say in athletics, and you'll be successful in this broomstick pastime of the "fore-and-aft race."

ILLUSION WITH SPINNING PIN

With Little Practice One May Successfully Imitate Very Many Objects.

Take a piece of rubber or elastic and run a pin through it as the figure shows. Twirling the ends of the elastic vertically between your thumbs and forefingers, and separating the hands in order to tighten it, you give the object a sufficiently swift rotation to enable it to produce the image of a drinking goblet, says Magical Experiments. The illusion is the more complete in proportion to the brightness of the pin and the light it shines in and the darkness of the background. In the picture, we suppose the operator placed in a dark room, through a hole in the shutter of which a ray of sunlight creeps in and illuminates the pin.

With a little practice you may succeed in imitating very many objects. Try for yourselves and see what you can make.

A Conditional Situation.

If little girls were not so stupid
And little boys were not such fools,
And no one needed any teaching,
There'd be no public grammar schools.

Where She Counts.

Edna thoughtfully considered a cow that was calmly grazing in a meadow across the way. "Mamma, how old is that cow," she finally inquired. "She is four years old," answered Edna's mother. Edna considered the answer and from time to time appeared to be comparing herself with the cow. "Well," was her parting comment on the question, "I'm five and that cow is big enough to be fifty."

THE AIRY GIRAFFE.

Said a pert little dog to a tall giraffe,
"It isn't that any one cares,
But you look so stuck up that the neighbors laugh
And say you are putting on airs."

The giraffe was annoyed, as you could plainly see,
And sniffed as he made reply:
"If you had a nice long neck like me,
You would do the same as I."

PRINCESS MARY NOW TYPIST

King George's Only Daughter Learns How to Operate Typewriter—To Learn Stenography.

Princess Mary, King George's only daughter, has recently learned to use a typewriter.

There are two women typists attached to the secretarial staff of Marlborough House, which is the king's residence, one of whom, at the princess' request, taught her how to operate the machine. The princess proved an apt pupil and devoted herself so assiduously to the work that after a few weeks of instruction and practise she was able to work a typewriter at a fair rate of speed.

During the reigning family's recreation at Balmoral, Scotland, her royal highness will assist in typing some of her father's more private correspondence.

The princess intends to learn stenography also and is keenly looking forward to helping her mother, Queen Mary, regularly with her correspondence when the royal family is settled in Buckingham palace.

This princess was the first royal personage to open an account in the postoffice savings bank, which she did three years ago on her tenth birthday.

VISITING.

"My little girl, I hope you tried
Your very best to be,
Quite ladylike and well-behaved,
When you were out to tea?

"And that you said: 'Yes, if you please,'
When things were offered you;
Or, 'No, I thank you,' quietly,
Just as I told you to?"

"Yes, mamma, dear, I smiled and said:
'Yes, thank you,' so polite;
And 'If you please,' and sat up straight
And always acted right.

"I didn't say, 'No, thank you,' though,
Because, mamma, you see,
I wanted all they helped me to
When I went out to tea."

TELLING AGES OF ANIMALS

Not Yet Possible to Determine Age at Which Many Sea and Land Creatures Die.

Some sea creatures and a few land creatures live so long that it has not yet been possible for man to determine the age at which it is natural for them to die. It is stated, for instance, that in 1497, in a European lake, a pike was caught which could not have been less than 270 years old. There was a brass ring in the fish's lower jaw, and on the ring an inscription showing that the ring was placed there in the year 1230—267 years previously. Again, if the bone plates in a whale's mouth, which are said to increase regularly each year, are an indication of the creature's age, as is believed, then 400 years is not an unusual lifetime for a whale. Even the common ring trout lives from 30 to 50 years.

The natives of India believe that elephants live to be 300 years old. One was kept in captivity 150 years, and the age of the animal at the time of his capture was not known. Camels normally die between the ages of 40 and 50, horses from 20 to 30, oxen at 20, sheep at 8 or 9 and dogs at 12 or 14. Swans 100 years old and ravens older have been known, while pheasants and ordinary chickens live 12 or 15 years—provided they do not find their way to the frying pan many seasons earlier.

Pillow Climbing.

In the middle of the floor, some little distance apart, place sofa cushions, stools, umbrella stands, large vases, etc. From among the company choose some one who has never been "hoaxed" and ask him to first walk over the course around and between these articles, so as to fix in his mind their situation and distance apart. He is then blindfolded and told to find his way carefully among them again so as not to touch anything.

Very gingerly he will do so, and when triumphant over his success the bandage is taken from his eyes, to his surprise, not an article remains on the floor. All were quickly and quietly removed while he was being blindfolded.

His cautious movements and teasing here and there to avoid the obstacles that are not there, make fun for the onlookers

Someone Might Get Hurt.

Pietro had drifted to Florida and was working with a gang at railroad construction. He had been told to beware of rattlesnakes, but assured that they would always give the warning rattle before striking.

One hot day he was eating his noon luncheon on a pine log when he saw a big rattler coiled a few feet in front of him. He eyed the serpent and began to shift his legs over the log. He had barely got them out of the way when the snake's fangs hit the bark beneath him.

"Son of a guna!" yelled Pietro. "Why you no ringa da bell?"—Everybody's Magazine.

PUZZLED

Hard Work, Sometimes, to Raise Children.

Children's taste is ofttimes more accurate, in selecting the right kind of food to fit the body, than that of adults. Nature works more accurately through the children.

A Brooklyn lady says: "Our little boy had long been troubled with weak digestion. We could never persuade him to take more than one taste of any kind of cereal food. He was a weak little chap and we were puzzled to know what to feed him on.

"One lucky day we tried Grape-Nuts. Well, you never saw a child eat with such a relish, and it did me good to see him. From that day on it seemed as though we could almost see him grow. He would eat Grape-Nuts for breakfast and supper, and I think he would have liked the food for dinner.

"The difference in his appearance is something wonderful.

"My husband had never fancied cereal foods of any kind, but he became very fond of Grape-Nuts and has been much improved in health since using it.

"We are now a healthy family, and naturally believe in Grape-Nuts.

"A friend has two children who were formerly afflicted with rickets. I was satisfied that the disease was caused by lack of proper nourishment. They showed it. So I urged her to use Grape-Nuts as an experiment and the result was almost magical.

"They continued the food and today both children are well and strong as any children in this city, and, of course, my friend is a firm believer in Grape-Nuts for she has the evidence before her eyes every day."

Worms

"Cascarets are certainly fine. I gave a friend one when the doctor was treating him for cancer of the stomach. The next morning he passed four pieces of a tape worm. He then got a dose and in three days he passed a tape-worm 45 feet long. It was Mr. Matt Frock, of Millersburg, Dauphin Co., Pa. I am quite a worker for Cascarets. I use them myself and find them beneficial for most any disease caused by impure blood." Chas. E. Candon, Lewiston, Pa., (Mifflin Co.)

INDIANA ASSOCIATED WEEKLIES

The Fairview scribe is laboring under a delusion, he says I do not like his style of composition. You are very much mistaken Mr. Scribe. I do very much admire every sentence. They scintillate like the dew drop kissed by the morning sun. Those rapier like thrusts are indeed like the lightning's flash and are calculated, no doubt, to utterly annihilate poor little me. The reading public cannot, in justice to you, say aught but praise, for it should be apparent to all that your articles are not lacking in literary merit. And it is painfully evident that among your host of admirers will appear no less a personage than the noble scribe himself. But we will try to be charitable enough to overlook this slight exhibition of ego. We imagine that he must cherish a feeling akin to the peacock, which fowl has a habit of twisting its head to catch the radiance that emanates from his caudal appendage. Indeed we have a mental picture of this scribe, in his study, a smile of complacency o'erspreads his features as he contemplates the awful havoc wrought by his steel (pen.) "From a mass of verbiage" ponder over that gentle reader, he "infers that we are an 'Ex Prohi' because our party advocates measures we think worse than the evils we propose to cure." You have certainly understood us correctly Mr. Scribe. We wonder that if our Correspondent should ever be divorced from his lawfully wedded wife, some person should speak lightly of her and especially, that the charge was false and that she was particularly free from all manifestations of this thing she is accused of, we wonder, if it would be playing the "Lothario" act if he would resent such an imputation and would right royally, do battle with the base villian that had the audacity to make such a charge. Would that be flirting with his former spouse? We believe it our duty to stand by our former sweetheart and wife, wherein she was virtuous even if we cannot trot in double harness, now, on account of a peculiar crochet she has in her brain. Seems to me you are a little hasty, Mr. Correspondent, in assuming that we have begun to profit from your course of instruction. We learned years ago that principle is greater than party and we will remain in political bachelorhood to the end of our days rather than espouse some cause that we can not conscientiously support. A man looses his identity completely, no matter how good heis, when he subscribes (votes) to articles of faith that do not represent his principles. He may wallow in filth up to his eyes, and declare his own personal purity from the housetops all to no purpose, his hands are tied. This, Mr. Correspondent, looks like your method, you are dancing around, like a freckle faced boy with a cinder in his eye; all because, forsooth, a democrat Mr. McKennan by name has the audacity to live up to his platform. Say, did you ever read the democrat platform? Well, you did? Say then what does it mean when it says "We are opposed to all sumptuary legislation?" What do they mean by "Largest measure of personal liberty?" Do you begin to feel the wings a sprouting that you can denounce the wisdom of your party and threaten you'll see a certain loyal democrat in Gehenna before you'll line? You spoke of a certain class of Biblical characters, some time ago, the Pharisees you know? and then you told us "That there were others," to this statement I can most heartily subscribe and say a loud amen. Now to close, for this is my last contribution on this subject, for a time at least; You distort the bear story, twist it out of it's original shape and accuse "Probis" of being a lot of obstacles in the way of reform. With all the powers of darkness united to defeat Prohibition, with weak kneedChristian voters bowing theknee to Gambrinus, with the interstate commerce law nullifying our state laws its no wonder Betty has accomplished little but she hasn't given up, no siree! and when some of you good democrats and republicans have advanced beyond the chrysalis stage, and take on a back bone instead of a rubber vertabrae the bears will be put out of business in short order.

Carnes Post Hall.

Nearly twenty-one years have come and gone since Carnes Post Hall at St Joe, Indiana, was dedicates to the use of ex-soldiers of the War of the Union. A favorable response was made by comrades of other parts of the G. A. R. of DeKalb County to a cordial invitation to be present and to take part in the exercises planned for the occasion.

The meeting was announced for Friday evening, Dec. 27, 1889, and to provide means for furnishing the hall A supper was included with the literary entertainment and a half dollar admission was charged with no free list.

The unity of action characteristic of the people of St. Joe was shown in the general interest, the admirable arrangements for receiving and escorting guests and the generous provision made for the banquet to follow conclusion of the exercises.

Every town in the county was well represented and the new hall was fairly filled when at 6:30 P. M., the entertainment began. The printed program of songs and addresses was composed of thirty-three members and occupied much time but attention and interest remained to the close.

The initial address was delivered by R. W. McBride, now a resident of Indianapolis, upon: "The Grand Army of the Republic", and was followed by the rendition of "Old Shady" by J. M. Widney. The theme of W. H. McIntosh, of Auburn, was: "The Ultizen Soldier" and by L. J. Blair of Waterloo: "Women's Part in the War".

J. A. Provines of Spencerville, told of "Forgeing" and F. Wood of Garrett, of "Camp Life". Would it not be timely and appropriate to mark the transfer of Carnes Hall to its new owners by another and a final meeting in those rooms familiar with the assemblages of a score of years.

Is there not a sentiment involved that should be considered? There are reminiscenses of civil as well as military life and the time opportune.

As a Post hall, the room dedicated on the evening of that winter's day 1889, has ceased to exist but the endearing fraternal association of those fine quarters must remain as a fond memory to every member of Carnes Post until the last comrade has been "mustered out".

daughters and prospective sons of our homes, and which are to be the coming men of the future nations. And now down all the righteousness which the churches of Christ will establish in future generations. But "Old Man Booze" and "Poligamy" transgressed against his devilish will by not doing enough mischief so he drove them from Hell to earth into the hearts of mankind and they have been there ever since. Unto "Old Man Booze" and "Mrs. Polygamy" were born many children which have greatly helped their parents support the family in filling "hell"—the store house with corruption and sin enough to last throughout eternity. Most of the family are boys and the old man takes great delight in seeing his sons farm "Hell's Half Acre" as he knows that some day they will be rewarded by their creator with a home where frost never bites.

The children are: Criminality, Rotten Politics, Dishonesty, Gambling, Dancing, Tobacco Craze and Miss White Slavery.

Criminality, the oldest of the old man's boys was born at the time when Cain slew Abel and has been put in the pen several times since while under the influence of the old man.

Dishonesty, the next oldest boy of the family was born, was born at the time when Esau was robbed of his birth rights by Jacob. He has taken an active part in late years in setting some of his dads "Near Beer" to minors in his hopes to rob some young men of their birth right of true manhood and self respect.

Rotten Politics was born at the time the early people built the Great Tower whereby they hoped to be elected to heaven by a skinned game. This fellow is very popular in America and has a controling effect in all election. His theory is, to vote for the yellow dog on his own ticket in preference to a man on the opposing ticket.

Gambling was born at the time the soldiers cast lots for Christ's raiments at the crucifixion. He usually hangs out at the Old Man's work shop—the saloon. A place that is usually dark enough to shield his eyes from annoying and painful reflections of brass buttons.

Tobacco craze is an Indian which Columbus discovered in 1492. He was taken to England where he received a reputation. Queen Elizabeth said that he was a boy of virtue and strength, but she wore blue glasses. In 1619 he was adopted to the Booze family. He has many friends in this world even among the so called Christian people. Of a truth he is the best one of the Booze Polygamy family.

Dancing was born at the time that the daughter of Herodias danced before Herod and pleased him and thus receiving the promise for the head of John the Baptist. The youngest child and only daughter of the family, is Miss White slavery born a few years ago in America. All that will be and can be easily said is that she has few friends—friends who were once the daughters of your homes, who have thru force and defraud, been forced to acknowledge her acquaintaneeship. This is the story of Old Man Booze and his children.

How are these two parents evils responsible for many of our smaller vices? This question may be answered by stating another question. How do the "trusts" control and extend their business over all the world? The trusts do it by erecting small incorporations in all districts where business is or where business can be made—in other words, to build a net work of business magnets whereby all the possible available finances can be had by a under handling of the finances of the common people. The Liquor Traffic is the largest trust in the whole world. Note how this trust controls and extends its business and allows me to prove to your eyes and ears the truthfulness of the statement that— "Old Man Booze has many children". Many trusts extend their business in a lawful and honorable way. The liquor traffic trusts, on the contrary, promote their business thru the utility of dishonorable and unlawful incorporations. Now then, what are these incorporations that boom the liquor business? They are these evils which we have enumerated in the above paragraph.

Criminality, as statistics from insane asylums and penitentiaries quote is 90 per cent due and traceable to these two great evils, booze and polygamy. If criminality is not due to these vices why do nearly all our

Making Progress.

The head of a New York firm having important interests in Italy decided some time ago, in view of the death of and old and reliable clerk, who, of all in the establishment, was the only one to have a good knowledge of the Italian tongue, that his own son, also a member of the concern, ought to take up the study of that language.

Recently a friend met the young man. "I understand," said he, "that you're actually studying Italian."

"Why, yes," said the other, "I've been at it for several months under a teacher just from the other side."

"What progress?"

"Good," was the answer. "He's beginning to speak English remarkably well."

High School

The High School opened Wednesday morning, but because of delay several did not enter until Monday morning whose entering makes a complete enrollment of fifty-nine. The interior of the school house has been remodeled so as to make it possible to have a better equipment for the high school work and by this means of increase we hope to better it. At the present time there is a new recitation room made by removing a partition between what was the old library and cloak room. The library, to which has been added a great many necessary new volumes, was moved to the first floor in former janitor's room. A $250 laboratory equipment has been installed in the basement. The educational standing, character and personality of our two high school teachers assure them the esteem of both pupils, parents and officers and the community at large feel that there is nothing of which to be more proud of than a high school.

Not Coughing Today?

Yet you may cough tomorrow! Better be prepared for it when it comes. Ask your doctor about keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Then when the hard cold or cough first appears you have a doctor's medicine at hand. Your doctor's approval of its use will certainly set all doubt at rest. Do as he says. He knows. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

murders occur in saloons and red light districts. Why did the Mayor of Columbus close the saloons during the street car strike? Why did the Mayor of Newark close all saloons after the lynching of a dry detective sometime ago? Call to memory the Miller Murder Case and the trouble between the whites and negroes on account of the laters non behavior on account of the inflamation of uncontrollable passions caused by "booze" and the other parent. Immorality weakens a man's common sense, reason faculties and liquor, while liquor nerves him to dare to kill.

Rotten Politics is due to the liquor traffic. If it is not, then why does the liquor traffic seek to keep the temperance question in politics, if it has not herebefore, been a controling factor. Why did all the saloon keeping republicans flock to the standard of the democratic party and carry the state election, if this is not true why did the Nebraskan Democrats turn a deaf ear to their noble leader, W. J. Bryan, when he warned them of the dangers of future defeat in trifling with the degenerator of politics. And why have many of our good democrats left the party in which the traffic is connected. The situation is self explanitory. As long as booze rules there will be political fools.

Next up to bat is dishonesty. How is he related to the old Man? Considering the cost and selling prices of beverages, it is evident that there is a wide marginal profit which often becomes very tempting to men conducting legitimate business in (urban) and rural districts. The law specifies who shall sell liquor, to whom, where and why it shall be sold and any doctor who lawfully violates the law is not an honest man. We find many restaurant keepers, drug dealers, keepers of meat markets, etc, who are unlawfully selling whiskey, near beer and something a little nearer to individuals and minors, and who always have the white wash brush ready to spread on any necessary application of whiteness on the approach of a customer and the salve box always in use. As a rule a secret business is a harmful business. The law also says that a man must pay his honest debts. This law the shop keepers use quite frequently in collecting debts from his customers. He says "Men aught to be honest". Some of our dealers within the radius of twenty miles had ought to themselves wear the shoes they wish their customers to wear. Selling a minor's character for the marginal profit of a little booze is by no means a legitimate business nor the seller an honest man.

Gambling which has of late years become less attached to the liquor traffic has been installed in this nation by the liquor traffic. So that this evil deserves no futher comment in a manner familiar to all.

Dancing is considered by the bulk of the so called common people to be a decent and harmless past time, as oftimes when the right time, the right girl, the right place and the right fellow meet, it might be honestly stated as harmless. But when one of these four conditions are violated the dance becomes harmful. Harmful in this way: In the first place, women are absolutely necessary for the carrying on a dance, and any gentleman if he will but think soberly and honestly will have no trouble in coming to the right conclusion why this is true. The fact is men indulge in many pleasures without the fulfillment of above conditions with perfect satisfaction, but the dance, to be up to its expectations, must have both sex. One reason, of course, for this style of entertainment is because the forefathers our, and foreign nations choose this amusement for a harmless pastime among friends at a social gathering, but today there is another reason. Dances are today conducted for the money there is in it, which absolutely demands that all ancient restrictions be removed to make it a financial success, and which give strangers of all classes unintroducible rights to mingle with the participants with far greater freedom than at our homes. With these freedoms, many intrusions are made which are not always obvious to the eye of the observer, and which will not be immediately openly reprimanded thru the fear of social frictions and disturbances. As the dance closes the same conditions still exist as during the dance, and characters often make a profound change from that date. There are exceptions to all rules 'tis true. There are people who shame never lived to see, and who may never live to see the harmfulness of the dance, but those people are the fortunate few in this life. An individual cannot work around a flour barrel without getting some on his clothes; neither can a youth who persistently follows this doubtful pleasure escape from getting some of the effects on his character. In conclusion, of this division of this part of this subject, the author will say that liquor is often used in aiding young men to gather courage enough to conduct themselves as they desire at dances and that dances are as a rule composed of a class of young men who use alcoholic beverages, and ladies who like the habits of such gifted young men.

The tobacco craze affects men in a moderate way. The clergy abstain from this habit as an unprofitable and physical, spiritual weakening habit. The school laws prohibit teachers from its use as injurious to the morals of the youth. On the other hand it is used by many, thought to be Christian and moral people who seem to derive no harm from it. About the only charge that can be laid at its door, is that it contains many injurious drugs which aids in the destruction of the youth's vanguard.

White slavery, like the red light districts of our cities is almost directly under the influence and support of the liquor traffic. These places not only fit a man for the liquor market but furnishes a good market for beverages itself. Both of these institutions get a chance at him. If the liquor fails to land a man by the saloon directly, the other one gets him. The brewers are as wise as some other people, Mr. Citizen, and if there are any prospects for your boy or girl aiding them in making a few dollars, your little vote (especially a democrat one) will do little to hinder him. As the huge wide spreading oak shelters and protects the grass and flowers from the hot sun, so do these parent evils shelter these minor evils from the law and the arm of justice. It is said by good authority that 65 per cent of the entire population of the United States are in favor of a dry nation, in other words clean politics and sober men. With these figures it seems plausible that this nation ought to be free of these conditions. Free it would be if it were not for the firm hold these traffics have on the nation as trusts, and having so many people who can see only one side of the question. The American Nation made no very marked progress until slavery was made extinct, neither will it make any farther progress until these traffics are anulled.

MEETING KINGS AND QUEENS.

Be Perfectly Natural and You Will Get Along Splendidly.

Now that the social season abroad has begun and American tourists from this side are daily being presented to royalty a few words for their guidance at court may not be amiss, says a writer in the Boston Post. Every American abroad should know how to behave in the presence of a King, Queen, Jack, ace or two-spot; hence the following rules:

Do not carry your hat in your hand. Leave it on the royal hatrack.

It is highly improper to say, "Hello, King!" when you are presented. Remember, you are not talking over a telephone.

If there is a Queen on the throne it is proper to kiss her hand—if she will lend it to you long enough.

You might ask the King if he finds ruling hard work, and then remark that it's a poor rule that won't work both ways. If the King has not heard this one, it will put him in rare good humor.

It is in poor taste to make the weather a topic of conversation at court.

Tell the King where you come from—he will be pleased to know that you hail from Chicago, and made your money in hogs, or that you are a Pittsburger and own a steel works, or are a convict-financier from New York out on parole.

If offered a chair sit down. Otherwise remain standing. Never, under any circumstances, sit on the edge of the throne platform, no matter how tired you are.

If the Queen is not present ask the King if his wife is well. If the potentate is a Sultan, ask him if his multiple wife is well. It will save time.

An American society woman presented at a foreign court should not wear her jewels. They would only make the King and Queen jealous.

If you cannot think of anything else to say, you might compliment the Queen on the glove-like fit of her purple throne cloak. (No matter if it fits like a bath robe.)

If you notice the King beginning to yawn, look at your watch and tell him you really must go because you have a train to catch in a few minutes. Never wear out your welcome.

In departing invite the King to visit you and tell him to bring his Queen with him. Say "I am glad to have met you," and express the hope that you may both become better acquainted.

MRS. FENTON

BY

CHAPTER XXIII.—(Continued.)

Mrs. Fenton's forecast of the course to which Mr. Breffit would eventually find himself impelled was verified to the letter; and indeed it is not easy to see what other course any honest man could adopt. The mystery must be cleared up, he thought. It might, of course, turn out to be some very trifling matter; but, on the other hand, it might prove to me a most important one. For his own part, he could not help fearing that she had married some man out in Australia—the very man who was threatening her perhaps—and a family lawyer must not connive, or even seem to connive, at bigamy.

Accordingly, instead of going straight to Bedford Row as usual, he turned aside to Fred's rooms, where he found that young gentleman at breakfast, and, thinking it best to conceal nothing, he gave a truthful and concise account of what had taken place on the previous afternoon.

Fred received the news quite as Mrs. Fenton had anticipated that he would receive it. He was a good deal more annoyed than alarmed; he thought the lawyer rather fussy and officious, and he was by no means disposed to follow the advice urged upon him. "I wish you hadn't told me about it!" he exclaimed, irritably. "Laura and I have agreed to pass the sponge over what is past; if she has done this, that, or the other in years gone by, I don't want to hear about it, and I hardly feel that I am entitled to go and demand an explanation, as you suggest."

Mr. Breffit shook his head. "Perhaps 'demand' is too strong a word to use,' said he; "but I am afraid you will have to request an explanation. This man has some hold over Mrs. Fenton, and if you don't inquire what it is now, you will certainly inquire some day—when possibly it may be too late."

"What do you mean?" asked Fred, rather fiercely.

"Not a word more than I say. No man can allow his wife to pay blackmail. Either this fellow is a mere bully, from whom it is your business to deliver her, or else he is in possession of some secret which ought to prevent her from marrying you. I express no opinion about the matter; I only caution you that you can't shirk a disagreeable duty, by ignoring it."

The truth is that Fred would have been very glad to ignore it; but since, after that explicit warning, it was scarcely possible for him to do so, he presently took his way to Albemarle street. There he learned, not a little to his surprise, that Mrs. Fenton had left London for a few days. "But I was to say, sir," added the waiter, who gave this information, "that if you would please to step upstairs you would find a note for you upon the table."

Fred went up to the sitting-room which had of late become so familiar to him, and there, sure enough, he espied an envelope addressed to "F. Musgrave, Esq.," which, on being opened, proved to contain several closely written sheets of paper. He supposed that one of her friends had asked her down to the country for a day or two; he was utterly unprepared for the startling announcement with which the letter began.

"My Dear Fred—I am running away, because there is nothing else to be done. I have deceived you from first to last, and now I have been found out. I am not your cousin, I am only the widow of your late cousin's husband; and all the money that I have spent since my arrival in this country has been stolen from you by me."

Then, at full length, she narrated the true story of her life. She did not attempt to make any excuse for her subsequent conduct, remarking that she knew very well how useless it would be to do so.

"The only thing that I hope you will believe, Fred—but I am not sure that you will—is that I really loved you. Perhaps it sounds absurd to say so, because I have robbed you of several thousand pounds, and I suppose, too, that I have prevented you from marrying the girl whom you love. However, it is true; and possibly you won't miss those few thousands very much, and, as for the girl whom you love, she will marry you now—and so all's well that ends well. All wouldn't have ended well if Mr. Dodd hadn't turned up in the nick of time, you will say; but that is as may be. Nobody can tell what might have been, and it won't do you much harm if I go on thinking that you might have been happy with me. Anyhow, you will never see me again; for I know you won't set the police on my track, though Mr. Breffit will tell you that that is what you ought to do. And so, good-by, my dear, dear Fred. If you can forgive me and think kindly of me, you will; and if you can't—well, then I dare say you will soon manage to forget me."

Now, it must be confessed that when Fred had finished reading the letter from which the above extract has been taken he was not disposed to think very kindly of its writer. To begin with, the sensation of having been most completely and successfully made a fool of is one which nobody enjoys. Moreover, those who reserve their confession until they have been found out cannot expect to be mercifully judged. Certainly Fred had no wish to put himself in communication with the police or to see Mrs. Fenton in the dock; but he did think that she might consider herself extremely lucky to have got off scot-free, and he felt no sort of pity for her.

CHAPTER XXIV.

As the day went on, Fred became a little less indignant and a little more sanguine; because further reflection showed him that the situation was not such as to exclude all hope. General and Mrs. Moore, at any rate, would now be on his side, which was something; and eventually—not at once, but some day—he would perhaps be able to make Susie understand how it was that he had seemed to be false to her. He did not think it necessary to give any information about Mrs. Fenton at her hotel, nor did he care to impart the news to Mr. Breffit that day. He returned to his rooms and sat there smoking and thinking over the strange alteration which had taken place in his destiny, until late in the afternoon, when he strolled round to his club.

He had been holding the evening paper in his hand, and had been bestowing an intermittent attention upon its contents for some time before his eye fell upon the following paragraph:

"Drowning of a Passenger Between Dover and Calais.—The boat carrying the French mails left Dover harbor last night in heavy weather, and had been about a quarter of an hour under way when one of the crew noticed a lady who had been leaning over the side, suddenly lose her balance and fall overboard. He at once gave the alarm, the engines were stopped, a boat was lowered, and every effort was made to rescue the unfortunate woman; but, owing to the high sea which was running, and the darkness of the night, these proved of no avail, and, after some delay, the steamer proceeded on her passage. It has been ascertained that the name of the missing passenger was Mrs. Fenton, and that she had taken tickets for Paris. Mrs. Fenton's maid who accompanied her, and who returned to Dover by the next boat, states that her mistress could have had no motive for committing suicide, and it is believed that the accident was solely due to the rolling of the vessel and the somewhat dangerous attitude in which the deceased had placed herself."

Fred had to read this bald and uncompromising statement of facts three times over before he could believe in its reality. Even when the evidence of his senses would no longer allow him to doubt that Mrs. Fenton was dead, he felt more stunned and bewildered than sorry, and could think of nothing better than to hurry off and confer with Mr. Breffit. Lawyers are not apt to be stunned or bewildered by any episode, however dramatic.

Nevertheless, Mr. Breffit, whom Fred presently encountered upon the steps of the club, was both.

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed, "what a dreadful thing. Of course you have heard what has happened. Poor soul! When I saw her yesterday I had no conception that matters were so serious."

"You think, then—" said Fred, and did not conclude his sentence.

"I don't know what to think; I'm afraid it looks like it. But then what could be her reason? Perhaps you know more than I do?"

"Come home with me, and I'll tell you all I know," answered Fred; "we can't talk here."

The lawyer was much astonished when he heard what Fred had to say, and no doubt the knowledge that he had been completely duped would also have made him very angry but for the tragic fate which had overtaken the criminal.

A few days later poor Mrs. Fenton's body was washed ashore near Dover, and in the course of the inquiry which necessarily followed Fred was compelled to make statements which he would far rather have kept to himself. The whole affair excited a great deal of public interest and curiosity, and for a day or two the newspapers were full of it. However, the coroner's jury decided, quite properly, that the evidence did not warrant them in assuming that the deceased had intentionally put an end to her existence, and a verdict of "Accidental death" was therefore returned. The seaman who had witnessed the occurrence deposed upon oath that in his opinion the rolling of a vessel might possibly precipitate a passenger over bulwarks of almost any height, and it is not for landsmen to set up their private opinion against that of experts.

Fred Musgrave had his private opinion; but since he was not asked for it, he did not give it. The death of the woman who, if she had lived a few weeks longer, would have been his wife, was a great shock to him, and the manner of it was more shocking still. He had not, it is true, been in love with her, and of late he had known very well that life as her husband must be more or less miserable to him; yet he had been fond of her, and he bitterly regretted that she had not had the courage to confess all to him. One may manage to forgive a pickpocket, especially after restitution has been made—but it is less easy to forgive a woman who has caused you to desert your true love and the motives of your desertion to appear so painfully and evidently mercenary.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Fenton's foresight had not been at fault in any particular. For some months after her death Fred and Susie did not meet; but they met at last, and then what had been quite sure to happen did happen.

"I never believed that you wanted to marry Mrs. Fenton for the sake of her money," Susie declared; "I told you in Paris that I didn't believe it. I thought you really cared for her, and—and I don't know that I don't think so still."

"I cared for her," Fred returned, "just about as much as you cared for Claughton."

"Well, that was a great deal."

"Exactly; that was a great deal, but not quite enough. Of course you are entitled to trample upon be, because you refused Claughton; but how was I to tell you that you meant to refuse him, after leading him on as you did?"

And now Susie made an avowal which proves that, contrary to the general belief, there are women who can be magnanimous upon occasion. She confessed that she had fully intended to marry Captain Claughton. Fred's conduct had convinced her that he cared nothing for her, and she had thought that she ought, if she could, to gratify a man who did care for her and at the same time to gratify her father and step-mother. She was very sorry for poor Captain Claughton, she added.

"Oh, he'll be all right," said Fred, with easy optimism. "I don't want to breathe a word against him; but as for supposing that Claughton had it in him to love you as I do—well, really that is supposing a little too much, you know."

Susie made no protest against this very unfair judgment. When we are happy we naturally wish other people to be so, too, and are apt to be impatient or incredulous if they give it to be understood that they are not. Cloudless skies are exceptional; but sometimes the sun shines even in England, and when it does, the best plan is to bask in it and avoid consulting the barometer. It is needless to say that Susie Moore married Fred with the full approval of her family, and perhaps equally needless to add that since their wedding-day Mrs. Fenton's name has never been mentioned between the young people.

By other persons, who have not had the same reasons for observing a discreet reticence, her name has been mentioned pretty freely. Mr. Breffit and the Master of All Saints have had to submit to a sharp scolding from Sir James Le Breton; Lady Clamborough has been much annoyed by the ironical condolences of her friends; and Mr. Dodd, when in the safe and select society of his intimates, has not been chary of strictures upon the unutterable meanness of a woman who, after solemnly promising to pay him £5,000, went and drowned herself without redeeming her promise. But nobody is remembered long. To be forgiven is what only those can expect whose misdeeds have ceased to be a source of inconvenience to others; but to be forgotten is the fortunate and inevitable destiny of us all. It is the destiny even of Mr. Frederick Musgrace, although, in these days of his prosperity, he has produced a play for which some of his admirers are so kind as to predict immortality.

(The end.)

Burners Under Bathtub.

In winter, when the demand for hot water for baths exceeds the capacity of the hot-water boiler, the unique heating device shown here would be welcomed. This novel means of furnishing an abundant supply of hot water is the invention of a Missouri man. Its undoubted usefulness will be apparent at a glance. In combination with the tub, a burner tube is disposed under the tub with holes for discharging the flame. These openings are placed at distances increasing from one end of the tub to the other, the openings adjacent where the water enters the tub being closer together than at the opposite end, the common practice of heating extra water in large vessels on the stove can thus be done away with. The inconvenience of carrying the water upstairs after heating is also eliminated, together with the danger of injury from falling.

How to Get a Coonskin Coat.

Coonskin overcoats are within the reach of Minnesotans who will spend a few days in the woods with a coal oil barrel and some parsnips, according to J. L. Ferguson, a trapper who lives in the vicinity of Cass Lake.

"If you'll go to a timbered district," he said, "sink a coal oil barrel two-thirds of its length in the ground, suspend a parsnip over it about a foot from the top and leave it over night, you should catch at least one coon, and possibly three. The head of the barrel must be removed and there must still be traces of coal oil in the inside, so the staves will be slick. The coon will be attracted by the smell of the parsnip (there is nothing a coon likes better); he will climb the outside of the barrel and in trying to stand on the rim and reach the suspended parsnip will fall in. There is no possibility of his climbing out."

Thought He Earned It.

Mrs. Croxton was opposed, on principle, to giving money or food to professional beggars, but there was something so forlorn in the aspect of the dilapidated vagabond at her kitchen door that she hesitated to turn him away.

"Haven't you any occupation?" she asked.

"Nothing that you'd call an occupation, ma'am," he answered.

"Nothing that you'd call a trade?"

"Didn't you ever try to earn your own living?"

"Lady," said the tramp, straightening himself up with something resembling dignity, "I earn my living every day. At least, I'm earning the right to live."

"How?"

"Dodging automobiles."

Mrs. Croxton decided that he had earned a plateful of chicken hash.

RAISING MONEY FOR CHARITY

Man Who Makes Specialty of Getting Funds Declares Newspaper Is Best Medium.

The newspaper is the best advertising medium in existence, declares G. W. Johnson, an advertising expert of Buffalo, N. Y., who makes a specialty of raising large sums of money for charitable purposes in short spaces of time. Mr. Johnson relies entirely upon advertising to accomplish his ends. In ten days he raised $300,000 to build a Y. M. C. A. for Buffalo. In a published interview he says among other things:

"The newspaper is the best thing there is in advertising, because it reaches the home. It stands in exactly the same relationship to the community as does the physician to his patients or the clergyman to his congregation. In a local advertising campaign the home must be reached. All articles in a home are advertised, of course, and the women of this country do more than 90 per cent. of the general buying for the home. The newspaper reaches the women, thereby placing before them the good qualities or new ideals of the article advertised.

"Every newspaper naturally has some standing in the community through which its circulation carries it. Take for example, a newspaper of the very highest type, proportion so the standing of the paper. In other words, a newspaper gives to its advertising its own standing."

Always Assured of New Stock.

"It pays to advertise in the local paper," said a business man recently, "if for no other reason than that the public is assured of purchasing no shelf-worn goods. By advertising we turn over our stock more frequently and while we charge the cost of advertising expense, it really is not an expense, since it pays for itself in additional patronage and we are not compelled to offer our customers shelf-worn goods." The public likes to patronize a store where the goods are new, and advertising, combined with fairly intelligent effort on the part of the proprietor and clerks, will assure the customer against old stock. Therefore to be safe, always patronize the store that advertises.

Fair Advertising Paid.

Col. I. M. Dunn, the secretary of the Danville, Ky., fair, is thoroughly convinced of the value of country news paper advertising. He advertised the fair this year in no other way; out all posters, bills and other ways which cost much but give little results and confined himself exclusively to the newspapers.

The result, Colonel Dunn says, is that the Danville fair made money this year, the first time in many years. He says he will use nothing but the country press in the future and advises others seeking profitable advertising to do likewise.

AD-ISMS.

Continuous advertising is essential—because

Repetition builds reputation; convinces as to faith in self and merchandise.

It establishes in the public mind the idea of permanency and provides against the "out of sight, out of mind."

It fortifies against competition, open or hidden; breaks down indifference and opens the way to intimacy.

Repeated assertion, unchallenged, is accepted as truth.

Regularity creates and takes advantage of subconscious effect on the mind produced through the eye.

Continuous publicity is reputation continuously on the move.

THE PIKER'S CREED.

By H. S. Bunting.

I.

We have nothing to advertise.

II.

We don't believe in advertising our line.

III.

Advertising doesn't pay us—we recommend it to our customers.

IV.

When business is good we don't have to advertise.

V.

When business is poor we can't afford it.

"The Message the Thing."

"The telegram," says Advertising and Selling, "is a common, little crude, yellow and black affair, but with what avidity we reach for it! That is because we have learned to associate it with information of importance. All the costly deckle-edge stock and exquisite printing and embossing in many colors that money can buy could not add anything to the face value of the telegram. The message is the thing. If your advertising gets the reputation of having the real meat in it, people will reach for it and hang on to it."

ORIGIN OF TRIAL BY JURY

Various Noted Authorities Vainly Attempt to Tell Whence the Custom Came.

Whence comes the system of trial by jury? In the opinion of Bourguignon, a French jurist, "its origin loses itself in the night of time." Blackstone speaks of it as "a trial that hath been used time out of mind." Reeves thinks it was introduced into England by the Normans, who themselves obtained it from northern Europe. It is certain that the Scandinavians had an established jury system more than a thousand years ago. The Normans on their arrival in England found prevailing there the ordeal of hot irons, which enforced the carrying of a pound of heated metal by the accused for a given distance, and the ordeal of hot water, in which by way of variation a stone had to be withdrawn from a pitcher of boiling water. No attempt at reform in this direction was made by William the Conqueror.

A noted case tried in the reign of the Conqueror, with Otho, bishop of Bayeux, presiding as judge, has been erroneously supposed to be the first jury case on record. A dispute had arisen about certain lands, to which the sheriff laid claim on behalf of the king. All the men of the county were assembled and sworn to say the truth. Eventually they found for the sheriff. The judge, dissatisfied with the verdict, directed the men of the county to choose out of their number twelve, who should upon their oaths confirm the verdict if they thought fit. This they did. Authorities now agree, however, that the chosen twelve were not jurors, but merely compurgators, sworn to give evidence. The legal existence of jurors was first recorded under the Plantagenets.

Nowadays no penalty is enforced when the twelve men chosen to form the jury are unable to agree upon a verdict. Formerly, however, a refractory juryman was committed to prison and the verdict of the eleven was taken. In the reign of King Edward III. the judges decided that a verdict given by a majority was a nullity and recommended that the judges should carry the jury about with them in a cart till they should agree. The old custom that jurors should fast until they had agreed in their verdict prevailed long, but was mercifully relaxed somewhat in Tudor times, and during Queen Elizabeth's reign a banquet was usually given to the jury by the successful party to a suit.

Protecting Concrete Floors.

The rapid wearing of dust from cement concrete floors suggested to Albert Moyer some experiments with protective coatings. As reported to the American Society for Testing Materials, the paints and protectives on the market were found to form only a thin veneer, but several applications of dilute water glass (sodium silicate) filled the pores near the surface, forming with the line of the cement a kind of "marine glue," and hardened the concrete itself. This cheap application seems to be valuable for many uses. It strengthens concrete already set, and not only makes it more durable, but gives it resistance to sea water, acids, alkalies and other chemicals.

Told to Be Careful.

Pedestrians are called on to use great caution in the streets of New York. During the last three years the surface railway lines killed 91 persons and injured 630 so seriously that they had to be taken to hospitals.

The learned counsel was annoyed at being interrupted, so warmly exclaimed, "I shall speak, sir, as long as I please!" "You have already spoken, sir, longer than you please!" retorted the other side.—Blue Bull.

HONOR "MOTHER OF REGIMENT"

Mrs. Lovina Streight's Vacant Chair Decorated.

REUNION OF 51ST INDIANA

Tears Came to the Soldiers' Eyes When They Witnessed Ceremonies Which Took Place at Reunion.

Indianapolis.—Tears came to the eyes of veterans of the Fifty-first Indiana regiment when they witnessed the decoration of the vacant chair of Mrs. Lovina Streight, "mother of the regiment," who died June 5, 1910, since the last reunion of the regiment.

The ceremonies took place at the reunion of the regiment on the beautiful grounds of the old Streight homestead in Indianapolis, where the reunions have been held for 24 years. Mrs. Streight's favorite chair was brought to the veranda of the house and in the presence of the veterans, who reverently bared their heads, the members of the Gen. A. D. Streight circle, No. 16, of Ladies of the G. A. R., came forward and with appropriate ceremonies decorated the chair with flags and red carnations, the flowers which Mrs. Streight liked best. Mrs. Bohlen of Indianapolis then spoke on behalf of the women in memory of mother Streight, who was the wife of Gen. A. D. Streight, commander of the regiment.

The reunion was opened with a bugle call by A. M. Dooley of Danville, after which Miss Ada Kirk of Danville led in the singing of "America." Captain Welton led in prayer, which was followed with the welcoming address of Captain James Schous, who is a messenger in the house of representatives, Washington, D. C. He praised Mrs. Streight and recalled that she always spoke of the members of the regiment as her "boys." Capt. G. W. Scare of Danville responded.

This was the forty-ninth annual reunion of the regiment, and arrangements are being made for the celebration of the regiment's "golden wedding" next year.

The One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Indiana closed its reunion at the courthouse by an election of officers, and by deciding on holding its next reunion at Winchester instead of Indianapolis, as has been its practise. The date for the reunion was not fixed.

Cholera Serum for Hogs.
Senator Beveridge has received a number of letters within the last few weeks from farmers and stock raisers over the state in regard to the prevalence of hog cholera in several of the counties, and he has been asked to lay the matter before the secretary of agriculture, explaining the seriousness of the situation and asking that the department of agriculture send an inspector into Indiana to make an investigation and help the stockmen to eradicate the disease. The requests from Boone county were especially urgnt because, it was said, hog cholera is causing heavy losses in that county.

The senator laid the matter before the secretary of agriculture and has received a telegram from him saying that Dr. R. A. Craig of Purdue university is authorized to supply the hog cholera serum discovered by the department to those farmers whose hogs are affected, and the secretary of agriculture suggests that the farmers communicate direct with Doctor Craig.

State Takes a Hand.
The controversy between the city and the Williamsburg school board over the responsibility for educating 150 children in the territory recently annexed is being investigated by the state.

The Williamsburg authorities assert that as the children now live in the city they should be educated in Milwaukee schools, while the local school officials assert that the state has appropriated money for this purpose to the district school until January 1, therefore the city is not responsible at present.

The council also will investigate.

Soldiers' Widows Were Not Abused.
President L. Y. Sherman and Secretary B. R. Burroughs of the state board of administration, have made a report on their investigation of charges against Mrs. Flo Jamison Miller, matron of the Soldiers' Widows' home of Illinois at Wilmington, in which Mrs. Miller is exonerated and the continuance of her service is approved.

The investigation, begun some two months ago, arose from charges of bad treatment of inmates, and of faults in the food and cooking and in the medical service.

Articles of Incorporation.
Articles of incorporation have been filed in the office of the secretary of state for the following:

The State bank of Stockwell, Stockwell; capital stock, $25,000; N. R. Johnson, president.

Picker Brothers, Boonville; capital stock, $20,000; general merchants; incorporators, Albert W., Frank and Carl Picker.

The Dixie Social club, Evansville; no capital stock; directors, R. T. Butler, Samuel Edwards and Robert Sanderfer.

Delays Election Board.
The state board of election commissioners decided that no new codification of the election laws of the state would be necessary for distribution this fall to the election officers of the state, and thereby saved $800.

The only change that will be made in the former book of instructions will be the insertion of an act of the last legislature, providing that ballots shall be preserved instead of destroyed by the election boards, as previously provided.

The board met with E. W. McGinnis and A. E. Butler, clerks of the board, and various details of procedure were discussed. It developed that for many years the clerk of the state printing board has been made the chief clerk of the election board and that printing board clerks had proceeded with the preparation for election far in advance of their actual appointment. Because the board would be Democratic this year and A. E. Butler, clerk of the printing board, is a Republican, he had no assurance he would be a clerk, and so did not take this preliminary action. The result is that the board is behind in its work. The members believed, however, that by frequent meetings they will be able to get the work done on time.

The first thing to be done will be to get the clerks and auditors of the counties of the state to certify the number of voting precincts and the votes in each. The members of the board realize that it is of the greatest importance that these reports from the county officers be made promptly and will try to impress this fact on county officials.

Old Letter Read at Reunion.
A letter written by Capt. Estis Wallingford of the Thirty-third Indiana when the regiment was quartered at Camp Hendricks, was read to the survivors of the regiment at the annual reunion at the statehouse. The letter is now the property of Mrs. J. M. Rogers of 2004 North Meridian street, this city, a daughter of Captain Willingford.

The association reorganized for the ensuing year by electing the following officers: President, Simon B. Shore, Lebanon; vice-president, William A. Dilley, Martinsville; secretary, A. J. Buchanan, Indianapolis; treasurer, William H. Miller, Morristown; chaplain, John A. Smith, Soldiers' home, Marion. A dinner was served to the association members in the basement.

A second dinner served was to the members of the Thirteenth cavalry, which held a social session at the statehouse during the morning, preparatory to a business session in the afternoon. S. S. Carson of Shelbyville is president of the organization. The Seventh Indiana also met in special session during the morning, preparatory to a business session in the afternoon. Anthony S. Cost of this city is president of the organization.

Battle Flags Returned.
An annual reunion of the Eighty-second Volunteer infantry was held at Columbus, at which Maj. David I. McCormick of Indianapolis, secretary of the Indiana Battle Flag commission, was present, and he brought with him to show to the veterans three battle flags as follows: The banner of the Fourteenth Indiana, the battle flag of the Seventh Indiana and the flag of the Third Indiana. The last named flag saw service in the Mexican war, and Major McCormick brought it especially to show to Michael Emig of this city, who was a member of the Seventieth Indiana, but on arriving here he learned that the old soldier is blind and much enfeebled by age and no attempt was made to take the flag under which he saw service in the Mexican war to him.

The battle flag of the Eighty-second which was already here, was lost for 23 years and was but recently recovered. It was left in a store in Indianapolis, where it was unnoticed for years.

New Y. W. C. A. Workers Come.
Four new members of the executive staff and faculty of the Y. W. C. A have arrived to take up their duties Miss Emma Jean Batty, who lately gave up her duties as general recording secretary at Buenos Ayres, Argentine Republic, is the new state executive for Indiana. Miss Anna P. Bird salt of Newburgh, N. Y., is the new general secretary. Miss Myrtle Andrews, a graduate of Oberlin college is physical director, while Miss Louise E. Stevenson of Milliken university Decateur, Ill., will teach domestic science and art.

Baptist State Missions.
The Salamonie Baptist association's annual conference, which began here ended with two addresses, "The Brotherhood in the Local Church," by R. H. Bouslog of Peru, and "Men and the Kingdom," by George A. Chritton of Chicago. Rev. L. G. Conley spoke on "The Budget—Can We Raise It?" Evangelist D. B. Richards followed, speaking on the state mission work of the church. Rev. W. B. Pope, superintendent of state missions for the church, spoke on the same subject.

Ranks High as Tomato State.
As a producer of canned tomatoes, Indiana ranked third last year and second in 1908 with a normal pack of 1,000,000 cases, compared with 10,000,000 for the whole country. Maryland is the chief tomato raising state, producing 40 per cent. of the total, or 4,000,000 cases.

The Indiana crop this season is nothing more than a matter of guesswork. Tomatoes are in a precarious position and packers are unable to predict what kind of a crop will result.

BAD EGG CAMPAIGN SPREADING RAPIDLY

BARNARD HEARS FROM MOVEMENT IN MANY STATES.

KANSAS IS IN THE LEAD

State Food and Drug Commissioner Says Indiana Is Not Alone in the Campaign Against the Bad Egg.

Indianapolis.—That Indiana is not alone in the campaign against the circulation of the bad egg in the general market is evident from the flood of replies received by H. E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner, in answer to requests for information recently sent out to the food commissions of the great egg-producing states. All the states in the "egg belt" realize that they have a serious problem, but from this point their ways diverge. One group reports little or no success in handling the question, while the other, including Kansas, South Dakota and Missouri, seems to be on the way to a solution of the difficulties that beset the food reformers.

From the character of the replies Mr. Barnard hopes to gain valuable data in pursuing the movement to amend the Indiana law, which, by means of the word "knowingly" in the egg clause, makes it almost impossible to push prosecutions to successful issue. The conditions vary, however, in each state according to the variance in the local laws and the vigilance of the food commissioners.

Among the states that are still unsuccessful in handling the egg question, the situation ranges all the way from a mere seeking of light to a realization of the objections after thorough investigation. J. Q. Emery, at the head of the dairy and food commission in Wisconsin, writes: "We have not solved this problem. We have not done much work along this line owing to the extreme difficulty involved in the case. It seems to me that when we do strike we shall be obliged to hold the person responsible who is caught with the goods."

Iowa has been a little more successful by prosecuting under a general law. W. B. Barney, state food and dairy commissioner, writes: "We, too, have found the egg problem one of the most difficult to handle. We have no special law covering this subject, but have succeeded in making a few prosecutions by having our inspector candle the eggs as they are delivered to the merchant."

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Warsaw.—A tragedy was narrowly averted when Mr. and Mrs. George Waiman of near Kendallville, who were here to attend the annual reunion of the Thirtieth Indiana regiment, were overcome by gas and almost asphyxiated. They were both found near death in the room in which they turned on a gas jet, taking it for an electric light. The victims are still in a serious condition, but will probably recover.

Henryville.—The death of Freeman Cooper ended the career of one of the best known real estate developers in southern Indiana. Mr. Cooper came here about ten years ago from Kokomo, where he was at one time a law partner with John W. Gern, lately defeated candidate for vice-president and now opposing Albert J. Beveridge for the United States senatorship.

Vincennes.—Suddenly becoming insane, Lincoln Freeman of Shoals wandered away from his home at White River bridge, near Wheatland. He had placed his clothing, with a picture of his wife, in a grip and later walked entirely nude through the town of Wheatland. Scott Weaver obtained a blanket and rescued Freeman, who was later taken to his home.

Richmond. — Mildren Locke, six years old, of Cambridge City, has brought suit against the Pennsylvania railroad for $2,500 damages. The complaint alleges that she is entitled to this sum for injuries received when a Pennsylvania locomotive struck her. The father, Erie L. Locke, has also sued the railroad for $1,500, his claim in damages by the injury to the child.

Evansville.—At the wedding of Martha Ruth Pheatt to Cortner M. Hardy in Rockport the bride wore hobble skirts. It was the first "hobble skirt" wedding in southern Indiana. Mr. Hardy is the son of T. M. Hardy, wealthy tobacco warehouse man of Rockport. The couple will live in that city.

Evansville.—Grief over the death of her husband, which occurred two months ago, caused the death of Mrs. John B. Andrews.

Richmond.—Although he was fined only one cent by the city court for trespass, L. E. Simmons declares he will take an appeal to the circuit court. Simmons took down a stove in the residence of Charles Skillens and in doing so threw some soot on several pies. Skillens then filed the charge against him.

Bloomington.—Mrs. Elisabeth Goss, living ten miles north of here, was milking a cow near a rail fence when the animal kicked her, breaking her right leg. The force of the blow knocked her against the fence and a rail fell, breaking the left leg.

Remembering Each Other.
He sat on the sand at Atlantic City in a bathing suit. About ten feet away she was drawing pictures in the sand with a small brown forefinger. He noticed her complexion, her curves and the glint of gold in her hair. He wanted to speak, and yet——. Finally he summoned courage and walked over to her.

"Didn't I talk with you for about five minutes two summers ago?" he asked.

"Two years ago," she said dreamily. "Two years ago—let me see—did I wear blue silk stockings?"

Confusing.
Craig Biddle, at a dinner in Newport, was describing the changing odds on the Jeffries-Johnson fight at Reno.

"Eight to four and a half on Jeffries—nine to six the other way about—three to one and a quarter—it's rather confusing, isn't it?" he said. "In fact, it's almost as confusing as the two girls' talk about a secret.

"'Mary,' said the first girl, 'told me that you had told her that secret I told you not to tell her.'

"'The nasty thing,' said the other girl. 'I told her not to tell you I told her.'

"'Well, said the first girl, 'I told her I wouldn't tell you she told me—so don't tell her I did.'"

"Good-Night and Pleasant Dreams."
Two things mean sweet sleep—a clear conscience and a clean bed. No one is going to put you in a bed they think is not clean, but haven't you noticed sometimes that the pillow cases and sheets have a stale, musty smell, and that they are harsh and have an unpleasant feeling? That is because they are washed with soaps that are full of rosin and strong caustics. There's only one soap for bedding. That is "Easy Task Soap." Pure cocoanut oil, pure borax, naphtha and other healthfully sterilizing and cleansing agents compose "Easy Task Soap," and bedding washed with it is sure to come from the wash so beautiful that it makes the housewife proud.

She Took No Chances.
A happily-wedded matron is the principal of an odd incident, which one of her "dear" friends relates.

Before the matron's engagement to her present husband was announced, she met her "dear" friend on the street. The new matron was hurrying toward one of the large jewelry stores of the city.

"John gave me an engagement ring," she explained, without a shadow of embarrassment, "and I am going down to see how much it cost. You see, I got the jeweler's name off the box," and she hurried on.

The same friend said that another bit of information the matron got was the commercial standing of the prospective husband, which she secured by paying for a special report from a commercial agency.

Attention Sick Women

If you had positive proof that a certain remedy for female ills had made many remarkable cures, would you not feel like trying it?

If during the last thirty years we have not succeeded in convincing every fair-minded woman that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured thousands and thousands of women of the ills peculiar to their sex, then we long for an opportunity to do so by direct correspondence. Meanwhile read the following letters which we guarantee to be genuine and truthful.

Hudson, Ohio.—"I suffered for a long time from a weakness, inflammation, dreadful pains each month and suppression. I had been doctoring and receiving only temporary relief, when a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so, and wrote to you for advice. I have faithfully followed your directions and now, after taking only five bottles of the Vegetable Compound, I have every reason to believe I am a well woman. I give you full permission to use my testimonial." —Mrs. Lena Carmocino, Hudson, Ohio. R. F. D. No. 7.

St. Regis Falls, N. Y.—"Two years ago I was so bad that I had to take to my bed every month, and it would last from two to three weeks. I wrote to you for advice and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in dry form. I am happy to say that I am cured, thanks to your medicine and good advice. You may use my letter for the good of others." — Mrs. J. H. Breyere, St. Regis Falls, N. Y.

There is absolutely no doubt about the ability of this grand old remedy, made from the roots and herbs of our fields, to cure female diseases. We possess volumes of proof of this fact, enough to convince the most skeptical.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Liquor Traffic in Politics This Fall

As proof of the close alliance of both "stand-patters" and "insurgents" and of Republicans and Democrats alike with the liquor traffic the Prohibitionists point to current events, some of the striking developments of recent date including these items:

In Pennsylvania, both Democratic and Republican candidates for governor are openly strong liquor men.

In Texas, despite a big majority asking for the submission of Prohibition, the Democratic State machine have forced through the nomination for governor of a rabid friend of the saloon.

In Minnesota the Republicans defeated even a plank favoring a county option law and nominated an anti-Prohibitionist for governor.

In Alabama the Democratic politicians have joined hands with the exiled liquor men and declared for the repudiation of Prohibition.

In Florida leading politicians of both parties are opposing the Prohibition referendum.

In New York, Illinois, Ohio, Missouri, Iowa, Wisconsin, Nebraska and California, the liquor traffic has shown its control of both parties in the fall nominations.

For instance in St. Louis, Otto Stifel, a wealthy brewer, is the acknowledged head and dictator of the Republican party, and Tony Steaver, another brewer, has exactly the same relation to the Democratic party in that city.

The situation in Chicago, Cincinnati, New York, Boston and every other license city is very similar.

The Maine Republican nullification of Prohibition was at the bottom of their astonishing defeat September 12.

In Oklahoma, Tennessee and Arkansas the Democratic officials are nullifying Prohibition at the dictation of the liquor interests.

In Iowa the Democrats are opposed to Prohibition and the dominant "insurgent" Republicans have as their leader Ex-Governor Cummins, the man who invented the infamous mulct law that has nullified the Prohibition law for eighteen years.

In Nebraska the dominant Democratic party machine has just defeated the present Governor Shallenberger for renomination, and put in the field the man picked out by the beer-makers of Omaha.

And what is true in these States reflects similar conditions in almost every other State of the Union.

It is because of these facts that the Prohibition party is this fall making a more aggressive fight in every State than in any other campaign of recent years and confidently expects a large gain in its vote in nearly every case.

Completely Overcome.

Last Friday evening the regular weekly choir practice occured at the M. P. parsonage. The members of the church, who could assemble handy had planned to give the new minister and his wife a cup party in honor of their third wedding anniversary. The word was noised about to as many members as possible to assemble at

THE NEWS office and go as a body to their home. The night was a rainy one but in spite of this about twenty-five met, with their little cup, and at about the time choir practice was out they marched in upon the meeting. Rev. Corn and wife were completely surprised, and when the things were unloaded on the table, it made a great showing for them. Everything good was brought for them. As soon as the excitement was over they were entertained by music on the piano by

Chas. Koch, Mrs. Corn, Flossie Copp and Mrs. Lora Leighty. A good social time was had together and it was one that will long be remembered by both pastor and members. A reception has been planned for them at Concord, Saturday evening.

A Scare.

About one o'clock Wednesday morning someone attempted to enter the B. F. Walter home. Frank Kinsey heard the footsteps and got up to see who it was. He was unable to see as it was extremely dark at this time, and he states that the fellow walked upon the porch and tried to enter the parlor door. It took some time before he made his way in and when he did a light appeared. At this time Frank spoke to him. Central phoned to neighbors and in a short time lanterns began to appear from all directions. When they arrived the burglar had gone. Nothing was missing. It don't pay to hunt burglars with lanterns.

Must Go to the Pen.

Herman Miller is guilty of involuntary manslaughter, says the jury, who rendered their verdict last Saturday morning about 9:00 o'clock. after sitting in the jury box for forty-one long days and hearing the evidence as was brought out each day, giving him a sentence of from 2 to 21 years in the prison. The jury was out all night. Mr. Miller was implicated in the shooting of Marshal Croy. The case was long and drawn out and in all 157 witnesses were brought to testify. The exact results of the jurors ballots are as follows:

1st. ballot, conviction 10—2.

Just to give an idea of what it cost to conduct a murder trial of the magnitude of the one just closed, the jury item of expense will be given. The fees alone were $1,230.70 and their board and room, $542.75. Of the fees nearly one-half were for impannelling the jury, the balance for sitting during the hearing.

Besides this cost there are the regular courts, the bailiff's per diem, witness' fees, sheriff's fees, and a score of other incidentals that run into the hundreds. Of course DeKalb county is reimbursed by Allen county.

DO INCHES MAKE THE MAN?

Until the time of the war between Russia and Japan the short man was obliged to defend the prowess of his kind by citing Napoleon as an example of what short persons could do. Balzac, the great French novelist, whose height was a trifle more than five feet, often half whimsically, often seriously, endeavored to show a connection between short stature and excellence. It was also a source of consolation to him and to other men who were not in the tall class, to read in history that the Roman conquerers were short. But after the Russo-Japanese war it became evident to all that stature had nothing to do with the case, unless, perhaps, the victory of the little Jap proved that the short man was the superior of the tall. But now come the municipal authorities in our cities, who say that a tall policeman is better than a short and that a tall fireman is the superior of a short fireman, says Boston Globe. Five feet 7½ inches is the limit of shortness to be tolerated say some, while others lower the standard a quarter of an inch. Others would lower it half an inch more. Superstitions die hard. We are still children, and, although far from the age of giants, we cling to the notion that inches make the man.

Great Britain has just launched one of the biggest of the dreadnought battleships which the government is steadily adding to the navy. And that American ideas are good for something in this connection is shown by the information which has leaked out, notwithstanding the careful way in which naval secrets are guarded, that the guns on the new vessel will be arranged much like those on United States battleships of the latest design, so that they can be fired one above another and concentrate tremendous striking power at a given point. Builders of our warships are giving valuable points to all the world.

It will be a good day in this city when every boy who goes to the high school can multiply and divide with unfailing accuracy, when he knows the rule of three and is up on fractions, says Philadelphia Inquirer. If in addition to that he can write legibly, read distinctly and spell correctly he will have a better equipment than has been common of late. In trying to teach children too much we have not trained them to definite ways of thinking. Yet to think clearly about anything is the great prerequisite of life and ought to be the chief aim of education.

Reports of accidents to women wearing hobble skirts begin to come in. Of course such accidents are inevitable. A woman who deliberately binds her limbs before submiting herself to the dangers of the highway is doubly handicapped, for even unhampered physically, she likely would lack the intelligence to dodge a street car.

A man in New York was sent to prison for four years for stealing a five-cent looking-glass. It served him right. A man who makes so little of his opportunities in the face of such shining examples ought to be shut off from the rest of society.

A bank in Spokane is issuing antiseptic money. Still, while sanitary banknotes may fit in better than the others with the progressive ideas of the age, as far as the others are concerned, with all their germs, we love them still.

"Did Washington swear?" asked a periodical. We don't know, but some enlightenment could be furnished if we knew whether Martha's dresses were buttoned down the back.

Some genius has invented a machine for testing operatic voices. It will not help much unless it makes it possible for the operator to go away and leave it after he sets it going.

A New York street car jumped the track and ran into a saloon. An amazing instance of the power of suggestion; the car driver was doubtless very thirsty.

Considered as an aerial racer the carrier pigeon may not be quite up to date, but its motor seldom if ever gets out of order.

A man has been found starving himself because he feared the end of the world was at hand. There must be such a thing as the rash bravery of cowardice.

LORIMER FOES WIN

CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEEMEN DECIDE TO HEAR EVIDENCE ABOUT "JACK-POT."

WILL WIDEN INQUIRY SCOPE

Charles A. White on Stand as First Witness Retells His Story of Alleged Bribery in Election of United States Senator.

Chicago.—As a result of a decision made by the senate investigating committee overruling Attorney Hanecy's objection to Charles A. White's testimony at the hearing Monday, all "jack-pot" and other evidence dealing with alleged bribery of Illinois legislators to vote for Senator William Lorimer will be admitted.

Arguments on making permanent the ruling to admit "jack-pot" testimony were made, each side being allowed twenty minutes. Upon the conclusion of the arguments they ruled that the question which precipitated it should be answered. They also decided that hereafter each "jack-pot" question should be ruled upon separately.

Attorney Hanecy's objection came when Representative Charles A. White was on the stand. White had told his story of the alleged offer of $1,000 to vote for Lorimer for senator and had begun to tell the committee that in addition he was promised a share in the "jack-pot" when Attorney Hanecy interrupted.

Attorney Hanecy submitted that the "jack-pot" evidence was irrelevant to the bribery charge.

The committee retired to a private room for deliberation and after ten minutes decided that Mr. Hanecy's objection could not stand. The decision is taken to widen the scope of the inquiry to include every action which in any way has bearing on Senator Lorimer's election.

Chicago.—United States Senator William Lorimer, whose right to his seat in the upper house of congress is to be determined by a senate committee, won a victory Tuesday. Senator Burrows, chairman of the committee, ruled that no hearsay evidence relating to bribery in the election of the senator could be given by the witnesses at the inquiry in progress.

The decision was given after Mr. Burrows had read a long decision made by a similar committee which investigated the election of Senator George E. Spencer on charges of having obtained his seat through bribery and corrupt practises, and found him not guilty. The precedent decision pointed out that it could not be established that Spencer ever paid money for a vote or had knowledge of bribery.

HOLD UP CAR IN DAYLIGHT

Six Armed Bandits Take $130 From Passengers on St. Paul Interurban Train.

St. Paul, Minn. — Six armed bandits secured $130 on a crowded interurban street car, flourished knives and revolvers in the faces of passengers, fought their way to the rear of the car and made their escape in broad daylight.

The car was a Minneapolis-bound interurban and the crowd in the aisle made no effort to stop the men. At Eleventh avenue one of the men signaled to the motorman to stop the car, and with knives still in their hands the bandits backed down the platform.

ROCK ISLAND TRAIN GOES THROUGH OPEN BRIDGE

Disaster Occurs Near Clayton, Kan., When Heavy Rainstorm Causes Small Creek to Become Torrent.

Clayton, Kan.—A terrible disaster took place on the Rock Island railroad two miles east of here Friday, when a fast train plunged through an open bridge and into 20 feet of water. Sixteen persons were killed and 11 injured. Most of the victims were occupants of the smoking car, which was telescoped by the car following it.

The stream which wrought the destruction is at ordinary times simply a dry arroyo, with no water, but with its banks 30 feet below the level of the railroad bridge. A tremendous rain had fallen during the night and the ordinarily dry bed was soon filled to the brim with a wild torrent. The bridge itself was quickly broken up and carried away.

Shortly after one o'clock in the morning, while the storm yet raged, the fast Rock Island passenger train from Kansas City to Denver, traveling at a forty mile per hour speed, rushed headlong into the gap and the forward end of the train took the plunge into the water filled ravine.

The locomotive, tender and baggage car disappeared entirely under the water, and the engineer, fireman, baggageman and conductor were all instantly killed.

The smoker, which stopped on the brink of the stream, was telescoped by a chair car and many of the passengers killed outright. Others were thrown into the stream and drowned.

With the exception of the last Pullman the entire train left the track and the cars and coaches were piled in one big heap or rolled into the ditch alongside the rails.

The uninjured passengers made their way to the brink of the stream and rendered what assistance they could, working by the light of the few lanterns which could be found.

Other passengers as well as trainmen walked to Clayton in the search for help. From this place the news was telegraphed to headquarters and relief trains were started from Belleville and Phillipsburg. Citizens of Clayton in wagons drove hastily to the scene of the wreck and, aided by bonfires which they lighted, worked in the storm amid the debris in the search for the dead and injured.

The little stream lost its water as rapidly as it had found it, and soon the ravine was practically dry. Down stream for half a mile the dead and injured were found and removed to the improvised hospitals. Nine of these dead were identified by letters and otherwise. Seven are without identification marks.

CARROLL MUST DEFEND SELF

Court Refuses to Direct Verdict in Case Against Governor of Iowa; Executive Will Take Stand.

Des Moines, Ia. — Overruling the motion for a directed verdict by attorneys for Governor B. F. Carroll, Judge James A. Howe left it for the jury to decide as to whether the chief executive of Iowa was guilty or innocent of the crime of libeling John Cownie.

The trial of Governor Carroll therefore will proceed and the governor will be placed on the witness stand in an attempt to prove the charges for which he was indicted.

COLONEL IS VICTOR

ROOSEVELT IS MADE TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN OF NEW YORK STATE CONVENTION.

SCORED BY SHERMAN'S AID

Hisses Mingle With Cheers When Names of Faction Leaders Are Placed in Nomination—Ex-President Lauds Taft and Hughes.

Saratoga, N. Y.—By a vote of 567 to 445 Theodore Roosevelt was elected temporary chairman of the Republican state convention, Tuesday, over Vice-President Sherman.

Amid cheers and hisses the names of Vice-President Sherman and Theodore Roosevelt were placed in nomination. Chairman Woodruff of the Republican state committee carried out the committee's dictates in presenting Mr. Sherman's name, while Colonel Roosevelt was nominated by Joseph Hicks, a delegate from Nassau, the ex-president's home county.

Col. Abraham Gruber of New York, speaking for the "old guard," attacked Roosevelt and in the course of a vicious scoring of the former president uttered the aphorism that "the lungs of the nation are not its brains." Comptroller William Prendergast addressed the convention in behalf of Roosevelt.

No one enjoyed Gruber's speech more than Colonel Roosevelt, who chuckled repeatedly. The delegates hissed Gruber's statement that it would be found that two-thirds of Roosevelt's strength in the convention came from federal office-holders. At one point the jeers and catcalls became so great that Colonel Roosevelt leaped to his feet and, waving his hands at the delegates, cried: "I ask a full hearing for Colonel Gruber."

The speaker continued, but hisses almost drowned his attacks on Roosevelt.

Comptroller Prendergast of New York was recognized to speak for Colonel Roosevelt. Mr. Prendergast congratulated Roosevelt on Gruber's speech. He said he knew of nothing better to show the line of cleavage between Roosevelt's friends and "other people in this convention."

The fight for control overshadowed the main business of the convention, that of making nominations for governor and other state officers. Interest centers in the fight over direct nominations.

Mr. Roosevelt in his speech as temporary chairman said:

"We come here feeling that we have the right to appeal to the people from the standpoint alike of national and state achievement. During the last eighteen months a long list of laws, embodying legislation most heartily to be commended as combining wisdom with progress, has been enacted by congress and approved by President Taft.

"They represent an earnest of the achievement which is yet to come; and the beneficence and far-reaching importance of this work, done for the whole people, measure the credit which is rightly due to the congress and to our able, upright and distinguished president, William Howard Taft."

Colonel Roosevelt was unstinting in praising Governor Hughes for the reforms he had undertaken and laid particular emphasis upon the race-track legislation pushed through by the governor.

Mr. Roosevelt made a strong point of the direct primary issue, saying that he stood for a law that would make it possible for the people to decide who the candidates shall be instead of being limited merely to choosing between candidates with whose nomination they have had nothing to do.

It was decided by the progressive leaders to name United States Senator Elihu Root as permanent chairman of the convention.

OWEN NAMED AS CHAIRMAN

WISCONSIN REPUBLICANS MEET AND ORGANIZE.

Democrats Adopt Platform in Which They Predict Victory at Coming Election.

Milwaukee.—The Republican convention organized with Senator Owen as chairman. He lauded Senator La Follette, provoking the convention to vociferous cheers, and declared that while the Wisconsin Republican progressives had been so successful that all four political parties in session here would adopt progressive platforms, that of the Republicans would be the most progressive ever written in the United States.

At the conclusion of his speech, committees were appointed and an adjournment taken to permit the resolutions committee to perfect a platform.

Madison, Wis.—Wisconsin Democrats, in state platform convention, at which Chairman J. E. Davies, who presided, predicted a Democratic victory this fall, adopted a platform with leading planks as follows:

Endorses the national platform of 1908; declares the Republican system of tariff economically unsound, politically corrupt and legalized robbery; the Payne-Aldrich tariff act is called an indefensible masterpiece of injustice. Favors a national income tax, favors the election of United States senators by direct vote, opposes ship subsidies, denounces the Republican postal bank law, favors the conservation of national resources and denounces the present administration, especially Secretary Ballinger; state regulation and control of trusts, more stringent corrupt practice act, home rule for municipalities, popular vote on the initiative, referendum and recall, and comes out flatly against county option.

SIX ARE KILLED IN A CRASH

Traction Coach Collides With Car Near Tipton, Ind.—Twelve Persons Are Hurt.

Tipton, Ind.—In a collision on the Indiana Union Traction road two miles north of this city Saturday six persons were killed and 12 others more or less seriously injured.

This was the second disaster on Indiana traction lines within a week, the first having occurred on the Wabash Valley line at Kingsland on Wednesday.

Dr. W. C. Holthouser, who was killed in the wreck, was on his way to Kokomo, Ind., where he was to have been married. His brother, who also was killed, was to have been the best man at the wedding. The bride to have been is Miss Nellie Coxon, daughter of the secretary of the Great Western Pottery company of Kokomo.

The collision was between a northbound limited passenger train and a south-bound freight. The south-bound motorman had orders to wait at the first stop north of the crossing, it is said, but overran that point, thinking he could make another switch.

A clump of trees hid the approaching cars and they came together at a curve. The freight train plowed through the front of the limited, demolishing the smoker. The motorman and all the passengers in the smoking compartment of the limited were killed. The motorman and conductor on the freight car jumped and were not injured.

"I guess we overran the orders," said Motorman Dan Lacy, when he had fully recovered from the shock caused by jumping from his car. Conductor Sebree was equally dazed at the occurrence and could not explain why it was they had passed the switch.

WAGE WAR ON SUGAR TRUST

New Action Against American Refining Company Is Ordered by Attorney General Wickersham.

Washington.—Orders from the attorney general to District Attorney Wise in New York to smash the sugar trust went out Monday and the action will be filed there within a week.

An amended petition, though much more comprehensive in its charges, has been prepared after a conference between the attorney general, District Attorney Wise, Special Attorney Simson and Mr. McReynolds.

It charges the sugar trust with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law and the court is asked to dissolve the trust and issue an injunction, restraining the American Sugar Refining company of New Jersey from voting the shares of the subsidiary companies pending the redistribution of these shares among their original owners. The action will be in all respects similar to that which resulted in the smashing of the Standard Oil company in the United States circuit court and in a general way it resembles the action against the tobacco trust. It is learned that an investigation into the sugar trust develops that all three of these concerns have been organized and were operated along parallel lines.

Drowns Self in Water Tank.

Mason City, Ia.—Securing two large stones and putting them in a gunny sack with a stone at either end and so as to weigh her body down, Mrs. A. M. Gaskill of Corwith Monday plunged in a water tank with the sack over her neck, and was soon dead. No cause is assigned.

Justice Steele Ill.

Denver, Colo.—Chief Justice Robert W. Steele of the supreme court of Colorado suffered a stroke of paralysis at his home here Monday.

BATTLE FOR LIFE

MISS TRIBOLET AND A. ELLENBERGER SAID TO BE DYING AT HOSPITAL.

LIST OF DEAD IS THIRTY-NINE

Confusion In Names Caused First List To Show Forty-One—Eight in the Injured List—The Latest News of the Kingsland Traction Horror.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—With chances almost hopelessly against them, two of the injured victims of the Kingsland wreck are waging a brave battle for life at St. Joseph's hospital. These are A. Elenberger of Berne, and Miss Margaret Tribolet of Bluffton. That either has been able to survive so long is a marvel both to physicians and nurses. Miss Tribolet still remains in the unconscious condition which has continued unbrokenly since the disaster a week ago. Mr. Elenberger still clings to life, but he is perceptibly weaker and physicians can see little basis for hope of his recovery.

Outlook for Others Better.

For the other three victims of the wreck who yet remain in Fort Wayne hospitals the outlook is more favorable. Fred A. Parkhurst, at St. Joseph's hospital, suffering from a broken back, appears to be gaining in strength, is cheerful and declares that he "feels good."

The condition of Motorman Corkwell, at Hope hospital, is little changed though there is apparently a slight gain each day. He is not yet able to talk, and only his relatives are permitted to see him.

Mrs. W. D. Burgan, at Hope hospital, continues to improve, and it is believed she will be able to leave the hospital in something like ten days.

The scene of the wreck near Kingsland has a grewsome fascination for passengers who are traveling over the spot, and it is said that trainmen on each car passing are invariably asked to point out the spot at which the disaster occurred.

Says 39 Is Total of Dead.

Officials of the traction company have given out a corrected and revised list of the dead in the Kingsland disaster, which makes a total of thirty-nine persons who were either killed outright or died later from injuries. It is stated that in earlier lists, which the totals ranged from forty to forty-two, were erroneous in the fact that they contained duplications.

Eight in Injured List.

Eight are listed as injured. They are Mrs. W. D. Burgan, Bluffton, and B. F. Corkwell, Fort Wayne, at Hope hospital; A. Ellenberger, Berne; Margaret Tribolet, Bluffton, and S. A. Parkhurst, Bluffton, at St. Joseph's hospital, and D. Wilson, Ossian; C. Van Dine, Bluffton, and E. A. Spiller, Bluffton, at their respective homes.

Taxicab Hit By Train.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—A taxicab containing Edward S. Atwater and George Cornwell, two prominent residents of this city, was struck by a train on the Central New England road, at a private crossing a mile north of this city, and the two passengers and the chauffeur, George Key, were so seriously injured that one died and the others are in a critical condition. Mr. Cornwell's arm was almost torn from his body, and he died four hours after the accident in Vassar hospital. Mr. Atwater has a fractured skull and a broken leg. The chauffeur's condition also is grave. Mr. Cornwell was vice president and trustee of the Poughkeepsie Savings bank. Mr. Atwater is a wealthy banker and president of the Farmers and Manufacturers' bank of this city.

Prominent German Dies.

Danville, Ill.—Charles Bordolo, one of the most prominent Germans of this city, was found dead with a stab wound in his side in the rear of a blacksmith shop. William Niccium, a laborer with whom Bordolo had a fight the night before, has been arrested charged with the crime. Bordolo was forty-five years old and is married.

Missed Quarter Million.

Houston, Tex.—In their hurry, the two men who partially looted a Southern Pacific mail car near Avondale, overlooked just a quarter of a million dollars. Packages of currency aggregating this amount aboard the car at the time of the robbery were delivered to Texas banks intact.

Pleasant Information.

Paris, France.—Private advices assert that immigrants from the cholera affected districts of that country are being embarked at Genoa for America, their original starting point being concealed.

Statue to "Stonewall" Jackson.

Charleston, W. Va.—A bronze of Jonathan (Stonewall) Jackson was unveiled on the state capital grounds by the local Daughters of the Confederacy. The statue represents General Jackson with one hand on his sword and the other grasping his field glasses. It is the first statue to be erected in the West Virginia capital and is about 20 feet high. A parade preceded the unveiling. The oration of the day was made by General Bennett H. Young, commander of the department of the army of Tennessee.

MOVEMENT TO PROTECT TREES

Fairbanks Will Appoint Committee to Report Later.

PLANS FOR REFORESTIZATION

Action Was Taken for Creating a Permanent State Organization at Conference—Dr. W. E. Stone Attends.

Indianapolis.—Action for creating a permanent state organization for the protection of trees and the reforestization of Indiana was taken at a conference at Indianapolis. Charles W. Fairbanks has taken the leadership in the new movement.

Among those who attended the conference were Mr. Fairbanks, Dr. W. E. Stone, president of Purdue university; Charles C. Deam, secretary of the state board of forestry; William Waltman of Bean Blossom, Brown county, a member of the state board of forestry; George W. Miles, state commissioner of fisheries and game; Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the state board of health; George B. Lockwood of Marion; W. A. Guthrie of Dupont, a former state senator, and Addison C. Harris of Indianapolis.

On the motion of Mr. Harris, Mr. Fairbanks was empowered to appoint a committee of any number desired to report at a meeting two weeks hence on the form of organization to be adopted and an outline of the work to be undertaken. Mr. Fairbanks said he would study over the matter a few days before selecting the committee.

"The conference was informal," said Mr. Fairbanks, "but was satisfactory. The whole subject of what is needed for better forestry in Indiana was canvassed, and the different aspects were freely discussed. The sentiment prevailed that public-spirited citizens who realize the great importance of the undertaking for the future of the state should be enlisted in the movement for the conservation of existing forests and the planting of more trees. Those present were in general accord as to the wisdom of securing the co-operation of the schools and colleges in this work."

President Stone of Purdue emphasized the need for systematic education in the value of forestry to be carried on in the schools. He said the arbor day movement in the schools was not sufficient to instill into the minds of students the value of tree planting, as arbor day is not systematically observed in all the schools.

"The trees and forests have a decided influence on the public health," said Doctor Hurty. "They assist in the purification of the atmosphere. Going to the woods is beneficial for people. They recognize this fact instinctively. Trees conserve the water supply, as they let the water out into the streams gradually. We must not consider that the sole benefit of reforestization will be a money benefit. It will be a great benefit for the health."

Mr. Deam, state forester, entered heartily into the plans for an organized effort to improve Indiana's tree supply. He said that in his travels over the state he had observed about one hundred schoolhouses that had barren places around them. Pressure should be so brought to bear on public sentiment, he thought, that all barren places that should have trees should speedily be planted. He explained the efforts the state board of forestry had made along this line.

Responsibility for Wreck.

Alexander Shane, chief inspector for the Indiana railroad commission, arrived at Kingsland to begin an official investigation of the disaster there. Blame is placed by some of the traction officials on the crew of the south-bound extra car which, they declare, violated orders in not keeping safely out of the way of the regular car. Mr. Shane declined to make known the results of his investigation, saying it would have to be given out by the state board.

Frank L. Hardy, superintendent of transportation of the Wabash, sat, heartbroken, in his office here. "In a very short time we will be able to make a statement," said Mr. Hardy, "placing, as far as we can determine it, the blame for the terrible wreck. The extent of the accident appals us, yet we are doing everything in our power to care for the dead and the injured and to alleviate, so far as we may, the anguish of relatives of the victims. We have begun the most careful scrutiny of train orders bearing on the case, and on every bit of evidence which might tend to fix the blame. The public soon shall know where the responsibility lies."

I. U. Gets Alumni Charter.

Thomas Cookson, assistant in the office of the bursar of Indiana University, has just returned from Pittsburg, where he took the petition of twenty-five prominent business men asking an alumni charter of the Phi Kappa Psi, which was granted. An officer from the head society in New York city will be here soon to install the new chapter.

Only resident members of the Phi Psi are on the charter list, which includes some leading citizens of Bloomington.

Former Officer Repays Town.

Announcement has been made at the office of the state board of accounts that Perry L. Houser, former treasurer of the civil town of Leavenworth, Crawford county, has reimbursed the town treasury for the amount he was reported short, which, including interest at 6 per cent., was more than $800. Mr. Houser's shortage was charged to an error made in failing to charge himself with $576 received from the county treasurer.

A. L. Waynick, a former treasurer of the civil town of Marengo, Crawford county, has been charged with $18.66 alleged to be due from errors made in his final settlement with his successor. This is the only amount charged back in an examination made by the state board of accounts over a period extending from 1903 to December 31, 1909. In this time, however, it was found that many of the town trustees had contracts with the city for labor or supplies, and the amounts paid for such service and supplies are held by the examiners to be illegal and to constitute grounds for further charges.

The accounts of Grant Hostetler of Erie township and those of George N. Leedy of Union township, both of Miami county and both township trustees, were reported correct. Hostetler was found to have burned his canceled checks and vouchers for 1909 when the business of the year was closed up. His explanation was that he did not think they would be of any value to any one. Minor irregularities were found in Leedy's case, which were corrected with entries by the field examiners.

For New Freight Classes.

William J. Wood, chairman of the railroad commission of Indiana and a member of the classification committee representing the railroads of the Central Freight association territory selected to propose additional classification of freight, made public the report of the committee, which met in Toledo, O., recently. The committee advocated the establishment of at least three additional classes on the ground that such additional classification would "permit the elimination of a large proportion of the existing commodity tariffs and reduce to the carriers the expense of their tariff publications."

"The existing condition is antagonistic," continues the report, "to the aim of regulative legislation, which is to prevent preferential treatment of patrons and localities by carriers, and to afford equal opportunity to all."

The principal items under consideration by the committee for the additional classes are reported as follows: asphaltum, cinder, concentrates, gravel, lead, mortar, plaster, rock, slate, straw, brick, clay, drain tile, ice, lime, ore, pottery, salts, soda, strawboard, wood fuel, cement, coal, flint, iron, lumber, paper, pulpwood, salt, soda ash, tar, concrete, coke, grain, junk, manure, pitch, pulp board, slag, stone and wood pulp.

Liquor License Fees Small.

A report just completed in the office of the state statistician concerning the receipt of moneys by city and town treasurers for liquor licenses for 1908 and 1909 shows that the latter year saw a decrease of $70,755.06 in the receipts in comparison with those for the preceding year. In 1908 the city and town receipts amounted to $808,807.04 and in 1909 to $638,051.98.

The city and town clerks who submitted the figures to the statistician attributed virtually all the decrease to the elimination of licensed saloons by the county option law, although a part of it is attributed to fourteen revocations of licenses by mayors. Total number of licenses issued in each of the two years showed a decrease of 907. The revenues for the year from liquor licenses were classified as follows: Counties, $353,700; cities, $616,574.90; towns, $21,477.08. The total of all license receipts for the year was $991,751.98, while the corresponding total for the preceding year was $1,253,207.64. The total decrease for counties, cities and towns amounted to $261,455.06.

Pension and Postal News.

Pensions were granted the following Indianians: Lemuel Adams, $15; Robert Barnett, $30; Phoebe Harding, $12; Phoebe A. Heath, $12; Mary E. Hollingsworth, $12; Sarah F. Holtz, $12; James N. House, $15; William S. Frohliger, alias William Frazer, $12; Volney B. Kenney, $15; Sarah E. Lyman, $12; William Mahnensmith, $15; Reuben E. Milliner, $12; Lycurgus S. Null, $24; Cyrus Olinger, $24; Catherine A. Overstreet, $12; William Parker, $15; Laura A. Price, $12; George Ragen, $15; John Sykes, $30; James Thompson, $24; Araminta A. Williams, $12; James A. Williams, $17.

The following postoffices in Indiana will become international money order offices October 1: Andrews, Centerville, Mulberry, Pennville, Wingate.

Noah T. Hollingsworth has been appointed rural carrier and Essie P. Hollingsworth substitute, on Route 9, at Marion.

Meet for Annual Reunion.

The Seventy-ninth Indiana association held its annual reunion in the senate chamber at the state house. The Seventy-ninth was organized in Indianapolis and Col. Lefler first had command of the regiment. The wives of the members of the regiment served a dinner in the basement. New officers were elected as follows: George W. Parker, Indianapolis, president; John G. Dunbar, Greencastle, vice-president; F. M. Ramsay, Lebanon, chaplain; Charles J. Many, Indianapolis, secretary.

CONFERENCE OPENS WITH 400 PRESENT

Indiana Methodist Ministers in Session.

MUCH BUSINESS OUTLINED

Changes in Assignments for the Coming Year Discussed in the Cabinet Session—Hear Annual and Welcome Sermon.

Indianapolis.—With Bishop W. F. Anderson of Chattanooga, Tenn., presiding, and with nearly 400 members of the clergy in attendance, besides city and visiting laity, which occupied every seat in the house, the seventy-ninth session of the Indiana conference of the Methodist Episcopal church began at Evansville. Addresses of welcome were made by Judge Curran A. Debruler, on behalf of the city, and by Dr. Hamilton A. Hymes of Grace Memorial Presbyterian church, on behalf of the city's clergy. Bishop Anderson responded for the conference, and the annual conference sermon by Rev. G. M. Smith of Shelbyville.

It is problematical whether the conference will take up the proposal made in one of the Ohio conferences recently, to fix a minimum salary of $800 for ministers in small charges, and to create a general fund to make up the deficit for congregations not able to meet that minimum.

Members of the bishop's cabinet said that the question had not been formally raised during the two sessions, and there is a disposition to believe that such a limitation would deprive many small communities of churches if it were enforced. There are so many calls upon the general funds of the conference for benevolences and educational expenditure that the conference may not be willing to take on an additional expense of this sort.

Changes in assignments for the coming year were discussed in the cabinet session. The call to be extended to Rev. Morton A. Farr, for nine years pastor of Trinity church here, to the Walnut Hill church in Cincinnati, was regarded with favor by the cabinet, and Bishop Anderson, it is said, will approve a transfer of Rev. Mr. Farr to the Ohio conference. It is not improbable that Rev. John Ragle, for the last year pastor of Hall Place church, Indianapolis, will be selected by the conference to become Evansville district superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon league.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Bedford.—The jury in the case of John Wall against the Indianapolis Southern railroad venued from Monroe county, found for the plaintiff in the sum of $2,500. Wall is blind and had just taken hold of the hand rail to get on the train at Unionville when the train started, throwing him between the coach and platform, bruising his body all over and crippling him permanently.

Princeton.—The Princeton sanitarium, one of the best-equipped institutions of its kind in Indiana, will receive no more patients, emergency or otherwise, and will close permanently as soon as it is relieved of those persons now being treated. This announcement was made by the owners, Drs. Anderson, Ziliak and Blair, who opened it four years ago at a cost of about $40,000.

Hammond. — Andrew Schostrich, forty-three years old, of Whiting, won a wager that he could drink a quart of whisky and four cans of beer, but did not live to tell the story. He was found dead in bed. He had a wife and daughter. His friends took up a collection to defray his funeral expenses. The bet was made with George Dunsich in a Whiting saloon. No arrests have been made.

Indianapolis.—In climbing a ladder placed against a farmer's barn four miles east of Peru, to demonstrate a lightning rod to Frank Daniels, owner of the barn, Albert Lutz, thirty-three years old, 62 North Germania avenue, lost his hold on the ladder and fell headfirst to the ground. His neck was broken and he died instantly.

Lafayette.—Telegraph operators on the Monon railroad received announcement of a nine per cent. raise in wages, effective from September 1. The operators also obtained other concessions, their organization, the Order of Railway Telegraphers, receiving official recognition for the first time.

Hammond.—Three persons were injured near here when a Nickel Plate passenger train ran into an automobile. Mrs. J. Jacobs, Inderville, Pa.; Mrs. S. W. Ogden, East Chicago, and S. W. Ogden received severe injuries, but all will recover.

Danville.—Luther White, arrested in Indianapolis last week on a charge of assaulting Edward Robards, an aged druggist of Stilesville, for refusing to sell him whisky, is still in jail here awaiting the outcome of the injuries to Robards. The old man was badly beaten and is confined to his room, suffering intense pain. Prosecutor Blessing will dismiss the assault charge and file an affidavit and information charging assault and battery with intent to kill. The trial will probably occur next week. White has a prison record, it is said, and is regarded as a dangerous character.

Paul Conover's Angel

By GERALD PRIME

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

Commencement was over. Still in academic cap and gown, Paul Conover sat, pensive and alone, in the little dormitory quarters which had sheltered him for the past four years. The roll of parchment which empowered him to write the coveted A. B. after his name rested on the table beside him.

There were few evidences of comfortable living about the place. The plain furniture supplied by the college authorities could be made attractive only by effective draperies, and they were wanting. An unrestful looking couch, a table strewn with textbooks and lesson papers, two chairs—there was little else.

But it had been home to Paul Conover and he had no other. When he had matriculated, four years before, he had in his possession a sum of money that would not have been sufficient to carry many a one of his classmates through a single semester. It had been his sole inheritance from his father's estate and it had been the dead man's last counsel that it should be used as it had been.

The newly made A. B. put his hand in his pocket and drew forth his remaining capital. He knew what it was without further reckoning, for he had watched it dwindle day after day with an interest that took largely from the anticipated joy of commencement week. He had in cash precisely 27 cents—a bright quarter and two dingy pennies. Besides his diploma, his scant wardrobe and fewer personal belongings than are the property of most college men, this remainder of 27 cents represented his entire available assets.

All? No, there was something more. He had been appointed to the

He Had in Cash Precisely 27 Cents.

Simeon Goodboy fellowship, and the annual stipend amounted to $650.50. This, however, would not be available for four months. Then it recurred to him with sudden disgust that old Simeon Goodboy had shackled his foundation with an absurd condition—the appointee to its benefits must engage in no other occupation on pain of instant forfeiture! Paul burst into a loud guffaw at thought of it, but it was a guffaw without merriment.

So it seemed to old Aileen, the dormitory scrubwoman, who was making her final round of the halls in the building for the college year. She didn't like the ring of it, and she halted at Paul's door to tell him so.

"'Twas the laugh of a ghost, Mr. Conover, and little better," she declared. "'Twas not a bit like the laugh of a man that has finished his job."

"You've finished yours, Aileen, for the year, and I don't hear you laughing," said Paul, jocosely. "You ought to be feeling especially jolly."

"Then I'm not, Mr. Conover," the old woman returned promptly. "Neither would you if you hadn't been able to lay by a cent and your work was over for the summer?"

"Can't you get other work?"

"I could, Mr. Conover, but I agreed to take no other jobs while I held this one."

At this Paul broke into a laugh so genuine that old Aileen could find no fault with it. It was so like the ridiculous condition imposed by the fellowship that, moved by a sudden whimsical inspiration, he told her the whole story, and did not fail to call attention to their similar plights. The old woman appreciated the humor of the situation and quite agreed with him in his estimate of the absurdness of those who impose impracticable conditions.

"What are you going to do?" she asked when he had begun to look serious again.

"Look for something to do," he replied cheerfully.

"No," she said, shaking her head decidedly and looking almost fierce in her disapproval. "Don't you do it, Mr. Conover. Them honors don't come along every day. When you get one, you ought to hang on to it. Don't you do a lick to spoil that fellowship."

"All right, then, I'll settle down and live on my principal—27 cents," he laughed.

"Can't you borrow a little?" she suggested.

"I haven't a friend in the world but you," he declared truly enough.

"I'd let you have it myself, only I hain't got it," she said feelingly.

"Thank you, Aileen; I'm sure you would," he said.

"If wishes was fishes how full the sea'd be," she observed pertinently. "No, I han't got the money, but I'm full of advice. Now don't you let them fellowship fellows hear of your getting any outside job."

"I'll try to keep close," he promised, with a wise look.

"See that you do," she warned, with an answering look which was quite as sagacious. "And now, Mr. Conover, good-by and good luck to you."

"Take this, Aileen," he said, handing her the shining quarter.

"Thank you, sir," she returned, pocketing the pieces. "Don't forget my advice."

Aileen was a woman who possessed a very elastic conscience so far as exactness of speech was concerned. Her statement that she was prohibited from working outside of the college precincts was purely imaginative. Instead of returning home after her conversation with Paul Conover she went to a little apartment in the neighborhood belonging to a couple of business girls and proceeded to tidy up the place, as was her midweek custom, at an honorarium of 20 cents an hour. Before she had finished, one of the young women, Miss Betty Sanderson, who was a first reader of manuscript in a leading publishing house, came in, weary and flushed, and threw herself down on a couch with a big sigh over the general perverseness of things.

"I wonder if it's really worth while, Aileen!" she groaned despondently.

"It certainly is, Miss Betty—at your salary," the old woman declared without hesitation.

At this Miss Betty laughed. "I suppose I ought to be ashamed of myself," she admitted.

"You certainly ought," Aileen agreed, giving her dust rag an extra flourish. "If you was in Mr. Conover's fix, you might complain."

"Mr. Paul Conover!"

"Do you know him?"

"Well, yes—a little. I've met him at one or two of the college teams. What has happened to him, Aileen?"

It was the old woman's opportunity and she embraced it enthusiastically. Although on her knees in the act of oiling the floor of the little parlor, she did not let it interfere with her exceedingly complete version of the difficulty which confronted Paul Conover.

"How very interesting!" said Miss Betty. "Can't you really do anything without losing the fellowship?"

"Not a blamed thing!" confirmed Aileen excitedly.

"How peculiar!"

After the old gossip had gone, and possibly before, Betty had evolved a scheme in her sympathetic mind that was as generous as it was quixotic. She had been impressed favorably by Paul Conover and now that he was in such a trying position she was seized with a burning desire to help him out of it.

She was a thrifty little woman and at that very moment had $100 in her trunk. Without pausing too long for reflection, she put the money in a big yelow envelope, inclosed with it a slip bearing the typewritten legend "From a friend of education," sealed it, directed it to Paul Conover, called a messenger—and the deed was done.

After Paul had recovered from his first surprise and mystification he arrived at the conclusion that the trustees had foreseen his difficulty and had hit on this delicate method of providing a way out of it. The idea was so plausible that he accepted it and did nothing to imperil his possession of the fellowship. When the time came for the first payment of the stipend he was too much interested in his post-graduate course—and in Betty Sanderson—to worry over the identity of his unknown good angel.

It was not until five years later, when they had been married a week, that Betty confessed.

Cherry Pie and Poetry.

Grace Duffie Boylan, the author of "The Steps to Nowhere," was born in Michigan and has traveled extensively. But now she is settled down in a quaint colonial house in an apple orchard on a Connecticut hilltop where she expects to live and write the rest of her days. She gardens with her husband, Louis Napoleon Geldart (who is an enthusiastic amateur farmer and also a writer on historical subjects), and goes shooting with her boy, but all the while, in the background of her mind, the characters and scenes of new books were forming like figures on a tapestry. She does not pretend to have any particular method in writing her books.

"I write anywhere that I happen to be," she says, "and at any time when I am not wanted by someone for something else. I often smile when I read of writers shutting themselves away from their families for the sacred season of composition. I am likely to leave a chapter any time to go and make a cherry pie. And neither the chapter nor the pie is the worse for it."

AFTER SUFFERING FOR YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Park Rapids, Minn.—"I was sick for years while passing through the Change of Life and was hardly able to be around. After taking six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I gained 20 pounds, am now able to do my own work and feel well."—Mrs. ED. LA DOU, Park Rapids, Minn.

Brookville, Ohio.—"I was irregular and extremely nervous. A neighbor recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and I have become regular and my nerves are much better."—Mrs. R. KINNISON, Brookville, Ohio.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you want special advice write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. It is free and always helpful.

Science and Cheese.

A medical authority kindly assures us that as long as cheese isn't decayed it will not affect the health of the consumer. This is a fact that we have suspected for a considerable time. But how is the ordinary cheese epicure to detect the difference—unless he waits for results?

There is cheese so thoroughly disguised in the costume and aroma of decay that its proper standing on the sanitary testing table would puzzle a conjuror.

For instance, there is the brand known as limburger.

But why pursue this subject?

The Prettiest Girl in Cincinnati.

"My niece," said a well known man the other day, "is often called the prettiest girl in Cincinnati. I believe half the compliments she gets are due to her shirtwaists. They are always as clean and dainty looking as a snowflake. She's mighty particular about them. She won't use the cheap, ordinary rosin soaps for washings, but buys this "Easy Task Soap" you hear so much about. It seems that "Easy Task Soap" just naturally goes after the dirt and doesn't eat into and rot the fabrics like the common yellow rosin soaps. It costs the same—a nickel a cake."

IT HAPPENED SUDDENLY.

Mrs. Fondman—Fell into a pond! Oh! oh! and with your best pants on!

Bertie—Well, I didn't have time to take 'em off!

Gumption on the Farm.

Gather and burn the rubbish.

One forward look is worth forty backward glances.

How some folks do enjoy rolling up their sleeves, and then—bossing the job that somebody else does.

Gather pumpkins and squash before a hard frost, and store away in a dry place (not in a damp cellar).

Bring in the corn horse after you are through with it. Even a wooden horse will show the effects if stabled out in the field a few months.

Do not leave the old cabbage stumps sticking up out of the ground. They look slovenly and breed fungous pests. Pull them up and burn them.

When killed by the frost, mow off the asparagus tops and burn them. Then give the bed—and the rhubarb plants, too—a thick winter overcoat of stable manure.

The cultivating season is over and all tools should be cleaned up and housed. One winter's exposure to the weather will do tools more harm than several years' use.

A good growth of rye plowed in next spring will give you more and better potatoes. But you'll have to get it in right off or you won't have much growth to plow under.

Just because an ear of corn is large, does not necessarily make it the best for seed. See that the rows are straight from tip to butt, and that the kernels are all well formed and plump.

REACHING THE TOP.

in any calling of life, demands a vigorous body and a keen brain. Without health there is no success. But Electric Bitters is the greatest Health Builder the world has ever known. It compels perfect action of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, purifies and enriches the blood, tones and invigorates the whole system and enables you to stand the wear and tear of your daily work. "After months of suffering from Kidney Trouble," writes W. M. Sherman, of Cushing, Me., "three bottles of Electric Bitters made me feel like a new man." 50c at H. L. Dunkle.

LUTHERAN CHURCH ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Weekly prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7 o'clock. Sunday School Sunday morning at 9 o'clock. C. E in the evening followed by the regular preaching services. You are cordially invited to attend these services

Rev. Hitchner, Pastor.

Caucus Call.

The Democrats of Concord township will meet at Wm. Curle's office on Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock for the purpose of nominating a township ticket. By order of Committee,

H. W. Krabill.
J. A. Hull.

Timely Advice.

Stop grumbling. Get up two hours earlier in the morning, and begin to do something out of your regular profession. Mind your own business and with all your might let other people's alone. Live within your means. Sell or give away your dog. Smoke your cigar through an air stove. Eat with moderation, and go to bed early. Talk less of your own peculiar gifts and virtues, and more of those of your friends and neighbors. Be cheerful. Fulfill your promises. Pay your debts. Be yourself all you would see in others. Be good, do good and stop grumbling.

LOCAL ITEMS.

Dr. Sheffer reports a baby boy in the home of Wallace Wasson, of west of Concord, born Monday.

Making Progress.

The head of a New York firm having important interests in Italy decided some time ago, in view of the death of and old and reliable clerk, who, of all in the establishment, was the only one to have a good knowledge of the Italian tongue, that his own son, also a member of the concern, ought to take up the study of that language.

Recently a friend met the young man. "I understand," said he, "that you're actually studying Italian."

"Why, yes," said the other, "I've been at it for several months under a teacher just from the other side."

"What progress?"

"Good," was the answer. "He's beginning to speak English remarkably well."

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

The first horse railroad was built in 1826.

Coal was first used as an illuminant in 1826.

The velocipede was invented by Drais in 1817.

The only self-supporting territory of the United States is Alaska.

The Chilean government has under contract 698 miles of railroads at an estimated cost of $24,207,680.

A chimney of concrete block was recently built in Germany without the use of scaffolding, which represents a great economy in the cost.

Billiards and pool on shipboard are now possible through the recent invention of a self-leveling table which accommodates itself to every movement of the vessel.

Levantine newspapers report that Turkey has granted a conditional concession to an American syndicate for a 1,243-mile railroad through Asia Minor.

Our oil exports to China increased from 28,000,000 gallons in 1899 to 87,000,000 in 1909 and nearly 104,000,000 in 1908, having thus quadrupled in ten years.

Thirteen grams of radium chloride have been produced at the imperial Austrian radium factory, located at St. Joachimsthal. It is estimated that this mineral has a value of $45,000 to $50,000 a gram, or more than $500,000 for the entire amount. Pure metallic radium is never seen.

WERNERT SPENCERVILLE

IF YOU GO HUNTING—

Don't lean on your gun.

Don't point your gun toward your dog.

Don't rest the muzzle of your gun on your toes.

Don't kill game wantonly. Stop when you have all you need.

Don't get rattled. Keep cool, no matter how big the game you are after.

Don't shoot toward houses or fields with long range guns when you are anywhere near them.

Don't leave squirrel tails hanging out of your game bag or pockets for some other sportsman to take a shot at.

Don't shoot even approximately in the direction of any one in the woods, as a glancing bullet may strike them quite a bit to one side of the object at which you aim.

Don't forget that a gun is a dangerous instrument, yet harmless as a piece of wood if you use judgment and caution in its handling.

Don't forget that the smaller a rifle or shotgun the more steady you must hold it when you shoot. It takes a mighty good shot to do long range shooting with a small target rifle.

If you fall in going down steep hills or over rough ground don't drop your gun. Hang onto it and keep the muzzle pointed the other way.

Don't pull your gun after you when you climb or crawl through a barbed wire fence. Push it through first, with the muzzle away from you.

Don't pull the trigger until you are sure you know what you are shooting at. Quite a number of men are in their graves now because in a quick glance the nervous hunter took them to be a deer or a wild turkey among the bushes.

If you are in the woods a long time and do a lot of shooting, don't fail to give your gun one cleaning, especially if a target rifle or pump gun. It will shoot truer. Besides, a foul gun is more liable to explode than a clean one.

WABASH CORNERS.

Little Earl White is improving slowly.

PART ONE.
CHAPTER I.

I found my wife and told her all about it. "You see, Agatha," I said, "it's going to be rough on old Arch if he doesn't. After all, she's always promised him the property; it should go to him."

The secretary, that is, my wife—I sometimes refer to her in that way in memory of a certain six weeks I and my friend Terhune once spent at Castle Wyckhoff, during which she bore that title and I fell in love with her—my wife put down her sewing to answer me. She was doing me a knitted tie, by the way, green, with at least six different stitches in it. Awfully clever at that sort of thing, my wife.

"Yes, I see," she said; "but, Wilfred, isn't it a little—a little sudden? How can he expect to get married in so short a time as ten days?"

It was sudden, surely, and unusual. But for the matter of that, the whole thing was out of the ordinary. You see the point was that an eccentric old aunt of my friend Archibald Terhune, a Mrs. Georgiana James of Essex, had written to acquaint her nephew with the fact that she intended to leave a certain piece of property which she had long ago promised him to a third cousin of hers who lived in America if Archibald did not immediately get married. In fact, she gave him exactly and only ten days from the receipt of her letter in which to accomplish the holy estate, or, rather, in which to get himself engaged. The actual ceremony she would leave to follow as soon as possible when the proper order of things should permit.

Arch, when I saw him in London that morning, was in the wildest state of mind imaginable. He had only just received the letter, and he'd be blessed if he'd take unto himself a wife at all, merely to humor the impossible whims of his Aunt Georgy, much less accomplish the deed with any such indecorous haste. She had always badgered him to death on the subject of getting married, and now he supposed this was her way of punishing him for his systematic disregard of her wishes.

"Wants to jolly well push me to the wall and force my hand!" he told me indignantly. "She'd do anything to get her own way, that old woman! And the reason she says she's bringing things to a climax now is just because I'm forty years old today! She says that if I don't get married soon, I'll be so old no one will have me! Fancy that!" His tone was positively shrill with spleen and disgust. "Just as if that were so very old!" he went on, twitching about on his chair and plucking angrily at his eye-glass string. "Why, lots of men don't even begin to think of marrying till they're forty-five!"

I smiled. The old boy's weak spot is his love of admiration, and I often feel convinced that if it were not for his delight in being considered one of London's most eligible bachelors, and his pride in being one of the most popular dinner guests in town, he would long ago have entered the bonds of matrimony.

"She says," he continued, jerking over a page of the closely written letter that he held in his hand and glancing down it as he spoke, "that although she has always looked forward with pleasure to leaving that piece of property which represents the bulk of her fortune, to her nephew, that she cannot allow herself to do so unless he complies with her wishes and becomes a married man. To bestow so rich an inheritance upon a single man, she says, is like putting a premium on selfishness!" Terhune snorted with impatience when he had read that last sentence, but I couldn't help but admire the old lady for it. I thought she must have been something of a character to express herself so forcibly.

"She goes on to explain," said Arch, resuming his reading after letting his eye skim down the page to the close of the letter, "that the reason she limits the days of grace in which I am supposed to persuade a girl to promise to marry me, to ten, is because she thinks I deserve to have to hurry, having thwarted her wishes so long, and that a little anxiety will do me no harm." His face was a picture as he read this, and his voice trembled so with a sense of outrage that he could hardly go on.

"She concludes by saying that I will be more likely to achieve the result she desires, if I am put under a certain amount of pressure. She knows my procrastinating habits only too well!"

His glare was so vindictive by this time that I could hardly keep from laughing at him.

"It's no laughing matter!" he growled. "She means every word of it. She's gone and notified the third cousin in America about it, so there'll be no possibility of changing her mind!"

"Is he married?" I asked.

"Nine children," returned my friend gloomily. "And she's even instructed her solicitor," he added, "Old Barnes of Barnes, Willoughby & Sons to call upon me and be with me at one o'clock ten days from now, when the period expires, to see that everything's fair and square about the proceedings and that I do not overstep the prescribed time by so much as a minute!"

"Capital!" I cried unguardedly, full of an ill-timed, I fear, enthusiasm for the business-like methods of Mrs. James.

"You'll have to invite him to lunch! Why, it's as good as a play! What an old sport your Aunt Georgy must be!"

"O, hang my Aunt Georgy!" exclaimed Arch peevishly, not appreciating my point of view. "Meddlesome old busybody!"

"And that reminds me," I said alertly, "how old is she, anyway, Arch?"

"Eighty-two," he snapped; "old enough to know better!"

"Old enough to be thinking about making her will, at any rate," I said meaningly. And of course Arch had in reality too keen an interest in his own welfare not to appreciate that fact without needing me to emphasize it. He was not the boy—I thought—if I knew him at all, to sit sulking in a corner when there was only a little thing like getting a wife in ten days between him and a chance at a fortune! If he did, he could not certainly be the same Terhune that had proved so earnest an aspirant for the millions of the Hon. Agatha, a summer ago. And I was right. It was not long before he'd forgotten his disapproval of Aunt Georgy's methods and was excitedly discussing ways and means of obeying her behest. I thought myself the thing didn't sound so hard. I thought at any rate that it would be a regular lark to have a try at it. But he was much less optimistic, much more downhearted. Not because he doubted his ability to get some girl to marry him, for he felt quite sure on the contrary that his only trouble would be in making a selection. But it was the shortness of the time that stumped him. He couldn't seem to see himself an engaged man in ten days, his imagination somehow failed to sum up the picture. I did my best to cheer him up and pointed out that the property, which was a sheep farm in Australia, formerly belonging to Aunt Georgy's brother, now deceased, and yielding a yearly income of about $20,000, was worth having a try for. And as I said, it might have been much worse. Aunt Georgy might have insisted on his actually attaining the married state in ten days' time, instead of merely getting engaged, and that I thought would have been well nigh impossible. Girls are so queer about that sort of thing. They must have a trousseau, and bridesmaids and churches and fuss and feathers of one kind or another. He would certainly have had trouble in pulling off the wedding in such short order. He was inclined to agree with me. He thought it more than likely his bride would balk at such unceremonious haste.

"A Nephew Is Much Nearer Than a Third Cousin, You Know!"

But, by Jove! I know a girl who has no such foolishness about her—

When I married Dearest—who had been the Hon. Agatha Wyckhoff, you know—she did not make me wait for anything. We were married at the unfashionable hour of seven in the morning in a certain little well-remembered chapel in the village of Wye, with Mrs. Armistead, her aunt, as our only attendant. And then—but I forgot—I am not telling our story, but Terhune's. Poor old chap!

"If you could have seen him!" I said to Dearest, throwing myself on the terrace at her feet. "Never saw him in such a state! He was in the wildest hurry to begin his record-breaking campaign for a wife, but didn't know how to go about it at all. And I couldn't blame him really. Twenty thousand dollars a year would make all the difference in the world to him!"

CHAPTER II.

"And to the cousin in America, with nine children!" said Agatha.

"Not so very much," I said. "He's very well off, they say. All those Americans are. Besides that, Terhune's really got more right to the stuff than he has! A nephew is much nearer than a third cousin, you know!"

"Not if he isn't married, apparently," remarked Dearest, but I knew she only said it to tease me.

"O, come, now!" I expostulated; "you know you aren't going to stick up for a wild westerner from the American backwoods."

"Wherever they may be," put in my wife, who has spent the greater part of her life in the states and is fonder of that country than I think she should be.

"From the American backwoods," I repeated, "that you've never even seen, against poor old Terhune! Why, he probably wears a scalp lock and brandishes a tomahawk, for all you know!"

She smiled pityingly at my primitive notions of American civilization.

"Which?" she said, "Terhune or the third cousin? You're very ambiguous, Wilfred. Besides, you know lots better than that!"

I hung my head in well-affected confusion and admitted that I did.

"Don't be a silly!" she admonished, though I could see she thought my attitude a good one, and tapped me on the head with her thimble. It hurt a little and I pretended to be very angry at the liberty.

"Just you stop that!" I cried, suddenly flinging my arms around her and pinning her so tight to her chair she couldn't speak. "And don't pretend you're not going to agree with me about Terhune! It's a serious matter, and you know it! The old boy's in a hole and I want to help him out!"

"And you expect me to provide the method of exit, isn't that it?" asked my prisoner as soon as she could get her breath.

"Exactly!" I said, setting her free and settling myself in another chair that was conveniently close to her.

"Pitch in and tell us how to go about it!" And I leaned back and lit a favorite pipe of mine for which I had long ago gained permanent pardon from Lady Vincent. Which title, by the way, explains the fact that my older brother Edmund had died shortly after our wedding trip, making me Lord Vincent instead of Lord Wilfred, and at the same time my father, the duke of Totten's, heir. At length my oracle ceased puckering her pretty brows and spoke. "I think," she said, "we might manage it if we gave a small house party and had two of the Agathas who stayed with me a year ago during the time when I was carrying out the conditions of my father's will and friend Terhune as the only guests."

I withdrew my pipe from my mouth and my gaze from the broken roofline of Wyckhoff castle and the tops of our famous Wyckhoff oaks, which was all my lazy line of vision held, and sat up.

"I know it's an idea," I remarked, "but I can't seem to get the inner significance of it—a house party for a week with just two Agathas and Terhune for guests. How—"

But she interrupted me. "Yes," she said, "so far you're quite right. But don't you see, Freddy, dear, that the Agathas I meant to invite are Agatha First and Agatha Sixth. In the first place, they are the only Agathas of all the six yet unmarried, and in the second place, they just happen to be the two girls Archibald showed the most interest in at the time you two men were guests at Castle Wyckhoff for the first time."

"Of course," I cried, "I see it now! And you think he'll have more of a chance with them than with strange girls he's never seen before?"

The secretary, I mean my wife—as I say the other name will slip out occasionally sometimes when I'm talking of old times—smiled indulgently. "As I argue it," she said, "it will be his only chance. He couldn't hope to accomplish anything in ten days, in regard to a girl he doesn't know, and if you will remember, Agatha Sixth showed a marked liking for him at that time! A most important point in favor of his speedy marriage!"

"Then why not ask just Agatha Sixth? Why have Agatha First, too?" I inquired innocently.

Dearest allowed the most delightful little expression of pity for my limited masculine intelligence to dim the brightness of her eyes.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Knew the Remedy.

"I'll be durned if I didn't have to laugh good an' hard at one uv them there autty-lunatic, although I didn't feel much like snickerin' at the time," said Farmer Chinfuss to the other soap-box warmers in the cross roads store; "an' here's the answer: On my way down to the county seat the hoss balked good an' stubborn fer a spell an' in the midst uv my rippin' an' snortin' along comes a big red auttymobile with a real friendly feller behind the goggles. When the feller found out that my outfit was stationary fer the time bein', what do you s'pose he up an' done? Grabbed a monkey wrench, an oil can an' a hammer, crawled under my wagon, made a noise like a b'iler factry, an' may I be tetotally honswoggled if that there hoss' mane didn't stand up like a porkypine's an' he made tracks so fast I'm thinkin' uv trainin' him fer the ring speedin' at next county fair, b'gosh."—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

He Had Reason.

In illustrating a point he wished to make at a political gathering in the west, a noted politician told of an epitaph which an Indiana man had caused to be inscribed upon the monument of his wife, who had died after a somewhat tempestuous married life. This legend read:

"Here lies a wife. Tears cannot bring her back. Therefore her husband weeps."—Harper's Magazine.

CAP and BELLS

SEASONABLE TITLE IN SOUTH

Southern Gentleman Dubbed "General Humidity" Because of His Extreme Unpleasantness.

On the wide veranda of an old southern hotel sat the titled gentlemen with their weekly papers and cooling mint juleps.

"Jeff," whispered the Chicago man who had just arrived, "can you tell me the different titles of those gentlemen?"

The old colored hostler grinned.

"Yeas, boss. Ah kin tell po' ebby one ob dem. Dat big stout gen'man wid de empty julep glass am Gineral Tom, sah. De uddeh gen'man wid de broad grin am Gineral Chesteh, sah. De lean gen'man dat am talkin' about de wah am Gineral Clay, sah."

The Chicago man was interested.

"Ah, indeed! And who is that crabbedlooking individual sitting in the corner?"

"Him? Lands, boss, he am so disagreeable en so unpleasant en he maks yo' so wahm we does call him Gineral Humidity."

A Book Lover.

The old parson was endeavoring to do a little missionary work behind the big stone walls.

"What brought you here, my son?" he queried of an inmate.

"I am here, sir, because of my fondness for books," answered No. 3323.

"Indeed!" exclaimed the good man in surprise. "What kind of books, may I ask?"

"Pocketbooks," briefly answered the other.

Sameness of Opinion.

"I suppose," said the young man with the soiled collar and baggy trousers, as he sat down beside a stranger on one of the park benches, "you wouldn't take me for a member of a millionaire's family, would you?"

"No," answered the stranger, after sizing him up, "frankly speaking, I wouldn't."

"Neither would the millionaire," rejoined the young man, sadly, "I asked him last night."

Tough Luck.

"I suppose," said the kind lady, as she handed the husky hobo a generous wedge of apple pie, "that your lot is full of hardships?"

"Dat's de proper word fer it, ma'am," replied the h. h. "In de winter w'en de farmers ain't doin' nothin' but eatin' apples an' drinkin' hard cider it's too cold fer me t' be trampin' eround; an' in de summer peeples' allers offerin' me work."

IT NEEDED EXERCISE.

Mr. Billyuns—My automobile looks like it had been subjected to mighty bad treatment. Did you have it out while I was away?

His Chauffeur—Yis, sor. I—er—er—exercised it a little, eor, ivry day, sor.

Went Wrong.

Black, angry clouds o'erspread the sky;
Kiljordan's lawn was very dry;
He sprinkled it with might and main—
Yet all the same, it didn't rain.

Want Something Better.

"I always find," said Deacon Hardacre, "that the Lord will provide, somehow."

"Yes, but the people of this country are gettin' so they ain't willin' to be provided for merely somehow," replied the infidel of the neighborhood.

ENOUGH TO MAKE HIM SHAKY

Youth Tells Maiden Why His Hand Trembled, but It Was Not Story She Expected.

With quivering fingers he turned the pages of the Chopin Mazourka, while she played dreamily the entrancing music.

"Did you notice how my hand trembled, Mis Pinkerton?" he asked, when it was all over.

"Yes, Mr. Sparkes," she admitted, shyly, "I did."

"And can you gues why it trembled?" he breathed into her ear.

The white fingers of the sweet Miss Pinkerton strolled lightly over the keys, and then fell limp in her lap as a strawberry-hued suffusion dyed her countenance.

"N-no," she whispered.

"Shall I tell you?" he asked.

"Yes," she answered, faintly, "if you like."

There was a big pause. The youth swallowed audibly. Then his voice, hoarse with an emotion that did him credit, thrilled through the silence.

"I've had three dances, two theaters, and a garden party this week, and I didn't get to bed till three o'clock this morning!"

RIGHT EPITAPH.

Tom—What did they put on Skinem's tombstone?

Ted—"He Did All He Could."

Cool.

She drew back with a gesture of scorn. "You are a cumberer of the earth!" she exclaimed.

"Ha, ha!" he laughed.

"How cool you are!" the beautiful girl protested, moved to a species of admiration in spite of herself.

"Oh, yes—sort of a cucumberer of the earth, you know," he retorted.—Puck.

No Cause for Alarm.

The scene was laid in the far north.

"What are those white men doing around here?" asked the polar bear, anxiously.

"Looking for the north pole, I hear," replied the brown seal.

"Oh, is that all," rejoined the bear, with a sigh of relief. "I thought perhaps they were seking recruits for some zoological garden."

Of Course Not.

"He taught her to swim in half an hour."

"Yes, and I believe he is going to propose to her, too."

"It won't do him any good."

"How do you know?"

"A girl who will learn to swim that quickly doesn't care for the man who is teaching her."

The Odor of Home.

"Don't you ever put crude oil on your highways?" she asked the handsome Cook's courier.

"No, madam," he replied with his highly cultured polyglot accent.

She softly sighed.

"I guess that's what makes me homesick," she murmured. "I do so miss the smell!"

Good Policy.

Mrs. Stubb—"Why, John, the last family that occupied this house left some old jars in the pantry."

Mr. Stubb—"H'm! Maria, that is a good policy."

Mrs. Stubb—"What is a good policy?"

Mr. Stubb—"Why, when you move leave your family jars behind you."

Sure Sign.

Burglar—Let's turn off that house up there tonight.

Pal—Pshaw, no; it don't look rich nuff.

Burglar—Well, they got three autos.

Pal—Yep; an' likely hocked everything of value in de house to pay fer 'em.—Judge.

The Bargain Instinct.

She—We have been trying our best to induce more women to join our Saturday Night club, but without success.

He—What is the initiation fee?

She—Two dollars.

He—Make it $1.98 and you'll get more new members than you can accommodate.

Fortune-Telling Fakes.

The face is a better index to character than the palm of the hand. The fortune-teller is usually a shrewd teller of tales gifted with natural insight of human nature.

Must Advertise.

Nothing is won without effort. If you wish to look trig and interesting you must dress and act the part. Of course you can do it. You may have head full of brains, but if you would succeed, you must advertise.

A Test of Shakespeare.

A friend of father's told me that is the only test to apply in considering which parts of the doubtful plays are genuine. "If you want to read it, it's Shakespeare; and if you don't, it isn't."—The Spectator.

The Warning.

When a man nearly breaks his neck dodge a lightning bug and takes it the headlight on a locomotive, it's to stop and take seltzer and

NAMING THE BABY

USUALLY IT IS A VERY SIMPLE AFFAIR.

Interest of the Relatives Made This Case More Difficult—Finally Solved by Drawing Name From Hat.

Ordinarily there would have been no trouble in naming the baby. It is custom for fathers and mothers to decide years before that some of these days if a little boy blessed their home they'd call him Etheridge, and that if it should be a girl, her name should be Annie May.

But in this case it was different, for there were so many people to satisfy.

There was grandpa, for illustration. He was getting old, and his feelings might be hurt if he didn't figure in the name-giving. Besides, he might leave his accumulated wealth to found a home for ex-cow punchers if displeased.

And there was Aunt Lucy. Aunt Lucy had a vitriolic tongue for a certainty and had been using it vigorously for 37 years. It would never do to displease her.

Father wanted to call the baby Sammy; mother wanted to name it Horace; sister Ella wanted it called Butler, after a boy she knew, up in Michigan, and brother, aged ten, wanted to call it Jeffries.

It was an awful situation, especially as Uncle Bob was in town and had views of his own concerning names for boy babies. He thought father was nearer right than the others, but preferred the name Gladstone.

It was a family conference that was filled with stickers. It took four hours, and though the family sat at the table nobody ate any dinner. Everybody glared at everybody else and spoke little.

Then some neighbors came in, and added to the merriment. Each had views.

Finally Uncle Bob, in desperation, suggested that the names be written on slips of paper and if any two were alike that should be the name. Then he privately took little Alice Perkins, a neighbor's child, aside and promised her a box of chocolates if she's write Gladstone on a piece of paper and drop it in the bowl designed for the purpose.

Then the names were written and dropped into the bowl, and when the count was taken there were 11 slips of paper and 11 names represented.

"Why didn't you do as I told you?" demanded Uncle Bob indignantly of the neighbor's child.

"I would, Mister Bob," she said, "but I couldn't spell Gladstone. You didn't tell me. So I wrote Gladys—it's lots prettier, anyway."

The One to Pay.

Mrs. George Cornwallis-West, in a black gown, was one of the most beautiful women present at the recent marriage in London of the prime minister's son and the Hon. Sylvia Charteris, Lord Elcho's daughter.

The presence of this beautiful American woman at this political wedding recalls an anecdote illustrative of her wit in politics.

When she was Lady Randolph Churchill she consented to electioneer for Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett in his first parliamentary campaign. Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett was married to the Baroness Purdett Coutts, a very rich woman, who was nearly 40 years his senior. Lady Randolph, with her beauty and charms, did splendid work for the candidate.

To a group of farmers she said one day:

"Won't you promise me to vote for Mr. Ashmead-Bartlett?"

"My lady," said a red-faced farmer with a chuckle, "we'll all vote for him if every vote'll be paid for with a kiss."

"Thank you very much," said Lady Randolph. "Your offer is accepted. I'll send for the Baroness Burdett Coutts at once."

Offended Dignity.

Members of the police department were matching stories the other day and the conversation turned on the amount of "nerve" some persons have, and what remarkable things they expect of the police department.

"I remember one day I got a telephone call from a woman on Washington street that she wanted a policeman to come to her house right away," said Desk Sergeant Caffrey of the First precinct.

"I sent a policeman—never mind who he was—and soon he came back looking as red as a beet.

"'What do you suppose that woman wanted?' he said, after he had recovered his breath.

"'It's past me,' I answered, 'what did she want?'

"'Her little girl had gone to the store to buy some candy, and lost a nickel in the grass in front of a house, and she wanted me to find it for her,' he said.

"'And what did you tell her?' I asked the copper.

"'Sergeant, what could I tell her,' he asked. 'I just turned around and walked away.'"—Newark Star.

Discouraged.

"Did any girl ever propose to you?" she asked.

"Yes. One."

"Why didn't you marry her?"

"I would not think of marrying a girl who proposed to me."

Then she drew a deep sigh and said no more.

His Luckiest Quarter.

By DOROTHY BLACKMORE

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

Faith Airless stood over the miniature gas stove behind the screen in her studio. She hummed to herself as she turned over the fast-browning mushrooms in the pan before her, and kept a watchful eye on the steak broiling so evenly beneath the flame on the other side.

Suddenly her song stopped and the gentle sizzling of the juices and the bubbling of the butter stopped with it. The gas had gone. She turned in dismay to her little purse hanging on a chair nearby. It was as she thought—there was not a quarter there for the gas meter. She had nothing but a five-dollar bill—nothing larger nor smaller.

She looked about helplessly, and then her eyes fell on the half-cooked food on the tiny table so crowdedly laid for three. It was a gala day for Faith—or it was to have been a gala day! For the first time since she had left her home back in the country town her father and mother were coming to visit her in her studio. They were to arrive in time for dinner, and—now!

All at once an idea flashed through her mind. She caught up the dainty dotted swiss apron with its dainty blue bows and ran across the hall, holding it to one side. She felt conscious in this sort of domestic apron, whereas she was entirely at home in the big enveloping apron in which she worked at her easel all day.

Timidly she shook the antique brass knocker on the door across the hall.

"Come in," called a deep masculine voice.

Faith opened the door and looked about. She could see nothing but the lower extremities of a man beneath a large canvas on an easel. She stood for a moment, hesitating to enter.

"Could You Change This?"

"Come in," called the voice again, then a head peered around the side of the canvas. "Oh, please forgive me," the young man hastened to say, coming toward Faith. "I thought it was one of the fellows. Do come in," he added hospitably.

"Oh, I can't stay a moment, Mr. Melville, I—I'm in such a predicament," she explained, extending at the same time a five-dollar bill.

"Could you change this?" she asked.

If young Guy Melville's eyes looked large and hungrily at the unfamiliar greenback he tried to conceal it. "I'm afraid I can't." He felt in his pockets, searched in all parts of his work jacket, but could find only a quarter. This he extracted. "I have only a quarter in small change," he said.

"That's just what I want—what I need," Faith cried, looking eagerly at the coveted silver bit. "My meter is out and I have mushrooms and steak on the fire cooking. Mother and father are coming.

"Then by all means take this," Melville insisted," and let me come to collect it some other time. No—no, keep the bill. It would be lonely here," he laughed.

"If it weren't absolutely necessary that I have it immediately I should not take it," Faith went on; "but by the time I could get on my things and go out for change the little dinner would be ruined. I must run as it is. It's a queer introduction, and I'm afraid you'll have a bad opinion of me," she said as she crossed the hall. "Many, many thanks."

Melville, deep in study over the charm of his neighbor, forgot to close his studio door, and when two elderly persons wandered strangley into the great dark hall of the studio building in search of Faith Airless and her room they were sure the open door was hers. They hesitated a moment before entering. Then, held by a voice inside, they stood on the threshhold.

"That you, Tommy?" a masculine voice was saying in loud tones, as if talking over a telephone. 'Sure! It's Guy. And I want you to blow me to dinner. Haven't a cent. . . . No—no—just loaned my last quarter. . . . Well, I guess I can starve for one night, then. Sorry you have a date. So long, old man. So long." Then some one hung up a receiver and the two old persons looked at each other.

"Must be the wrong room," said the man.

"Oh, here we are," cried Mrs. Airless, opening the opposite door, on which she had discovered a tiny brass name plate bearing her daughter's name. "Here we are and—here is Faith!"

"Well, bless your heart, daughter, we've found you at last," said the father, taking Faith in his arms and giving her a generous paternal hug. "We mighty near got into the wrong room."

"Yes—the poor young man across the hall was just telephoning to some one that he had just given away his last quarter and hadn't a bite to eat. Faith, dearie, I hope you never get that way. I've read about this studio life in New York, and of how young artists often go hungry," the elder woman was saying.

"Never fear, mother," said Faith, from the stove where she was taking up the now thoroughly cooked repast. But, the joy was gone from her eyes—she had taken the poor man's last quarter!

She did not want to explain, right away, to her mother and father that she had been compelled to go to a strange man across the hall to borrow a quarter with which to have gas enough to finish cooking the dinner. They might not understand—at first—and it really had not been her intention to borrow the money.

By the time the little meal was on the table the thought weighed so heavily upon her that she could not sit down to enjoy it. At last she summoned courage to explain the whole matter to her parents and it was with difficulty that she restrained her father from running immediately to the door of Melville to drag him bodily to the table to join them.

"It will be far better for me to go," Faith expostulated. "I can be tactful. He may feel a delicacy about it."

"Yes—let Faith go," the mother added. "She's used to city ways."

This time it was without an apron that Faith knocked at the opposite door. It took her fully ten minutes to persuade the young man to join the little party and eat a portion of the meal he had been influential in saving. But, at last, he was induced to go, and Faith waited while he changed his studio coat and put a touch or two to his toilet.

The merry little party sat about the studio until the logs in the old fireplace had crumpled to ashes and the folks from the country had begun to wonder what the hour might be.

When Melville rose to go Faith's father shook his hand warmly. "I shall leave my little girl a stack of quarters when I go back to Hometown," he said, "so you needn't be fraid she'll be borrowing any more."

"No, indeed, she mustn't," Mrs. Airless interjected. "She mustn't get into the borrowing habit, even if she does live in a studio.

Faith blushed and turned toward young Melville. "You see they are all in sympathy with you," she laughed.

"If they were," the young man said, pointedly, "they would never leave you a stack of quarters, for how—in that case—can I ever expect to become acquainted?"

"I still have this one to pay back," Faith reminded him as she stood in the studio door while he unlocked his own.

"No"—he held up his hand in remonstrance. "Please don't mention that. Just let me come to see you and we'll say I bought my meal with the quarter.

But Faith did return the money. She said, afterward, that she always would have felt that he sought her studio so frequently because he hoped to get back his quarter and she preferred to have a better understanding of his intentions.

Muscles and the Will.

I have frequently noticed that my own endurance on any particular occasion is largely determined by my mental attitude. If I say to myself as I start out to take a bicycle ride that I will ride a distance of twelve or fourteen miles, I accomplish the feat and feel just about as tired as I do when I have selected and ridden a journey twice or thrice as long. The crucial thing is making up the mind to go a certain distance. In other words, my bodily energy is developed and expended in obedience to my will, and my body having done what it was told to do, be the journey long or short, protests against further exertion after the task is fulfilled. Mr. Roosevelt's wonderful energy was originally, at least, unquestionably far more a mental than a physical attribute, although, of course, the iron will begets the iron muscles.—Dr. Richard Cole Newton in the Forum.

Illegal Train Riding.

Tramp train riding is pretty popular, but it leads to the county jail nowadays. The report of the number of persons confined in the Dauphin county prison during the year 1909 has just been made public. It shows that 7,333 persons were committed for various offenses, of which number 1,762 served terms for illegal train riding and 335 for trespass. The total expense to the county was $32,355.22.—Philadelphia Record.

Timid Man.

"But why in the world did your husband select such a high bed?" asked Mrs. Barker in surprise. "Why, it would be so convenient for a burglar to crawl under it."

"Oh, no," laughed Mrs. Barker; "my husband selected a high bed so I could crawl under it if he heard burglar."

SUIT IS HELP TO SWIMMERS

Equipped With Life Protector and Fins Attached to Ankles—Aids Experts.

A swimming suit that has the double advantage of aiding the swimmer's movements and protecting his life has been designed by a Washington man. It is intended primarily for the use of beginners, but will be found convenient for experts, who wish to take long-distance swims that either would tire them greatly or be impossible without some help. The suit has a life-preserver fastened under the armpits of the shirt, and from the strong elastic bands reach down and are fastened just above the knees of the trousers. Just outside the ankles are fastened a pair of fins, which give resistance to the water on the backward stroke and fold in as the legs are drawn forward. The elastic bands help draw the legs forward and save the swimmer all his strength for the kick back. Equipped with such an apparatus a beginner may feel perfectly safe in the water, and an experienced swimmer will find himself able to swim miles further than he could otherwise do. The suit is made of light rubber so that it does not get heavy by becoming water-soaked.

EGG EXPERIMENT IS UNIQUE

Interesting Little Test Shows Why It Is so Easy to Swim in Salt Water.

Let us take two small pickle bottles, A and B, and one, C, twice as large. A is to be filled with clear water. If, now, we try to float a fresh egg in the latter we shall assuredly fail; the egg will immediately sink to the bottom, because the density of water is considerably less than that of the egg, says Magical Experiments. Next place the egg in B, which is full of concentrated brine, and try to make the egg sink. It is just as impossible as to cause it to float in water. It is thus clear that strong salt water is denser than the egg; and, from this simple experiment, we may guess why it is so much easier to swim in salt than fresh water, since the greater density of the former permits us the more easily to float.

Now let us combine these two experiments, and pour into C the greater part of both these fluids, water and strong brine, which will, of course, commingle. By a few trials, pouring in a little more of one or the other, we shall obtain a liquid whose specific gravity is identical with that of our egg; and now the latter, having no reason to go to the bottom, and finding no particular excuse to get to the top, will rest, as the illustration shows, in the middle of the jar of salt water; but it will move toward the surface if you add a little more brine, or toward the bottom if you replenish the jar with water.

A Queer Ache.

One day Mary came to her mother and said: "Mother, my ear aches!"

"Does it ache very bad, Mary?" asked her mother.

"No."

"Well, run out and play, then you will forget about it."

Mary went out, but pretty soon she came back and said: "Mother, my ear does ache. It is not the hole, but the ruffle around it."

A pound of jumps!
My mamma said.
A pound of jumps!
And she nodded her head.

But, my dear,
We've flour and sugar in lumps,
And peanuts,
But never a pound of jumps!

We've walnuts and chestnuts,
And corn that pops,
Oh! oh! I forgot.
It's a pound of hops.

SMALLEST DOG IN AUSTRIA

Baker's Wife Gave It to Princess Windischgratz, Thereby Making Her Very Happy.

The Princess Windischgratz is the granddaughter of the emperor of Austria. When she was but about eleven years old she was known and loved as "the little Princess Elizabeth."

There lived a baker in the city of Vienna whose wife was particularly fond of the little Princess Elizabeth. This baker's wife had, in 1894, a tiny white dwarf dog given her, which was so small that, when full-grown, it could sit on a lady's hand. So small a dog had never been seen before, and people often came to the house on purpose to look at it.

It was Christmas eve. The baker's wife dressed herself in her Sunday best, put the dog in a basket lined with pink satin, and went to the palace where Elizabeth lived. No stranger was allowed to go into the palace except by permission. She showed the dog to the guards, and they were so delighted with it that they managed to get her into the palace, and when once in, it was not very difficult to obtain permission from the court authorities to see Princess Stephanie, the mother of the little Princess Elizabeth.

"Your royal highness," said the baker's wife, "I hope that you will allow me to present a little gift to your daughter this Christmas eve"; and then she uncovered the basket with the tiny white dog in it.

Wasn't the Princess Stephanie delighted with it? And of course the little Princess Elizabeth was. She loved it more than any of the rich gifts which she received for Christmas. The dog remained very small and never grew to be more than five inches high.

A LITTLE HERO.

He rides most daringly to hounds
Upon the rocking chair,
Or calls the cat a tiger fierce,
And stalks up to her lair.
The rug becomes a battle field
Where spears and banners toss,
The hall a river, wide and deep,
That he must swim across.

Behind each curtain fold he sees
An Indian chieftain grim,
And bandits throng the kitchen stairs,
And seek to capture him.
And when the stars begin to shine
In night's eternal arc,
He toddles up to bed alone,
Quite fearless of the dark.

WHY SMALL BOY WAS HAPPY

Near-Sighted Stranger Thought Lad Was Enjoying Sunset—Instead Schoolhouse Was Burning.

As the ruddy glow increased beyond the brow of the hill the small boy on the bridge clapped his hands vigorously.

"Ah, my lad," said the stranger, who was somewhat near-sighted, "it does me good to see you appreciate yon beautiful red sky."

"Yes, sir," responded the lad, with his eyes glued on the distant glow, "I've been watching it for fifteen minutes."

"Well, well! It isn't often one has the opportunity of witnessing such a grand spectacle."

"Couldn't be grander to me, sir."

"A real poet, without a doubt. And do you watch sunsets often, my little man?"

"Sunsets? Why, that isn't a sunset!"

"Not a sunset? Then what is it?"

"Why, that's the village school burning down."

Why Sea Shells Murmur.

One is often perplexed by the murmuring sounds that come from a sea shell, but really there is no reason for this. The sound is not the echo of the waves. The hollow form of the shell and its polished surface enable it to receive and return the beatings of all sounds that chance to be in the air around the shell. There are many superstitious regarding the murmuring of sea shells.

The Effects.

"I have come to you, my friend, for comfort. My best girl has treated me very badly. I was trying to explain something to her, but she gave me such sharp looks they cut me to the heart; she withered me with her scorn, crushed me with her coldness and stabbed me with her keen edged tongue."

"See here, man, you oughtn't to come to me for comfort; what you need is to go to a hospital for treatment."

Thomas E. Vest, 1505 S. 12th St., Terre Haute, Ind., says: "I had no control over the urine and the pain when voiding it was so great I often screamed. I grew worse and lay in bed for weeks, the only relief being from hypodermics. I was treated by three physicians without help and the last one said an operation was necessary. At this time I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and passed a gravel stone as large as a pea. The next day I passed two more and from then on improved rapidly until cured."

"Mistah Jenkins," asked an old negro of Atlanta of his employer, "would yo' be so good, sah, as to explain to me 'bout this wireless telegraph business I hears 'em-a-talking 'bout?"

"Why, certainly, Henry," responded the employer, "though I can do so only in a general way, as I myself know little of the subject. The thing consists in sending messages through the air instead of over wires."

"Yassah," said Henry, "I knows 'bout dat; but, sah, what beats me is how dey fasten the air to the poles!"

"My little son, a boy of five, broke out with an itching rash. Three doctors prescribed for him, but he kept getting worse until we could not dress him any more. They finally advised me to try a certain medical college, but its treatment did no good. At the time I was induced to try Cuticura he was so bad that I had to cut his hair off and put the Cuticura Ointment on him on bandages, as it was impossible to touch him with the bare hand. There was not one square inch of skin on his whole body that was not affected. He was one mass of sores. The bandages used to stick to his skin and in removing them it used to take the skin off with them, and the screams from the poor child were heartbreaking. I began to think that he would never get well, but after the second application of Cuticura Ointment I began to see signs of improvement, and with the third and fourth applications the sores commenced to dry up. His skin peeled off twenty times, but it finally yielded to the treatment. Now I can say that he is entirely cured, and a stronger and healthier boy you never saw than he is to-day, twelve years or more since the cure was effected. HOW ABOUT NEW FENCE?

It's not often that you buy fence, and when you do you want to be sure that you're getting the best.

There's only one best - - that's AMERICAN FENCE.

AMERICAN FENCE is ideal in structural and economical features, as it furnishes the greatest strength and most thorough protection with the least material and expense.

It is made of high-grade, hard, stiff fence steel. It is inspected three times before leaving the factory, and only the most skilled workmen are engaged in its manufacture.

Millions of dollars are made and saved on well fenced farms, where the like amounts are annually lost on unfenced lands. For the successful rotation of crops and economical growing of stock, well-fenced and comparatively small fields are absolutely necessary to secure the best results.

You want the best fence for your farm. You will find just what you want in AMERICAN FENCE.

Sunday School next Sunday at 2 P. M., preaching at 3:00.

The reclearing of the D. W. Baker ditch is nearing completion.

The Fairview country has never looked so beautiful and prosperous as now.

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Melton visited their daughter, Mrs. Fred Hefty and family last Sunday.

A very brilliant meteor was seen in the northeast Sunday evening about 5:30. It was unusually large and seemed to be close at hand, but was really miles away.

Several Fairview people attended the reception to the new minister and wife Saturday evening at Concord. A nice free lunch was served and an enjoyable time was experienced.

A business meeting of Fairview church was held Friday night, at which the building committee was instructed to get a hustle on them, collect their subscriptions and install a lighting plant.

The Herman Miller murder trial closed with a sentence from two to twenty-one years. This trial including the trial of the others has cost Allen county about $25,000. It was the direct result of the boozing dens of Woodburn, but all the "dry" townships will have to pay their share just the same. Allen county is the plague spot of Northeastern Indiana, and gets a dose of her own medicine occasionally.

Herbert Sherer, a Fairview boy participated in the Vanderbilt Cup Automobile races at Long Island, New York, which was pulled off last Saturday commencing at daylight. For the past year he has been working at Lansing, Michigan in the Olds Motor Works; and the company entering two racing cars in the contest sent him as best man for Joe Nelson, one of the drivers. The course consists of twenty-two lops with a total distance of 278 miles, and it was supposed it would be covered in four hours.

Ex-prohi has pursued the favorite tactics of the wiley old buck rabbit: row a large circle, come around to the starting point with another fulsome eulogy of Mr. McKennan, incidentally handing a column of "Dutch" compliments to the Fairview Correspondent, and then crawled into his hole with the announcement that upon his part the discussion was closed. Strange, isn't it, what a strong umbilical cord unites Ex prohi and these minus the Ex to Mr. McKennan? Ex-prohi asks what is meant by "opposed to all sumptuary legislation" and the "largest measure of personal liberty". Why, Allen, that's the copyrighted resolution of Old Sumptuary, the evil spirit of the Democratic party. Confidentially he informed me it meant the free sale of booze, and only appeared in conventions owned body, soul, boots and breeches by the liquor interests. I knew him when your principal article of apparel was a yard of cotton stuff folded diagonally. He is a very good friend of yours, and assured me that you and your kind had greatly encouraged him and enabled him to reappear after being banished from nearly every Democratic Convention in the Nation. You can't fool Old Sumptuary. He knows his henchmen, intentional, or otherwise. He sends his regards to Mr. Jos. B. Heifley as another faithful co-worker.

Why will Ye Bite and Devour One Another?

The study of the Temperance Lesson for Sunday, Sept. 25, makes a revelation apparant. It reveals the fact that the slow progress the church and temperance people are making is due to the fact that they are "biting and endeavoring to devour each other" in the great struggle for elimination of the beverage liquor traffic.

The temperance people have been waging a long and constant struggle to free themselves from the curse that is closing in about every home and church in this land of the free (?) but they have been acting very unwisely, they have not tried to unite in one common army against the foe.

The church has been praying to God to hasten the day when this evil shall be wiped from our land, and then when God by his spirit tells the church to wash its hands clean from the unholy thing and cease fellowship with the traffic by lending help and support to the powers that are instrumental in keeping the liquor traffic here. Then the church members begin to look at their old idols and say to God "Oh Father how can I forsake that which is most dear to me in all this land, my chosen party Oh Father is composed of good moral men like unto myself and in them do I place my confidence to enact such laws as will eventually bring about my desire, thou Father can'st by thy Spirit influence them to stand solidly for the right and cast out this evil.

We near the benediction and then settle down to see the hastening (?). While we are listening for Gabriel to sound the dawn of the temperance day when God will by some mighty power suddenly check the process of decay and fermentation of the fruits and grains which man has so scientifically planned to turn into destruction, we hear the still small voice of the Spirit of God whisper with thundering tones on the deadened cords of our immortal ear and say to us, My son, depart from the paths of evil doers, ye cannot serve God and Mammon, ye can not do evil that good may abound. For you to continue to walk in the ways of darkness and refuse to walk in my light is just as absurd a thing as to ask me to hasten the day you do not want. Whenever you are ready for the prohibition day of the liquor traffic that day will suddenly come. I have given the people in this Free land the power to control their own political and social destinies. Whenever these my children will hearken unto my voice I will then do this great thing. Nations have arisen and fallen, empires have grown and decayed, political parties have served their usefulness and gone into history or died for want of a just reason for future existence. Today we have this condition existing in this land of ours, not only in this land but in the whole world the evil of the drink curse has so fastened its hold upon the body politics of the world that the church is powerless to do anything unless it washes its hands clean from the sacrifices it has been making to its old political gods who are kept in power by the united effort of the liquor traffic. The two political parties are kept in power by the aid they lend to the liquor traffic, this traffic cannot live without the support of two parties. What just excuse can the christian give for keeping company with his enemy. The saloon advocate never makes a mistake when he votes, he listens to the liquor organizations advice and votes as they dictate, so that the temperance man voting the same ticket the saloon man votes is to retard the day he asks God to hastily bring. The temperance men of this country have in their power to bring that day hastily the 8th of November 1910. It is said by temperance workers that 75 per cent of the voters in the United States are for temperance. If this is a fact then if the christian temperance man with the non-christian temperance man would quit company with the saloon man and vote the only ticket that declares for the destruction of the liquor traffic the prayer which the church has been sending to a throne of grace would be answered and the day would be hastened, God glorified and souls saved. The Lincoln of slavery fame would again rise in some other man and the millions of slaves to the liquor curse would be set free, satan would be again chained and the son of righteousness enthroned in the hearts of men the church of the living God would move triumphantly forward singing the songs of the free.

Awake ye christian soldier,
Awake ye temperance advocate,
Arise and strike from the shoulder
And cast a vote to free the state.

Make ye this declaration?
"No party need expect my vote"
Whose platform fears to mention
Against the liquor curse, a note.

Farm Display.

The usual interest in displaying farm products is being taken in our window display this year. Clifford Robbins put on display last Saturday: Hubbard squash, pumpkin, white cucumbers, sweet potatoes, radish, tomato, beet, field corn, pop corn, turnip, potatoes, early and late, peppers. The squash is of the hubbard variety and is the largest we ever saw. Surely Clifford's farming this year was a success.

Clarence Hart, tenant on the J. D. Leighty farm, has displayed a nice line of white and yellow field corn, yellow pop corn, potatoes, sunflower, turnips, apples of eight different varieties from the young orchard of Mrs Leighty's, which are smooth, good size and free from any diseases that apples are subject too. Take a look at the display.

Mrs. Dora McDaniels called on Mrs. Virgie Bowen last Wednesday.

Claude Mason and wife and Ella Wilmot and family, spent Sunday at Waterloo, the guests of Ern Jenkins and family.

LADIES-MISSES and CHILDRENS COATS AT

You never bought Coats at this price at this season of the year? Every store no matter how large or how small accumulates one or two coats of a number and therefore do not have a full run of sizes in any one styles. We have about a hundred of such coats in about that many different models and that have been selling at from $4.50 to $11.50 each. They are good cloth and not "Noah Ark" styles by any means as the past two seasons have not made any radical style changes in coats. You couldn't buy the cloth alone for the price you get these coats at. They are all placed on a table and you have your choice of the lot at

No need to go cold when coats can be had at this price.

Synod Entertained.

The Northern Indiana Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church was entertained by the St. Joe church on last week from Tuesday until Thursday evening. The weather was ideal and the manner in which the body was entertained was commendable to the church. The sessions began proper on Tuesday evening by a preaching service by Rev. F. A. Dressel. The Wednesday session began at 8:30 A. M. and consisted of the organizing of the body and reports of committees and addresses. Rev. H. C. Rochner preached on Wednesday evening and Rev. Brosy on Thursday evening. He made a talk to the ministers. At this service one young man was ordained to preach, and another licensed. The meeting next year is to meet at Hoagland, Ind., at the Antioc church, on the second Tuesday proceeding the full moon.

At the close of the meeting Rev. Dressel, in a few chosen words, expressed the desire of the entire Synod in thanking the congregation for their royal entertainment. The high standard in which the synod has been entertained at larger places has been upheld.

GIRLS IN CITIES.

The young girl who tried dramatically to take her life in New York recently through disappointment and disillusion placed the blame upon the wrong shoulders. It in no degree rests upon either the business or public social side of American life, says Washington Post. The responsibility for such an outcome must be borne by those who are in duty bound to give their children right views of life. The sight of a young girl, however precocious, going to a city like New York without friends or advisers to whom she would listen, and very evidently head-strong and impulsive, there to spend two years writing a book and precious manuscripts which she romantically wishes to be buried with her, calls forth nothing but pity. But this sentiment does not obscure the fact that the girl was permitted to gain a false view of herself and her relations with the world. Acts such as hers in no degree justify the wholesale condemnation of the business life of our cities or warrant the sweeping statement of a young girl facing at once both womanhood and eternity in saying that "a girl cannot get along honorably in New York."

Still another use for automobiles. The town of Jamaica, L. I., had an unpleasant time when a main burst and the water supply was shut off completely. To say nothing of the annoyance, inconvenience and danger in private dwellings, the orphan asylum and other institutions were subjected to especially distressing experiences. To meet at least partially the demand an automobile service was organized, the machines going with tanks, barrels and other receptacles to points where water could be obtained and bringing it to those in need. This was at best but a poor substitute for the regular system, yet it proved that in time of stress the auto is a valuable auxiliary.

Still they come, those Chinese students who are to be trained at American educational institutions. A party of sixty-eight has arrived at Honolulu. These students are some of the number sent by the Chinese government, the expenses to be paid from the Boxer indemnity money returned by the United States, says Troy Times. That kindly act has brought a rich reward in the form of the esteem, gratitude and confidence of China and the influence that will be exerted through the absorption of American ideas by the bright young men who are the beneficiaries of the arrangement.

Engineers at work on the Panama canal propose to leave as little as possible to chance. They are now engaged in experiments to determine the effect of sea water on concrete, an enormous quantity of which is employed in the construction of the canal. Concrete in different stages of preparation and with various forms of protection will be subjected to the action of the salt water and the results will be carefully noted. Probably there never was a great undertaking of this kind in which so many precautions were taken to guard against future risk.

Germans usually do things thoroughly, and the announcement that there is no cholera in Berlin, although the disease has broken out in the vicinity, no doubt testifies to the effectiveness of the safeguards employed. Modern medical science is usually victorious over the ailments once regarded as scourges, against which it was almost useless to contend. Yellow fever, cholera and the like are no longer the terror they were formerly.

General information concerning infantile paralysis is meager, but since a woman of sixty-six has died of the malady, the fact is plain that the scientists who gave it a name were not overcrowded with information either.

A Chicago professor says that the law is a hindrance to some people. If by some people he means burglars, pickpockets and grafters, we might add that that is exactly what the law is intended to be.

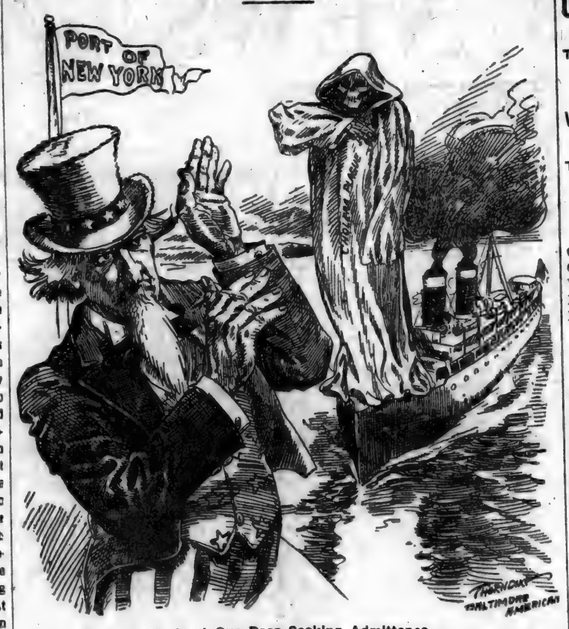
Farmers will not become greatly interested in aeroplanes, monoplanes and biplanes until they have worn out their automobiles.

Man has at last beaten the pigeons at flying, but with fair woman's help he long ago distanced them in the pleasanter art of billing and cooing.

A New York man is taking his piano for a voyage to restore its tone. Probably it got a little shaky on the high C's.

We imagine that Esperanto would be a good language to use when talking back to your wife.

THE UNWELCOME IMMIGRANT



He Is at Our Door Seeking Admittance.

HUNDREDS ARE DEAD

FEW SETTLERS IN NORTHERN MINNESOTA ARE BELIEVED TO HAVE ESCAPED.

SEVEN TOWNS OFF THE MAP

Fifty Miles of the Rainy Lake Country a Mass of Fire—Martial Law for the Stricken District—Whole Families Are Destroyed.

Rainy River, Ont.—It was estimated Monday that at least 500 lives and $700,000,000 worth of property had been lost in the forest fires prevailing in this region.

The tales of horrible suffering brought in Monday by refugees is almost beyond narration. Oscar Johnson, wife and three children stood five hours in the Baudette river ducking their heads when the heat became too intense. They say the water in the river was heated to an uncomfortable temperature and that steam rose from the surface.

It will be some time before the loss of life is known even approximately, and in fact it may never be known. The residents of Rainy River, Ont., are doing everything possible to assist the homeless residents of the two American towns.

Poverty of the worst kind is added to the woes of the throngs that flocked into International Falls and Rainy River.

There were hundreds of homes destroyed in the territory, and as there are no roads in the district save for the trails through the bush, it is feared that many lives have been lost that will not be reported for weeks.

The state of Minnesota is sparing no expense to check the fire. The state fire warden is mustering every man he can procure, and he is instructed to use every possible means at his command, regardless of cost.

Rainy River, Ont.—Fire rangers throughout the forest fire territory between this place and Warroad, Minn., sent in reports Tuesday that 139 bodies had been located. Of these but 90 were recovered and only 60 have been identified.

While fires can be seen to the east and southeast, their progress is not dangerous to human life. Fire rangers here complain that the heat of the surface and gases arising therefrom prevent their proceeding far into the masses of charred tree limbs and burned underbrush. The air in the devastated district is still smoky and no further attempt will be made to locate bodies until re-enforcements and relief are secured.

Five nurses, a doctor, 50 cots and thousands of loaves of bread and thousands of pounds of meat have reached here from Winnipeg.

The streets of Rainy River are being patrolled by 60 armed guards under Fire Warden Hurst and national guardsmen from Bemidji, Minn., guarded old Baudette. The funerals of 19 fire victims have been held here.

The burned area is at least 36 miles wide and many of the settlers are new to the country and comparatively unknown locally. Much of this land was thrown open to homestead entry this summer and many of the settlers have gone in far beyond the roads, where they had only a path to reach their place. It may be months before they are discovered, and some of them may never be found.

Czar Honors Aviator's Memory.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Gen. Daniel E. Sickles was Tuesday elected president of the Military Medal of Honor Legion at the annual convention held in Memorial hall.

LORIMER HEARING IS ENDED

SENATORS ADJOURN BUT MAY MEET AT WASHINGTON.

Speaker Shurtleff Goes on Stand—Testifies More About Assembly Factions.

Chicago. — The senatorial subcommittee which is investigating the election of United States Senator Lorimer concluded its three weeks' session in Chicago without hearing arguments.

Before the report on Mr. Lorimer's right to his seat is presented to the full committee on privileges and elections, by which the seven investigators were delegated, there is the prospect of further sittings at Washington preceding the convening of congress next December. Moreover, it is possible that additional testimony will be heard.

This will depend in part upon whether Representative Robert E. Wilson, now in hiding, is found by the deputy United States marshals, who have been hunting for him to serve him with a subpoena.

Chairman Burrows made plain that he was regarded as a highly desirable witness, whose absence at this time suggested special reasons for securing his presence and testimony.

Speaker Edward D. Shurtleff was slated one of the last witnesses heard. Mr. Shurtleff denied paying or receiving money "or other valuable thing" in consideration of voting for Lorimer. Most of his testimony was devoted to apportioning the house legislators into factional groups.

Up to the last moment there was uncertainty as to whether Senator Lorimer would be a witness, but he did not go on the stand.

VANDERBILT TARIFF $11,000

Mrs. W. K. Pays That Duty on Parisian Gowns and Other Valuables, Making a Record.

New York. — Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt and her two daughters, the Misses Rutherford, arrived here on the Kronprinzessin Cecilie of the Hamburg-American line. They were accompanied by nine servants and brought 45 trunks.

Mrs. Vanderbilt made the biggest declaration of dutiable goods of the year, informing the customs inspectors that she had bought $18,000 worth of gowns and millinery abroad, and would be pleased to pay duty on them. The duty was assessed at $11,000, which was paid in cash by a representative of Mr. Vanderbilt.

BOY DIES AS BULLET SHIELD

Man Who Seized Twelve-Year-Old Lad and Saves His Own Life Escapes Police.

New York. — Charles Fischer, aged twelve, was swung screaming from the sidewalk by a man, brute who used the boy's body to check a bullet fired by Harry Greenwald, an ex-pugilist. The missile pierced the child's brain and he died within an hour.

Greenwald, terror stricken and pursued by citizens and police, dashed into a hallway and committed suicide. The man who used the boy as a screen escaped. His name is not known to the police.

Greenwald was about twenty-five years old and was known to his sporting friends as "Biz Clark."

Santiago, Cuba.—A severe earthquake was felt here Tuesday. Great alarm was caused, but no damage done.

GREAT GRAIN CROP

TOTAL SWELLED BY BUMPER YIELD OF CORN AND OATS.

WHEAT CROP ALSO IS BIG

Two Former Cereals Break the Record, While Latter Turns Out to Be Only 45,000,000 Bushels Under 1909 Fat Hogs in Prospect.

Corn, total yield	2,978,000,000 bu
Oats, total yield	1,096,000,000 bu
Wheat, total yield	692,000,000 bu
Barley, total yield	158,000,000 bu
Potatoes, total yield	352,000,000 bu
Grand total	5,275,000,000 bu

Washington.—Official figures issued by the crop reporting board of the department of agriculture show that corn and oats are bumper crops, the former having three billion bushels and the latter exceeding last year's billion-bushel crop by nearly 100,000,000 bushels. Even the wheat crop turns out to be only 45,000,000 bushels behind the big yield of 1909 and has been exceeded but four times in the nation's history.

The great states of the Mississippi Valley have rolled out fatness galore, breaking the record for acreage and yield of corn and promising the country fat hogs without limit. While the tabulated figures show that the corn yield is a trifle below the 3,000,000,000-bushel mark, this report was made up only to October 1. Since that data even the straggiers of the 1910 corn crop have come under the safety line. The November report will take note of these and will also tell the country that many millions of bushels of the crop of 1909 are still on hand. This old corn will fatten the juveniles of the swine family that were not in evidence previous to last spring and summer.

The present corn crop is 205,000,000 bushels larger than that of last year and is over 50,000,000 bushels larger than the previous bumper crop that of 1906—which was 2,927,000,000 bushels. The states south of the Ohio river and the Missouri and Kansas lines have raised more than a round billion of bushels of corn, something heretofore unheard of. The south will have hog and hominy in profusion—and a good bunch of corn for export.

Until last year a crop of a billion bushels of oats in America was unknown. This year there is a good, healthy start on the second billion, the official preliminary estimate for 1910 making the yield 1,096,000,000 bushels. In addition to being the largest crop of oats ever grown, the quality is exceptionally fine and the weight per bushel is among the heaviest ever recorded. There is plenty of feed for all of the animals in need of the grain in this country, in addition to large quantities available for export—providing the producer here is willing to get into competition with the world's markets.

The production of spring wheat, as estimated by the crop reporting board for 1910, was 233,475,000 bushels.

FAIR BOOMERS IN CHICAGO

Governor Sanders of New Orleans and Party Are Entertained by Press Club.

Chicago.—Chicago has been entertaining a lively party of boomers from New Orleans, who are urging the Crescent City's claims to the exposition that is to celebrate the completion of the Panama Canal in 1915. In the party were Governor Sanders, Mayor Behrman of New Orleans, C. H. Ellis, president of the New Orleans Board of Trade; M. B. Trezevant, secretary of the New Orleans Progressive Union, and J. L. Wright, secretary of the World's Panama Exposition company.

Immediately after their arrival Monday they were entertained at luncheon by the Press club, John C. Shaffer, retiring president of the club, presiding. In the evening they were the guests of the Southern club at dinner at the Congress hotel. Tuesday Governor Sanders addressed the National Grain Dealers' association, in convention here, and Mr. Ellis addressed the Board of Trade. The party was given a luncheon by the Cook County Real Estate board.

MANUEL IS NEAR COLLAPSE

Deposed King Will Be Taken to England and Placed in Care of Specialists.

Gibraltar.—Members of the Portuguese royal family are said to be gravely concerned over the health of King Manuel, who was, Monday, reported to be on the verge of a nervous collapse as a result of the strain and excitement of the past few weeks.

It is now planned to have him start as soon as possible for England where he is to be placed under the care of specialists. Queen Amelie is to accompany him.

Death Takes Swedish Leader.

Stockholm, Sweden.—Sigfrid Wieselgrid, a noted temperance advocate, political leader and writer, died Tuesday. While general director of the state prisons of Sweden he introduced a number of radical reforms.

Hold Times Blast Suspect.

Sacramento, Cal.—George Wallace was arrested Tuesday at the post office while receiving letters which it is declared connect him with the Los Angeles Times dynamiting. He is supposed to be a miner.

COURT HAS A BIG DOCKET

SUPREME TRIBUNAL ENTERS UPON IMPORTANT TERM.

Tobacco Trust, Standard Oil Corporation Tax, and Other Cases of Great Significance.

Washington. — Owing to the illness and deaths of the members of the United States supreme court during the past two years that august body, when it reassembled Monday, found the docket piled high with important cases which presaged a busy and important session.

Although the tobacco trust, Standard Oil, railroad and the corporation tax cases are regarded as the most important ones now before the Supreme bench, there are a number of other cases of considerable national significance. One of the latter is the original act of the state of Virginia against its next-door neighbor, West Virginia, in which several million dollars are involved as a result of the division of Virginia in its original state. The suit consists of an attempt to compel West Virginia to shoulder part of the debt that existed in Virginia at the time of the division.

There are two peonage cases appealed by the state of Florida; the appeal of a number of railroads in the western territory in the suit brought by them against the railroad commission of Missouri; three criminal cases brought by the United States on account of alleged violations of the pure foods and drug act; the appeal of the United States from the United States circuit court for eastern Missouri in its suit against the Western Terminal association of St. Louis, which is known as the Eads bridge monopoly case; and the libel suit of the United States against the Press Publishing company of New York which grew out of articles printed in the New York World about Theodore Roosevelt who was then president; William Nelson Cromwell and others in connection with the sale of the Panama canal. The docket contains also a corresponding case against the Indianapolis News.

The tobacco trust and Standard Oil cases are to be reargued and the clerk of the court has placed them on the docket for November without any definite date. In each of these cases the government has assumed the role of "trust buster," because of its attempt to dissolve what is deems a trust operating in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act.

FRENCH STRIKERS IN RIOT

Employes on Northern Railroad Cause Wreck and Tie Up Traffic—Soldiers Take Possession.

Paris, France.—Employes of the Northern railroad went on a strike Tuesday and the tie-up is complete. Trains only for Calais and Cologne are moving. Military engineers have been called to replace the strikers, but the number is inadequate to restore the running schedules. Several acts of violence occurred before daybreak. At St. Quentin the tracks were torn up. Two locomotives were in collision at Terginer and obstructed the main track. Military forces have taken possession of several stations and have been posted along the road to protect the railroad property.

The strike developed overnight and took the company and the public by surprise. There has been ill feeling on the part of the employes for some time owing to the refusal of the Northern railroad to increase the wages of the men to $1 a day and to grant other concessions. There have been rumors of impending strikes, but the men conducted their plans with great secrecy.

ROOSEVELT IN AIRSHIP TRIP

Colonel Goes Up with Hoxsey at St. Louis, Remains Aloft Three Minutes and 20 Seconds.

St. Louis.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt went up in an aeroplane with Aviator Hoxsey Tuesday and made three laps of the field. He was in the air three minutes and twenty seconds.

Colonel Roosevelt, after alighting, said it was the finest experience he ever had and that he would like to stay up an hour if he had the time. He said he did not feel a particle of fear.

The distance traveled in the aeroplane with Hoxsey was four and a half miles. Hoxsey said Mr. Roosevelt told him this was the first time he had ascended in an aeroplane, although he was asked many times.

Prior to his visit to the aviation field Colonel Roosevelt made a speech before the Business Men's league of St. Louis in which he prophesied the ultimate completion of the entire lakes-to-the-gulf deep waterway. He said he was certain the project would be completed in time although it was necessary to go slowly and perfect the plans for the work.

Dietz Held as Murderer.

Winter, Wis.—A charge of murder in the first degree will be made by the district attorney against John F. Dietz, his wife and his son Leslie as the result of the coroner's verdict returned Monday in the case of Oscar Harp, who was killed during the attack on Dietz's cabin.

Walkout by 5,000 Girls.

New York.—Five thousand girls, makers of neckties, went on strike Monday for better working conditions.

S. B. SWEET IS DEAD

DIES VERY SUDDENLY AT HIS HOME IN INDIANAPOLIS.

HELD HIGH RANK IN MASONRY

Served Long as a Soldier in the Civil War and Was Prominent in Railroad Work—Other News.

Indianapolis, Ind.—Samuel B. Sweet, general agent of the Lake Erie & Western railroad, died suddenly at his home here. He had been in usual health but suffered an acute attack and died before a physician arrived. He was sixty-five years old and had been connected with the Lake Erie & Western since 1884 and ten years prior to that was with the Wabash Railroad company.

Mr. Sweet was one of the three active thirty-third degree Masons and was a senior past grand commander of Indiana. He was born in Fort Wayne, Ind. Besides his widow he leaves a son, Frank E. Sweet, and a daughter, Mrs. Lannes McPhetridge, both of this city.

Mr. Sweet served as a soldier during practically the entire war, having been mustered out of the service on September 14, 1865. In those more than four years he had fought through the battles of Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Stone River, Chickamauga, Mission Ridge and many lesser engagements. He was wounded at Shiloh, at Stone River and at Chickamauga and was favorably mentioned for gallantry in action by the officers in their official reports.

Began Railroad Career.

In June, 1866, he entered the service of the Wabash railroad in Fort Wayne as a clerk. He was advanced to the position of chief clerk in 1870, became freight and ticket agent in 1874, and in 1880 was made general agent for the Wabash in Fort Wayne.

Four years later he was appointed division freight agent for the Wabash with headquarters at Peru. In March, 1887, Mr. Sweet left the Wabash to become assistant general freight agent for the Lake Erie & Western railroad at Indianapolis. In 1896 he was promoted to the position of general freight agent, which he still held at the time of his death.

High Rank in Masonry.

Mr. Sweet had attained very high rank in Masonry and in addition to being one of the three active members for Indiana of the supreme council of Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, thirty-third degree, he was a past grand commander of the Knights Templar of Indiana.

Gives Up Hopes of Finding Dynamiters

Los Angeles, Cal.—That the search for the Times dynamiters on the coast is practically regarded as futile by the police was evidenced when it became known that the detective bureau had sent to all important cities of the world descriptions of the suspected persons and requests for their arrest. One more body was taken from the ruins. There is still a great mass of wreckage to be removed. Three more bodies are believed to be in the debris.

75 Miles an Hour in Aeroplane.

St. Louis, Mo.—Alfred DeBlanc in his Bleriot monoplane made a flight of 13 miles in 10 minutes at the Kinloch aviation meet. He covered six laps of the field and flew four miles out of bounds. His average speed exceeded 75 miles an hour.

SERIAL STORY

Archibald's Agatha

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular young bachelor of London, is suddenly aroused from the aimless and indolent life he leads, by the startling news from the law firm of Barnes, Wiloughby & Son, that he is the heir to a sheep farm in Australia bringing in an income of $20,000 a year. The bequest comes from an aunt, Mrs. Georgiana James of Essex. She makes him her heir on condition that he marry within ten days or forfeit the legacy to a third cousin living in America. The story opens at Castle Wyckoff, where Lord Vincent and his wife, staunch friends of Terhune, are discussing plans to find Terhune a wife within the allotted time. It seems that Lady Vincent is one of seven persons named Agatha, all whom have been close girlhood chums. She decides to invite two of them to a party at the castle and have Archie there as one of the guests. Archie accepts the invitation and the Vincents discuss his prospects in all their varied bearings. He listens to their descriptions of the two Agatha's and decides that the sixth shall be his choice. Agatha first and Agatha sixth arrive at the castle. Agatha the Sixth strikes Archie as a handpainted beauty. Agatha First is a breezy American girl. Only eight days remain for Archie to secure a bride. Lady Vincent tells her husband that Agatha the Sixth already cares for Archie.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

She looked at me with an infinite kindness in her eyes.

"Dear Freddy!" she replied, "can't you see that wouldn't do at all? Archibald must prove he loves her, really loves her, before he can know that!"

"But I think he does," I expostulated; "I really believe he cares for her! He's always said he couldn't forget about her, ever since that time we were all here together, when you pretended to be Miss Marsh."

"I haven't a doubt of it," she replied. "If I had, do you think I would have invited the poor girl here to be made sport of? Merely for the sordid purpose of providing your friend with a chance to win a fortune? As if the thing were a kind of game of chance, and she the prize for the man lucky enough to guess right!"

As she said this my wife blushed charmingly, and there was a kind of indignation in her tone. I gaped at her. I didn't see what there was to get so mad about.

"So that's what you did it for? Because you wanted to help Agatha Sixth?" I said slowly, with a feeling that I did not yet quite know my wife. I'm always learning something new, it seems to me, about the unselfishness and sweetness of her character.

"Mainly," she replied. "I've been Agatha Sixth's confidante a long time, and have known of her attachment for your friend ever since the first Castle Wyckhoff house party."

"And had long ago resolved to make her cause your own should a chance of furthering it present itself!"I cried with now enthusiasm for her loyalty and devotion to her friends, "good fellow that you are!"

"Don't," said Dearest; "I've just done my hair!" And I laughed as I heard this new variation of an old theme.

"But still," I said, "I don't see why—if they both love each other and you know that they both love each other—I don't see why we can't tell Arch about it, just to hurry things along and put the poor old boy out of his suspense!"

"Because he must prove that he loves her, first!" said Agatha, in tones of decision. "He must, indeed, Freddy. It's imperative that he should. He's an old dear, of course, but at the same time he's too egotistical for anything—too conceited for words! He thinks every girl he meets is in love with him! And for that reason the pursuit, the wooing, must be entirely on his side and fostered by us with the greatest care. It would ruin Agatha Sixth's chances of happiness, suppose she should marry him, if he were to hear by any means whatever that she cared for him, before he tells her he cares for her. And as likely as not, it would break off the match. Men are that way!"

"I suppose you're right," I sighed, "but it seems hard."

"Suppose?" questioned my wife.

"I know," I corrected myself hastily.

"You should," she said. "Do you think you would have liked it," her eyes suddenly grew very large and swam in tears, "if any one had told you that I cared, before you'd proposed?"

"No," I said, taking out the fresh handkerchief I had just stowed away in the pocket of my dinner coat, and I knelt down beside her.

"Then don't you think it would be very unkind of us to rob her of the chance to tell him so herself when he asks her, and him of the joy of hearing it first from her lips? Don't you think it would be sacrilege?"

"Murder," I whispered, and pressed the handkerchief to her eyes. "We were so happy—are so happy ourselves"—she murmured in my ear. "I want them to be, too, so don't let's say a word to spoil it, to take it from them, Freddy, dear!"

"I'd die first," I told her, and we were silent a long time while the rooks in the beeches outside our open windows, like an army of little old maids in black, scolded and gossiped about us. But inexplicably enough, I never felt the discomfort of kneeling so long, though there wasn't so much as a rug between my knees and the hardwood floor.

CHAPTER IV.

It was on the morning following that our match-making schemes took a more decisive turn, and the situation which I had resolved to let strictly alone began of itself to develop in a way that really seemed crucial, or I had better say, final.

Dearest and I were playing a fast game of tennis on the court down by the lodge, which was in better condition than the ones nearer the castle, and were hard at it, with the satisfying consciousness that things were going well with our loverers pervading every stroke. We had observed with pleasure on the evening previous that Archibald had done nothing but devote himself to Agatha Sixth, and had brought his devotion in public to a well-managed termination by inviting the girl out for a stroll on the terrace "to see the moon!" Happy excuse for seeing each other! Time-honored and time-worn, but as good as new to each fresh pair of lovers! And from this moonlight walk Agatha had augured, and I had hoped, great things.

Then again early that morning we had seen them depart for a drive to the village, where it seemed young Miss Lawrence had an errand. I don't know that I have mentioned before that Lawrence was Agatha Sixth's last name, just as Endicott was Agatha First's. I have grown so used to referring to them as Arch and I were accustomed to do in the days when there was a necessity for keeping their identities a secret beyond the knowledge of their first names, that I'd almost forgotten they had any other.

The best part of the thing was that although they had only two miles to go, the pair had not yet returned. And it was now high noon. Dearest couldn't get over it, and frisked and hopped so, I had to beg her to remember that she was playing tennis and not "cup and ball."

"Forty love!" I called across the net, serving my fast serve that I seldom use against my wife, in my preoccupation as my thoughts would persist in dwelling upon Arch and his love affair rather than upon the game. "I say, do you think they can have eloped?"

"That's too good to hope for!" returned Agatha, though she was not so successful with the ball. "Game!" I cried, as it smashed into the net. But for once Dearest was not vexed with me for winning. With a smile so abstracted and clairvoyant as to make me guess at once the tenor of her thoughts, she picked up the ball and wandered back to the service line.

"Ready!" she called, but instead of serving, suddenly let her racquet fall clattering to the ground.

"Wilfred!" she cried, as if a happy thought had struck her, "do you suppose he will ask her today?"

"More than likely!" I answered exuberantly, and then, coming close up to the net, "but I say, sweetheart, aren't you going to play any more?"

"O, yes!" she cried, starting and stooping quickly to recover her racquet. "Of course I am! I was only just thinking—"

"So was I! But don't let's any more, or we can't play the game!" So we succeeded in putting all thought of the two out of our heads and fell to playing some pretty fast tennis.

Agatha First, I may explain, in the meantime was playing golf all by herself down on the course by the river. Dearest had offered her the escort of young Leslie Freer, the rector's son, who lived down in the village, but she would have none of him, to my dismay. In fact I had begun to feel conscience-stricken almost for fear we were neglecting the poor girl in our absorption in our other two guests, but Dearest had reassured me by saying she thought Agatha First was the kind of girl who preferred out-of-door exercise and her own company to any number of young men.

I had just succeeded in making the score of a hotly contested game "deuce" again, when the dog cart in which Terhune and Miss Lawrence had driven off that morning appeared, approaching briskly from the direction of the castle where Terhune had apparently left his companion on his way to the stables.

"Vantage in! Game!" called my wife triumphantly. "You're no good at all, Wilfred." "Game, set," I replied. "Wonderful good tennis, Dearest," and dropping our racquets, we went to speak to Arch.

I wouldn't have told Dearest for the world, of course, but the truth was that in spite of my praise of her playing, I had let her beat.

"Couldn't you find a groom to take the cart down for you?" I inquired rather indignantly as Terhune came to a halt in the road. "Lazy beggars, those grooms!"

"The butler told me you people were down here playing tennis," said Arch, "and I was in such a hurry to see you I brought it down myself. Thought I'd walk back with you, y'know."

Agatha held out her hands to him eagerly as he got down and stood beside us.

"Then you've got something to tell us!" she cried, "you have!—I know you have!"

"In a way—yes!" he answered, "but it's not what you think, at least not exactly. By Jove, Vincent!" turning to me, "I'm in an awful mess! A beastly unfortunate dilemma, don't you know!"

"But I don't know! What's the trouble, Arch? Tell us!"

"Yes, tell us!" urged my wife.

"Well, you see," began the old boy, and he mopped his brow with his handkerchief in an anxious way that made me feel quite sorry for him, "you see the way of it was, I went and asked her all right, but—" he paused.

"But what! What did she say?" cried Dearest and I together.

"For heaven's sake!" I added, as he still stammered, "get it out!"

"She said," he replied grandly, "that she cared for me."

"Then what on earth are you putting on such a long face about?" I roared, and Dearest asked him anxiously what was wrong about that.

"Why, the trouble is," he told us, getting more and more serious, "that in spite of that admission she won't give me a definite answer until a month from now!"

"But she can't wait that long!" I expostulated, as if Terhune himself were to blame for this complication. "Don't you see that if you're not actually and for a fact engaged by the end of this week you might as well not be engaged at all, at least as far as your aunt's property is concerned?"

"I know," he said. "Nobody sees that any plainer than I do. That's why I'm so upset. What can have possessed the girl, do you suppose? I didn't think she was the trifling kind!"

"Nonsense," declared my wife, authoritatively, "a little coquetry in the right place is perfectly admissible! She didn't want to make it too easy for you, that's all. Very feminine, and quite delightful of her, I call it!"

"That's all very well," replied Terhune with some heat, "and proper enough I dare say! But think what that same coquetry may cost me!" And you could see as he said it that he already beheld in his mind's eye that third cousin of his aunt's sitting on the veranda of the house on his aunt's property in Australia, with his feet on the railing.

"Well, if that's all you care about! If you're only interested in getting that silly old fortune of your aunt's, I hope, yes, I positively hope, that she will keep you waiting until it is too late!" said Dearest unexpectedly.

Terhune stared in surprise at this point of view and I own I couldn't help siding with him a little.

"But my dear girl," he protested, "how can I help being interested in it? A fortune's a fortune, and besides, isn't it for her, too, that I want it, as well as myself? And then, you know, how absurd it is if she's going to accept me anyway, as I'm rather sure she is, that she can't say so in time to get me a fortune as well as a wife!"

"Come, now!" I put in, "that does seem reasonable, doesn't it, Dearest?"

"I thought you understood better than that, Wilfred," she said, with a look almost of severity at me, and to Terhune. "I see you must be chastened still further, Archibald," she told him, "until you learn what true love is! Disinterested, unselfish love!"

Health.

The body has rights, and we have duties toward it. The body is the lifelong companion of the mind, and it cannot be unimportant how it is treated.

One unbridled passion is enough to destroy the beauty of life. One excess, if it does no more, can mar the grace and harmony of the whole. "He that striveth for the mastery must be temperate in all things."

The duty of a wise care for health is bigger than merely adding to our personal happiness. To a large extent it determines the efficiency of our lives. Many a man learns after it is too late that he would have been fit for better and more work if he had always preserved the sane and sensible bearing toward the laws of health and life which experience teaches. No one in these days has any excuse for ignorance of the common practical rules of health. There are a good many popular books on the subject.—Hugh Black.

Her Stuttering Suitor

By LAWRENCE ALFRED CLAY

(Copyright, 1910, by the Associated Literary Press.)

Up to the age of 15 Roy Chester could talk as fast and as well as any youth in the land. Then the shadow fell. He found himself in love with a schoolgirl and began to stutter. The medical journals say that such cases are rare, but are to be met with occasionally.

Young Chester not only stuttered to the girl, but to his teacher, his parents and brothers and sisters and others. It was looked upon as a novelty at first; then it became serious. he could not say "dog" without hanging on to the "d." A doctor was called in. He examined throat, tongue, larynx and palate, and said it was a case where the nerves of bashfulness had overcome the nerves of cheek, or something to that effect, and he doubted if it ever could be cured. The only thing that would work a cure would be some great peril coming on the victim suddenly—so suddenly as to stun him for a moment. This would give a sort of back-action twist to certain nerves and muscles, and the stutter would take its departure.

The youth suffered as the years went on and he grew to manhood. That stutter kept him out of society. It kept him from making new acquaintances. It made a recluse of him. Many of his friends predicted that he would commit suicide before he reached man's estate, but this did not occur. The victim lived in hope. In fact, he went about looking for the great peril and sudden shock that was to effect a cure. Whether it would come in the shape of a policeman bearing down on him with his club, a reckless auto or a street car collision no one could say.

Roy Chester was 22 years old when he was induced to become a pupil in a stuttering school in a New England town. In that same town there was a young ladies' school, and in that school was Miss Minnie Schoolcraft, only daughter of the retired Colonel Schoolcraft of Beach Haven. Fate sent her to the postoffice one day when Mr. Chester was there. Fate caused her to ask him if the noon mail had gone out. Off came his hat, the blood rushing to his cheeks, and he stuttered out that he d-d-d-d-did—n't k-k-know.

It was the first time Miss Minnie had ever heard a man stutter. There was something captivating about it to her. It was original. It was unique. It was a hundred times better than a mere "don't know." She returned thanks and smiled.

When there are a great many good-looking girls going to a postoffice more or less frequently, there will be a good reason why more or less young men will drop into the same place. Thus it was in the New England town. Somehow they get introduced and become acquainted, and the world seems brighter all around.

In time Miss Schoolcraft and Mr. Chester became acquainted. He was bashfulness itself, and he had little to say. The school wasn't doing for him what he hoped. Even when he fell in love he realized that it was a hopeless case. It was not until after he had been assured over and over again that he had a delightful vernacular that he took courage. If that peril would only come and give him the longed-for sudden shock! He hoped for it when he lay down at night, and he hoped for it when he got up in the morning.

And then vacation came and he and Miss Minnie were separated. He could write without stuttering, and he did write. It was one of his letters that the girl's mother found and carried to her father. The colonel read every last word of it, and then called his daughter up to ask:

"Who is this fellow who writes love to you?"

"Papa, he's just the nicest young man you ever heard of," was the reply. "We are engaged."

"Never! You can't be! My consent has not been asked."

"But it will be some day. He wants to wait until his stuttering is better."

"Stutter! Do you mean to tell me he stutters?" thundered the colonel.

"Yes, papa, and it's just the nicest stutter you ever heard. I only wish you could hear him say: 'L-l-look at t-t-the s-s-s-s sot—sot—ting s-s-sun, l-l-l-love.' You would be positively charmed."

"Holy smoke! He stutters! He wants to be my son-in-law, and he stutters! Drop it! Drop it or I'll lock you up!"

"But, papa, the doctors told him long ago that if he met with a sudden—"

"I say drop it! I want my son-in-law to enter the army. How can a stutterer give the word of command? You write to him that you are done with this flirtation."

The command was fiat, and must be obeyed. That is, some daughters would have obeyed it. Miss Minnie kept on writing whenever she had a chance, and never even hinted that her father was a terrible man. Mr. Chester was informed by letter just what hotel in the Katskills the family was going to for six weeks, and he was invited to make his appearance, and love did what money couldn't have hired him to do. He journeyed down there. Miss Minnie was on the watch for him, while the doughty colonel wasn't. The latter was passing his days and evenings on the veranda telling war stories to interested listeners. Miss Minnie was truthful and ingenious. As she and young Mr. Chester sat on a bench in the twilight she asked:

"Roy, do you love me?"

He nodded his head and tightened his hold on her arm.

"You will have to ask pap if we can be married. Papa's an awful man. Have you the courage?"

She felt him shudder.

"Oh, but you must have. After breakfast in the morning you must meet him as he walks out."

"But I stut-tut-ter."

"I don't care for that. That was why I first fell in love with you. Just talk right up to papa. You must, or we can never be married. Come on and I will show him to you."

After breakfast next morning Colonel Schoolcraft walked out. So did Roy Chester. Love was doing what wild horses could not have accomplished. The colonel had proceeded as far as the spot called The Bowlders when he heard a step behind him and turned to see the young man. Roy was pale faced and his chin was shaking. Something warned the colonel that he stood face to face with the stutterer who wanted to be his son-in-law. He had given his orders and supposed the case had been dropped, but here was the young man.

"It's you, is it?" shouted the man of war as he raised his cane and put on a terrible look.

Roy made no reply. His hour of peril had come at last. The sudden shock was here. He knew that a queer feeling was creeping over him.

"S-s-s-speak s-s-s-sir!" commanded the colonel. "Are you not t-t-t-that stu—ut—terer?"

"No, sir!" calmly replied Roy.

The doctors had been right.

"B-b-but w-w-who are y-y-you, then?"

"Mr. Chester! Colonel, please don't get excited. I wish to have a few minutes' conversation with you."

"B-b-but w-w-what ails me?"

"You are somewhat excited, sir, and you stutter."

"B-b-but I—I—never s-s-stut—ut—ered before. W-w-what has h-h-happened to m-m-me?"

In 24 hours, by lying in bed and keeping very quiet and only speaking when positively necessary, the colonel recovered. Then young Mr. Chester was sent for. The talk lasted two hours, and at the end of it Miss Minnie was heard to exclaim:

"Oh, Roy, you had such a beautiful stutter, and now it's gone, but I think I can love you just the same. At least, I'll try my best!"

Mailed Letter in Waste Paper Box.

"Jist sendin' a few dollars to the folks at home," said Joseph Jenson, a young man of Berryville, Ky., as he dropped a letter containing a $20 bill into a waste paper receptacle.

"Sending money to the folks at home?" asked a bystander. "That's a funny way to mail a letter containing money.

"Why?"

"That's a waste paper box," said the bystander.

Joseph's long arm went into the red box with lightning-like rapidity. In a moment all the fruit skins and trash in the box were on the pavement. The valuable letter was recovered and the simple hearted countryman danced for joy until ordered by a policeman to "get busy and pick up that stuff."

WASTED A FORTUNE ON SKIN TROUBLE

"I began to have an itching over my whole body about seven years ago and this settled in my limbs, from the knee to the toes. I went to see a great many physicians, a matter which cost me a fortune, and after I noticed that I did not get any relief that way, I went for three years to the hospital. But they were unable to help me there, I used all the medicines that I could see but became worse and worse. I had an inflammation which made me almost crazy with pain. When I showed my foot to my friends they would get really frightened. I did not know what to do. I was so sick and had become so nervous that I positively lost all hope.

"I had seen the advertisement of the Cuticura Remedies a great many times, but could not make up my mind to buy them, for I had already used so many medicines. Finally I did decide to use the Cuticura Remedies and I tell you that I was never so pleased as when I noticed that, after having used two sets of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills, the entire inflammation had gone. I was completely cured. I should be only too glad if people with similar disease would come to me and find out the truth. I would only recommend them to use Cuticura. Obituary.

James W. Platter was born in DeKalb County, Ind., October 11th. 1836, and grew to manhood in the county where he was born. He was united in marriage with Harriet Reaser, Dec. 23rd. 1859. To them were born four sons, one of whom Ulysses S., died April 2nd. 1884. That he was reared, amid the scenes of pioneer life, and shared as a child, in the privations incident to the early settlers of this country is evident, when he was the first white male child born in the county, and there were only eight families then resident in the county. Industrious and frugal he shared in the development of the beautiful farms that obtain, and lived to see the wilderness blossom as the rose. He was elected and served as commissioner of his native county. About the year 1878, under the ministry of Rev. Wm. Butler, he gave himself to the service of the Lord, and joined the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, at Newville, where he retained his membership these years. He seemed to have a premonition when taken sick a few weeks ago, that he would not recover and so expressed himself. He departed this life Oct. 12th., 1910, aged 74 years, and 1 day. He leaves to deplore their loss, wife, three sons, Cornelius of Auburn; Arthur W., and John E., one sister, Mrs. Nancy Reaser of Woodburn, Ind.; 10 grandchildren, 2 great grandchildren, and many friends and acquaintances. Funeral services from the U. B. church at Newville, Saturday, conducted by Rev. J. W. Lilly, assisted by Rev. H. C. Beauchamp of Hicksville. Elza Kinsey, funeral director.

The Spencerville High School Base Ball Team crossed bats with the Harlan High School Team at Harlan, last Saturday on the North Side Diamond. Despite the one-sided score the game was interesting and lively. Spencerville took the lead by three scores in the first inning, adding two in the third and one in the fifth, four in the eighth and two in the ninth. Harlan scored one in the fifth on a passed ball and one each in the seventh and ninth. Harlan lost the game by errors while the Spencerville boys played an almost errorless game. The score was 12-3. The boys received excellent treatment at the hands of the Harlan boys and every courtesy will be extended to them upon their visit to our town two weeks hence.

Smashed Up.

Both Buggy and Bottles.

Saturday evening, between eight and nine o'clock the people of south main street were startled by the sound of racing horses, a terrible crash and women's shrieks and screams. Quickly seeking the cause, they saw in the street a confused huddle of buggies and people. Beside an overturned, splintered and horseless buggy a woman was holding the head of a seemingly lifeless man, and crying wildly, "Neff! Oh Neff! Oh! Neff! Neff!" A second woman (we cannot say ladies for fear of a breach of propriety) was going here and there distractedly doing nothing. A rather tall man was standing with hands limply at his side and a vacant stare in his eyes and looking exactly as if he had no more mind than the telephone post near, and the surrounding evidence proved that the comparison was most appropriate. In answer to the appeal for help a doctor was summoned and the "dead" man was dragged from his bed of broken beer bottles and placed on the grass. A bystander touched a bottle with his foot and remarked something like, "This tells." This remark was unfortunate for it caused the women to 'assume' some dignity and they snapped that "this was a free country" and that it was nobody's business. She said, "when our husbands go, we go with them and everything is all right," (the remark was self evident.) They immediately became reticent and offered no explanations, were plainly desirous their identity should not be known and were careful not to commit themselves in any way. They mumbled to themselves about this being an affair for the Spencerville gossipers and insinuated a lack of Spencerville hospitality.

At the sound of a bottle the "dead" man came to life directly and they put him in the buggy and after gathering up the unbroken bottles they drove away, leaving the broken glass in the road for automobiles. Very likely they forgot them, so the people kindly gathered up the pieces and put them in the shattered buggy.

This affair is something for the gossipers, some of the features were novel in the extreme. Here is a new excuse, wives, if you can drink as much of it as your husbands go with them to chaperon them. It is said they live near Newville. The man addressed as Neff was tall, dark complected and wore glasses, and the woman who was so concerned about him was tall and rather heavy. The one woman was addressed as Daisy and the other as Effie. They had a little boy about six years old with them. If in after years this same boy follows in the footsteps of his parents, who will be to blame? A Spencerville Gossiper.

WHY NEW ORLEANS

CITY IS LOGICAL POINT FOR WORLD'S PANAMA EXPOSITION.

Its Geographical Position and Many Other Considerations Mark It as Most Suitable Spot for Dedication of Great Work.

Public sentiment has decided that the completion of the Panama Canal in 1915 shall be celebrated with a great International Exposition in which all the nations of the world may participate; and the question of where this Exposition is to be held will be settled by Congress at its approaching session.

New Orleans and San Francisco are contesting for the honor of holding this Exposition, and both cities have guaranteed immense sums of money as an evidence of their ability to finance so great an enterprise.

An Exposition worthy of the term "World's Fair," such as New Orleans proposes to build, will be a great educational movement. Its success as such, however, will depend entirely upon the percentage of our population who can secure its educational advantages, this in turn, depends upon its location, as the time in traveling to and from the Exposition, and the cost in railroad and Pullman fares, are the most important factors.

Considering these matters, New Orleans' claims to being the "Logical Point" for this Panama Exposition, seem to be fully substantiated by the following facts:—

New Orleans is 500 miles from the center of population in the United States. San Francisco is 2,500 miles distant therefrom.

Within a radius of 500 miles from New Orleans there are 17,500,000 people. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 2,000,000.

Within a radius of 1,000 miles from New Orleans, there are 65,000,000. Within the same radius from San Francisco there are only 6,000,000.

At an average of 900 miles from New Orleans, there are 70 of our principal cities with a combined population of 20,000,000. Averaging 900 miles from San Francisco there are only 8 large cities, with a combined population of just 1,000,000. The average distance of all these cities to New Orleans is 792 miles,—to San Francisco 2,407 miles.

Over 75 per cent. of the people of the United States could go to an Exposition there at an average expense for railroad fare of $12.50, as against an average of $37.50 to the Pacific Coast; and for several millions of our people, the Pullman fare and Dining Car expenses alone, for a trip to San Francisco, would amount to more than all their transportation expenses for a trip to New Orleans.

This is an important public question to be settled by Congress at the session which convenes in December.

Many of our readers will wish to visit this World's Panama Exposition, and if held in New Orleans a great many more could spare the time and money for the trip than could go to San Francisco. Therefore, we urge our readers to write to the two senators from this State and the congressman from this district, requesting them to support New Orleans in the contest.

Mrs. Briggs' Speech.

If brevity is the soul of wit, one of the wittiest speeches on record was made by a woman. Mrs. Briggs lived in the northern part of Indiana, a long distance from any village. Hearing that the Rev. Mr. Goodwin was to preach in a township some twenty miles distant, she resolved to be present, and as no other way offered, she walked the twenty miles.

The pastor heard of this, and was so pleased at the appreciation which it showed that at the close of the sermon he mentioned the fact to the congregation, and called upon Mrs. Briggs to tell them how she came.

Rising slowly, she looked over the audience with great solemnity, and said:

"I hoofed it."

Then she sat down again.—Youth's Companion.

PUZZLE OF DOVETAIL JOINT

Simple But Very Ingenious Example in Joinery Is Shown in Illustration—How Done.

A simple but very ingenious example in joinery is illustrated. In the finished piece, Fig. 1, the dovetail appears on each side of the square stick of wood, the illustration, of course, shows only two sides, the other two are identical. The joint is separable and each part is solid and of one piece, says Popular Mechanics. In making, take two pieces of wood, preferably of contrasting colors, such as cherry and walnut or mahogany and boxwood, about 1½ inches square and of any length desired. Cut the dovetail on one end of each stick as shown in Fig. 2, drive together and then plane off the triangular corners marked A. The end of each piece after the dovetails are cut appear as shown in Fig. 3, the lines marking the path of the dovetail through the stick.

LIFTING MAN WITH FINGERS

Experiment as Instructive as Astonishing—Illustration Shows How It Is Done.

This experiment is as instructive as it is astonishing. Two persons place the index finger of both hands under the soles of the feet of the man to be operated upon. Two more place their outstretched fingers, as shown in our illustration, under the elbows, and one of these places his finger under the man's chin. At a signal they all lift, and, to everybody's astonishment, the person will be easily raised above the ground.

BOYS PLAY "LAST ACROSS"

Juvenile Game Causes London Police Authorities Much Trouble—Three Lads Arrested.

The London police are having their own troubles in endeavoring to break up the juvenile game of "last across."

It exists in New York city, though possibly under another name. When King George recently visited the London hospital he chatted with a small boy in one of the wards, and, showing his accurate knowledge of the youth of today, asked the little patient if he was there as the result of playing "last across."

The game with which drivers of spirited horses, cyclists and automobilists are painfully familiar is very simple. A number of boys select an approaching vehicle and deliberately get in its way. The boy who crossed before it and is the last to step aside wins the game.

Three Grautham youngsters tried to add a novelty a few days ago by playing it before a passenger train on the Great Northern line. The engine driver blew the whistle frantically, but as the lads did not move he stopped the train. Then the boys took to flight, but they were caught. The magistrate took a hand by imposing on each prisoner a fine of seven shillings and six pence, at the same time regretting that he could not add an old-fashioned birch whipping to each penalty.

Not the Answer Expected.

A rather pompous looking deacon was endeavoring to impress upon the young minds of a class of boys the importance of living a Christian life.

"Why do people call me a Christian, children?" he asked, standing very erect, and smiling down upon them.

A moment's pause, then a shrill little voice was heard to say:

"Cause they don't know you."

LIFTING TABLE WITH HAND

Done by Means of Broad Ring With Slit in It and Small Nail in Object Lifted.

A most weird stunt is that of lifting a table, or similar object, with the palm of the hand, simply placed on the smooth top. The trick is easily performed by taking a plain band ring, and with the edge of a thin file, make a narrow slit half way through it.

Drive a shingle nail into the top of an old table until only about one-quarter of an inch of it sticks up.

Now, while passing your hand over the table, find the nail, and, slipping the slit in the ring over the head of the nail, lift up with arms extended, and your audience will be astonished.

ORIGIN OF "SUCKER STATE"

Farmers Followed Example of Variety of Fish—Went Up Stream in Spring, Down in Fall.

"The Sucker State"—this is the nickname of Illinois, as all Wide-Awakers doubtless know. But the curious circumstances out of which the appellation grew are now probably forgotten by even the oldest residents of the state. The record left by the early settlers of the origin of the name is as follows:

It was in the southern part of the state that the earliest homeseekers built their villages and laid out their little farms. Here the land was so rich that with slight labor an abundant crop was yielded each year. But one great drawback confronted the people. Although they were able to raise great quantities of grain and vegetables, they could find no way to carry to a suitable market this wealth of produce which they wished to exchange for a wealth of silver. The distance to the nearest market of any size was too great to be covered by wagon, and there were in those days, of course, no railroads.

Many articles which these brave pioneers needed badly could be procured only for money. Accordingly in order to save a little cash for times of need, all who were able would leave their farms every spring and go to the Galena lead mines, where they would work during the summer. Then in the fall they would return to their farms.

Now this custom of the Illinois formers reminded the people of the habits of a variety of fish called suckers, which always go up stream in the spring and down stream in the fall. Accordingly, by the freakish law which governs the choice of nicknames, the Illinois settlers began to be known as "suckers." The name stuck, as nicknames usually do, and finally the state itself came to be known as the Sucker state and its citizens as Suckers.

OLD GAME IS INSTRUCTIVE

Boys and Girls Given Opportunity to Display Their Talent in Acting and Guessing.

One of the best of the old games, giving opportunity to display talent in acting and ingenuity in selecting words difficult to guess.

The players are divided into two parties, one-half going out of the room. In their absence the others choose a word which those outside are to guess. When the absent party are recalled they are told some word with which the chosen one will rhyme. It is then their business to act, in dumb show, the word which they guess may be the chosen one. For this purpose they go out of the room again to consider and decide upon the word they think it may be and plan how it shall be acted. This may be performed by the whole party, or by one or two selected from the number.

For instance, if the rhyming word is "speed," the players imagine the real word to be "seed," and may come in and go through the motions of sowing seed in a field; or "read," when they may all take books and pretend to be deep in study. Neither party may speak, but if the word acted is not the right one the spectators hiss, and the players retire and decide upon another word and illustration. Should they guess correctly their success is greeted by clapping of hands, and the parties change places.

A Rule for Every Day.

MONDAY—Never put off till to-morrow what you can do to-day.
TUESDAY—Never trouble another for what you can do yourself.
WEDNESDAY—Never spend money before you have it.
THURSDAY—Never buy what you do not need because it is a bargain.
FRIDAY—Never indulge in too much food.
SATURDAY—Never indulge in false pride.
SUNDAY—Never be afraid to say "No" when you are tempted.

DOLLY'S DILEMMA

By STACY E. BAKER

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

The train, with a despondent wail, disappeared down twin lines of polished steel, and the slim girl who had been the only passenger scheduled for that deserted spot watched its departure with a heavy heart. This seemed to sever the last tie binding her to the happy past.

She gazed curiously about her. The little hut of a station was brazenly unconscious of paint, and the sultry summer air was so still that the dull droning of a bee came plain to her from across the daisy-cluttered fields.

The new arrival was a slight creature, dressed with exquisite taste, but with an expression in her dark eyes that told of recent tragedy. A nomad breeze, springing into sudden life, teased at the wavy wisps of her brown hair.

The girl, anxious and seemingly curious, stared first up and then down the dusty pike. At last the whirr of a rapidly approaching automobile came to her ears, and a great, yellow machine hurried around a distant bent, slowing suddenly as it came toward her.

"Is this Dolly?" asked a girlish voice, and a radiant young person sprang from the machine.

She advanced, both hands outstretched.

Wonderingly, the solitary passenger inventoried this apparition. "Why—yes," she hesitated. "But—"

"Oh, I know you didn't expect me," came from the stranger. Slim fingers carelessly reattaching a breeze-blown curl to a mass as yellow as the hearts of the daisies in the adjoining fields. "I'm Molly, you know. I suppose you have heard of me?"

Truthful politeness compelled the waiting one to ignore the question. "Yes, I am Dolly," she evaded, hurriedly. "As a matter of fact, I didn't know who would come for me, but—but I hardly expected—"

"And So This Is Dolly."

"You hardly expected Jack's car to be on the job," came laughingly from the interrupting maid. "He sent it down last week, you know. We expect him by any train."

The puzzled look again crept into the pilgrim's eyes, but she brought forth a suit case from where the porter had placed it, and climbed into the machine. The girl with the blue eyes and the red-flecked cheeks entered after her, and, with a quick turn of the wheel, reversed the car and sped it back over the road down which it had come. I am sure you will like this place," she vociferated. "All the comforts of the city, you know, with breathing space, and nice roomy quarters. Jack's thoroughbreds are here now. Do you ride?"

"I—I—why, yes," came rather stupidly from Dolly. "But, really, I don't understand. There must be some mistake—"

"Not a bit of it," broke in the other. "Jack is a regular crank on horses, though he probably hasn't told you about his little fads and fancies.

The other was silent.

"Mother is all for the simple life," the little blonde rattled on. "One can hardly coax her into the city any more."

Past apple orchards and well kept fields of growing grain flashed the great machine. Farm houses and huge barns sprung into view beside the road, and as speedily flung themselves behind.

Suddenly a great mansion with a marvelous lawn clothed with dainty shrubbery and flowers appeared before them. Instantly the pace of the car adjusted itself to a lumbering crawl.

"That's our place," announced the driver. "Mother doesn't like to have me scorch, so I just canter in under the wire. She would puncture all of the tires if she imagined that I pulled you in at the pace we have been coming!"

The machine turned in at an open iron gate and crept up a white pebbled path to a spacious porch. An elderly, white-haired woman, dressed in simple taste, stepped out to greet them.

"And so this is Dolly," she cried, impulsively taking both hands in her own. "Jack has told me so much about you that I feel that I know you already. I am sure that we shall like you—and we want you to like us. Did this slang-using, harum-scarum"—she indicated Mollie with a wave of her hand—"allow you to get a word in edgeways on your trip here? She's an inveterate talker."

"I think there is some mistake—" began the new arrival, determinedly.

"Not a bit of it," laughingly interrupted the elder woman. "She is positively a rattle head. When you know her better you will have to acknowledge it. Now come in—do—and Tom will bring in your suit case as soon as he comes. I want to show you your room.

Dazedly the girl followed—dazed because she didn't the least understand this reception. "Jack," and "Tom"—who were they? Her coming out to the home of this unknown friend had been a matter of complying with the wishes of her dead father. Until the estate was adjusted and her inheritance declared she was to stay here. No one among her acquaintances seemed to know the Durhams of Lowville township. She had but the kind invitation to come in answer to her own little letter telling of her father's insistent wish. Now she was here, and these people seemed to be under the impression that she knew their "Jack." There was some embarrasing mistake.

"This is your room," the elderly woman was saying. "Remember, please, that you are just the same as one of the family."

"Oh, my dear." She suddenly drew the girl to her, and, with tears in her eyes, kissed her. "I can't tell you how glad I am that Jack is to marry such a nice girl." Before the girl could say a word she had closed the door softly behind her and was gone.

To marry Jack!

The truth suddenly flashed home to the girl. She had been taken by Mollie for some other Dolly, who was evidently unknown, but expected, and who was the fiancee of the much-talked-of Jack. These people were not the Durhams.

With a little gasp of horror at the predicament she now found herself in, the girl sprang to the door and opened it with the intention of calling her hostess back and explaining. Too late! She was gone. An unusually tall, but well proportioned youth suddenly appeared at the end of the hall and swung toward her, bearing her suit case in his hand.

The girl reddened as she caught her first glimpse of the face of the young giant.

"You!" she ejaculated.

For the first time the youth raised his eyes. "Why—why—" he said, "I'll be darned if it isn't little Dolly Johnson." He carelessly flung down the burden and grasped the hand of the girl in a firm clasp. "I didn't even know old Jack knew you," he said. "Of course, I'm no end glad, but—" he glanced at her from reproachful eyes—"I think you should have told me."

The girl laughed almost hysterically. "Oh, you great, blonde giant," she cried, holding convulsively to the hand of the youth. "You don't understand! You never did understand women, Tom. You never will! To think that I should find you here. You—of all people!"

"I thought you knew that my folks lived near Lenoxville," interrupted the youth. "Jack is my brother, you know, but, really, I don't understand—yet."

Dolly Johnson elucidated.

"The Durhams live only half a mile from here," explained Tom eagerly at the completion of the story. "I 'n take you over after lunch, or—or oh, dearest, why can't you reconsider that refusal and stay here as my fiancee?" His great arms were suddenly about her. It was hard for the orphaned girl to ignore such protection. She stayed.

Pity the Clocks.

Postmaster General Hitchcock, on his arrival in New York on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, said he would at once resume the organization of the post office savings banks.

"This work," he added, "must be conducted carefully and scientifically. You can't establish postal savings banks as the cobbler of my native Amherst repaired clocks.

"A visitor to the cobbler's shop noticed one day a barrel half full of tiny brass cogwheels.

"'Why,' he said, 'what are all those for?'

"'Goodness knows,' answered the cobbler, with a careless laugh. 'I get about a cupful out of every clock I mend.'"

Her Rule of Three.

Professor McGoosie—It is astonishing how little the young people of the present day know of mathematics. For example, Miss Tartun—or you, Mr. Sparks—do you remember what the rule of three is?

Miss Tartun—O, yes, professor; I haven't forgotten that, I think. "Three is a crowd." That right?

Point of Superiority.

Manhattan—You must admit that New Yorkers are the best-dressed men in the world.

Lakefront—Well, perhaps they are—but it is universally acknowledged that Chicago produces the best-dressed beef.

HER PHYSICIAN APPROVES

Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sabattus, Maine.—"You told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills before child-birth, and we are all surprised to see how much good it did. My physician said 'Without doubt it was the Compound that helped you.' I thank you for your kindness in advising me and give you full permission to use my name in your testimonials."—Mrs. H. W. MITCHELL, Box 3, Sabattus, Me.

Another Woman Helped.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health and strength, and proved worth mountains of gold to me. For the sake of other suffering women I am willing you should publish my letter."—Mrs. CHARLES BARCLAY, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Gladys Wise—Keep right on; I'll consider your proposal and have my answer ready by the time you have gotten it out of your system.

A Good Job.

Jacob H. Schiff, at a dinner on the yacht Ramona, condemned a concern that had gone up.

"Straight business methods are the only ones," he said. "There is a moral in the receiver story.

"A man, you know, said one day to a little boy:

"'Well, Tommy, what are you going to be when you grow up?'

"'A receiver, sir,' Tommy answered promptly. 'Ever since pa's been a receiver we've had champagne for dinner and two automobiles.'"

"Now, can you build me a first-class comedy around that?"

DAME NATURE HINTS

When the Food Is Not Suited.

When Nature gives her signal that something is wrong it is generally with the food. The old Dame is always faithful and one should act at once.

To put off the change is to risk that which may be irreparable. An Arizona man says:

"For years I could not safely eat any breakfast. I tried various kinds of breakfast food, but they were all soft, starchy messes which gave me distressing headaches. I drank strong coffee, too, which appeared to benefit me at the time, but added to the headaches afterwards. Toast and coffee were no better, for I found the toast very constipating.

"A friend persuaded me to quit the old coffee and the starchy breakfast foods, and use Postum and Grape-Nuts instead. I shall never regret taking his advice. I began using them three months ago.

"The change they have worked in me is wonderful. I now have no more of the distressing sensations in my stomach after eating, and I never have headaches. I have gained 12 pounds in weight and feel better in every way.

"Grape-Nuts make a delicious as well as a nutritious dish, and I find that Postum is easily digested and never produces dyspepsia symptoms."

"There's a Reason."

A FEW THINGS.

George Barnes

Reggy—Bah Jove, I'd like to chastise those blawsted reporters!

Cyril—Why so?

Reggy—We have been insulted. The other day the firemen rescued us fellows from the burning clubhouse, and now the reporters have the account headed, "A Few Things Saved, but Nothing of Value."

Managing a Husband.

Men are like children; they want managing, although you must never let them dream that you think so. No child likes to be ordered about, no man will endure coercion. But managing! It is an art so subtle, so elusive, that few women understand even the rudiments of it. Sisters mine, let us reason together, says Woman's Life. In every human being there is a spark of the divine; it is yours to fan that spark into a flame—that is managing a man—it is to get the very best out of him there is to have, and not two women in ten can do it.

Do not think that there is anything unworthy in managing a man—to bring out the best is a high vocation. Only let us see to it that we are worthy of it. There are women who have made angels of men, but at the cost of their own divinity. There is room for more than one unselfish person in a family.

Childish Reasoning.

"Look at the brownies, papa!" exclaimed a little miss as she gazed upward at a Wall street skyscraper.

"They are not brownies, dearie," replied papa. "They are big men, like me, but they look so tiny because they are so high."

"If they were twice as high, would they look twice as small?" she asked, showing the mathematical turn not unnatural in the offspring of a successful broker.

Papa answered "Yes."

She made a quick calculation and remarked: "They won't amount to much when they get to heaven, will they?"

PAROLE MODEL FOR PRISON CONGRESS

Hoosier Delegates Elated at Action of Assembly.

LAWS ARE RECOMMENDED

Says Indiana Has Best Parole and Sentence Laws of Any State and Better Than Any Foreign Country.

Indianapolis.—The delegates from Indiana to the international prison congress are greatly elated over the action of the congress in adopting resolutions with respect to the parole system and the indeterminate sentences that are based on the parole and indeterminate sentence laws of Indiana. The resolutions had to receive the approval of the 46 countries represented, and under the circumstances do not call for reforms as far advanced as those in Indiana.

The delegates to the international congress have said repeatedly since they reached Washington, D. C., that as far as their observation has gone Indiana not only has the best parole and sentence laws of any state in the United States, but better than any foreign country.

Many of the foreign delegates are going home to recommend parole laws based on the Indiana system. Indiana has occupied a prominent place in the congress. Amos W. Butler, secretary of the board of state charities, and president of the American Prison congress, has been one of the most active workers in the international congress. To him was referred the work of summarizing the various addresses on the parole system and of presenting to the congress a resolution embodying its views.

Mr. Butler was elected a vice-president of the international congress. Mrs. Amos W. Butler and Mrs. John B. Elam gave a luncheon at the New Willard for the foreign women delegates to the congress.

Hurty's High School Creed.

Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the state board of health, has prepared the following resolutions, which he will have printed on cards for distribution among students of high schools, which he will address during the current school year, the name, "High School Creed," having been selected to head the list:

1. The body is the temple of the soul, and I will study it.
2. I will take good care of my body.
3. I will live in the fresh air as much as I can.
4. I will be regular and temperate in my habits.
5. I will eat only plain, well-cooked food, and will let all appetite stimulants alone.
6. I will not chew gum and will not buy all-day suckers.
7. I will be a fresh air crank.

"If the high school boy or girl adopts that creed and lives up to it," said the secretary, "a very large percentage of sickness among high school pupils will be avoided."

Patents for Indiana Inventors.

Patents have been issued to Indianians as follows: Charles A. Barnes, Sr., Greenfield, telephone receiver handle; Alvah L. Bingham, Muncie, glass working machine; Charles A. Carlson, Kokomo, needle awl; Archer E. Clifton and W. W. Preston, Connersville, vacuum cleaner; David W. Conard, Unionville, shoe tie; Myron Dickson, Martinsville, try square; Hermann W. Fachmann, Indianapolis, game; Kenneth M. Gant, Indianapolis, change speed mechanism; Fredreick H. Hoenk, Evansville, tension indicator for sewing machines; Ladislaus Jakab, South Bend, cuspidor; Leroy Kercher, Roann, excavating and loading machine; James L. Masters, Little, axle lubricator; Omar F. Neff, Milford, attachment for automobiles; Asa L. Parrish, Elkhart, making paper bags; George M. Schebler, Indianapolis, carbureter; Joseph K. Sharpe, Jr., Indianapolis, pneumatic stacker; William W. Winger, Walcott, draft appliance.

Foster Parents Cleared.

W. S. Reynolds, state agent for dependent children, filed with the board of county commissioners of Clark county, at the regular session, a claim for $55 on account of the funeral of Ruth Wents, the fifteen-year-old child who committed suicide by hanging herself at the home of her foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Westman, 2811 Columbia avenue, Indianapolis, September 18, 1910. The claim was laid over for a month. The child was sent to the Jeffersonville Orphans' home when her stepfather was committed to prison, two years ago, and last spring she was placed with the Indianapolis family.

Building Trades Organize.

The building trades craft of Indiana has formed a state organization and will meet in annual convention in Indianapolis December 4. The preliminary steps toward a state organization were taken a few days ago at the meeting of the Indiana State Federation of Labor and the following officers were elected: State president, J. B. Etchison of Indianapolis; state secretary-treasurer, W. T. Gwin of Hammond; first vice-president, John Coakley of Evansville; second vice-president, Henry Austin of Goshen.

Big Sum Paid Back.

A second report filed by the state board of accounts with the governor shows that, to date, officials found short in their accounts by field examiners in the employ of the state board have reimbursed the treasuries of their respective corporations in the total sum of $28,407.91 in actual cash turned in. The preceding report, several weeks ago, showed $21,482.61 paid in.

The report showed the following voluntary payments: Charles E. Lambert, Center township, Delaware county, $4,291.14; Ed. Fisher, Polk township, Huntington county, $762.43; J. R. Rader, Washington township, Putnam county, $476.69; E. C. Caldwell, Washington township, Wayne county, $264.43; N. V. Hodson, town trustee of Shirley, $197.70; J. T. Adkins, town trustee of English, $259.96; F. T. Hammond, town trustee of English, $18.53; W. F. Richards, town trustee of the same place, $24.62.

All except Lambert paid in full the charges made by the examiners. In the case of Lambert he was not convinced that he owed all that had been charged back against him, and paid only that which he acknowledged he owed.

The state board has prepared to file with the governor an additional list of present and former officials who have not paid up according to the reports of the examiners. These reports will be certified by the governor, on receipt, to the attorney general, whose duty it is under the law to bring action to collect.

Annual Meeting of State Federation.

The twenty-fifth annual convention of the state Federation of Labor opened at Lafayette.

Cordial greetings were extended at the opening session by the mayor, the presidents of the Merchants', Young Business Men's and other commercial associations of the city, and Sidney H. Saltzgaber, president of the Central Labor union and chairman of the entertainment committee, welcomed the delgates on behalf of the union workingmen of Lafayette.

When President John Hughes of Indianapolis called the convention to order, practically every city of importance in the state was represented. The session opened with an invocation by Rev. Oscar R. McKay, pastor of the First Baptist church. After the addresses of greeting, President John Hughes thanked the city's representatives and the convention then proceeded to business.

It developed at the sessions that the fight for the 1911 convention will be between Fort Wayne and Terre Haute. Both cities have sent hundreds of badges to be worn by delegates. The contest for officers is lively. Friends of John Hughes, now president, say he will be re-elected, although they realize that a fight will be made against him. The report of the resolutions committee is also sure to arouse some feeling and result in a divided vote.

Auditor Sets Time Limit.

Officials of the Indiana Industrial Life Insurance company of Terre Haute will have a specified time, according to John C. Billheimer, auditor of state, to correct irregularities in connection with $26,000 worth of mortgage securities filed in his office by the concern. If the adjustment is not made by the time given, Mr. Billheimer says, action to throw the concern into the hands of a receiver will be taken. It was found by the auditor that the company's securities had been merely lent by land owners for the purpose of providing securities and that while protecting the policy holders, they were not satisfactory as representing the actual financial condition of the company.

Mr. Billheimer held an inquiry in Terre Haute concerning substitution of properly drawn securities for the mortgages offered by the company, and received the assurance of the officers and stockholders, he said, that all adjustments would be made according to his advice. Thirty-five stockholders were present at the inquiry and they agreed, Mr. Billheimer said, to put in additional money and to see that the affairs of the concern, which is a prosperous one, are made to comply with the state law in every particular.

Confers With Billheimer.

Following a visit to Terre Haute by Auditor of State John C. Billheimer and John Ashby, actuary in the insurance department, to investigate affairs of the Indiana Industrial Life Insurance company, P. B. Garrott, general manager of the company, was in conference with Mr. Billheimer and Mr. Ashby at the statehouse. Dr. W. R. Mattox of Terre Haute, representing the stockholders who made the complaint, and others were present. Mr. Billheimer, while recognising everything has been quite regular in the management of the company, said he believed a satisfactory reorganization of affairs could be effected. If any hitch in the plans of the auditor occur a receiver will probably be asked.

Incorporations.

Articles of incorporation were filed with the secretary of state as follows:

The Supreme Lodge Entertainment association (colored), Indianapolis; $5,000; object, to entertain the supreme lodge, K. of P.; incorporators, George P. Stewart, J. H. Ward, William H. Porter.

The name of the Maxwell-Briscoe-Newby company, Newcastle, has been changed by a decree of the circuit court of Henry county to that of the United Motor Newcastle company.

STATE BOARD BOOKS ARE EXAMINED

Difference Between Vouchers and Corresponding Checks.

SHORTAGE IS REPORTED

Allege John T. Spillman, Former Trustee of Clinton Township, Decatur County, Owes $839.15—Declares Accounts Twisted.

Indianapolis.—Not only is John T. Spillman, former trustee of Clinton township, Decatur county, charged with owing the township $839, but the field examiners from the state board of accounts, who inspected his books, allege there is a difference between vouchers and corresponding checks on banks, issued during his administration, of $1,067.56. Checks given on the township depository, for which no vouchers were found, amounted to $7,529.71 and vouchers given by former Trustee Spillman, during the four years of office, for which no checks were found, amounted to $440.65, it is charged.

Joseph E. Sherman and Joseph C. Lockwood, who made the examination, have charged Mr. Spillman with $103.70, representing the amount due the township at the close of the 1905 business, $604.23 for 1906, $67 for 1907 and $64.22 for 1908.

The examiners allege Mr. Spillman carried his personal and the township banking accounts together. Of the $103.70, charged against Mr. Spillman in 1905, $93.30 was a payment made to his predecessor, James A. Meek, for having paid teachers without vouchers, the examiners allege. The total charge against the former trustee of $604.23, as the result of the 1906 business, is explained as errors in footing, credits on vouchers for which no money was paid and excess payments to teachers and the advisory board. It is alleged that Spillman overpaid E. M. Moulton, a teacher, $67 in 1907.

The examiners make no charges against Spillman in connection with the alleged difference between vouchers and corresponding checks, the checks for which, it is said, no vouchers were found and the vouchers for which the examiners say they found no checks.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Evansville.—Self-defense will be the plea of Mrs. Zorah Eblen of Henderson, Ky., in her trial for killing her husband, Bain W. Eblen, acording to an outline of the case in the first day's hearing of evidence at Henderson. Mrs. Eblen shot and killed her husband last May, saying she had surprised him with a servant.

South Bend.—The annual reunion of the "Bloody" Ninth Indiana Volunteers, which was the first Indiana regiment to cross the Ohio river during the Civil war, opened in South Bend with 100 survivors present. Among those here are Col. I. C. V. Suman, Valparaiso, president; Maj. James D. Braden, Logansport.

Evansville.—Clear, cool weather and a rapid emptying of the flooded bayous and uplands in southwestern Indiana produced a marked change in the flood aspect and within forty-eight hours it is expected most of the water which fell in the 11-inch rain will be in the Ohio river, running to the gulf.

Scottsburg.—Section men are patrolling the tracks of the Pennsylvania railroad and of the I. & L. Traction company. With rain still falling, much trouble is expected. Thousands of acres of bottom farm lands are under from two to twenty feet of water, which is still rising rapidly.

Vincennes.—H. L. McDonald, an oil operator, was appointed administrator of the estate of the late Charles Edward Gibson under bond of $75,000 by the Knox circuit court. The appointment was made shortly after McDonald's return from Cambridge, O., where he attended the funeral.

Valparaiso. — Henry Shinabarger, seven years old, while on his way to school, was struck by a Pennsylvania fast train and instantly killed. Three little companions were saved by being pushed off the track by a freight brakeman.

Laporte. — Socialists of Laporte county have issued a call for a convention to be held to nominate a county ticket. This will be the first ticket put in the local field by the party.

South Bend.—Miss Carrie Shafer of South Bend, who in search of health went west a few weeks ago, is reported to have committed suicide at Ocean Park, Cal., by throwing herself into the Pacific.

South Bend.—According to a dispatch received here from Kankakee Ill., John A. Oglesbey of South Bend formerly a member of the law firm of Oglesbey, Oglesbey & Oglesbey of Tipton, was indicted on the charge of murdering Frank Silver Kanouse also of South Bend, at Kankakee, last month. Kanouse eloped from South Bend with Oglesbey's wife, and the latter, following the couple, found Kanouse in a Kankakee saloon, shooting him on sight. Oglesbey appears little concerned over the outcome of his case, and passes the time playing cars and joking with other prisoners.

Temporary Heat Quickly

Did you ever stop to think of the many ways in which a perfect oil heater is of value? If you want to sleep with your window open in winter, you can get sufficient heat from an oil heater while you undress at night, and then turn it off. Apply a match in the morning, when you get out of bed, and you have heat while you dress.

Those who have to eat an early breakfast before the stove is radiating heat can get immediate warmth from an oil heater, and then turn it off.

The girl who practices on the piano in a cold room in the morning can have warmth from an oil heater while she plays, and then turn it off.

The member of the family who has to walk the floor on a cold winter's night with a restless baby can get temporary heat with an oil heater, and then turn it off. The

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Absolutely smokeless and odorless

is invaluable in its capacity of quickly giving heat. Apply a match and it is immediately at work. It will burn for nine hours without refilling. It is safe, smokeless and odorless. It has a damper top and a cool handle. An indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font.

It has an automatic-locking flame spreader which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that the wick can be cleaned in an instant.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, and can be quickly unscrewed for rewicking. Finished in japan or nickel, strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

HOW ABOUT NEW FENCE?

It's not often that you buy fence, and when you do you want to be sure that you're getting the best.

There's only one best -- that's AMERICAN FENCE.

AMERICAN FENCE is ideal in structural and economical features, as it furnishes the greatest strength and most thorough protection with the least material and expense.

It is made of high-grade, hard, stiff fence steel. It is inspected three times before leaving the factory, and only the most skilled workmen are engaged in its manufacture.

Millions of dollars are made and saved on well fenced farms, where the like amounts are annually lost on unfenced lands. For the successful rotation of crops and economical growing of stock, well-fenced and comparatively small fields are absolutely necessary to secure the best results.

You want the best fence for your farm. You will find just what you want in AMERICAN FENCE.

Prohibition Column.

The Panama Canal will cost, it is anticipated, nearly $400,000,000 With the money paid for drink each year nearly five such canals could be completely paid for.

The utterances of Kern and Beveridge on the liquor question are so identical as to forcibly remind us again of the old adage that "great minds run in the same channel."

Can This Be True?

Recently in conversation with a gentleman, the subject of Local Option and Prohibition came up. The question was asked me what the prohibition of the liquor business meant? I said that what the prohibition party meant was to prohibit the manufacture and sale for beverage purposes. The gentleman said to me that you could never get prohibition because nine men out of ten want liquor to drink and as long as a majority want that liquor, just that long you can not stop the making and drinking He said that he knew many men who voted in the local option election to put out the saloons from the county, keep and drink liquors, he says how are you going to stop people from drinking when any school boy can write a letter and send it to a brewery or wholesale house and have a gallon of whiskey or a case of beer shipped right to him.

I wish to say this, that as long as the temperance people continue to keep the friends of the liquor traffic in power, just that long we will have liquor sold promiscuously, sold to and drank by boys and men. Our temperance people, or a majority of them are a set of cowards, for it is said in a little verse like this:

"He is a coward who is afraid to be,
In the right with two or three."

Now the man who says he wants to see the liquor traffic die and is afraid to step out of the old whiskey soaked parties and vote with the little Prohibition band for what they want is either hood-winked or a coward. Ex-governer Hanley says that both the Republican and Democratic parties are owned and controlled by the liquor power and that which ever party is successful the County Local Option law is in danger of being repealed. Oh consistant temperance voter where can you get any consolation from this, by supporting your enemies. Know this that either the democrat or the republican ticket will be voted by the saloon keeper, the brewer, the distiller, the entire liquor loving vote, not one of them will vote the prohibition ticket, for they vote only for their own interest and not to please the temperance people, they do not expect any favors from the prohibition party only as some prohibitionist may be hood-winked into voting for some Good man that votes either of the old party ticket votes for the perpetuation of the liquor traffic, you may say you are not but that does not change the result, every vote cast for the prohibition ticket in Indiana on November 8 will be a vote against the liquor business and no other votes will count against it. The majority of the temperance people in this state are being hood-winked by the A. S. L., and the A. S. L. has caused the defeat of the republican party in Indiana. Now listen how it was done. The A. S. L. influence the temperance people to stay in their old parties except the prohibitionists and them it tried to persuade to forsake their party and join the republican party. Now the temperance democrats did as they were advised, voted with their party which was for the perpetuation of the liquor traffic. The republicans voted for their candidates who went over the state soliciting all the temperance votes and even the prohibition votes. The republican party succeeded in holding its temperance vote and pulling 6,000 from the prohibition ranks, now this with the power the party had two years previous should have elected the entire state ticket. Did it? No. Why? Because between 35,000 and 40,000 liquor republicans forsook their party and voted with the democrats, this gave the state wholly into liquor power; now if the entire prohibition vote would have gone over to the republican side the liquor power would still have carried by about 5,000 majority, so it is plainly seen that the A. S. L. defeated the republican party. How? By advising the 50,000 temperance democrats to vote in their own party which advice they very loyally obeyed. Now whatever vote the republican party polled less than the 6,000 prohibition votes it drew represents the temperance strength of the republican party. now if it is true that the republican party is the temperance party of the state, then they should adopt a strong temperance platform such as the prohibition party adopts and then secure the help of the A. S. L. and persuade all the temperance democrats to join with them, there will be no trouble with the prohibitionists for they all have will enough to vote for what they want. If the A. S. L. really want prohibition of the liquor traffic they must concentrate their work with one party and become consistant.

DR. W. W. SWARTS

Candidate for Coroner on the Republican ticket was in St. Joe calling on friends and viewing the political situation Tuesday. Mr. Swarts is one of the leading physicians of Auburn and is well known over the county. We learn that he has some idea of office as he was appointed by the commissioners as Coroner for one year, giving him an incite to the duties connected with the office. He is now serving his second term as president of the DeKalb County Medical Association

It has been said that he is "The Smallest Man for the Smallest Office." The capability of a man for holding any office should be taken into consideration and when that is done Mr. Swarts will pull a large vote. What the people want is men to do the official work.

Obituary

Dennis J. White, son of Jacob and Alvira White, was born in DeKalb county, near St. Joe, June 30, 1869. His childhood and youth were spent under the parental roof on the farm. In April, 1890, he was married to Daisy Bronson and to them one child, Ralph, of Toledo, was born. After two years a legal separation was granted them.

On October 6, 1897, he was united in marriage to Miss Cora Sebring with whom he lived for a period of thirteen years and nine days. Together they toiled, sharing life's joys and sorrows and looking forward to the time when they might lay aside some of the burdens of this work-a-day world and live with comfort and at comparative ease, but it was so that labor's burden and life were laid aside almost simultaneously.

After his second marriage he, with his wife and son, continued to reside in the country for nearly six months, when the family removed to Auburn, since which time their residence has been in that city.

For about eight years he served the B. & O. R. R. as brakeman and was a trusted employee.

About four years ago he embarked in the dairy business and was very successful, and when ill health overtook him he was loathe to give up his work. Forced finally, to decide this question he sold his business to Mr. Sheeley, on the 20th of September. Almost immediately typhoid symptoms developed and he grew gradually worse until Friday morning all hope of recovery was given up, and on Saturday night at 9:30 he quietly slipped away, aged 40 years, 3 months and 15 days. His was the first death in his father's family.

He was by disposition quiet and inoffensive and in his business perfectly honest and reliable His friends loved him, all respected him for his business integrity.

He leaves his wife, one son, both parents, three brothers and two sisters and many other relatives and friends.

So life is passing, all too short for the completion of our plans, but after all long enough to give us opportunity to glorify Him who wills not that any should perish but that all should come to repentance.—Dispatch.

"If in after years this same boy follows in the footsteps of his parents, who will be to blame?" This sentence contains the last words of the article which was published in last week's NEWS under the heading "SMASHED UP". In this article the writer intimated that the parents were to blame. Well, yes there is an individual responsibility, it is true but let me ask you, in all sincerity, where does individual responsibility end? Does it end with a good-personal example of non indulgence by yourself, coupled with a string of platitudes upon the evils of intemperance as long as the moral law? We believe not. Some one once asked "Am I my brother's keeper?" Someone once said "Cursed be he that putteth the bottle to his neighbor's lips." Someone once said "No drunkard shall enter the kingdom of heaven". That we have drunkard making institutions in this country 'twould be folly to deny; that they are protected by the strong arm of the law, no one but an idiot would attempt disprove. Then as our government is a government of parties, and parties are composed of platforms erected by the intelligence of a people, representing their views on all civic questions; it behooves us to prayerfully, considerately investigat the policies of parties remembering that our vote expresses our wishes Now my dear reader, What does the republican party say shall be done with the liquor question? Come, I'm waiting to hear. No answer. Democrats what do you say shall be done?

A great rotund body, upon which is displayed a glittering, massive, watch chain, sticks his thumbs in his vest pocket and pompously declares, he is the friend of personal liberty, "We don't want no d—d meddlesome crank buttin' into our business," he says. He don't care how many cities are founded on iniquity The Bible is an old fashioned book anyway, and, besides religion has nothing to do with politics. God used to thunder his laws from Sinai's mountain top, but now He's asleep. He used to reward the doers of His word with victories in their warfares, but that was a long time ago, and we have improved on His plan; we erect costly edifices to worship in, employ high salaried, smugly dressed ministers to do our thinking and praying for us, and should he be one of those impractical, cranky prohibitionists, we change his place of residence just before election, and threaten him with a loss of salary, if he meddles with politics. Then when we see a poor wretch in the gutter, or peacefully slumbering among a debris of broken bottles, we draw our garments of self righteousness about us, tilt our noses at an angle that threatens to dislocate our necks as we pass him by. "Catch us making such a spectacle of ourself; no indeed, we go to church regularly, and we pray, such beautiful prayers, too; we ask the Lord to remove this curse from our land. He will remove the desire for liquor from us. He will hear us and all will be done in due time." Yes, "Ye whited sepulchers," He will hear you indeed and you shall have your reward. Such prayers are a stench to His nostrils, your hypocrisy won't screen you from His wrath in the day of his coming. "Not unto him that sayeth Lord, Lord" etc, you know the rest. Yes go on, another campaign is on; when fife and drum quicken your blood, get on the old band wagon your father rode in, take your patriotism off the shelf, brush off the dust, and whoop'er up for —— "Teddy" or the principles of Thomas Jefferson, if your party's emblem be the jassack. Rah! rah! rah! we're going to save the country once more. "Don't throw away your vote, men have always drank, and always will." So now dear reader, when buggies and bottles are broken you know who is to blame.

Autumn is now well on its way and if you have not already selcted the new Hat or Cap for Fall and Winter wear, the chilly winds of the eleventh month will make you do it. Let us show you our line of Up-to-Date headwear.

Derbys and Soft Hats for Men

The styles in Men's hats for fall are somewhat changed over last season. The derby is still the popular model for conservative dressers but the soft hat with flat crown is very popular with young men especially. Those who like their hat turned down in front will find their whim correct in style ihis season. The "Fedora" is on this account very popular. We are showing a very complete line of hats including all the correct shapes and popular shades. Come in make your selection.

Hats Priced from $1.00 to $3.00

Special good Soft Fedora Hat $1.50

Caps for the Men

Caps for young men in the falltime are greatly in demand and we are prepared to meet the needs of all in this respect. Our showing of heavier caps for winter is also very attractive.

Caps for the Boys

Caps are now in great demand by the school boys of all grades. They seem to be the best adapted to the needs of the boy in his school life. Something here to suit every boys whim.

Remember our Line of Fall Shoes.

CENTER OF POPULATION.

In the predictions as to the showing which the census figures would make there was one virtually agreed upon—that the center of population would be shifted some distance westward from its location in 1890, which was six miles southeast of Columbus, Ind., says Toledo Blade. But this prediction was one of the kind which goes wrong. The census people have tentatively announced that the mark will have to be moved but slightly. The west has flourished tremendously in ten years. It has gained not only new railroads, but the old railroads have been renewed. Irrigation has caused new lands to be cultivated and new cities and towns to be builded. Such cities as Seattle have profited in wealth and population by the opening of new territory, the development of new resources, the filling in of the once deserted spaces between town and town. But in these same ten years an immense immigration has been distributing itself in the eastern cities—among the coal mines and steel plants of Pennsylvania, in the industrial districts of Lake Erie. It has offset the settlement of the far west.

Enforcing health regulations against ignorance and prejudice frequently is accompanied by difficulties. Cholera prevails in parts of Italy, and the officials have taken wise precautions against the spread of the disease. And one result has been a riot, accompanied by the wrecking of the health office in the town of Barletta. Of course the rioters are taking the precise course that opens the way for invasion by the deadly ailment. This is an age of enlightenment, but there are regions where there has been little advancement in ideas since the time when plagues swept away victims by wholesale because there was not sufficient knowledge to ward off the danger.

Those who have been able to hold back their vacations until now are to be congratulated. October is one of the finest months of the year for vacations, as any one who has been fortunate enough to have two weeks free at this time will tell you. The country lies before you. There is no better exercise than walking. Nature in the full beauty of her late summer foliage, is at her best, and the crisp air of the approaching fall is noticeable mornings. Soon it will be on tap all day. Why not keep up your open-air vacation habits all winter?

The world's wheat crop this year is estimated at a little under 3,500,000,000 bushels, which will make it, with one exception, the largest ever gathered. The largest wheat crop ever gathered was that of last year, which was approximately 150,000,000 bushels more than the estimate of 1910. More than half of the shortage is figured in the crop of the United States. Although here as in Russia the crop is shorter than last year, the reserve of old wheat held over from the previous year is larger in both countries than it was in 1909.

The United States government has ordered another large installment of the rifle "silencers," by which the noise of firing is done away with. Experiments are also under way with similar silencers for cannon. It may yet come to pass that the noise of battle will consist mainly of the "shouting and the tumult" that were in order before the days of gunpowder.

Firearms as playthings are not entirely justified of wisdom, as proved in the case of a twelve-year-old Buffalo boy who received a gift of a rifle from his father and a few minutes later shot and killed his mother. Of course, it was an accident, and everybody concerned is very sorry but the moral is that, given every possible opportunity and invitation, accidents will happen.

The epicurean world is still waiting for developments in the project to provide meat from hippopotami fed on water hyacinth. It sounds better than terrapin.

Woman steals silk stockings and pleads that she did it "to feed her children." The science of infant dietetics is making great strides, these days.

Seeing that Uhlan has trotted a mile in less than two minutes, without the aid of a wind-shield or other assistance of any kind, is it not time to begin talking about the minute-and-a-half trotter?

A St. Louis preacher is in trouble because he stole a number of watches. Perhaps the poor man merely wanted enough watches to be always warned against the danger of screaching overtime.

THE DAYS SEEM LONGER TO HIM INSTEAD OF SHORTER

ATHLETICS VICTORS

PHILADELPHIANS TAKE SECOND GAME IN WORLD'S SERIES FROM CHICAGO.

PITCHER BROWN HIT HARD

American Leaguers Score Six Runs in the Seventh Inning and Outclass Their Western Opponents Both in Hitting and Pitching.

Philadelphia. — The Philadelphia Athletics proved too strong for the Chicago Nationals in the second baseball game of the world's series and romped away with a 9 to 3 victory.

The American league champions, who now have won two straight contests, looked superior to their opponents in both hitting and pitching. They outhit the Chicagos, fourteen to nine, and Jack Coombs, who was opposed by Mordecai Brown, had a big shade over the latter twirler.

While he did not prove as effective as Bender, Coombs was unhittable in the pinches, when he did magnificent work. Like Bender, he mixed his curves well, using speed, curves and a slow one alternately.

Brown did not appear at his best, as his deceptive curve ball did not break with the sharpness that it usually does. Brown also lacked the control and after getting two and three balls on his opponents he was compelled to stick the next over. As a result the Athletics hit timely and cinched the victory in the seventh round, when six runs were secured off him.

Score.	R.	H.	E.
Athletics .0 0 1 2 0 1 0 6 0 x—9	15	4

Sacrifice hits—Zimmerman, Schulte 2, Sheckard, Barry. Two-base hits—Collins 2, Tinker, Sheckard, Davis, Murphy, Strunk, Steinfeldt, Zimmerman. Bases on balls—Sheckard 2, Hofman 3, Murphy, Baker, Zimmerman, Thomas, Collins, Kling, Tinker. Stolen bases—Collins 2. Double plays—Collins to Davis 2, Tinker to Chance, Murphy to Thomas. Struck out—Steinfeldt, Strunk 2, Chance, Coombs 3, Kling, Barry, Brown, Beaumont. Time of game—2:26. Umpires—Rigler, Sheridan, Connolly, O'Day. Attendance—24,597.

Philadelphia.—Through the masterly pitching of "Chief" Bender the Philadelphia American baseball team defeated the Chicago Nationals by a score of 4 to 1 in the initial game of the world's championship series. The game was witnessed by 26,981 persons.

The game was a wonder in its way, and Chief Bender, who pitched for the Athletics, had the Chicagoans at his mercy up to the ninth inning, when he let down a bit and the Cubs got their single tally. It was not earned at that, as Tinker, who scored the run, was only enabled to make a single because Tho as had previously muffed a foul from his bat.

Only thirty men faced the Athletics' pitcher in the nine innings, and but three hits were made off his delivery, two of them coming in the ninth. The Athletics secured seven hits, six of which were secured off Overall, who was replaced by McIntire in the fourth inning.

McIntire proved to be effective at once. The Athletics were retired in one, two, three order for the first time during the game.

In the first half of the fourth inning the Cubs managed to get a man to first base. This was Schulte, who got a pass from Chief Bender. He got no further, however, as he was caught stealing for the third out.

William Vaughn Moody Dead.

Chicago.—William Vaughn Moody, poet, playwright and critic and former professor of English literature at the University of Chicago, died Monday in Colorado Springs, Col., of tumor of the brain. He was forty-one years old.

David Rankin, Farmer, Dead.

Tarkio, Mo.—David Rankin, the richest and best-known farmer the world has ever known, died at his home in Tarkio Tuesday night very suddenly of paralysis.

CRIPPEN PLACED ON TRIAL

AMERICAN DOCTOR'S HEARING AS WIFE SLAYER BEGUN.

Pleads Not Guilty—Ethel Leneve Not in Court—Will Be Arraigned Later.

London.—A jury, which was a typical body of tradesmen and clerks, was easily secured shortly after the trial of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, charged with the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore, the American actress, was begun before a large crowd of spectators. Crippen after pleading not guilty gave his undivided attention to the opening address for the crown by Richard D. Muir, K. C.

The trial, which is being held in the New Bailey, promises to be one of the most historic in the annals of that famous court.

No less a personage than Lord Chief Justice Alverstone is presiding, and he was accompanied into court by Sir John Knill, lord mayor of London; Sir Thomas Vesey Strong, lord mayor-elect, and the sheriffs in their robes of office.

Richard D. Muir, K. C., conducts the prosecution, with the assistance of Solicitor Travers Humphreys, who represented the crown at the preliminary hearing. Crippen is represented by Alfred Aspinall Tobin, K. C., unionist member of parliament, and Huntly Eugene Jenkins.

Ethel Clara Leneve, the doctor's typist, who has been indicted as an accessory after the fact, was not in court. Her trial will follow in the event of Crippen's conviction.

REMOVED BODY ORGANS LIVE

Rockefeller Institute Surgeon Finds Success in Test on Parts of Human Tissues.

Baltimore, Md.—Along lines conceived by himself and worked out under the guidance of the Hopkins men at the head of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, Dr. Alexius Carrel has made one of the most important and startling medical discoveries of the age. Briefly, Doctor Carrel's discovery involves a method of removal from the human body of portions of the stomach, blood vessels, skin, bone and practically every other tissue and of making them grow outside the body at as lively a rate as they did in the human form to which they belonged.

TAFT AT ELLIS ISLAND

President Visits Immigration Station With Secretary Nagel and Commissioner Williams.

New York, Oct. 19.—President Taft made his proposed visit to the Ellis Island immigration station, where he was met by William Williams, commissioner of immigration. Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and labor came from Washington to make the trip with the president.

The party had lunch on the cutter Immigrant, and the president met a number of men of prominence during his trip, some politicians among them.

Dietz Held for Murder.

Hayward, Wis.—John Dietz, his wife, Hattie Dietz, and Leslie Dietz, his son, were all bound over to the circuit court by Judge J. F. Riordan on the charge of having murdered Oscar Harp, a deputy, during the siege of the Dietz cabin at Cameron Dam recently.

Page Is Unopposed for Senate.

Montpelier, Vt.—United States Senator Carroll S. Page, Vermont's junior senator, was practically unopposed for re-election when the state senate and house of representatives met Tuesday to vote on the selection of his successor.

Cincinnati Wins State Honors.

Cincinnati.—Cincinnati Nationals Tuesday won the Ohio state baseball championship by defeating the Cleveland Americans by a score of 6 to 5 in the seventh and deciding game.

AIRSHIP CREW SAFE

WELLMAN AND COMPANIONS PICKED UP OFF NORTH CAROLINA COAST.

SHIP TRENT RESCUES THEM

After Hours of Maneuvering America's Crew Are Hauled Aboard Steamer—Balloon Is Lost—Blown Far Out of Its Course.

New York.—The first attempt to cross the Atlantic in a dirigible balloon has proved a failure. The America, with Walter Wellman and his party of five on board, was picked up Tuesday morning almost 375 miles due east of Cape Hatteras, by the incoming Bermuda liner Trent.

News of the rescue came in two wireless messages from Captain Down of the Trent, one reporting to the company agents here and another informing the New York Times of the result of the expedition in which it had taken a leading part.

Captain Down reported that at five o'clock Tuesday morning he first sighted the airship. Signals of distress and calls for help were given. For three hours the Trent maneuvered in the heavy sea to get alongside of Wellman and his wrecked companions. The entire party finally was taken aboard, even to the cat, which was taken along as a mascot. The America was abandoned where the rescue occurred, in latitude 35.43, longitude 68.18.

In abandoning their craft the crew of the airship America lowered themselves into the lifeboat which swung beneath it. Then they cast the lifeboat off and were afloat on the sea. The airship, relieved of the weight of the lifeboat, shot high into the air and was blown away rapidly. The transfer of the Wellman party from the lifeboat to the Trent was made with great difficulty.

At 4:30 a. m. the Trent sighted the airship America and wireless communication was established immediately. Irwin, the operator on the airship, informed Ginsburg, operator on the Trent, that the America's crew wished to abandon the balloon. Wireless communication was kept up from this time on between the airship and the steamer.

After a council held on the airship it was decided that the best means of rescue was to launch the lifeboat. But this was such a hazardous undertaking that much time elapsed before the maneuvering was executed, as the tail of the airship, consisting of tanks of gasoline and wooden blocks, threatened to capsize the boat as it was dropped from the balloon into the water.

This danger was overcome at last and the task was carried out at 7:30 a. m. In the operation the trailer struck Wireless Operator Jack Irwin and Louis Loud, the engineer, and knocked a small hole in the side of the lifeboat.

All members of the crew are well after a thrilling experience.

Wellman said that the airship had been blown far out of its course, so that it was inadvisable to proceed.

TERRIFIC GALE SWEEPS CUBA

Island Is Hit by Furious Storm—Havana Inundated and Thousands Made Homeless.

Havana.—The island of Cuba has probably sustained the greatest material disaster in all her history in the practically continuous cyclone which began with light rains on Thursday morning, developing into torrential floods and devastating hurricanes. The western half of the island suffered more severely than the east.

It is impossible to estimate even roughly the amount of the damage, which doubtless will aggregate many millions of dollars. In addition to the great destruction to sugar and tobacco plantations many thousands of peasants in the three western provinces have been rendered homeless and destitute, losing their homes and the food crops, especially plantains and corn. It now seems probable that the republic may be compelled to request international aid for the relief of these sufferers whose condition is most deplorable.

While all communication with the interior has been cut off there is reason to hope that Oriente, Camaguey and Santa Clara have escaped the greatest fury of the storm.

In the city of Havana the losses probably will exceed $1,000,000, mainly due to the destruction of the customs house sheds, which were filled with perishable goods, the sinking of scores of lighters, many of them containing valuable cargoes which had been unloaded from steamers, and the submerging of about one square mile of the residential section of the city, facing the sea.

La Follette Gets Setback.

Rochester, Minn.—The news of the sudden death of Senator Dolliver of Iowa caused a setback in the condition of Senator Robert La Follette, who is recuperating from an operation for appendicitis.

Count Tolstoi Ill.

St. Petersburg.—Count Tolstoi suffered several fainting spells Tuesday and was unconscious for several hours, but he was said to be in a somewhat improved condition Tuesday evening.

ROCKEFELLER ADDS TO GIFT

GIVES $3,820,000 TO INSTITUTE OF MEDICAL RESEARCH.

Brings Oil King's Donation to Institution Bearing His Name Up to $8,240,000.

New York.—John D. Rockefeller gave an additional $3,820,000 to the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, thereby making his total gifts to this institution $8,240,000 and also increasing his known contributions to philanthropy, education and science to $125,004,662.

This total includes the estimated value of the buildings and land of the institute. The income bearing endowment, with the latest gift added, is $6,240,000.

Announcement of Mr. Rockefeller's latest gift to the institution which bears his name was made at the opening of the institute's new hospital at the foot of East Sixty-sixth street. The opening of the new hospital was also chosen as the day for the coming into being of the new board of trustees of the institute.

They will take over the Rockefeller gift of millions from the Rockefeller general education board, which has administered the gift in the past. The new board of trustees is made up of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.; Frederick T. Gates, William H. Welch, Starr J. Murphy and Dr. Simon Flexner, medical head of the institute.

The initial gift of the institute was made by Mr. Rockefeller in 1901 when he donated a foundation fund of $200,000. In 1902 the donor added $1,000,000 to cover the erection of a laboratory and to provide running expenses for a few years. From the start the institute was a success and its work in discovering a new method of combating infantile paralysis, dysentery and spinal meningitis attracted the attention of scientific investigators all over the world.

RAIL COLLISION KILLS FIVE

Fatal Crash on the Grand Rapids & Indiana Road—Accident Due to the Fog.

Portland, Ind.—Five laborers were instantly killed and more than a score were injured, several seriously, when a north-bound extra freight train on the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad crashed head-on into a work train seven and a half miles south of here Friday.

All were caught between flat cars on which they were riding and pulled under the wreckage of the engine, where their bodies were terribly mutilated. The head of Milutin Tomic was torn completely off, while Homic Mandic was completely disemboweled and his right leg cut off.

A special train run to the wreck carried physicians, who dressed temporarily the wounds of the injured and brought a dozen of the worst hurt to the hospital here.

The two trains met in a stretch of straight track in the fog, the engine men being unable to see one another until the trains were within fifty feet of each other. All jumped and escaped injury. The track where the wreck occurred was being repaired by the men killed and both trains were running but ten miles per hour.

JULIA WARD HOWE EXPIRES

Author of "Battle Hymn of the Republic" Dies of Pneumonia at Middletown, R. I.

Middletown, R. I.—One of the world's most famous women, the venerable Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, poet and patriot, and stanch advocate of human liberty everywhere, passed peacefully away Monday at her summer home, "Oak Glen," in Middletown.

Mrs. Howe had been ill since Wednesday last, when she had a severe chill. Death was due to pneumonia. She was in her ninety-first year.

LONDON PRIVATE BANK FAILS

Charing Cross Institution, With Forty Branches, and $5,000,000 in Deposits, Closes.

London.—The Charing Cross bank, with headquarters in London and with 40 country banks, closed its doors.

An official receiver has been appointed. The deposits amount to $5,000,000.

The banks is of no importance in the financial world, as it is a private concern, doing an extensive loan business.

Frauds Found in Census.

Washington. — Staggered by the enormous growth shown by the returns of the new census for a number of western cities, Director Durand of the census bureau ordered an investigation, the result of which appeared in the announcement Saturday that gross frauds had been perpetrated.

Mr. Durand gave out also a letter from President Taft, directing that persons implicated in the alleged frauds should be prosecuted.

Twelve of Crew Drown.

Rio Janeiro.—The British freight steamship Portmarnock went ashore off Cape Frio Sunday. Twelve of the crew were drowned. The Portmarnock sailed from San Lorenzo, Argentina, on October 5.

Railway Loses by Fire.

Mexico City, Mex.—Following the explosion of a boiler Monday fire destroyed four departments of the shops of the National Railways of Mexico in this city, causing a loss of $200,000.

DIRECTORS SERVED

WITH SUBPOENAS CHARGING THEM WITH MISMANAGEMENT OF I. C.

ANNUAL MEETING IS LIVELY

Sensational Outgrowth of "Repair Graft" Cases—Attorney, Armed with Proxies, Makes Life Miserable for Directors.

Chicago, Ill.—Stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad company had a lively hour and a half at their annual meeting through the efforts of Attorney Maxwell Edgar. Holders representing 784,866 shares of stock were present, Mr. Edgar arrived armed with proxies for sixty shares, which enabled him to take part in the meeting. He was accompanied by two deputy sheriffs who added to the confusion by serving subpoenas on the various directors.

The subpoenas were in a suit for $10,000,000 damages, which Mr. Edgar, constituting himself an attorney for the road, started in the circuit court, when he filed a praecipe in the case. The defendants to the suit are the directors of the road, whom Mr. Edgar seeks to hold responsible for alleged financial loss through the repair "graft," general mismanagement and alleged rebating.

Seriously Hurt in Wreck.

Springfield, Ill.—Fifteen persons were injured when the north-bound Chicago & Alton Red Limited crushed head-on into a south-bound freight at Niiwood, nine miles north of Carlinville. So terrific was the impact the freight engine, which was the smaller of the two locomotives, was driven back into the feright about 120 feet, smashing everything in its path. The limited mail car was telescoped against the tender of the big locomotive. The mail clerks miraculously escaped death but were badly hurt. All the passengers were thrown into heaps and most of them hurt.

Assassin of Empress Dies a Suicide.

Geneva, Switzerland.—Louigi Luccheni, who assassinated the empress of Austria in 1898, committed suicide in his cell in the prison known as L'Eveche. Two days ago Luccheni went violently insane and after smashing everything in his cell, was put in straight-jacket. When his violence passed he was given cell liberty. In the afternoon guards heard him singing for several hours, but at nightfall he became suddenly silent. Later the guards entered the cell and found Luccheni hanging to the window bars by his waist belt which he had twisted around his neck.

Terrible Revenge of Trick Elephant.

New York.—"Queen," a trick elephant, became enraged at Robert Shields, a new keeper who tried to shackle her in her winter quarters in Jersey City and crushed him to death. She seized him around the waist with her trunk, slammed him against the wall, threw him to the floor and then trampled on his face, knelt on his body and finally gored him. The body was unrecognizable when recovered.

Eighty Naval Employes Hurt.

Kittery, Me.—Eighty employes of the Portsmouth navy yard on the way to begin their day's work, were injured, three possibly fatally, in a collision between two heavily loaded trolley cars on the Atlantic Shore Line railway at Fort Hill. Falling leaves had made the rails slippery and the first of the two cars mounting the hill failed to respond to its brakes and rolled back, crashing into another car.

Bleached Flour Destroyed.

Nashville, Tenn.—Bleached flour to the amount of 1,200 bags, which was seized by the federal authorities as it was in transit from Kansas City to Atlanta has been condemned and confiscated by the government authorities here as an adulterated article of food and has been ordered destroyed by the United States marshal.

Four Hurled 250 Feet Down Shaft.

Marquette, Mich.—Four men, who were being hoisted to the surface, were killed at the Cleveland Cliff Iron company's North Lake mine, near Ishpeming, when the bucket on which they were seated was overturned and they were hurled 250 feet to the bottom of the shaft.

Gallagher Will Plead Insanity.

New York.—Insanity will be the defense of James J. Gallagher when he is tried for shooting Mayor Gaynor. His lawyer said that two alienists had found that Gallagher had senile dementia. Gallagher has not been indicted.

Snow in Colorado.

Denver, Colo.—Snow was reported from all parts of Colorado Thursday. In the mountain passes above Tolland, Colo., snow from eight to ten feet deep was reported, and trains were blocked. Snow plows will open the line. In Denver the fall was light.

Clowry Is Re-Elected.

New York.—Robert C. Clowry, president of the Western Union Telegraph company, was re-elected president of the company. All the other officers were also re-elected.

SERIAL STORY

Archibald's Agatha

By EDITH HUNTINGTON MASON

Author of "The Real Agatha"

Copyright 1910, by W. G. Chapman.
Copyright in Great Britain.

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular young bachelor of London, is suddenly aroused from the aimless and indolent life he leads, by the startling news from the law firm of Barnes, Willoughby & Son, that he is the heir to a sheep farm in Australia, bringing in an income of $30,000 a year. The bequest comes from an aunt, Mrs. Georgiana James of Essex. She makes him her heir on condition that he marry within ten days or forfeit the legacy to a third cousin living in America. The story opens at Castle Wyckoff, where Lord Vincent and his wife, staunch friends of Terhune, are discussing plans to find Terhune a wife within the allotted time. It seems that Lady Vincent is one of seven persons named Agatha, all whom have been close girlhood chums. She decides to invite two of them to a party at the castle and have Archie there as one of the guests. Archie accepts the invitation and the Vincents discuss his prospects in all their varied bearings. He listens to their descriptions of the two Agatha's and decides that the sixth shall be his choice. Agatha first and Agatha sixth arrive at the castle. Agatha the Sixth strikes Archie as a handpainted beauty. Agatha First is a breezy American girl. Only eight days remain for Archie to secure a bride. Lady Vincent tells her husband that Agatha the Sixth already cares for Archie. The plot starts working with both girls unaware of the urgency of the situation. Archie gains from Agatha Sixth the admission that she cares for him, but will require a month's time fully to make up her mind.

"And I see that you aren't on my side any more, Mrs. Wilfred," said Terhune bitterly. "I thought you wanted to help me!"

"I do," she answered, turning on him earnestly; "that's just what I want to do most in the world! Only you don't understand how I want to help you!"

"And I don't care!" he replied eagerly, "if only you'll use your influence with Agatha Sixth to make her cut short the period of my probation and make it only as long as the remaining days of this week! Ah, do, Mrs. Wilfred! Dear Lady Vincent, do! I know you can!" and he caught her hand entreatingly.

"But I shan't—anything of the sort!" she said, putting it away again; "you're too much in need of a lesson! Believe me, it's for your own good. Besides," she added, "it wouldn't do a bit of good if I were to speak to her! I couldn't give her any reason for trying to hurry her decision. I can't tell her about your Aunt Georgy and the property in Australia, can I?"

"Thunder, no!" I answered for Terhune; "that would never do! She wouldn't like that part of it, at all!"

"Naturally not. She wouldn't like to think you only wanted to marry her for a reason as mercenary as that! I don't wonder you wish to keep your real motive from her!" As she said this my wife favored Terhune with a scornful and penetrating glance.

He hung his head, and I confess I felt a bit dashed myself. Women always have the most intensely romantic notions of honor and that sort of thing, and it makes a fellow feel awkward. You can't explain to 'em, you know.

"But that isn't the only reason," he began, and put his hand to his short mustache nervously, as he does when he's genuinely moved.

"Very well, then," quoth my wife cheerily, "if that's the case you're sure to come out all right in the end! You've only to prove your other reason to Agatha Sixth, that's all!"

"Do you mean because you think she'll change her mind and give Arch his answer in time?" I shouted after her, for she had already started back toward the house, I knew instinctively to find Agatha Sixth.

"No," she called back over her shoulder for our further comfort, "because I think Arch will be man enough to change it for her!" And we had to be content with that.

CHAPTER V.

The Castle Wyckhoff house-party were assembled on the east terrace, and it was the fourth day of the ten which were to decide Arch's fate. Arch himself, with a countenance as anxious and troubled as if he had not already obtained a guarantee of good faith from Agatha Sixth which was in all probability to insure his inheritance for him, was leaning gloomily against the broad stone railing of the porch and gazing somberly at the white peacocks that strutted in self-conscious magnificence about the close-cut lawn. Agatha Sixth, who should undoubtedly have been at his side, considering that there was between them something in the nature of an engagement understood, was seated as far away from him as possible in a low rocker at my wife's feet, across the terrace from him.

As for Agatha First, she was knocking a golf ball around on the velvet lawn and absolutely ignoring the humble attentions of young Leslie Freer, the rector's son, whom we had at length succeeded in foisting upon her as cavalier.

I thought the party was too dull for ten o'clock in the morning of a rippin' June day, and I threw the cigarette I'd been smoking over the railing and set myself to rousing them all to a more becoming state of jollity.

"I say, you people!" I cried cheerily, "what do you want to do today? It couldn't be finer weather. What do you say to a drive over to Northbury to see the cricket? Northbury and Lowshire are going to play."

These were two crack teams and I expected to extract enthusiasm from Arch if not from the girls, because I knew he was as keen on cricket as I. But he only made me the most indifferent kind of assent while none of the others took up the idea at all.

I looked rather reproachfully at Dearest. She usually backs up any propositions of mine, but I saw that she was busy explaining the intricacies of some stitch or other to Agatha Sixth and forgave her.

So I tried again.

"Don't you think it would be sport?" I asked, walking over to her and putting my hand on her shoulder. "It's such a bully day for a drive!"

"Yes!" she cried, turning to me at once, all animation. "I do think it would be sport! Come, let's all get ready and go. When's the match played?"

"Eleven thirty," I told her, "and shall we motor or take the drag?"

"Oh, motor!" she said, "by all means! Driving's too slow!" But just as we had succeeded in fetching Agatha First and Freer from the lawn and had won a lukewarm assent to the plan from them and a more enthusiastic one from Arch, who had begun to realise in spite of his anxieties that cricket was cricket after all, something occurred which changed the formation of our party most unexpectedly.

"Then You Can't Go With Us to See the Cricket!"

That something was a wire for Terhune, stating that his presence was absolutely necessary in London that day and signed by the head partner of the business firm with which Terhune was connected.

"O, what a nuisance!" said my wife when Terhune had informed us in general terms of the necessity for his immediate departure for town.

"What a hanged shame!" was my more forceful comment. Agatha Sixth said nothing at all, but Agatha First came forward with more show of interest and feeling than I'd seen her exhibit over anything since the beginning of her stay with us.

"You won't be gone long, will you, Mr. Terhune?" she asked anxiously.

"O, no; I can be back for dinner," said Arch, trying as I thought, not to look pleased by her solicitude.

"It's not a matter that requires much time," he added to me in an undertone. "I should be able to dispatch it this afternoon."

"Then you can't go with us to see the cricket!" continued Agatha First, interrupting our aside by her approach, as if just realising what Terhune's absence really meant. And again I felt that the interest in Arch's goings and comings should have come not from her, but from Agatha Sixth, who had said nothing. And when Agatha First added: "Well, if you must go, you must. But be sure to be back in time to show that new move in our chess game." Then, laughingly, "Remember, it's a date!" I thought so more than ever. Terhune, reddening slightly, muttered something and left us to pack his bag. Left us, and without so much as a word to Agatha Sixth.

Frankly, I didn't like the look of it. And I know Dearest felt the same way. We had observed with some anxiety, not to say surprise, that during the last day or two Terhune and Agatha First had struck up an extraordinary intimacy. Extraordinary of course in the light of the affair between Terhune and Agatha Sixth, though of course Agatha First could not have been aware of that. I had told Dearest when we had first observed this new stake in our match-making venture, that it was explained by Agatha Sixth's action in delaying her answer when Terhune had proposed. Feeling that things were now "up to her," as my American brought-up wife would say, the old boy had resolved to let matters pretty much alone. And I couldn't blame him. I thought his friendship with Agatha First rather a judgment on Agatha Sixth for playing with him in that manner. But not so Dearest! When I had advanced this idea she had withered me with a look and had declared it to be her opinion that an attachment that couldn't stand the fire of a little conventional coquetry, which she thought one of the most inalienable of women's rights, was not worth having, and that I could not excuse or explain Arch's conduct in that way.

However that may be, when Agatha First and young Freer had romped out of sight in the direction of the garage for the fun of telling the men themselves to send the electric runabout around, Agatha Sixth rose slowly from the little rocker where she had sat through all the talk as if she were not at all concerned in it, and clenching her sewing in one small hand, walked past us in silence toward the house.

"Are you going to get ready, dear?" ventured my wife to the small rigid back. "We start right away, you know."

There was a moment's silence, and then at the door she turned the bravest little face toward us you ever saw.

"Yes," she said sweetly. "I'm going to get ready. You needn't think I shall stay at home just because he's not going." The "he's" was emphasized. "I'd rather go without him anyway!" And she vanished into the house.

My wife and I stared at each other.

"Well, what do you think of that?" I exclaimed.

"I think she's a little heroine!" the secretary—I mean Dearest—answered. "As for that man!—" she stopped, but her expression was such that I was glad Terhune wasn't there to see it.

"Well, it is a shame!" I conceded. "He ought not to treat the poor little girl so! What can he be about, anyway? If he doesn't take care he'll jolly well fall between two stools!"

"Yes, if you mean the girls by 'stools,'" agreed Dearest, "and serve him right, too—the old flirt! But Wilfred," and she fixed me with a look that I secretly trembled before because it means an unpleasant duty to be performed by me, "you must find out what he's up to!" But before I could reply we were in the midst of hurried farewells to Terhune, who if he were in disgrace, was also our guest, and we had packed him off in the little runabout to catch his train, without a word of rebuke.

Not half an hour later we were standing on the steps of the side entrance to the castle in our automobile togs, with Agatha Sixth and Leslie Freer, waiting for Agatha First, or Miss Endicott—to use her proper name once in a while—to join us before starting on our trip to see the cricket. Freer, a pale-eyed, sandy-haired young chap, was enveloped in one of the coats that go with the machine for the convenience of chance guests, and was promising us that he would be quite comfortable, though no one seemed particularly solicitous.

"I wonder why Miss Endicott doesn't come—she's so slow," he remarked for the twentieth time, at least.

But it wasn't until I had quite finished fussing with the machine, a six-cylindered touring car, having gone over every part of her with the chauffeur, and was beginning to get a bit impatient, that the young lady who was responsible for the delay appeared in the hall entrance.

But to our astonishment she did not wear so much as a linen duster over the white frock she had worn that morning to indicate that she intended to motor with us that day.

"Good gracious, Aggie, dear!" expostulated Dearest from the tonneau where she and Agatha Sixth were already ensconced, "aren't you going to wear anything warmer than that? It's cold motoring, you know, even in June."

"But I'm not going, Agatha," replied the girl pleasantly. "I've decided not to!"

"Decided not to!" echoed her hostess, a little taken aback, "and why, please?" While Freer added a drawling, "O, I say, Miss Endicott, that's a shame! We can't go without you, you know!" to her expostulation.

"No, I can't go," explained Agatha First, coming down a step or two. "You see—you see—" she passed a strong brown hand across a fine, sun-burnt forehead, "I don't feel very well. I've the worst headache! Knocking that ball around in the sun so long this morning, I guess," she added, looking severely at the young man from the village, much as if it were his fault.

SOUL RESEMBLES EASTER EGG

Man Leaves Body in St. Louis Boarding House and Goes Traveling With Spirits.

A gentleman who in his mundane existence goes under the name of Hermanus Ruebenguhl left his body in a St. Louis boarding house, he says, and went traveling in his unclad soul. He reports an enjoyable trip and a very sociable time with kindred spirits with whom he hobnobbed while on his journey.

All the souls he met were about the size and shape of goose eggs, but colored according to their characters. Blue souls, for example, were superstitious; red, bloodthirsty; white, uncultured. High livers had pink bands or dots on the soul eggshell; humorists were green, and brown souls were deceptive and not to be trusted.

A mass meeting of assorted souls must look like a collection of Easter eggs if Mr. Ruebenguhl's facts are reliable. He is relating his experience in a lecture tour of the middle west, and apparently is expecting to keep soul and body together with the proceeds.

The House That Jack Built

By GERALD PRIME

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

There was a sudden jolt, followed by a tilt and a dragging over an uneven surface, a weird prolongation of the air-brake exhaust and then the train came to a dead stop. Startled, but not especially alarmed—for she knew practically nothing of the perils of railway traveling—Janet raised the window and took an observation.

There was no station or even a siding or water tank in sight. Janet withdrew her decidedly attractive head in time to see that most of her fellow-passengers were leaving the car, bent on investigation into the cause of stoppage. The young man who had been sitting across the aisle since the train left Erie Junction was not among them. He still sat motionless. What he was actually doing was amusing himself over the evident mystification of his fair neighbor.

Her curiosity was more insistent than her disapproval of his conduct, so she asked him, in a tone that was meant to be expressive of a profound indifference to his opinion on any subject other than the business in hand, "Do you happen to know what is the matter?"

"I'm sorry to say I don't," he returned very politely. "I'm waiting patiently until some of those who went to make the usual inquiries return to the car. It's quite possible we may have come in contact with some stray animal, you know."

"If I were a man"—she began impatiently, but stopped before she had finished the statement she had been tempted to make.

"Permit me to congratulate you on your escape," he said, with a really effective bow, but with no attempt to indicate the special good fortune to which he referred.

"I believe I'll go, anyway," she said, conscious that he found her amusing.

"If you will permit me," he said, rising quickly and taking her hat from the rack, "I will go with you."

His manner was so respectful and so entirely what it should be that she could not run the risk of appearing prudish by declining. Besides, there really was no reason why he should not go with her on this tour of investigation. It was broad daylight, there were numerous other persons in the company and she was abundantly able to take care of herself, even though she were traveling alone.

She nodded a good-natured acquiescence and they left the car together. As soon as they reached the ground they were told by a returning investigator that it was a case of derailment and that a brakeman had been sent to the nearest telegraph station to summon a wrecking outfit from the city.

"I wonder how long it will be," was Janet's first inspiration.

He smiled agreeably. "I don't quite know how to explain it," he said, "but I was wondering the same thing." Then they both laughed a little, and he continued: "Suppose we go and ask the conductor."

The only thing about which the conductor was positive was that it couldn't be less than three hours. He was too competent a railroad official to commit himself to any opinion more definite. It was his air of indefiniteness that made Janet feel a trifle uncomfortable.

"I shouldn't like to get into the city after dark," she said. "I have never been there."

"It isn't far from here," he new acquaintance said, reassuringly. "If you were on the top of the hill yonder you would have an excellent view of it."

"Then I believe I will go up and get it," she said. "Will it you will promise not to go on and leave me," she added, addressing the conductor.

"No fear of that, miss," he said, this time quite positively. "Some of the other passengers are already up there. When we're ready the engineer will give warning with the whistle."

"And if you will permit me," said her companion, "I will be your guide and point out some of the interesting features as they come into view. It is my home, and I'm familiar with every part of it."

It was a courteous offer and Janet was keen enough, despite her lack of years and experience, to recognize its honesty. Her firm resolution to risk no chance acquaintance lost all its purpose in the presence of such transparent sincerity.

"It's very kind of you," she said, with a smile which implied acceptance of his offer to accompany her, "but I should think it wouldn't be much of a novelty to you."

"It is—under the present conditions," he laughed. "Besides, it is really worth while. The city is at its very best when viewed from the hilltops."

They started off together. It was not a tiresome ascent, for the path was well defined and made circuitous to avoid steep climbing. It was shaded deeply almost the entire distance, and when the summit was reached Janet felt no fatigue whatever. Along the way her companion had made most of the conversation, preparing her, with a wealth of interesting detail, for her first glimpse of the city beyond.

It came suddenly—a spacious panorama of low-lying fields and groves and water, and, beyond, the glittering outline of granite and marble that loomed skyward.

"Isn't it glorious?" he asked, but Janet, under the firm domination of the spell, made no attempt to answer him. Hat in hand, her cheeks flushed with the exercise and the excitement of the situation, her dark hair put into charming confusion by the hilltop breeze, with eyes for nothing but the strange, new picture before her, she stood and took her fill of it.

"It's beautiful," she said, finally, "but, do you know, I feel afraid of it?" He fancied that she shivered.

"It won't hurt you; I'm perfectly sure it won't," he said, soberly. "You are sure to like it."

They seated themselves on the side of a huge bowlder and he pointed out to her all the more striking features of the view. Then, almost before she knew it, and influenced by she hardly know what, she found herself telling him all about herself—how she was Janet Marion, only child of a country doctor, who was dead; how she had made her home with a distant relative, attended the academy in her home town and, finally, had grown weary of the monotony of the life, and had made up her mind to go to the city and fit herself for the profession of trained nurse. She even admitted that she was free from all anxiety in money matters; that her father had provided for her generously, and that she had evolved the scheme of becoming a nurse to escape from the humdrum of her life.

"I ought to be ashamed of myself," he said, when she had finished. Then he took a card from his pocket and handed it to her. It bore the legend: "John Ware, Architect."

"Now I know why you are so fond of the city," she laughed. "You have built some of it."

"Hardly enough to account for my preference," he admitted, frankly.

"Can we see anything—any building you have designed—from here?" she asked, ingeniously.

"No," he said with a sigh that might have been pathetic had it not been for the merry twinkle in his eee. "I have never experienced the felicity of creating a skyscraper or even a cathedral. My genius has been wasted thus far over suburban houses built to catch the eye of the prospective buyer who wants something startling in architecture—and usually gets it. What will you say when I tell you that I have only built one structure that I am proud of? It is my own little house, and nobody likes it but its designer. It is so different from the others that it goes by the name of the 'House that Jack Built.' I'm Jack, you know."

The two sat on the hilltop talking until the engineer sounded the return to the train. The conductor's estimate of the time necessary to get in motion again was wide of the mark; in rather less than two hours they were at the Union station, and Ware and Janet were saying good night.

"I should like to see the 'House that Jack Built,'" she laughed as they separated.

"Should you, really?" he asked, a glad light in his eyes.

She nodded. And in time her wish was gratified. More than that, she became its mistress.

Most Voracious Cannibals Living.

The most terrible species of cannibals living are the cruel, bloodthirsty Manyuema of Tanganyika. Living to the west of Tanganyika, these cannibals, clothed in primitive fashion with a piece of bark cloth rudely hammered out from a neighboring tree, have an appetite for human flesh which is well-nigh insatiable. They exercise the most fiendish cunning in tracking down their quarry, choosing fat, well-covered people in preference to those who are lean and bony. Their favorite practise is to waylay their victims at eventide, so that they may have before them a long night in which to effectually dispose of their prey by cutting it up into strips and drying it over a low fire in the woods. These dried strips of human flesh are carefully preserved for future use, and on two occasions these gruesome forest food depots were discovered and their owners killed by the Wafipa people, who inhabit East Tanganyika. Most of these cannibals file their teeth to a point, so as to enable them more easily to tear the flesh from the bone when they have to eat their abominable meal in a hurry.—Wide World Magazine.

TERRIBLE SUFFERING ENDED.

How An Allegan, Mich., Woman Regained Her Health.

Mrs. Robert Schwabe, R. F. D. No. 8, Allegan, Mich., says: "Doctors could not cure me and I was rapidly running into Bright's disease. Kidney secretions were like blood and I arose 8 to 10 times at night to void them. I became frightened at my condition. My sight began to fail and pains in my back were like knife-thrusts. I cried for hours, unable to control my nerves. After I started using Doan's Kidney Pills, I began to feel better and soon I was cured. I am a living testimonial of their merit."

May Sell 100,000,000 Red Cross Seals.

Twenty-five million Red Cross Christmas seals have been printed and are being distributed by the American Red Cross, and arrangements have been made to print 100,000,000 if necessary. It is expected that this number will be needed. While the sticker is perforated like those used last year, it is intended for use only as a seal on the back of letters. The seal is one inch square with the conventional Red Cross in the center and the words, "Merry Christmas, Happy New Year. American Red Cross" in a circle about it. The colors are red and green. The design is by Mrs. Guion Thompson, of Waterbury, Conn., who received $100 as a prize for her sketch.

What Did Your Shirtwaist Cost?

Whether you bought it ready to wear, or had it made, or made it for yourself, you know that it cost enough, even if it is pretty and fresh and clean. And if it is frayed and soiled and worn and homely looking after it has been in the wash three or four times, it has cost entirely too much. Might as well throw your shirt waist money away as allow your shirt waists to be washed with common yellow soap. Easy Task Laundry Soap takes the dirt and leaves the goods as they were. Your grocer is selling lots of it at five cents a cake.

Popularity of Thais.

"Every other young actress is calling herself Thais," said Henry E. Dixey at a dinner at Mauquin's. "Thais McGinnis, Thais Endicott, Thais Schmidt—the thing is universal.

"Universal and ridiculous; for they who have read Anatole France's story of 'Thais' know that she was a very naughty little girl, indeed. I am quite sure that no real reader of 'Thais' would ever, under any circumstances, consent to be called such a name.

"It makes me think of a man who, taking his infant daughter to be baptised, told the clergyman to call her Venus.

"'But I refuse to call her Venus,' said the clergyman, indignantly. 'Venus is the name of a pagan goddess.'

"'Well, how about your own girl, Diana?' said the man."

The Place of Honor.

Farmer Hodge was of the good, old-fashioned school, and he always gave a feast to his hands at harvest time.

It was harvest time and the feast was about to commence.

Giles was the oldest hand and the hostess, with beaming cordiality, motioned him to the seat by her right hand. But Giles remained silently unresponsive.

"Come," said the hostess, "don't be bashful, Mr. Giles"—he was just Giles on ordinary occasions—"you've a right to the place of honor, you know."

Giles deliberated a moment, then spoke.

"Thank you kindly, Mrs. Hodge," he said, "but if it's all the same to you, I'd rather sit opposite this pudden'!"

COFFEE WAS IT.

People Slowly Learn the Facts.

"All my life I have been such a slave to coffee that the very aroma of it was enough to set my nerves quivering. I kept gradually losing my health but I used to say 'Nonsense, it don't hurt me.'

"Slowly I was forced to admit the truth and the final result was that my whole nervous force was shattered.

"My heart became weak and uncertain in its action and that frightened me. Finally my physician told me, about a year ago, that I must stop drinking coffee or I could never expect to be well again.

"I was in despair, for the very thought of the medicines I had tried so many times nauseated me. I thought of Postum but could hardly bring myself to give up the coffee.

"Finally I concluded that I owed it to myself to give Postum a trial. So I got a package and carefully followed the directions, and what a delicious, nourishing, rich drink it was! Do you know I found it very easy to shift from coffee to Postum and not mind the change at all?

"Almost immediately after I made the change I found myself better, and as the days went by I kept on improving. My nerves grew sound and steady, I slept well and felt strong and well-balanced all the time.

"Now I am completely cured, with the old nervousness and sickness all gone. In every way I am well once more."

It pays to give up the drink that acts on some like a poison, for health is the greatest fortune one can have.

Ghosts at the Marriage Feast

Two Dilemmas.

Last Thursday evening the J. A. G. Club planned a surprise on one of their members, Miss Josephine Carnes. They knew Mr. and Mrs. Carnes were not at home, so they designed to disguise as ghosts and test the velocity of Miss Josephine's blood. They thought possibly—at least they hoped that this particular evening might be the one on which Mr. Coburn would "chance" to call so that the fun would be two-fold.

When they reached the Carnes home they found every one gone except the children, Ruth and Homer. They quickly understood the situation and in answer to the specter's question replied simply, with dancing eyes, that their sister had gone up town but would be back in a few minutes and perhaps bring her friend with her. After making an ally of the children and securing promises of secrecy, the white illusion vanished. When they glided into the room a few minutes later they were dumbfounded to see their victims standing before them in bridal robes. To say that the couple was surprised would be mildly expressing it. They glanced hurriedly about them for a refuge, but the ghosts had presence of mind enough to place themselves in front of all ways of escape. They were expecting a master of ceremonies, and were prepared to make quick and silent adieus, in case be put in a sudden appearance.

At last the visitors noticed the golden wedding band on the bride's finger, and she blushingly confessed that the deed had been done. The ghosts were a little relieved and gave themselves up to watching Mr. Coburn exhibit all the later shades and colors in complexion, both plain and varigated.

The hostess then adapted herself to the situation and ask the spirit crowd to remove their disguises and have a jolly evening, but the interior of the disguises were not the least bit wedding-like and the rotundity and pompousness of some of the ghosts were not at all substantial, so they merely removed their masks and said, "we have not long to stay, thank you." The young Mrs. then served the white robed guests with a dainty luncheon, during which all explanations were made. One ghost alone had known both sides and was thoroughly enjoying the situation. She had more than her share of the evening's fun, and you may look out for initiation in the future. At a late hour the strange looking guests took their departure wishing the pair a long and prosperous life. THE NEWS join their many friends in wishing them everything good in life.

The ceremony was performed at the Lutheran parsonage by Rev. Hitchner. The young couple will remain on the farm east of St. Joe.

J. C. C. LaVogue, $1.50 the pair

LaVogue is a corset for the woman of ample developments. The skirt is long, reaching its greatest length at the hips. To prevent stretching or tearing or uncomfortable binding when the wearer seats herself there are two deep vents, held in position by sliding supporters.

The coutil used in this number is of unusual excellence for a corset of this price. The supporters are strong and non-slipable, the boning is double and flexible.

LaVogue is a corset that one can count upon to give the best of service and in which one can enjoy ideal comfort.

"A corset for every figure" is a phrase that has been used over much but in this instance it is used advisedly for truly the J. C. C. line provides for women of types.

PREMIUM

The price is one dollar and we confirm the J. C. C. peoples estimate of this value. It is really a premium corset at the price.

It is long as today's fashions dictate: it has an even all the way around unboned skirt extension. Now, the joining of this extension to the body of the garment is made a feature, for it is done in a manner that adds strength and prevents stretching and tearing when the wearer seats herself.

Developed in good coutil, filled with substantial boning, and complete with two pairs of hose supporters, good strong ones.

A Substitute for Alcohol.

The tendency of people to contract some sort or another habit is shown by the common use in various countries of tobacco, tea, coffee, opium and the like. In Abyssinia and parts of Arabian Turkey the place of alcohol is taken by the kat plant, which the natives almost universally chew. In parts of Abyssinia certain tribes chew the leaves of the kat plant commonly when they are compelled to exert special or long-continued effort, the immediate effect of which is to produce an agreeable sleeplessness and stimulation. The freshly-cut leaves have a rather pleasant taste, and produce a kind of intoxication of long duration, with none of the disagreeable features of ordinary inebriety. Messengers and soldiers are enabled, by chewing the leaves, to go without food for a number of days.

In parts of Arabian Turkey there are cafes for the consumption of the kat plant which correspond to the cafes in Europe and America where coffee and alcohol are used.

BOYS AND GIRLS

TRICK WITH A BUTTONHOLE

Performed With Small Stick Having Loop Attached—Directions and Illustration.

This trick is performed with a small stick having a loop attached that is too small for the stick to pass through, writes Charles Graham in Popular Mechanics.

Spread out the string and place it each side of the buttonhole, then draw the cloth around the hole through the string until it is far enough to pass the stick through the hole. Pull back the cloth and you have the string looped in the hole with a hitch the same as if the stick has been passed through the string.

The stick may be removed by pulling up the loop as if you were passing the stick through it, letting the stick in the hole and leaving the string on the outside, then spread the string, pulling up the cloth and passing the stick through the hole as before.

MAKING INDIAN PLAY SUITS

Little Boys and Girls Can Rig Themselves Up in Novel Way by Using Old Newspapers.

The boy who wants to change himself into a little Indian may easily make an Indian play suit. For a headdress cut a deep fringe from newspapers. Pin it around the head and pin a long piece of the fringe to fall down the back to look like feathers. Cut more fringe and pin down the sides of the pants and another piece of fringe, not very long, to pin around the ankles over the tops of low shoes to look like moccasins.

The little girl who wants to be a squaw may make her suit in this way: First, make the skirt. Paste two large newspaper sheets together so that the short side of one newspaper lays over to the short side of the other sheet of paper. Fold this long piece of paper just formed so that the long top edge reaches nearly down to the long lower edge. Cut the lower edge so that it is formed into fringe. The skirt is then finished. Slip a piece of tape inside the skirt where the paper is folded, and tie it at the back to keep the skirt in place. The Indian sack is made in this way. Place a double sheet of newspaper in front of you so that the long double edge of the paper is at the top. Fold the short edge of the paper on one side over onto the other short edge. From the upper left hand corner of this folded paper cut out a double square of paper which is about four inches each way. All of the edges except the top edge and the folded edge of the paper should be slashed to form fringe. Open out your paper and put it on as a sack by putting your head through the square hole in the top of the paper. The fringe will be down the sides of the sack and on the bottom of the little coat.

BEES CAN BE AFFECTIONATE

Little Honey Gatherers Have Marked Attachment for Some Persons and Hate Others.

"The bee has a marked degree of attachment for some persons and hate for others. I have a hired man who cannot go near the hives," writes a writer in Outing, "and the bees will even hunt him out when far away in the fields and will chase him flying to shelter.

"When my father had a swarm to deliver I have seen him let them light all over his hand and arm up to his shoulder, then, after carrying them for a quarter of a mile, he laughingly brushed them off into a hive. They were fond of him. They are not fond of me—not at least to that extent.

"This passionate liking and hating runs through the whole animal kingdom and must be taken account of while seeking our allies. Dogs never go near some people. I have seen a cat become so attached to a human friend that after separation it mourned for weeks."

A Kindly Offer.

Little Edna, after listening to her mother and a caller talking incessantly for almost an hour, said: "Why don't you women rest and let me talk awhile?"

AMUSING FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Game of "Joneses' Vacation" Will Furnish Pleasure for Boys and Girls of Any Age.

Did you ever give a party and find it hard to amuse the boys and girls after they arrived? It is not a pleasant experience, and it is always well to know of a game that will make the young folks "limber up."

One that children of any age will enjoy and which takes little preparation is the Joneses' Vacation. One of the girls is selected as Mrs. Jones and one of the boys as Mr. Jones. You have ready a suit case and at a given signal Mr. and Mrs. Jones must unlock it and put on the things they find inside. It is a good idea to have a hat, a long coat, a veil, scarf, gloves and pocketbook for Mrs. Jones and a coat, hat, collar a (large one), necktie and gloves for Mr. Jones. They must dress in these as quickly as possible, for some one is timing them, and then they must lock the suit case and rush off with it to the train. That must be the farthest point you can select—usually the front door. After they have hit the front door a good hard thump they must rush back again, take off the things and pack them again. And if they don't pack carefully they will find themselves in trouble, for they must lock and strap the suit case again. Now it is the turn of another couple to be Mr. and Mrs. Jones, and when they all have tried the couple who made the trip in the shortest time are judged the winners.

It is well to use coats and hats that you do not need to treat carefully, for naturally they are apt to get rumpled in the excitement of the game. Don't forget the collar, in which you should put a large stud, for it always is interesting to see anyone in a hurry struggle with a collar button.

with some of our dumb animals. These two little girls, aged ten and eleven years respectively, the daughters of an Englishman, have successfully trained two of their sheep to harness.

Out for a Ride.

The sheep, which are eighteen months old, have been taught by the little girls to trot and gallop on the road or in the garden. Also they can be harnessed in tandem or alone.

Soap Bubbles.

If your father happens to be smoking when you are blowing soap bubbles, get him to blow some bubbles for you. He just fills his mouth with smoke, and then blows an ordinary bubble with the clay pipe. The bubble will generally grow very large, and will, of course, be filled with smoke. Floating in the sunshine, some of these present a very beautiful appearance.

If you want to make a very large bubble, first cover your hands well with soapsuds, and then place them together in the shape of a cup, leaving a small opening at the bottom. Then hold your hands about a foot from your mouth and blow into them. The bubbles obtained in this way are so large than they immediately burst on touching the floor.

Seeing Phoebe Home

By JANE OSBORN

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

Phoebe Dare sat erect on the shiny haircloth sofa with her great eyes fixed on the flowered carpet of the Dare parlor. Before her, cramped and uncomfortable, sat Jonathan Crane, a grim smile on his homely face and his eyes intent on Phoebe.

"Say, Phoebe," he said at length, "who's going to take you to the Kingsleys' dance?"

Phoebe made no response, but merely raised her eyes proudly and with a tantalizing twinkle.

"Of course you wouldn't go with me?" he asked. He began with the "of course" in view of the fact that Phoebe had just emphatically declined his proffered hand and heart.

Phoebe made no reply and a long pause followed while Jonathan gazed with something like devotion at the girl before him.

"The reason why I wanted to take you," he began at length, with a drawl, "was because of that wager I made with Craig Taylor."

"What wager?" asked the girl, suddenly alert.

"Oh, I guess it wouldn't interest you," said Jonathan rising. "I'd better be going now."

The girl, whose curiosity was thoroughly aroused, barred the way to the door. "Tell me what wager you have with Craig," she demanded in the most pleading tones. "Please tell me."

"Oh, it wasn't much of a wager," said Jonathan, slowly. "I guess I shouldn't have said anything about it."

But Phoebe persisted.

"Oh, well," said Jonathan, at last, as if he had been moved by her entreaty, "you see, I bet Craig that I could take you to the dance, and he bet that he could. That was more or less the reason why I asked you to marry me, so's to sort of cinch the matter."

Phoebe looked at him with perplexity.

"Oh, it isn't any great matter," said Jonathan. "I hate to lose the money just now, but then I ought to have known enough not to take such risks."

Phoebe's cheeks were scarlet, and as she stood before him, holding the door, Jonathan could feel the anger that had risen within her.

"Did Craig Taylor dare to take up that wager?" she asked.

"Yes," said Jonathan deliberately, watching her closely.

For another minute Phoebe still held the door closed. Then, as she opened it, she said with apparent tranquility:

"Say, Jonathan, if you want me to go to the Kingsleys' barn dance with you, I would just as soon."

So on the evening of the annual barn dance at the Kingsley farm, Phoebe dressed in her most bewitching frock, with a black ribbon at her throat to set off the pinkest and fairest of cheeks, and a rose in her hair to add to its dark luster. She was ready and waiting, wrapped well for the cold drive, when Jonathan came, and she stepped eagerly into the buggy beside him.

"Oh, do hurry," she begged, as her little foot tattooed on the floor of the buggy in anticipation of the dancing she loved. "I can hardly wait, and yet you go so dreadfully slow."

Jonathan felt the blood tingle within him as he realised that it was in his power to make her impatient—the girl who kept him in a mood of perpetual impatience.

Jonathan stalked into the floor of the Kingsley barn with a sense of momentary triumph. At his side beamed Phoebe, whose fickle heart, Jonathan was sure, had at some time worked havoc with well nigh every man there. His eye caught the self-satisfied smile of the city-bred Craig Taylor, whose recent friendship with Phoebe had filled Jonathan with maddening jealousy.

"Oh, hello, Phoebe," said Craig, stepping up to them and nodding slightly to Jonathan. Then as he lightly paid Phoebe a pretty compliment Jonathan was no longer able to disguise his ill temper. To Phoebe, with no other thought than to tease Jonathan, smiled adorably at Craig.

But when the last dance came and the lights had begun to burn low and lesser beauties than Phoebe had begun to droop, Jonathan's spirits began to rise in anticipation of the joy of seeing Phoebe home. He had taken his buggy from the shed and stood waiting for her, when all at once he heard her laugh and at the same instant realized that she was with Craig Taylor, getting into Craig Taylor's buggy.

"Hello, Jonathan," called one of the men, with a laugh, "thought you were going to take Phoebe home."

One of the girls suppressed a giggle and for a minute Jonathan had a great desire to fight every one. His next thought was of overtaking Craig, laying him flat and carrying off the girl he loved. Instead, Jonathan slowly swung into his buggy and drove thoughtfully through the crisp morning air.

It was a few days later, on Sunday afternoon, and Jonathan again sat in the little Dare parlor, before Phoebe, who, as usual, sat upright on the hair sofa. He had not seen her since the memorable dance and Phoebe expected to be scolded.

"I say, Phoebe," Jonathan said at length, "perhaps you'd like to go out sleighing with me—out to the lake. It's great sleighing."

Phoebe accepted readily and without further delay Jonathan was ready with his horse and sleigh, with heated bricks and heavy wraps to keep out the cold winds.

If Phoebe was radiant at a dance when the music and motion had brought the color to her face and the light to her eyes, she was even more so in a sleigh when the fresh, cold wind and the sound of the sleigh bells seemed somehow to work wonders.

It was a long drive, but Jonathan's spirits did not lag, and as they neared the shore of the lake, bleak and deserted, with not a sign of mortal for miles around, he could feel the girl at his side shrinking toward him helplessly.

"My, but this is a lonely spot in winter," she said. "Would you ever think it could be so nice in summer?"

"I don't know, Phoebe," said Jonathan, smiling. "Let's get out and walk about a minute to get up the circulation. You seem a bit cold."

So Phoebe, accepting the suggestion, got out from the sleigh, and, as she turned about for Jonathan to follow, she saw him quickly whip up his horse, and, turning as sharp a corner, as the sleigh would allow, he drove away from her.

"Jonathan, Jonathan!" she called in tones that were unavailing.

On he drove, with the distracted girl running and crying after him. At length, after he had gone half a mile through the snow, he stopped and, with a grim smile on his face, watched the girl plod through the snow after him.

"Jonathan," she wailed when she had reached him, "Jonathan, whatever are you doing?"

"Well, I guess," said Jonathan with deliberation, "you can find some one else to take you home. You'd hardly expect me to, after the dance at Kingsley's, would you, seeing it's not your custom to go home with the man that brings you?"

Phoebe was in tears—tears of remorse and hurt pride, not of anger—and when a minute later Jonathan had seized her in his arms and put her gently in the sleigh at his side she clung trembling to his arm.

"Jonathan," she said, after they had driven through the snow for a few minutes, "Jonathan, I'm sorry."

Jonathan made no reply.

"Jonathan," she said again pleadingly, "Jonathan, did you win that wager?"

"There wasn't any wager," said Jonathan. "That was a lie I told you about the wager."

"Then—then you didn't propose to me just to 'cinch the matter?'" she asked.

"No," said Jonathan. "I proposed because I had a notion of marrying you."

And this time Phoebe accepted.

Keeping Flowers Fresh.

An authority on flowers has this to say in regard to their preservation: "Place the flowers in a vase filled with fresh water, to which a little charcoal or a small piece of camphor has been added. The vase should be set upon a plate or dish and covered with a bell-shaped glass. Around the edge of the glass a little water should be poured, so that air will be excluded. If fresh cut flowers need reviving, place the stems in boiling water, and by the time the water is cold the flowers will have revived. Cut the ends of the stems anew and place in fresh cold water.

Shakespearean Joke.

"But why, prithee," contended the First Critic, "should this new playwright, Shirpur, have introduced a comic gravedigging scene into his tragedy, pardie?"

"'Tis easy of solution, by hen," answered the Second Critic. "Our author hath put in gravediggers for the purpose of unearthing a plot! Boy, a cup of sack!"

Wit was crude in them days.

APPROVE MOVE FOR SCHOOL SUFFRAGE

Thirty Thousand Letters Sent Throughout State.

SEEKING SPECIAL BALLOT

Effort to Arouse Public Interest Is First Step in Campaign Planned by Woman's School League of Indiana.

Indianapolis.—Thirty thousand circular letters sent broadcast throughout the state to women prominent in city, town and rural communities urging them to take an active part in the present political campaign in an effort to obtain the election of legislators pledged to support legislation for the election of women to positions upon the school boards of the state, have brought many answers, all of them favorable to the cause. The inquiries marked the opening of a new epoch in the political life of the state—a period in which it is expected the women of Indiana will become a vital force in matters relating to the many problems of the schools.

The effort to arouse public interest in the movement is the first step in the campaign planned by the Woman's School League of Indiana, which was organized a short time ago for the sole purpose of bringing about the passage of the desired legislation. Since the organization of the league in this city women in 15 cities and towns of the state have formed similar asociations and the officers of the local society expect that branches will be formed in the near future in many other localities as a result of the publicity campaign now being conducted.

A score of questions, all of them relating to school problems, was asked in the circulars and all of the answers received, according to the local officers, expressed the unanimity of opinion.

One of the first queries asked of the women of the state was whether they are satisfied with the public schools of their communities. All of the responses received, with the exception of those which came from this city, gave negative answers. The chief objections raised against the schools, as they now exist, are that the buildings and ground are frequently insanitary, and that too little attention is given to industrial education.

Practically all of the schools outside of Indianapolis, according to the answers, are "in politics," and none of the replies received state that school commissioners and trustees are chosen for special fitness to fill the positions.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Portland. — Samuel Broughman, seventy-five years old, is dead at his home in Van Wert, O., according to information reaching relatives here. The cause of death is a mystery, and there are indications of foul play. He was found unconscious in his home, where he had lived alone for years.

Danville.—Luther White of Stilesville was found guilty of assault with intent to kill and given the limit, a fine of $1,000 and a six months' term in jail. Three weeks ago he attacked Ed Robards, a druggist, because the latter would not sell him whisky. He fled to Indianapolis, where he was arrested and returned here.

Evansville.—Mrs. Otto F. Jacobi, wife of the president of the Central Trust and Savings company, died following an operation for goitre, performed as a last resort to save her life. Gradually she had been choking to death for a week. Mrs. Jacobi was sixty-six years old. She leaves two sons, one a physician in San Antonio, Tex., and the other a business man in Seattle, Wash.

Goshen.—Cracksmen entered the hardware store owned by Voder Bros. at Topeka, Lagrange county, blew the safe open, and obtained $75 and valuable papers. The noise of the explosion aroused the sleeping village, but no inquiry was made and the discovery of the theft did not come until the place was opened for business. Topeka is without police protection and there is no clue to the yeggmen.

Washington.—Special Judge M. S. Hastings in the circuit court set aside the verdict rendered by a jury last week in favor of Ellen Clark for $1,258.50 against James J. Kirklin for services which she had rendered the Kirklin home from the time she was nine years old until one year ago. Judge Hastings ordered the case retried on the grounds that an error had been made in the instructions to the jury and that the judgment was excessive.

Laporte.—A posse of 100 men and many women and children are searching the woods near this city in hope of finding the body of Mis Emma Brown, sixty years old, who is believed to have committed suicide. Miss Brown, who is wealthy, went to the John Garwood place, saying she would like to spend several days there.

South Bend.—Two hundred dentists, members of the Northern Indiana and the Southern Michigan Medical societies, will gather in South Bend to attend the annual convention of the association.

HIS HANDS CRACKED OPEN

"I am a man seventy years old. My hands were very sore and cracked open on the insides for over a year with large sores. They would crack open and bleed, itch, burn and ache so that I could not sleep and could do but little work. They were so bad that I could not dress myself in the morning. They would bleed and the blood dropped on the floor. I called on two doctors, but they did me no good. I could get nothing to do any good till I got the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. About a year ago my daughter got a cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment and in one week from the time I began to use them my hands were all healed up and they have not been a mite sore since. I would not be without the Cuticura Remedies.

"They also cured a bad sore on the hand of one of my neighbor's children, and they think very highly of the Cuticura Remedies. John W. Hasty, So. Effingham, N. H., Mar. 5, and Apr. 11, '09."

Tit for Tat.

Lloyd C. Griscom, in an interview in New York, said of party dissensions.

"They are animated by a nasty spirit, a tit-for-tat spirit; and they go from bad to worse.

"It's like the case of the engaged couple at the seaside dance. The young man, a little jealous, said coldly to his fiancee at supper.

"'Let me see—was it you I kissed in the conservatory?'

"'About what time?' the young girl answered, with a little laugh."

Who Scratched the Bathtub?

Nice, porcelain bathtub, too; and all the folks thought it was just lovely. But somebody was washing it out and used common laundry soap—the yellow kind with rosin and strong caustic in it—and away went the enamel and the finish. (If that kind of soap will harm porcelain enamel, what won't it do to clothes?) "Easy Task Soap," the pure, white, antiseptic, five-cents-a-cake kind, will not harm anything but dirt. Try two cakes and get your money back if it isn't as represented.

"Thank You's."

The man who is not thankful for the lessons he learned in adversity didn't learn any.

There must be plenty of thankfulness in the world if those who have loved and lost could know just what they have lost.

"Why are you giving thanks? They took $10,000 from you in Wall Street a little while ago, didn't they?"

"Yes; but I got out with $20 they didn't know I had."—Judge.

Prudent Bridegroom.

"The uncertainties of life in New York are reflected in wedding rings," said the jeweler. "Of all the wedding rings I have sold this season more than half were brought back after the ceremony to have the date put on. The rest of the inscription was engraved when the ring was purchased, but in order that the date might be correct it was cautiously omitted until after the knot was tied."

History of Red Cross Seal.

"Charity stamps," first used in Boston in 1862 for the soldiers' relief funds during the Civil war, were the original forerunners of the Red Cross Christmas seal, which will be used this year to bring happiness and cheer to millions. The Delaware Anti-Tuberculosis society in 1907 for the first time in America made use of a stamp for the purpose of getting revenue to fight consumption. In a hastily organized campaign of only three weeks they realized $3,000. The next year, 1908, the American Red Cross conducted the first national tuberculosis stamp campaign. From this sale $135,000 was realized for the anti-tuberculosis movement. In 1909, under many adverse conditions, $250,000 was realized from these stamps. This year the slogan of the tuberculosis fighters and the Red Cross is "A Million for Tuberculosis From Red Cross Seals in 1910."

He Knew.

A small boy brought up by a fire-eating father to hate anything connected with England or the English was consigned recently to eat dinner with the nurse while the family entertained a genuine English lord in the dining room. The grown-ups' meal had come to that "twenty minutes past" stage where conversation halts directly, when a childish treble fell upon the dumb-waiter shaft from the kitchen. This is what the astonished nobleman heard:

"Fe, fi, fo, fum,
"I smell the blood of an Englishmun."—Wasp.

SYNOD TO MEET IN SULLIVAN IN 1911

Presbyterians at Indiana in Session at Indianapolis.

URGE ADVANCED ASSESSMENT

Decide on Levy of Fifty Cents on Each for Home Bank—New Officers Are Elected—Select Place for Next Gathering.

Indianapolis.—The next meeting of the Synod of Indiana Presbyterian Churches will be held in the First Presbyterian church of Sullivan, according to action taken by the synod in session at the Tabernacle Presbyterian church in Indianapolis. An invitation was extended by John C. Chaney, an elder of the Sullivan church.

Other actions taken by the synod, in business session, include the election of officers, the approval of committees appointed by Rev. George Knox, newly-elected moderator; the receiving of reports of various synodical committees and adoption of the recommendation of the committee on home missions, which provides for an annual assessment of 50 cents on each member of each Indiana church, to meet the expenses of the home mission board.

The officers elected at the session included Rev. L. P. Marshall, Crawfordsville, who was chosen stated clerk; Rev. J. B. Miller, Vincennes, permanent clerk to serve for three years; Elder J. P. Durham, Indianapolis, treasurer; Elder John C. Van Atta, Brookston, vice moderator, and Elder John H. Holliday, Indianapolis; Rev. David Van Dyke, Indianapolis; Elder T. H. Spann, Indianapolis; Elder Robert Brown, Frankfort, and Rev. L. P. Marshall, Crawfordsville, trustees of the organization for the coming year.

The report of the home mission committee of the synod was presented by Rev. John P. Hale of Lafayette, who made a strong plea for the advancement of the amount of per capita assessment of the members of the Indiana churches for this fund. He showed the need of additional funds in all departments of the work, read detailed reports of the conditions of the various presbyteries and finally recommended an increase in the assessment. The general per capita assessment was 40 cents last year.

Coal Workers Run Shelburn Special.

Senator Beveridge spoke in the heart of the mining region of Indiana. It was the first speech he has delivered in this campaign to an audience composed almost exclusively of workingmen. The people of Shelburn say there is more coal under the earth in this vicinity than in any other spot on the globe. There are 11 mines in this immediate locality and the whole community depends upon the mining industry.

If there ever was any doubt that the miners are Senator Beveridge's friends, that doubt was dispelled. He was given a royal greeting and there were many indications that he stands high in the regard of the men who mine the "black diamonds."

One of the most remarkable demonstrations of the campaign signalized the senator's advent into the mining camps of Indiana. This unusual feature was a special train tendered and paid for by the Sullivan county miners to convey the senator from Terre Haute to Shelburn. This train consisted of seven coaches, and when it arrived at Shelburn every coach was filled with miners.

Teachers Take Normal Training.

Statistics covering a number of the largest accredited teachers' training schools of Indiana and compiled by Dr. Robert J. Aley, superintendent of public instruction, show that 3,263 teachers have received the Class A training provided for by the state board of education following an act by the general assembly of 1909. Those having received the Class B training number 845 and those having received Class C training number 22. Sixty-eight have taken the special two year's teachers' course.

Class A includes those teachers who have taken 12 weeks' professional training in a school accredited by the state board of education.

Reports from the schools already received place the Marion Normal college at the head of the list with 948 in Class A and 202 in Class B. Other schools which have reported the number of teachers who received the special training follow: Central Normal college, 449 in Class A and 89 in Class B; Valparaiso college, 430 in Class A and 90 in Class B; Indiana university, 268 in Class A and 34 in Class B; Winona college, 265 in Class A and 81 in Class B.

War Veterans Meet.

The annual reunion of the Eighty-ninth Indiana infantry and the Ninth Indiana battery was held at Wabash. Some went from Indianapolis for the reunion, including Capt. W. H. Morse of Company A, Twenty-ninth Indiana. The infantry and battery have always held their reunions together. During most of the conflict the Eighty-ninth Indiana supported the Ninth battery. Unusual interest has been manifested in this reunion because the veterans will see the camp where they were recruited.

Publicity Is Real Remedy.

Wider and more timely publicity of reports of conditions made to the board of state charities concerning county jails, county poor asylums, county orphans' homes and other institutions which come directly or indirectly under the attention of the board is advoned by Governor Marshall as a means of obtaining better and quicker reforms in the administration of affairs and of conditions in the institutions.

"Timely publicity," said the governor, "is the greatest incentive to reform. The county board of commissioners which knows that the state at large is to learn at once of bad conditions in the county jail or the county poor asylum, the jailer or superintendent who knows he is to have his administration held up to statewide notice, and the board of trustees of a private institution which knows that it cannot keep hidden any of the affairs of such institution are more likely to hasten the remedy of objectionable things.

"My idea is that when an agent of the state board visits an institution and finds just grounds for criticism, the condition should be made known at once, and should not be covered up while the state board, the board of county commissioners or a board of trnstees consumes from six to nine months in wrangling over whether conditions are as bad as reported. Virtually all these institutions are supported by the public, either by taxation or donation, and the contributing public has a right to know exactly what is being done in the institutions. The public has just as much right to know what is being done in these institutions, as it has to know what is being done here in the governor's office, where, I maintain, the public has a right to know everything as long as the procedure of justice does not demand that matters be kept under cover to prevent the escape of a criminal or miscarriage of justice in another way.

"I am certain that while the board of state charities is daily doing a great deal of good among the charitable institutions of the state, it could do a great deal more if the people were taken into the confidence of the board, when any fault of serious nature is found, as soon as it develops that the serious fault exists. The people can be trusted to do their part toward remedying evils connected with the care of the state's unfortunate, and all they ask is to be apprised of the things which need remedying. I am confident that if the people had been taken fully into the confidence of the board of state charities at the proper time, concerning jails in Indiana, much of the criticism which the delegates to the international prison congress, on their recent visit to this state, had to make of the American jail system and some of the conditions in our jails could not have been made."

Await Decision on Track Elevation.

Oral argument in three track elevation cases was had before the Indiana supreme court. All the facts in the cases are now before the court, and it is believed that a decision will be handed down before the legislature meets in January. In case the decision should be against the city and railroad companies, the legislature will be asked to amend the track elevation law so that the city and railroads will not be liable for damages to abutting property in track elevation work. The three cases were combined before the court for argument, and it is expected that one decision will cover all three.

The cases cover the question of damages for Nelson-Morris & Co., the Sinker-Davis company and the Indianapolis Light and Heat company, in connection with the Kentucky avenue track elevation. The first two named companies brought suit to collect damages, but three judges of the superior court, sitting en banc, decided that the city and railroads were not responsible for damages to abutting property where tracks were raised and the streets depressed. The two companies appealed from the decision.

D. A. R. Delegates Have Row on Hand

Friends of Mrs. William C. Story, New York city, who last year was defeated for the office of president general of the National Daughters of the American Revolution by Mrs. Scott of Chicago, by the narrow margin of eight votes, and who is in attendance upon the Indiana state conference in Kokomo in the interest of her candidacy this year for the same office, are up in arms and savage in their criticism of what they term the "studious mistreatment" of Mrs. Story, for which they blame Mrs. John Dinwiddie of Fowler, state regent, in particular, although the latter's friends say such criticism is not deserved.

Mrs. Story is regent of the Manhattan Chapter, D. A. R., New York state, and her friends say she was not at first accorded a place on the platform, as was due her by courtesy. Near the close of the meeting she was presented to the audience by Mrs. G. W. Ross, state secretary, and not by the state regent.

Incorporations.

Articles of incorporation were filed with the secretary of state as follows:

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Evansville, Mount Carmel & Northern Railway company it was decided to increase the capital stock from $50,000 to $500,000.

The Campion Bridge company, New Jersey; total capital stock, $100,000; amount represented in Indiana, none; object, to manufacture, to sell and erect bridges; incorporators, A. J. Bailey, A. C. Bridges.

A RARE SHEEP OPPORTUNITY

Enormous Receipts at Market—Farmers and Sheep Feeders Can Stock Up at Bargain Prices.

CAUSES OF THE RUN.

200,000 sheep and lambs received in three days—such, in round numbers, is the record-breaking run thus far this week on the Chicago market!

This enormous over-marketing of sheep is the result of temporary and peculiar causes, and offers a rare opportunity for farmers and sheep feeders to stock up at bargain prices.

This great rush of sheep to market comes mainly from Montana and adjoining western range country, and cannot last more than two or three weeks longer. It is no evidence of over-production. Its principal causes are the recent drought, which so burned out the grass that there will be very little winter feed on the range, and which prevented the putting up of sufficient hay to carry any considerable number of sheep over winter, while last winter was a very severe one and hay was so closely fed that there is no old hay left over for the purpose. The consequence is that sheep owners are forced to market the bulk of their sheep this fall, or else lose them in the fierce storms of winter.

The most serious cause of the present general liquidation, however, is the restriction of the range through occupation and fencing by dry farmers, who are grain growers, and not live stock raisers. The tremendous rush of these settlers upon the range within the last three years, and especially within the last twelve months, is hard for eastern people to realize. It is not alone the area actually enclosed by these settlers, but the breaking up thereby of vast regions of grasing lands into such small sections that they are no longer available to stockmen for grazing their flocks, which is one of the main reasons why the sheep supplies of the western range country are being more closely marketed this year than ever before in the history of the trade.

This means an inevitable shortage at market later on and next year, and with a constantly growing demand for both mutton and wool, it would seem that future good prices are assured.

The western range country has heretofore been the chief source of sheep market supplies, but unless the farmers of the corn belt begin at once to raise many more sheep than they have ever done before, there will be a great scarcity of both mutton and wool before long in this country.

Moreover, there is a world-shortage of live stock of all kinds. All Europe is short of sheep, and even Australia's supply is declining with rapidity. The same general causes that exist in this country are operating in other countries also. Populations are growing rapidly everywhere, while grazing areas are being reduced. As pasture land is turned to production of cereals, sheep raising declines.

Thousands of American farmers can turn this situation to their benefit, through increase of both soil fertility and money profit, by beginning right now each to keep a small flock of sheep upon his farm. And by taking advantage of the present opportunity to buy healthy, thrifty, growing western range sheep at bargain prices upon the heavily supplied Chicago market, they can stock up at minimum cost, whether they want foundation stock for breeding or the growing kind to fatten for market.

A Biased Opinion.

"Do you think buttermilk will prolong one's life, Colonel Soaksby?"

"Ahem! I have no doubt, Miss Plumper, that if a person had to drink buttermilk every day it would make life seem longer."

CONVINCING PROOF

OF THE VIRTUE OF

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

What is the use of procrastinating in the face of such evidence as the following letters represent? If you are a sick woman or know one who is, what sensible reason have you for not giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial? For 30 years we have been publishing such testimonial letters as these—thousands of them—they are genuine and honest, too, every one of them.

Mrs. S. J. Barber says:

"I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best medicine in the world for women—and I feel it my duty to let others know the good it has done for me. Three years ago I had a tumor which the doctor said would have to be removed by an operation or I could not live more than a year, or two, at most. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for advice, and took 14 bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today the tumor is gone and I am a perfectly well woman. I hope my testimonial will be of benefit to others."—Mrs. S. J. Barber, Scott, N. Y.

Mrs. E. F. Hayes says:

"I was under the doctor's treatment for a fibroid tumor. I suffered with pain, soreness, bloating, and could not walk or stand on my feet any length of time. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice, followed her directions and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. To-day I am a well woman, the tumor was expelled and my whole system strengthened. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. E. F. Hayes, 1890 Washington St., Boston, Mass.

Mrs. George May says:

"No one knows what I have suffered from female troubles, neuralgia pains, and backache. My doctor said he could not give me anything to cure it. Through the advice of a friend I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the pain soon disappeared. I continued its use and am now in perfect health. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been a God-send to me as I believe I should have been in my grave if it had not been for Mrs. Pinkham's advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. George May, 86 4th Ave., Paterson, N. J.

Mrs. W. K. Housh says:

"I have been completely cured of a severe female trouble by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and want to recommend it to all suffering women."—Mrs. W. K. Housh, 7 Eastview Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, period pains, backache, etc.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

No Man is Stronger Than His Stomach

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequent indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man "doesn't feel just right," when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine or known composition, for even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.

Prohibition Column.

We Are Slow Getting Wise

Former Governor Hoch of Kansas remarks: "The time is coming when it will seem as incredible that civilized country ever licensed saloons as that we ever sanctioned slavery." And equally incredible that the Christian voters of this Christian nation fooled and fuddled around for a generation trying to make themselves think they disagreed with each other over a mere political issue; and for many years kept out of power a political party which exactly represented their convictions on what they agreed was the paramount issue of the time and the greatest need of the nation.

Pray right—vote likewise.

A large lot of confiscated blind tiger liquors was poured into the sewer at Noblesville the other day. Why should it be thus ruthlessly destroyed? If it has real value, if it is so well for the public to have it that we license thousands of places for its sale, its consignment to the gutter is indefensible. We do not act in that way towards other food stuffs taken from law-breakers.

Alphabetical Adjectives

The most accursed, bloodthirsty, corrupt, demoralizing, envenomous, filthy, God-hating, hell soaked, infamous, jeopardous, knavish, licentious, murderous, nefarious, obscene, putrescent, quarrelsome, rotten, sinful, treacherous, unholy, vicious, wanton—and, in the absence of adjectives beginning with the other letters of the alphabet, I declare unto you that the most heart-breaking, home-wrecking, soul-destroying monster that ever wormed its way out of the nethermost depths of the bottomless pit to wage relentless warfare against the best interests of humanity, is the licensed liquor traffic.

A Sensible Declaration

The Arkansas and Southern Missouri Conference of the Free Methodist church in session first week of October, after pledging aid to the prohibition constitutional amendment campaign in Missouri, close their temperance report with this sensible declaration:

"But the liquor traffic being sustained and protected by politics can only be destroyed by politics, and the only thing for a Christian voter to do and be clear of the guilt of this national sin is to support by his voice and vote the candidates of the Prohibition party.

LOCAL ITEMS.

Mrs. E. A. Patterson, of Hicksville and Mrs W. J. Olds, of Lagrange, were guests in the homes of W. C. and C. A. Patterson, Tuesday.

Rev. Sawyer, prohibition candidate for Congress, was here today. He speaks at Newville this evening.

No sense in running from one doctor to another! Select the best one, then stand by him. No sense either in trying this thing, that thing, for your cough. Carefully, deliberately select the best cough medicine, then take it. Stick to it. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for throat and lung troubles. Sold for nearly seventy years. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Why try this thing, that thing, for your constipation? Why not stick to the good old reliable family laxative—Ayer's Pills? Ask your doctor if he approves this advice.

The annual Thank Offering meeting of the W. H. and F. M. Society of the Lutheran church will be held at the home of Mrs. W. C. Patterson, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. A special program has been prepared and every lady of the church is not only invited but urged to attend. At this time a report of the Synodical Convention recently held in Elkhart, will be given. There has been a gain of 327 new members in the Synodical Society and the Treasurer reported the largest amount of money, with one exception, since organization.

Edward VanFlete, Truant officer of DeKalb County, was in Concord Tp., last week and in conversation with him about school work, he says that he finds the attendance excellent. Already ten townships have been visited by him and only three scholars are out of school who are below the age limit. He also reports the houses in good shape and the conditions are better this year than any other during his office term, which now is thirteen years. We also spoke regarding the age limit as being too low (7 to 14 years.) Mr. VanFlete agreed with us and said that he had tried several times to have it changed to sixteen years but has always failed. Too many boys and girls quit school before they have completed the common branches and are not prepared in the least to drop out. Parents are to blame as well as the law.

THE BEST REAL "PULL."

Now that the summer is nearly over hundreds of young men who were graduated last June from colleges and high schools are entering the vocations which they intend shall be their life's work. Some are still seeking suitable openings. The young man without a "pull" may believe himself handicapped. He is likely to see instances where the employer gives first consideration to his son, his nephew or the son of a friend. But that is no more than right. The average business man recognizes the obligations of relationship and friendship, up to the point where they do not impair his material interests and those of his associates. His nephew and his friend's son must make good—his own son, most of all. His tendency, in fact, is to be more strict with his son than he is with any of his other employes, says the Cleveland Leader. If a young man thus favored with the first opportunity shows that he will be a failure in the work he is doing, he is removed. Family ties and friendship usually will not hold him. Then comes the chance of the young man who may have felt discouraged because he had no "pull." The best "pull" any young man can have in starting in life is honesty, industry and the determination to work for his employer as though he were working for himself. He should realize that, in fact, he is working for himself and that he has a financial interest in the business, to the extent of his pay. Such a young man is bound to succeed.

A year ago a tipless hotel of the first class was opened in London. The management "positively announced" that no gratuities to waiters, porters, maids or other employes would be permitted or suffered. The "experiment," as everybody called it, seemed extremely interesting, but the result was considered doubtful. Skeptics said: "Wait a month or two." The hotel is now a year old. The public is assured that the no-tip policy has been enforced to the letter, that the establishment has prospered beyond all expectations, and that there has been no trouble whatever in getting employes—and good, fit, well-mannered employes, too. This is very gratifying news indeed, says the Chicago Record-Herald. Presumably the hotel pays wages and salaries that compare favorably with those of hotels where tips "go," or run riot, at all hours of the day and night. Mere prohibitions, where temptations exist, will not eradicate an abuse. But if everybody is satisfied at the tipless hotel there is no reason why its policy should not succeed permanently.

Upon a Newport "farm" which cost a fortune the young owner lies ill of typhoid fever. A wealthy woman near by suffers from the same "disease of dirt." In Manhattan last year there was a sporadic outbreak in the region of costly apartment houses. This year it is Brooklyn's turn, says the New York World. In this city, with its guarded water supply, it is likely that typhoid at this season is brought from insanitary summer resorts or incurred during automobile runs. Every life lost by typhoid is a wasted life. It is absolutely preventable. People who live in marble halls without caring whether poison runs in the pipes behind them; the very rich who spend millions in display but neglect sanitation; college professors caught unaware by epidemics like that in Ithaca—these have themselves to blame if the disease occurs. Typhoid originating in any community disgraces it.

A new method of making physical examinations to detect the presence of tuberculosis has been demonstrated at Guy's hospital, London. The examination is made by the aid of X-rays, and shows tuberculous ravages in the lungs, it is said, at an earlier stage than they are revealed by the stethoscope. The X-ray is valuable for many purposes, but must always be used with caution, as numerous sad experiences have taught.

Cable reports that in Berlin during ring bouts a band always plays lively airs, and many boxers not only keep time with their feet but seem to take their hitting and sidestepping cues from the music. This is magnificent, but it is not boxing. Over here there's no music required save the thud of the padded glove and the contestants have to move lively enough.

An interesting incident at the convention of the National Association of Master Bakers in Baltimore was the reading of a paper by a Washington lady dealing vigorously with the methods of bakers and pleading for home-made bread both for sanitary reasons and as a matter of economy. The bakers were gallant enough to allow the lady to have her say, and if her objection to some of the practises mentioned are well founded doubtless there will be reform.

Chicago.—The 1910 baseball pennant was won by the Philadelphia American league team, the men from the Quaker city defeating the Chicago Nationals four out of five games.

At the deciding contest on Sunday one of the largest crowds that ever attended a ball game in Chicago—27,374—was present, and up to the eighth gave one of the rarest exhibitions of "rooting" ever witnessed in this city. When Chicago scored in the second inning the "fans" went wild and when the Quaker City men took the lead in the fifth the crowd begged and pleaded with their favorites to 'come back" and win out. But, after the fatal eighth, when Philadelphia scored five runs, they sat back in their seats and watched silently the work of the youthful machine triumph over the veterans whom they had regarded as unbeatable.

Brown and Coombs, the latter the iron man of the series, fought a great pitchers' battle for seven innings and Brown then blew. In the eighth the entire Athletic team went to bat and hammered Brown hard. Four hits, two of them doubles, a wild throw by Zimmerman and a wild pitch by the three-fingered twirler, sent five Athletic players over the plate and blasted the hopes of the Cub followers.

Collins, the second baseman of the Philadelphias, was the star of the game. He drove out two doubles and a single, and, when the battle was won, stole third, that he might display his speed. In fact, Collins was a large factor in every contest between the two teams.

FIRE LOSS WAS $15,000,000

Recent Forest Blazes in Northwest Destroyed Six Billion Board Feet of Lumber.

Washington.—Six billion board feet of lumber, valued at about $15,000,000, was destroyed in the recent forest fires upon the national forests in Montana and northern Idaho. The total area burned over in this one district was put at 1,250,000 acres.

The first rough estimate of the fire loss in the great district was completed by officials of the government forest service.

DEATH FOR DOCTOR CRIPPEN

FOUND GUILTY OF WIFE MURDER AND SENTENCED TO HANG.

Lord Chief Justice Severely Arraigns Prisoner, Who Is Unmoved When Sentence Pronounced.

London.—Dr. Harvey Hawley Crippen was Saturday sentenced to death by the lord chief justice of England. It required only 30 minutes for the jury to find the American physician guilty of murdering his actress wife, Belle Elmore, whose mutilated body was found under the cellar floor of their house.

Crippen, in reply to the usual questions of Lord Alverstone if he had anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed upon him, replied in a low voice: "I still protest my innocence."

When the judge pronounced the death sentence, Crippen listened unmoved so far as outward appearances showed.

After the doctor was sentenced the foreman of the jury handed to the lord chief justice a note, after looking at which the justice said: "That shall be forwarded to the proper quarter."

The "proper quarter" might mean the home secretary, who has jurisdiction in such matters. The jurors refused to discuss the incident.

CAMPAIGN ON TUBERCULOSIS

Exhibition of Association for Study and Prevention of the Disease Opens in Jackson, Miss.

Jackson, Miss., Oct. 25.—Tuberculosis is again be the theme of an all south campaign, which opened here today, with the American exhibition of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, under the direction of E. G. Routzahn.

Within the past two years every large city east of the Mississippi and south of the Ohio, except Mobile, has been stirred to activity in the war against consumption as a result of the crusade that has been carried on. In Georgia, North Carolina, Florida, Alabama, and Virginia, state sanatoria for the treatment of tuberculosis have been erected or provided for. Local sanatoria providing for the treatment of hundreds of patients have been established in fourteen cities in seven different states.

Skull Broken 12 Years.

New York.—Although Corporal William E. Richards suffered a fracture of the skull when the battleship Maine was blown up in Havana harbor twelve years ago, he did not know it until a few days ago, when he was so informed by a surgeon here.

ETHEL LENEVE FREED

COMPANION OF DR. CRIPPEN, SENTENCED TO DEATH, ACQUITTED OF CHARGE.

PATHETIC FIGURE AT BAR

Hearing of Only a Few Hours Results in a Verdict of Not Guilty—No Witnesses Are Called by the Defense.

London.—Ethel Clare Leneve was acquitted Tuesday as an accessory after the fact in the murder of Belle Elmore by Dr. Hawley H. Crippen. The trial lasted but three hours.

It was for love of Miss Leneve that Dr. H. H. Crippen, now under death sentence, murdered his wife. The crown counsel, Richard Muir, failed to show that Miss Leneve had knowledge of either the American's intention or of the crime itself.

No witnesses were called by the defense. Immediately upon the conclusion of the speech of Miss Leneve's attorney, F. E. Smith, Justice Alverstone delivered his charge to the jury and they retired, returning in twenty-two minutes with a verdict of acquittal.

Miss Leneve's slim, girlish figure was the center of interest as she stood before the bar and, in a sweet, low voice, replied to the court's interrogation as to how she would plead:

"Not guilty, my lord!"

Barrister Arthur Newton appeared as chief counsel for the girl. After Ethel left the prison van which had brought her from Bixton jail, policemen had to use force to make a path for her through the mob of curious women.

In the court room the spectators' seats were filled with brilliantly gowned women spectators.

News Editor Parris of the London Chronicle was fined $1,000 and costs for publishing an alleged confession of Dr. H. H. Crippen shortly after Crippen's arrest by Inspector Dew in Canada. Parris was committed to jail pending the payment of the fine.

RUIN WROUGHT BY CYCLONE

Believed 100 Lives Lost in Storm, Tidal Wave and Volcanic Eruption in Southern Italy.

Rome.—The extent of the havoc wrought Monday by the strange elemental combination of cyclone, tidal wave and volcanic eruption on the slopes of Vesuvius and on the island of Ischia, has not yet been definitely determined, owing to the interruption of communications.

One hundred persons are said to have been killed. The monetary loss will probably be great.

The disaster appears to have come in the form of a cyclone, having three centers, the first over the island of Ischia, the second over the town of Torre del Greco on the east coast of the Bay of Naples, and the third sweeping the gulf of Salerno.

Accompanying the cyclone were a cloudburst, a tidal wave and violent eruptions from Mount Vesuvius and from a crater suddenly opened on the summit of the long extinct Mount Epomeo on the island of Ischia.

Many houses collapsed in this city, due to the subsidence of the surface of the earth during the recent volcanic eruptions, and thirty feet of mud covers many of the roads in the outlying districts.

The inhabitants fled to the higher parts of the island, and those who escaped the rush of water are reported to be suffering from hunger and exposure. The Italian minister of the interior has been appealed to for relief measures.

Ischia is an island almost directly west of the city of Naples in the Mediterranean sea. The storm which caused the wave has broken communication and details are lacking.

It is reported that shipping was damaged and many boats lost. Property damage in Casamicciola was heavy.

The minister of the interior has ordered four men-of-war to hurry to the scene with men and supplies.

Casamicciola was nearly destroyed by an earthquake in July, 1883, when about 1,700 lives were lost. It has since been rebuilt and has a population of about 4,000.

Naples.—An eruption of Vesuvius, accompanied by a cloudburst, Monday wrought considerable damage in the bay and on the slopes of the mountain.

Mud from the crater destroyed a whole street in Torre del Greco at the foot of the mountain, engulfing two families. Five bodies have been recovered.

Loss of life is also reported from Cetara on the bay of Salerno and at Rosina, which was built on the ruins of Herculaneum. The authorities and troops are working heroically to rescue the injured.

Steamer Lanham Burns.

Houghton, Mich.—The steamer Lanham, owned by James R. Adams of Detroit, burned Sunday to the water's edge and was beached off Bete Gris, Keweenaw Point. The crew came ashore in safety. Loss, $150,000.

Pleads Guilty to Murder Charge.

Marion, Ill.—Robert Miller three weeks ago shot to death Charles Williams in this city. Monday Miller pleaded guilty to the indictment and received a life sentence. The trouble grew out of a card game.

STRAUSS WISHES TO RETIRE

AMBASSADOR TO TURKEY ANXIOUS TO LEAVE SERVICE.

United States and Ottoman Governments Are Without Single Diplomatic Hitch.

Washington.—Believing he has accomplished his mission, Oscar S. Strauss, the American ambassador to Turkey, is desirous of retiring from the diplomatic field and return to the United States permanently.

Mr. Strauss saw the president and reported that all the matters in dispute between Turkey and the United States which he had been delegated to adjust have been satisfactorily disposed of, leaving the two nations for the first time in many years without a single diplomatic hitch between them.

Because of this state of affairs and for the reason that his acceptance of the Turkish ambassadorship was based on the representation that his services were needed to restore harmony between the two governments, Mr. Strauss feels that his mission has been accomplished and there is no further reason for him to expatriate himself. He has not resigned his post and if the president insists upon it Mr. Strauss will return to Constantinople at the end of his sixty days' leave of absence.

TWO INDIANA BANKS CLOSED

Lebanon National Goes Into Liquidation, American Trust Company in Hands of State Officials.

Lebanon, Ind.—The Lebanon National bank, capital $80,000, has gone into voluntary liquidation by resolution of the board of directors.

Pending the payment of depositors the institution was Monday placed in the hands of the controller of the currency with Oscar L. Keller, a bank examiner from Washington, in charge.

The bank's cash and securities have been transferred to the First National bank, and it is given out that arrangements are being made for the immediate settlement with all depositors in full. The first intimation the public had of the action of the bank was a notice posted on the door by the bank examiner in charge.

The American Trust company, an auxiliary organization of the Lebanon National, is temporarily closed and in charge of N. H. Oglesbee, of the bank department of the state auditor's office.

$10,000 IN GEMS STOLEN

Hotel Thieves Steal Handbag Containing Jewels From Salesman While He Is Registering.

Chicago.—Police of the entire city are searching for sneak thieves who Monday robbed J. C. Foster, traveling agent for D. L. Auld & Co., manufacturing jewelers, Columbus, O., of $10,000 worth of gems. Foster placed his suit case beside a chair in the Great Northern hotel and stepped up to the desk to register. When he turned around to pick up the suit case it was missing.

Foster, who is a graduate of the Ohio State university and a resident of Higby, O., was dumfounded when he discovered the loss.

His case contained a full line of fraternal pins and diamond, ruby and sapphire stickpins, he told the police.

PICK POSTAL BANK OFFICES

Trustees Name One Place in Each of Forty-eight States to Test Savings Plan.

Washington.—The board of trustees of the postal savings bank system has approved a list of forty-eight second-class post offices at which the plan will be given its first trial.

The list includes one office for each state and territory. Among them are: Pekin, Ill.; Princeton, Ind.; Decorah, Ia.; Houghton, Mich.; Bemidji, Minn.; Nebraska City, Neb.; Wahpeton, N. D.; Ashtabula, O.; Deadwood, S. D.; Manitowoc, Wis.

Fire Loss Half a Million.

Superior, Wis.—A huge anthracite coal storage shed on the M. A. Hanna coal dock caught fire Tuesday and is a total loss. It contained 350,000 tons of anthracite coal. The entire fire department and several fire tugs were working to prevent the blaze from spreading to other big docks and boats near by. Loss, $500,000.

AMERICA II. LANDS

MISSING AERONAUTS ON WAY BACK TO CIVILIZATION.

LARGE REWARD IS OFFERED

After Breaking All World's Balloon Records for Distance—News Ends Search of Two Nations for Missing—Other News.

New York.—S. S. Perkins, who was the aid in the balloon Dusseldrf, received a telegram Wednesday night from Alan R. Hawley and Augustus Post, telling of the safe landing of their balloon, America II, and of their personal safety. The message, dated St. Ambrose, is as follows:

"Landed Peribonka river, north Lake Chiloganad, nineteenth, all well, returning. "HAWLEY-POST."

William Hawley, a brother of Alan R. Hawley, received the following telegram, also dated St. Ambrose:

"Landed in wilderness week ago, 50 miles north of Chicoutimi. Both well. "ALAN."

William Hawley believes that his brother has broken all distance records.

—:—

New York.—Alan R. Hawley and Augustus Post, the aeronauts of the balloon America II, for whom search had been prosecuted in the Canadian wilds, are safe and have established a new world's record for sustained flight. They traveled approximately 1,350 miles and came to earth in Chicoutimi county, Quebec, on Wednesday, October 19, but were not heard from until a week from that time, when telegrams sent from St. Ambrose, Quebec, reached New York.

The balloonists started from St. Louis with nine other contestants in the international contest on Monday, October 17. All the other balloons have been reported.

Clifford B. Harmon, the wealthy amateur aeronaut and aviator of New York, had offered $1,000 to anyone finding Hawley and Post dead or alive and this sum had been increased by subscription to more than $7,000. At the international aviation meet at Belmont park nearly $2,000 was subscribed among the aviators headed by $500 pledged by Glenn H. Curtiss.

WILL PLAN THRESHING RING

Threshing Machine Manufacturers Propose Indiana Trust to Regulate Prices.

Indianapolis, Ind.—An effort to establish uniform prices for threshing wheat, oats and clover in Indiana is to be made at a meeting of manufacturers of threshing machines and their agents to be held in Indianapolis on November 15 and 16. A tentative schedule is 5 cents a bushel for wheat, 4 cents for oats and a dollar for clover. A combination to maintain rates against the inroads of "price cutters" is needed, the manufacturers say. One of the agents interested said that there are about 7,000 machines in Indiana, most of them owned by the manufacturers and agents and "let out" for use during the threshing season, which lasts about three weeks. The manufacturers complain that the machines have not been operating profitably because of price cutting. Eighteen companies will be represented at the meeting here.

Old Dobbin Must Go.

Washington, D. C.—Expedition of the mails by the extension of the use of automobiles in the postal service is being advocated by the postoffice department. Heavy automobile express wagons are being substituted for the old type horse drawn wagons used in transporting the mails between railway stations and postoffices and their branches. The postmaster general signed contracts for four additional automobiles to be used in the mail collection service at Cleveland and for three additional automobiles to be similarly used at Indianapolis. The motorcycle is being extensively used in the transportation of mails in suburban towns where residences are widely scattered and long distances have to be traversed rapidly in order to insure prompt service. One of the plans for reorganization of the rural delivery service is the substitution of light automobiles for horse carts, permitting delivery and collection on several routes in the same time it now takes to traverse one and resulting in more effective and less costly service.

Boy Killed by Elder Brother.

Danville, Ill.—Walter Ingler, a nine-year-old boy, was shot and instantly killed at his home at Cissna Park, Iroquois county, by an elder brother, who was examining a revolver he did not know was loaded.

Brutal Murder Unearthed.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—What promises to be one of the most sensational and mysterious murders committed in this city in recent years was discovered when the mutilated body of Mrs. Mary Hackney was found in her home in a remote part of the city. The young woman's throat had been cut from ear to ear, her skull crushed and her body slashed in various places. The Hackneys were married in Louisville, Ky., about four years ago and immediately removed to this city where Hackney was employed as a lumber planer.

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular and indolent young bachelor of London, receives news that he has been made heir to the estate of his Aunt Georgiana, with an income of $20,000 a year, on condition that he becomes engaged to be married within ten days. Failing to do so the legacy will go to a third cousin in America. The story opens at Castle Wyckoff, where Lord Vincent and his wife, friends of Terhune, are discussing plans to find him a wife within the prescribed time. It seems that Lady Vincent is one of seven persons named Agatha, all close girlhood chums. She decides to invite two of them to the castle and have Archie there as one of the guests. Agatha Sixth strikes Archie as a handpainted beauty. Agatha First is a breezy American girl. Lady Vincent tells her husband that Agatha Sixth already cares for Archie. He gains from Agatha Sixth the admission that she cares for him, but will require a month's time fully to make up her mind. Agatha First, neglected by Terhune, receives attentions from Leslie Freer. Four days of the precious time have passed when Terhune is called to London on business. Agatha First, on the plea of sickness, excuses herself from a motor trip planned by the Vincents.

CHAPTER V.—Continued.

"Why, that's too bad!" said my wife sincerely, though somewhat surprisedly, "I'm awfully sorry, dear child, and we shall miss you, of course. But you mustn't think of going if your head aches. Go upstairs and lie down a while, why don't you, and I'll have some tea sent up to you. It's awfully good for headache." And she spoke to the footman who waited at the door of the automobile.

"I will, thanks. Sorry to miss the trip," replied the girl. "You're an angel, Agatha!" And with another farewell word or two we left her and had started on our way to Northbury.

And now comes the very strangest part of this rather strange or at least unusual attempt to make a match and win a fortune for a friend at one and the same time on the part of Dearest and myself. By Jove, it certainly did give me a start when I discovered—but this was the way it happened—not to get ahead of my story.

We had made a pretty quick run to Northbury and had been spectators at an exhibition of some rather fast cricket which I had been pretty keen about. The two teams had played even until the second half, when Corcoran who was guarding the wicket for the Lowshires—but I don't suppose the details of the game are of very general interest, after all. Odd thing, but I've never been able to make Dearest understand it at all—I gave up trying years ago. It's the only thing in the world we aren't equally enthusiastic about. She won't admit it, but sometimes I'm afraid it's because she prefers the American game of baseball! Fancy! But of course if she does it's all the fault of that American stepfather of hers for bringing her up in the States. But then, naturally, he couldn't help being an American—I try to remember that!

As I was saying, however, we had seen the match played to the end in spite of the languid interest displayed by the feminine members of our party, and had lunched at the Northbury inn, a jolly little den of a place, and at about half after two were speeding towards home again.

The roads were fairly decent, though there had been a good deal of rain lately, and the machine had been running along so smoothly that it did my heart good to see her. We had left the main road when we had passed Wye village, for one that led more directly to the castle, and had slowed down as the road turned out to be rougher than I thought—when the worst happened. I was driving myself, and in steering to clear a jutting tree I ran the big car straight into the dickens of a rut and our hind wheel went in to stay. I killed the engine at once and jumped out to see what was to be done, disgusted enough, I can tell you, though of course I couldn't possibly have known the thing was so deep, for it was half filled with water. This short cut is a favorite one of mine, though my chauffeurs have often warned me against taking a big car through the woods that cover Wyckoff rise at this point. The trees are so thick and the road so narrow.

The worst of the business now, as I soon found out, was that there was no jack to be found in the car's kit of tools with which to raise her, and I remembered with chagrin that I had taken it out myself in hunting for something else and had left it in the garage. Even the satisfaction of blaming some one else was denied me and I looked at Pederson, the chauffeur, in dismay.

"What's to be done," I asked, but received no help from that quarter, only a dismal shake of the head.

Nevertheless assistance I did receive, though rather unexpectedly. The accident had occurred, as I have said, in the middle of the woods just where two roads crossed, and standing at the entrance to one of these roads I now observed a small boy, a little freckle-faced village lad, who stared at us as if he'd never seen an automobile before, and they're surely common enough!

But it appeared that he had, for when Freer remarked uselessly and obviously for the third time, "What beastly luck to have forgotten the jack. Now if only it had happened out on the main road instead of in this short-cut, we would have stood a chance of borrowing one from another car!" the little chap who was standing by, came forward and informed us in a shrill childish pipe that if it was another machine we wanted he'd seen a "big feller" come through that same wood not a minute ago and it had stopped not far away. And he pointed a grimy thumb over his shoulder toward the road that led to our left.

"O, they stopped, did they?" I asked, and thought to myself with some satisfaction that they were in trouble, too. The misery that so often attends an automobilist is especially fond of company.

"Wonder if they'd lend us a jack?" I remarked aloud. "What kind of a machine was it, kid?"

"A whoppin' big feller, red, like your lordship's," said the boy. Of course he knew me, even if I didn't know him. He was probably the butcher's or baker's boy from Wye on his way back from the castle.

"Sounds rather promising," said Dearest. "Do go and see if they can't help us out. I don't want Agatha Lawrence to walk all that way home in this mud!"

"Very well," I said, "but it sounds as if they were in need of assistance themselves! Why else should they want to stop in the middle of the woods? However, I'll make the attempt. Freer, you stay by the ladies, and I'll go and see what I can do!" And just stopping to give the little boy a shilling or two for his information, I strode down the wood road in the direction he had pointed out.

I hadn't gone far and was just wondering again what in the world would possess any one to push down so narrow a road in a big machine, when the machine in question came in sight. It was a big touring car, red like mine, to be sure, but an entirely different make, and I stopped and stared at it in an overwhelming surprise. But not for any reason in connection with the automobile itself. It was the girl who was its sole passenger that held my attention and caused my surprise. Sitting in the front seat, a light pongee coat about her, with an air of expectancy, as if she awaited the coming of some one not far off, sat Agatha First. Yes, the very same. As cheerful and as much herself as if she had not pleaded a headache as an excuse for not automobiling with us that morning.

I stood stock still in the road as my unwilling eyes took in this amazing sight, and it was a full minute before my routed wits apprehended the significance of a man's checked automobile coat that hung over the back of the seat beside her. Evidently she was with some one, which somehow seemed less extraordinary at the moment than that she should be alone. Her escort though not visible was apparently not far distant, for even as I stared, Agatha First rose in the machine displaying a huge bunch of wild flowers in her hands as she did so, and hallooed to him. "Don't pick any more!" she called, "I don't want any more flowers, I want you!" A laugh quite near at hand sounded for a response and I hurriedly started back down the road. I wanted awfully to see who the man that belonged to the checked coat was, but I wanted still more to escape being seen either by him or by my eccentric guest, Miss Endicott. The possibility that I might fall in with the former returning from his little ramble, flowers in hand, almost made me run, and the fear that in looking for him, the latter was already on the point of discovering my retreating form, caused me to stick close to the roadside and the shelter of the trees like any thief or trespasser. And, by Jove! I didn't breathe freely till I'd sighted my own machine standing in the sunlight at the cross-roads. It's a nasty position for a chap to be caught in, eavesdropping, and if they had seen me they would never have believed I had not been spying on them.

"Did you get a jack?" inquired Freer as I came up. He could see perfectly well that I was empty-handed.

"No," I said shortly, too absorbed in conjecturing the meaning of the strange discovery I had just stumbled upon to invent any excuse for the failure of my errand.

"We'll just have to walk home," I said. "Pederson can wait with the car and I'll send him help from the castle."

And all the way home I pondered upon my queer adventure. What could Agatha First be doing in a strange automobile in the middle of the woods when she was supposed to be ill at home, and who was the man who was with her, the owner of the checked coat? That was the most mysterious part of the whole business to me, and though I racked my brain I could not possibly think who he might be!

PART TWO.

CHAPTER VI.

It wasn't until later that same afternoon of our Northbury trip, when Lady Vincent and I had ascended to our rooms to dress for dinner, that I found a chance to tell her the news. I can always be sure of an uninterrupted chat with her then.

"And so you saw her sitting in the automobile alone in the middle of the woods?" asked Dearest, when I had finished my breathless recital.

"Yes, that is as far as I could see, she was alone," I replied. "But you forget the man's laugh and the checked coat. There was a man with her right enough, and though I didn't think so at the time, I think now that makes the thing much more mysterious."

"Of course there was a man with her," remarked Dearest. "It was a lover's tryst, as plain as plain can be!" Dearest is so romantic. But then at the same time I'll have to admit she's nearly always right.

"But who under high heaven could it have been?" I cried, never more puzzled in my life.

"We know it wasn't Freer; he was with us all the time, and Terhune has been in London all day!"

"He said he was going to be in London," remarked my wife with the slightest possible emphasis on the "said." I gaped at her a moment, then seized her shoulder.

"Do you mean to say it was Archibald?" I cried, "who was the owner of the checked coat?"

"I didn't say," she replied, "only it does look a little like it, doesn't it? You see he couldn't go to the cricket with us because he had to go up to London, and she, because she had a headache. Voila tout!"

"But we saw the wire," I objected.

"Oh, as to that!" she said, "a telegram's easily enough cooked up! He had only to write one himself and tell the station-master to send it over. We none of us examined it closely. It's an old dodge, you know."

"So it is!" I cried, "and you're right. It must have been old Terhune! What a dunderhead I've been not to see it before! But I say," I added, less exuberantly as a thought struck me, "if that's the case, what does he mean by it, Dearest? What do they both mean by it, he and she? And what does it portend in regard to the match we're trying to make between Arch and Miss Lawrence? Answer any of those questions if you can! Wiseacre that you are, I believe you'll have to let me count ten on that!"

"I'm afraid I will," she admitted, as puzzled as I was. "You see I never knew Agatha Endicott as well as I did the other five Agathas—as well as I do Agatha Sixth, and then you know Agatha Sixth has visited me before, and this is the first time I've seen Agatha First since we parted on the occasion of my marriage."

Burlesque Wedding Guests.

Poulbot, a Paris caricaturist, having determined upon so commonplace a step as getting married, decided that he would be married in no commonplace way. He asked all his friends to the wedding, but there was a sine qua non condition attached to the investigation. You had to go with a "made-up head," or you would not be admitted. Preferably you were requested to make up as a country cousin at a village wedding. Some guests arrived as ancient peasants, others as village idiots. There were several bluff squires and rural elderly gentlemen with means, a number of retired officers and exuberant uncles from the south, besides fierce military gentlemen from the hottest stations of Algeria. The only persons who were their natural physiognomies were the couple most concerned. They had drawn the line at making up themselves as a burlesque bride and a comic bridegroom.

Caught!

"Do you remember me buying a hair mattress from you the other day?" asked the lady.

"Perfectly well, ma'am," was the reply of the dealer.

"Well, I've discovered that only about one-quarter of the filling is hair."

"Then you certainly do seem to have me where the hair is short, ma'am."

Health and Hymen

By STACY E. BAKER

(Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

As Damon approached, suitcase in hand, the driver of the great car chugging restlessly by the curb bounced eagerly down from his seat and relieved the youth of his luggage.

"For a small town, this Blissville has them all beat," ruminated the young cigar salesman, leaning back on the rear cushions. "Blissville for mine, hereafter, at every opportunity. Must be a peacherino of a hotel when it sends an automobile after its guests."

In all truth, the chauffeur was establishing a speed record. Houses flashed dizzily by, and the main stem of the little burg unfolded as a dirty gray ribbon to the unsophisticated roadster who was even then making his initial visit to the trade.

"Speed on, McDuff," misquoted the commercial man, and leaned happily back to dream his omnipresent dreams.

On and on went the car at an ever-increasing pace. Damon's eyes opened to contemplate a picturesque building just ahead. Four stories high, it flared to the very sky several gaudy gables which a color-loving owner had caused to be smeared with all the colors of the rainbow.

"Gee!" murmured the astonished youth as the car slowed suddenly down to turn in at a green-hedged roadway leading to the spacious porch that connected with the institution, "mine host must suffer from an acute attack of coloritis. This is the happiest looking plant I have ever stopped at." The machine came to a slow stop, and the active driver jumped hastily down and opened the door for Damon to alight.

"I Hope It Will Be Your Last."

A fussy little person came forward and grasped the youth's suitcase. "You are here, I see," he bellowed in a voice that told of no lack of lung power.

"Just so," acknowledged Damon. He eyed the man curiously. "I suppose you are the proprietor. This is my first trip through this section."

The squat, monkeylike person stared. "I hope it will be your last," he rumbled. "No, I'm not the boss, but I take his place when he's gone. I'm the general athletic instructor. Mulqueen is my name." He seized the soft hand of the labor ignorant drummer and squeezed it to a beating pulp.

Arthur Damon had some experience with hotels, big and little. In fact, the youth's income had allowed him to see something of life on a most expensive plane, and this move in the capacity of a cigar salesman had nothing to do with needing the money. There were other reasons. But in all Damon's experience an athletic instructor for the guests of a hotel was unheard of. "You are a what?" he gasped.

"An athletic instructor," roared the strenuous voiced one. "I give 'em their bumbs, I do." He summed up the broad frame and the erect shoulders-back attitude of the youth before him. "You look as if you could go some," he volunteered. "I have set your try-out for 2 o'clock."

"Me," gasped Damon. "Not me, my friend. I have other business to attend to." They were now on the inside of a large well-furnished office. "Where is your register?" demanded the cigar salesman.

"You don't have to register," loudly assured the athletic instructor. "Everything is O. K. We have had your room reserved for you for three days."

"Say!" preluded Damon, taking the stocky one by the arm and leading him toward a cushioned seat at some little distance away. "You and I want to get together. There's some mistake here. You evidently take me for some one else. I am Arthur Damon, a cigar salesman, and I'm in your old burg on business and not to pull off boxing bouts with—er—athletic instructors."

"You think you are," calmly came from the other, "but as a matter of fact, you are Andrew Dimeling, of New York, suffering from a nervous breakdown caused by too much burning of the candle at both ends, and you are here, gentle sufferer, because papa telegraphed for a suite for you, explaining the many little mental vagaries of his promising son as he did so. Now, my boy, you just leave it all to us. Don't worry. Physical culture and a total abstinence from grog will serve to put you properly back on your feet again, and you will thank the Blissville Physical Culture sanitarium for your cure."

"Blissville Physical Culture sanitarium!" reiterated the youth. "Isn't this a hotel?"

"This, my lad, is a health resort. We hand you an ample abundance of the vital spark here—at so much per spark. Your board is paid in advance, youngster. Don't worry."

"Listen," came from Damon, who was now beginning to understand the situation. "Don't interrupt. Just pretend that you believe me, you know, and I'll entertain you for a few brief moments.

"In the first place, I really am who I say I am. I have no empty rooms in my belfry, and I haven't the least idea what made your driver bring me here—unless it is that my initials, A. D., N. Y. C., are on my suitcase. Anyway, to get down to the subject, I am here on more explicit business than the mere selling of cigars. My prospective papa-in-law is at the hotel—the real hotel in Blissville—and I am supposed to meet him and discuss—er—certain things.

"Which you won't," bellowed the other, and with a click of his stern jaws. "I wouldn't dare let you go while the boss is away, and, besides, I don't believe you."

"It will be an easy matter for you to establish my identity, if your thick head is capable of assimilating reason," snapped Damon. "Just call up the hotel and verify my statement."

"Why should your prospective father-in-law be here?" asked Mulqueen suspiciously.

"He is at the head of the cigar combine," explained Damon, impatiently. "I am to marry his daughter if I can prove, by sticking out on the road and selling cigars, that I have enough business ability to support her. I have a million, more or less, that the pater left me, but Mr. Coxton wants me to prove up. He telegraphed me this morning that he would meet me in Blissville today?"

"You don't mean John Coxton?" asked the athletic instructor.

"Yes."

"Yes."

"Well, my boy, either you are one of the most imaginative bugs I have seen for some time, or else you are telling the brand of truth that is stranger than fiction. Anyway, John Coxton owns and controls this institution, and if he is in Blissville, as you say, he will be out here, and you will have a chance to see him and prove your story."

"I'll prove it all right," Damon asserted grimly.

And this was easily done, for to the dying whirr of a suddenly stopped motor Coxton entered the office.

"Mr. Coxton!" Damon arose eagerly and strode toward the man. The stout, middle-aged one, with the florid cheeks and iron-gray hair, turned in surprise.

"You—Damon!" he ejaculated.

"Just so," ventured the youth, extending his hand. "Kindly assure your—er—athletic instructor as to my sanity—I was kidnaped by the driver of this sanitarium, and this gentleman wants to keep me here."

"This is Damon, Mulqueen," came from the cigar magnate, crisply, "and he is all right—but I don't understand this complication. Explain."

Damon speedily explained.

Coxton laughed at the completion of the tale. "Well, anyway, you're here—and unhurt," he ventured. "I wanted to see you and tell you that your sales up to date have proved that you can make good. No use in covering these tank towns. I'll accept your resignation, if you like, and you can go home and prepare for an early autumn wedding."

"Sorry we can't have that go," ventured Mulqueen as some time later the youth was leaving the institution.

"I'm not," grinned Damon, surveying critically the husky frame of the man. "I'm in training for a bout with Hymen, and I don't care to take on anyone before the great event."

RED MEN FIND A SOURCE OF AMUSEMENT.

Indian Agent Wonders at Sudden Demand for Frying Pans—Finds Earthen Toboggan Slide on Mountain Side.

The Indian, however averse he may be to any kind of useful labor, is not slow to avail himself of a new source of amusement. This was shown some years ago, when among the supplies sent by the government to a certain agency in the west were several hundred large frying pans with long handles.

These the Indian agent found in stock when he took possession, and at the end of the year the number had not been diminished. Thinking that perhaps he had not discharged his whole duty in the matter of supplying Uncle Sam's wards with these culinary utensils, the agent began making special efforts to induce the red men to use them.

At first, says Harper's Weekly, it was hard work, but by the time he had given out about two dozen there came a sudden change. Not a day passed in which the agent did not have applications for at least a dozen and some days he disposed of twice that number.

When the supply was nearly exhausted he noticed among the applicants some to whom he had previously given pans, and naturally enough he became a trifle curious to know what use they were making of them. He questioned several of the men to no purpose, but at length a young buck more communicative than the rest gave him to understand that if he would visit a certain part of the reservation not far away he would find his inquiry answered.

The next day, therefore, the agent rode out in the direction indicated. About two miles from the agency he noticed on the crest of a narrow spur of the mountain three or four Indians who suddenly disappeared on the opposite side of the ridge. At the same time he heard faintly the cry of many voices.

On turning the point of the ridge he saw a crowd of several hundred Indians who were shouting as if greatly excited. He noticed also several objects, which he at first supposed to be boulders, descending the side of the mountain toward them with tremendous rapidity.

Instead of fleeing from these moving objects, the Indians simply applauded and shouted. Soon he saw other objects like the first descending and in a short time the whole situation was plain to him.

Having elected a long, smooth slope of the mountain where there were no stones, the Indians had converted it into a sort of earthen toboggan slide and were utilizing the frying pans as toboggans.

Seating themselves in the pans they grasped the handles with both hands; then crossing their legs over their arms they went spinning down the slide with great rapidity. The agent let them have the few pans that remained in the storehouse, but did not order a new supply.

Value of Employment.

The beginning of all true reformation among the criminal classes depends on the establishment of institutions for their active employment while their criminality is still unripe and their feelings of self-respect, capacities of affection and sense of justice not altogether quenched. That those who are desirous of employment should always be able to find it will hardly, at the present day, be disputed; but that those who are undesirous of employment should, of all persons, be the most strictly compelled to it, the public is hardly yet convinced, and they must be convinced.

If the danger of the principal thoroughfares in their capital city, and the multiplication of crimes more ghastly than ever yet disgraced a nominal civilization are not enough, they will not have to wait long before they receive sterner lessons. For our neglect of the lower orders has reached a point at which it begins to bear its necessary fruit, and every day makes our fields not whiter, but more sable, to harvest.—Ruskin.

Pinched the Wrong One.

Among the passengers on a Pennsylvania train leaving Newark about four o'clock a day or so ago for New York was a group of four, father, mother, a boy about five years old and a girl about three years younger. Nearly all the way to Jersey City the head of the family was trying to convince his wife that there was no danger in going by the tube, but the woman seemed nervous and kept repeating, "Let's take the boat." At Jersey City the father guided them to the elevator, and they entered the car in waiting. No sooner had it started than the woman gave signs of hysterics, but the man, alive to the situation, pinched the baby. It squalled lustily, diverting the mother's attention from imaginary danger. A number of passengers witnessed the performance, one of whom when the short trip was over asked the man: "Why didn't you pinch the woman?"

Valid Excuse.

Mrs. Subbube—Henry, that's twice you've come home and forgotten to bring the lard.

Subbube—Yes, my love; it's so greasy it slipped my mind.

Prohibition Column.

Be Loyal To Your Principal

This is the last appeal to the Prohibition voters before the election. If the prohibition of the liquor traffic for beverage purposes is desired by the people it will be necessary to stick to the prohibition principal and vote the straight prohibition ticket. If you believe in the principals set forth in the prohibition platform vote the prohibition ticket, as that is the only way you have to prove to your neighbors that you are really sincere in your claims as a prohibitionist. Sometimes we hear men declare they are as good a prohibitionist as the man who votes it, they boast that they never drink and do not believe in having a saloon in the community to ruin our boys and men, but that they do not believe we will ever get prohibition through the prohibition party. Well maybe we will not but while these good temperance voters believe they will never get prohibition through the prohibition party we are just as confident it will never come by either of the old parties as they are presently constituted. They have proven that in fifty years they have come no nearer prohibition than they were 50 years ago. If you believe the prohibition of the beverage liquor traffic to be right vote that ticket, and if you do not vote the prohibition ticket and vote at all you vote the perpetuation ticket by voting the old party tickets. A man who will not vote the prohibition ticket does not believe in prohibiting the drink traffic. If I would talk republican or democratic principals and vote the prohibition ticket I would be a political hypocrit. The liquor question is in politics and it will never get out until it is voted out, and that will not be as long as temperance people vote the same ticket that the liquor people vote.

J. B. HAIFLEY.

LEAGUE SUDDENLY DISCOVERS A "CRISIS."

A.-S. L. Sup't Shumaker has as his leader in the Issue of last week's Phalanx, "The Temperance Crisis in Indiana." The "crises" is the threatened repeal of the county option law by Republican and Democratic members of the legislature about to be elected. We think what he says about the efforts of the brewers' association in this connection is all true and not over-drawn.

But we submit that now, within a few days of the election, is a late time for sounding the alarm. The "crisis" was just as apparent last April, when the Democrats declared for ward and township option, and the Republicans, at Senator Beveridge's behest, by their silence repudiated county option, as it is today. Yet the League leaders affected an air of complacency over the situation at that time.

Since then nominations for the legislature have been made A few Democrat nominees in dry counties have announced they would vote against the law's repeal, in defiance of their party's declaration. Some Republicans have done the same. But the greater number of them are not binding themselves by any public pre-election promises. At least, the A.-S. L. gives out no list to the voters of the State for their guidance. Repeated inquiry for information from their headquarters committee as to the nominees of the license parties for legislature in this (Marion) county have failed of definite answer. Gum-shoe methods will never win in conflict with so strong and wily a foe as they are professedly fighting. Undoubtedly the brewers well know every candidate upon whom they can depend.

Mr. Shumaker urges temperance people to disregard party lines and unite for the election of legislators who are "openly pledged" against repeal. Impossible, because of the bigger issue. When that Republican platform committee, after hours of debate, decided 11 to 2 against declaring for the county option law, it was because of the bigger issue—Beveridge—who actually pointed to himself and said in so many words that he was THE issue of this campaign! And so every means known to the party managers is being used to elect Republican legislators, with no consideration as to whether they are wet or dry. The Democrats took up the gauntlet, and what party enthusiasm has been worked up is over Beveridge and Kern! The non-partisan temperance man, voting dry at the option election, is likely to vote for the political fortunes of the person he considers the bigger issue, without regard to the effect on the county option law.

Ex Gov. J. Frank Hanly has been making a strenuous, honest and courageous campaign for retention of the law. If any old-party politicians are helping him we have not heard of them.

The Issue fails to speak of another crisis liable to come upon the law, even if it escapes death at the hands of the legislators. This is its fate before the Supreme Court. Judge Montgomery (Rep.), who has once decided it unconstitutional, is up for re-election. Mr. Hanly says he should be defeated and is recommending all friends of the law to vote for John H. Parker, the Prohibition nominee.

In closing, we need only say that any Prohibition nominees elected to the legislature will only vote for county option repeal by its being superceded with State-wide prohibition, for which they would work to the utmost of their ability.

The only legitimate question for discussion is how to rid ourselves of this direst evil—the drink traffic. And as to the means of accomplishing this result, after years of thought, discussion and experiment, this has been reduced to a simple proposition. The only way is to vote it out; not regulate it, but vote it to death. Are there church voters enough in our land to do this? Beyond a doubt. Then as the question stands related to all political parties, how is the Christian to vote? As our government is constituted all of its effective regulations are carried on through political parties.

The dominant parties in our country for years have been the Democratic and Republican parties. Is there any reason for hoping that the liquor traffic can be destroyed through the agency of either of these parties? Multiplied years of experiment and failure furnishes the answer. They are both fully committed to the licensed saloon interests, and are bound hand and foot by these wealthy domineering interests.

How then shall the Christian voter cast his ballot in order to wipe out this desolating curse—Dr. H. K. Hinde in St. Louis Christian Advocate.

J. C. C. LaVogue, $1.50 the pair

LaVogue is a corset for the woman of ample developments. The skirt is long, reaching its greatest length at the hips. To prevent stretching or tearing or uncomfortable binding when the wearer seats herself there are two deep vents, held in position by sliding supporters.

The coutil used in this number is of unusual excellence for a corset of this price. The supporters are strong and non-slipable, the boning is double and flexible.

LaVogue is a corset that one can count upon to give the best of service and in which one can enjoy ideal comfort.

"A corset for every figure" is a phrase that has been used over much but in this instance it is used advisedly for truly the J. C. C. line provides for women of types.

PREMIUM

The price is one dollar and we confirm the J. C. C. peoples estimate of this value. It is really a premium corset at the price.

It is long as today's fashions dictate: it has an even all the way around unboned skirt extension. Now, the joining of this extension to the body of the garment is made a feature, for it is done in a manner that adds strength and prevents stretching and tearing when the wearer seats herself.

Developed in good coutil, filled with substantial boning, and complete with two pairs of hose supporters, good strong ones.

GOOD UNCLE JIM

By DONALD ALLEN

Uncle Jim Parsloe was driving along the state road towards Middleton. His horse was old, and he was not hurrying him. The wagon was old, and he was giving it a fair show. He was pretty old himself, and if he got to Middleton before dark it was time enough.

Uncle Jim was descending the hill beyond Culver's when he saw a girl on a bicycle approaching him. As she came within a few rods the front wheel struck a stone and she went off sideways and down into the roadside ditch and lay there. She had fallen hard, and though no bones were broken she was half unconscious.

"Whoa, now, but that's all-fired bad!" said Uncle Jim as he descended from his wagon. "Hope she ain't killed. We can't afford to lose any of our girls in this country."

He had lifted her over on the grass when the girl recovered her senses and sat up. If he had been a young man she wouldn't have shed a tear. When she saw that he was old and fatherly she began to weep.

"Hurt ye, of course," he said with a half laugh, "and crying is good for hurts. Glad it didn't break your neck. Got a bundle strapped on the bike, I see. Kind o' going somewhere?"

"Y-yes!" she sobbed.

"Well, cry away all you want to, and then I'll help you get started again. I don't remember to have met you before. Live around here anywhere?"

"N-no!"

"Just so. Keep up the crying till the pain stops. No hurry, you know. When my daughter Prue was home she'd sometimes cry from sunup to sundown, and she said she felt the better for it."

"I'll not shed another tear;" exclaimed the girl as she suddenly straightened up. "What did you stop for? Why didn't you go on about your business? What is it to you whether I'm hurt or not?"

"Well, I'm Uncle Jim Parsloe, the man that goes around settin' broken legs for grasshoppers and putting new horns on cows when the natural ones get knocked off. I've got a sort of friendly feeling for living things. Didn't know but you had a leg or some ribs broken."

"I'll Not Shed Another Tear!"

"No, I haven't. I was crying because —because—"

"Because you are in trouble. I knew that ten minutes ago. I'll sit right down here and you can tell me all about it."

Uncle Jim had a sympathetic voice, a kindly way and a fatherly face. The girl looked at him for a moment and then decided to trust him. Queer, too. She wouldn't have told the story to a grandma.

"I live the other side of Middleton," she began.

"Yes, and you needn't tell me your name if you don't want to."

"My father's name is Haskell, and mine is Janet."

"You can break right off and go to crying again, if you want to. I'm no hand to be prying."

"But I want to tell you. Father's had a horse die, mother's got a felon on her finger and the house is upset."

"Of course—of course. I've had a horse die, and I've suffered with a felon."

"And mother—she—she up and boxed my ears this morning! Yes, hit me a box on the ear! Would you stand that?"

"Well, I was twenty years old when dad gave me the last licking, and he laid it on smart, too. I reckon you ain't much more than turned eighteen."

"I'm most nineteen. Nobody can box my ears, even if they have got a felon! Didn't I have my trouble, too? Wasn't mine greater than the others? Wasn't I thinking of it with tears in my eyes when I forgot to scald out the churn?"

"I guess you were. If you hadn't you'd have scalded the churn for sure."

The old horse stood peacefully sleeping in the middle of the road, and Uncle Jim looked up at him and gave the girl a chance. He knew that more was coming.

"It was awful trouble," she said. "I have been keeping company with Tom Drake for a whole year, and we are as good as engaged, and yet because we had a little bit of a quarrel he quit and is going with another girl. She's tall and bony, and she toes in when she walks and she's got a cast in one eye."

"Stars and garters, but what can ail him!" exclaimed Uncle Jim. "Why, when you were still eighty rods off I was saying to myself that I'd never seen a handsomer girl! Lord, but when you rolled off that bike you did it like a perfect lady!"

"And so when Tom said he wouldn't come again, and I forgot to scald the churn, and mother boxed my ears with her well hand, I made up my mind to —to—"

"Don't say it if you don't want to. I know you didn't make up your mind to jump into the well."

"No—to run away!"

"Well, well! Just bundled up a few things and took to your bike, eh? My daughter, Prue, hid in the barn all day once because I called her a ninny, but she didn't git further than that. I ain't the prying kind, but maybe I might ask where you are running to?"

"I—I don't k-n-o-w!" came a long drawn wail, followed by tears and sobs.

"Got any money?"

"N-o-o-o!"

"Got any aunts or uncles?"

"No-b-o-d-y!"

"Well, I ain't one to discourage anybody, but it looks a leetle dubious. The bike's busted and you'll have to walk. Guess you got a few bruises when you fell, too. A girl can't take such a flop as that without hurting some, even if she's good-looking and smart as a whip."

"If I'm good looking and smart why did Tom leave me and take up with that bony girl?" demanded the maiden as her sobs ceased all at once.

"You don't understand human nature yet," replied Uncle Jim. "Young folks that don't love never quarrel. There's nothing to quarrel about. They love and quarrel and make up and get married. That's the program, and it goes clear back to the year one. Always so—always so."

"And Tom will come back?"

"Certain to. He's just dying to get back right now. I'm drivin' to Middleton, anyhow, and so I might as well drive beyond. I'll put the bike in the wagon and you climb in. Your folks have missed you by this time, but you can hide the bundle and say you went out to have a cry. I sort of guess Tom will be over to see you this very night."

"Say you are the best man in all this world!" exclaimed Janet as she rose up.

"Oh, pshaw! I ain't a patching to some folks. I'm just trying to be half way decent as I jog along through the world. If Tom comes over, and I think he will, you just stand him off for a while. Look at him as if you didn't know him. Tell him no tinware is wanted today. Tell him you don't think your father wants a windmill or any wire fencing. Let him realize what a girl he has lost, and then unbend by degrees. Remember that you have heard his name somewhere in connection with a girl that toes in. Talk about the weather and the measles, and by and by down on his knees he'll flop, and you can padlock him."

When Uncle Jim let the girl alight near her home he drove a mile farther to see Tom Drake. Five minutes after they talked Tom was greasing his boots for a call at the Haskell farmhouse. And a long three years went by before Uncle Jim pulled his old horse up short one day in front of a farmhouse to say to a woman at the gate and a child hanging to her apron:

"Yes, sir, you flopped off that bike that day like a perfect lady, and I'm kind of thinking that the girl that toed in had to toe out long ago!"

Good for the Jeweler.

"What, another?" said the jeweler.

"Another," said the unhappy-looking man who had handed a plain gold ring across the counter. Then he added: "I guess I'll take a ring a size smaller this time."

A ring costing $3.50 was finally selected.

"Race suicide would cut down jewelry expenses in that family," said the jeweler. "They belong to a Slavic nation that adheres to the old custom of the husband presenting to his wife a new wedding ring every time she presents him with a new baby. This is the eighth ring that man has bought. Her hands must be pretty well covered with wedding rings. None of the rings is expensive, but with a bunch of birthdays like that to be celebrated with wedding rings the cost mounts up."

True and Brave Women.

To be able to look cheerfully and hopefully through clouds of poverty and distress is an accomplishment bestowed by nature upon every true and brave woman; and, no matter how poor or humble her home may be, the magic power of smiles can brighten its shadows and lighten its cares. Upon the troubled mind of a feeling husband a wife's smile falls like a sunbeam on a flower; and how much more beautiful it makes the face that wears it than a frown! When a wife and mother, forgetting sorrows and hardships, smiles away her tears, there is a loveliness in the act that speaks to a man's heart more eloquently than words.

BOYS AND GIRLS

MISHAP TO "JACK AND JILL"

Certain Familiar Mother Goose Rhyme Is Revised by Copy Read in Newspaper Office.

Good nonsense grows out of good nonsense. A writer in the Chicago Tribune imagines what a "copy-reader" in a newspaper office would do with a certain familiar Mother Goose rhyme. The copy-reader, who has had a reporter's training, and has learned to write everything alike, sits down for a few moments, and revises "Jack and Jill" somewhat as follows:

Jack, aged seven, son of Peter Jones, 298 Spring street, and Jill, aged six, daughter of Mrs. Abigail Thompson, 296 Spring street, at eleven o'clock yesterday morning walked up the hill near the junction of Blinker avenue and Fordyce place.

For the purpose, as Jill afterward explained, of procuring a pail of water—although the improbability of their finding water at the top of a hill naturally suggests itself.

Jack, who was carrying the pail, had started on the return trip, accompanied by the little girl, when he stumbled, as is supposed, over some obstacle in his path, and fell, his head striking the ground with great violence. Doctor Slack, who was at once summoned, pronounced the lad's injury to be a fracture of the anterior portion of the cranium, and ordered his immediate removal to Blessington hospital.

And Jill, who had fallen at the same time, either through excessive fright or in consequence of having stumbled over the same obstacle, but had received no serious injury, went home unassisted.

TEACHES ART OF SWIMMING

Apparatus Invented by California Man Makes Children Proficient Without Aid of Water.

An apparatus to teach swimming without water has been invented by a California man. The principle lies in the fact that it will teach the proper stroke because no other is possible, and when this movement has become a habit the pupil will strike out in the correct way as soon as he or she hits the water. The novice lies on a padded support, which extends to her knees. She grasps a pair of pulleys above her head, and attached to these pulleys are cables. The cable in her right hand is fastened to her left ankle and that in her left hand to her right ankle.

When the learner's hands are brought down to her sides in the arm stroke her legs are made to kick out with the same motion. When the force of this movement is spent her legs are drawn up again by a strong elastic cable, also fastened to the ankles and attached to the apparatus above her head. The support on which the "swimmer" lies is extended far enough out to prevent her arms going below the level of her body, and auxiliary support limits the downward movement of her legs.

A Benevolent Censor.

A trio of young ladies spent some weeks last year at an out-of-the-way village in the mountain region. They found the village postmaster a quaint old character, whose ways were as original as they were startling, so that the daily trip to the postoffice became a real event.

"Is there any mail for us, major?" asked one of the young ladies, as she appeared at the window one morning.

"No, they ain't a thing for you-all this mawnin', Miss Mary," was the reply. "They wasn't nothin' come for you but a letter that looked like advertisin', and so I opened it, and sure enough it was jest some advertisement about somethin' or other, and I says to myself, says I, 'Now, Miss Mary don't want to tote such stuff as that home with her,' and so I throwed it in the waste box."

A SURPRISE.

Young Benjamin was coming down
The stairs as youngsters do,
Pausing at every step to stamp
Upon each tiny shoe.

And peeping through the banisters
He laughed aloud in glee
And held his wooden elephant
That all below might see.

Alas! when nearly down, the toy
Fell from his heedless hand
And crash upon the marble floor
With heavy thud did land.

A startled step did Baby make,
With terror in his eyes,
And he, too, landed with a thump,
And that was the surprise.

MOST INGENIOUS LITTLE TOY

Few Turns of Hands Sends It Spinning Across Room—In Line With Aerial Craze.

A most ingenious little toy that is right in line with the present craze for things aerial is that here depicted. It is so simple that anybody can make it and it will amuse the children for hours. Take a strip of thin, light metal—aluminum if you can get a piece of this, or celluloid. Cut out of it a pair of elliptical wings, each about four or five inches long and connected by a thinner strip. Bend these wings near their centers till what was originally the top of one becomes the lower side, thus forming a pair of blades like the propeller of a boat or of an airship, for that matter. Then take a stick about eight inches long and from an eighth to a quarter of an inch thick and nail the wings to one end of it. This done hold the device with the wings up and then stick between the palms of the hand. Give it a twirl or two with the last motion shooting it forth into the air and you will be surprised to see it sail straight forward for a distance of from 20 to 30 feet before it begins to descend an inch.

REASON FOR PETER'S TEARS

Wire From Bale of Hay Caught in Mouth of Hippopotamus Caused Big Animal to Weep.

Peter cried steadily for nearly a week, and the keepers at the Bronx zoo in New York could not imagine what was the matter with him. Peter could not tell them, because he had never learned to speak English, and he was only a hippopotamus, anyway. He just stood in his big cage and let the tears run down his cheeks. He would not eat, and all he would do was open his mouth so wide that you might have shoved a bale of hay into it. It was a bale of hay that had caused all the trouble. When, at last, the keepers looked down into the back of Peter's great red mouth they saw that an iron wire that had been used for baling hay had been jabbed into the flesh and was sticking there. It was no wonder that Peter cried and could not eat. The keepers fixed the hippo's jaws open, and then one of the men reached in and tied a cord to the wire. It took three men to pull it out, but they did it, and then Peter went to work on the dinners that he had not been eating.

Money for Tuberculosis Work.

The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis gives forcible illustration of the way in which a small sum spent in education has secured large appropriations from state, county, and municipal officials. The New York State Charities Aid association in the three years, 1908, 1909, and 1910, has spent in the up-state portion of New York about $55,000 in arousing the people to the dangers of tuberculosis. As a direct result of the public sentiment produced by this outlay, the state, county, and municipal authorities have already appropriated for tuberculosis work $1,500,000 and appropriations for hundreds of thousands of dollars are pending. Hundreds of hospital beds have been provided, and the association already aims for "No Uncared-for Tuberculosis in 1915."

Thus, the National association says if $1,000,000 is realized from the sale of Red Cross seals, millions more will be added to it from the public treasuries. Last year 25,000,000 stamps were sold. It is aimed to sell four times as many this year.

WISE WORDS.
A Physician on Food.

A physician, of Portland, Oregon, has views about food. He says:

"I have always believed that the duty of the physician does not cease with treating the sick, but that we owe it to humanity to teach them how to protect their health, especially by hygienic and dietetic laws.

"With such a feeling as to my duty I take great pleasure in saying to the public that in my own experience and also from personal observation I have found no food equal to Grape-Nuts, and that I find there is almost no limit to the great benefits this food will bring when used in all cases of sickness and convalescence.

"It is my experience that no physical condition forbids the use of Grape-Nuts. To persons in health there is nothing so nourishing and acceptable to the stomach, especially at breakfast, to start the machinery of the human system on the day's work.

"In cases of indigestion I know that a complete breakfast can be made of Grape-Nuts and cream and I think it is not advisable to overload the stomach at the morning meal. I also know the great value of Grape-Nuts when the stomach is too weak to digest other food.

"This is written after an experience of more than 20 years, treating all manner of chronic and acute diseases, and the letter is written voluntarily on my part without any request for it."

MANY VIOLATIONS OF MINING LAWS

Report of James Epperson Summarizes Year's Work.

65 IN VERMILION COUNTY

Prosecutions Were Brought by the Inspector Under Virtually Every Statute on the Books Relating to the Mining of Coal.

Indianapolis.—James Epperson, state mine inspector, whose report for the last fiscal year will be issued shortly from the press of the state printer, has reported to the governor 18 violations of the state mining laws by miners, mine owners, mine bosses and mine superintendents for the period covered by the report. Prosecutions were brought by the inspector under virtually every statute on the books relating to the mining of coal. It has been charged against the department that its activities in prosecution have been directed chiefly against miners, but a glance over the report shows that the mine bosses and superintendents have felt the hand of the inspector to a greater degree than the miners, when the relative number of such persons employed in the coal mines is taken into account.

Evident wanton disregard of the laws designed to protect the miner from his own carelessness is noted in a number of the prosecutions. Several were prosecuted for opening kegs of powder with coal picks. Others were prosecuted for drilling holes for blasting charges of greater diameter than is permitted by statute. This statute was passed following an investigation of a mine disaster at Seelyville, Vigo county, which was traced to dangerously large drill holes. Faulty machinery and failure to provide the most rudimentary safety requirements in the mines are charged against mine bosses, superintendents and owners.

Sullivan county—Miners, drilling past cutting, 12; tamping with drill dust, 3; opening powder kegs with picks, 1. Mine bosses, break through not according to law, 1; failure to measure air current, 1; failure to provide places of refuge along haulage roads, 2; failure to provide sufficient ventilation, 1; working more than fifty persons in one "air split," 1; failure to report accident, 2; failure to provide miners with tamping material, 1; failure to provide two feet of space along haulage roads, 1. Mine superintendents, failure to carry out inspector's orders concerning repairs, 1; working more than fifty persons in one "air split," 1; failure to provide space along haulage ways, 2; failure to keep medical supplies for aiding injured, 1. Total, 31.

Vanderburg county—Miners, preparing shots more than legal diameter, 2. Mine bosses, failure to have, break through made according to law, 1. Total, 3.

Vermilion county—Miners, drilling past cutting or loose end, 42; opening powder kegs with coal pick, 5; tamping with drill dust, 5. Mine bosses, failure to have break throughs made according to law, 3; working more than fifty persons in one "air split," 5; failure to provide sufficient ventilation, 1; failure to conform to inspector's orders about repairs, 3. Mine superintendents, failure to provide space along haulage roads, 1. Total for county, 65.

Ask Municipal Suffrage of Assembly.

War to the death on the state saloons was declared by the Indiana W. C. T. U. A resolution was unanimously passed asking the Indiana legislature at its next session for the submission of a constitutional amendment to the voters of the state granting the women municipal suffrage.

Other resolutions adopted by the convention were, in brief: Better instruction in the public schools regarding the alleged danger of the use of alcoholic drinks; the co-operation of all reform societies in the work of obtaining municipal suffrage for women; the strict enforcement of the anti-cigarette laws; the vigorous suppression of the white slave traffic, and better enforcement of the laws regarding child labor.

Baptists Seek Big Sum.

Announcement of a movement to be launched immediately to raise $500,000 in additional endowment for Franklin college, the Baptist school located at Franklin, was made at the closing session of the seventy-eighth annual Indiana Baptist convention by Rev. H. P. Kiyver of the Franklin Baptist church. The last session of the convention was held in the College Avenue Baptist church and, before adjournment, it was decided the convention will meet in Bluffton in 1911.

Incorporations.

Articles of incorporation have been filed in the office of the secretary of state for the following:

Carbon Coal and Clay company, Indianapolis; capital stock, $50,000; object, to operate mining property; incorporators, W. C. Shoemaker, A. A. St. Clair, William R. Mayo.

The Hartman Manufacturing company of Vincennes has increased its capital stock from $35,000 to $50,000.

The Merchants' Grocer company, Evansville; capital stock, $100,000; object, to deal in grocers' supplies.

Typhoid Increases in Indiana.

"Until Indiana takes further steps to eliminate typhoid fever the citizens of this state cannot criticize the benighted countries of Europe on account of cholera," declared Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the state board of health, after the compilation of the mortality statistics for September. The report showed 800 cases of typhoid fever in 83 counties of the state, with 158 deaths. Eighty-one counties reported 757 cases and 132 deaths for the same period last year. Typhoid fever and rheumatism were the two most prevalent diseases during the month. The total number of deaths for September, 1910, was 2,780, as compared to 2,660 in 1909. The death rate increased .6 of 1 per cent.

Counties in which epidemics prevailed during September were Allen county, 65 cases; Delaware, 20; Randolph, 24; Vanderburg, 27; Washington, 35; Putnam, 31; Marion, 136.

"This record is simply awful," declared Dr. Hurty. "Both cholera and typhoid fever are filth diseases, and until the people awaken to the understanding that uncleanliness is a crime and that it destroys life at a faster rate than all murderers, assassins and anarchists combined, the efforts of health officers will be in vain except to point out as often as possible the alarming facts and assist in the campaign of education."

The highest death rates by ages were the life periods under one year and over sixty-five years. The death of children under one year old, as reported to the state board of health, were 20 per cent of the total number, and those of persons over sixty-five years old, 26 per cent. The death rate in the northern sanitary section was 14.1; for the central sanitary section, 11.7; for the southern sanitary section, 9.9.

Twenty-seven of the 231 persons who were stricken with diphtheria during September died. There were 334 deaths caused by tuberculosis, 282 of these being due to the disease in pulmonary form. The number of children under twelve years old who became orphans through deaths from tuberculosis during September was 159. Seventy-nine of the persons who died of tuberculosis were either fathers or mothers between eighteen and forty years old. There were 82 deaths from pneumonia, and one from smallpox during the month.

The death rate in the cities was 14.7 as compared to 12.4 as the state rate. For the same month last year the death rate was 16.3. The country death rate was 10.8. Indiana cities returned death rates as follows: Indianapolis, 14.1; Evansville, 13.2; Fort Wayne, 17.6; Terre Haute, 13.3, and South Bend, 17.5.

Deaths in September caused by violence numbered 232. Six were murders, 28 suicides and 198 accidents. Thirteen of the suicides were by women. Of the accidental deaths 34 were caused by steam railroads, 57 by electric railroads, 2 by city electric railroads, 4 by automobiles, 12 in falls, 11 in mines, 11 by horses and vehicles, 14 by drowning and 7 by electricity.

Likes State Penal System.

Amos W. Butler, secretary of the board of state charities, has received a letter from W. E. Garrison, president of the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts and a member of the New Mexico constitutional convention, asking information concerning the administration of penal and correctional institutions. Mr. Garrison's letter follows: "I am a member of the New Mexico constitutional convention and am secretary of the committee on public institutions. What is the best plan for the administration of penal and correctional institutions? You are an expert in all of these matters and I should value any suggestions you may make regarding constitutional provisions on these matters." Mr. Butler has supplied Mr. Garrison with the information he seeks and has sent him pamphlets explaining the Indiana methods of administration.

Work of Food Inspectors.

H. E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner, has prepared the following data from September reports of field inspectors in the employ of the board.

Inspections made, 430. Of these, 17 resulted in findings of excellent, 170 good, 183 fair, 45 poor and 15 bad.

Dairies inspected, 29. Of these, 11 were found bad and condemned, 5 were graded poor, 10 fair, and only 3 good. In 25 inspections it was necessary to order improvements before the dairymen could proceed with business. In three instances the establishments were not properly kept.

Pensions for Indianians.

Pensions were granted Indianians as follows: William A. Bodine, $30; Charles Conner, $8; Lemuel Doriot, $15; minor of Charles Elmer, $8; Samuel H. Eviston, $15; Charles E. Filer, $20; Mary J. McCarter, $12; Morris McGuire, $24; William H. Miller, $17; Matheis Griesinger, $20; John F. Russell, $24; Zachariah Smith, $17; John W. Sylvester, $15; James M. Youmans, $55.

Court Aid Will Be Asked.

The railroad commission of Indiana will be compelled to go into the courts in its attempt to require H. F. Houghton, general superintendent of the Big Four railroad, to answer questions concerning the names, ages, length of service and character of service of all telegraph operators employed by the company. Mr. Houghton was asked the question in connection with the investigation of the Brightwood wreck, but he refused to answer at that time. The commission issued a subpoena for him to appear before the commission.

CONTESTS FEATURE RED MEN ELECTION

Annual Session of the Great Council of Indiana.

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

Three Ballots Necessary to Name Roy W. Emig Great Junior Sagamore in a Warm Race.

Indianapolis.—At the annual session of the Great Council of Indiana, Improved Order of Red Men, held at Indianapolis in the German House, the following officers were elected after balloting two hours:

Dr. C. M. Stoute, Middletown, great prophet.

Oliver C. Norris, Rushville, great sachem.

George W. Harper, Madison, great senior sagamore.

Roy W. Emig, Columbus, great junior sagamore.

Otto Wolf, Indianapolis, great chief of records.

Frank G. Castor, Indianapolis, great keeper of wampum.

Frank M. Graham, Bloomington, great trustee.

Dr. John S. Coffman, Muncie; Geo. I. Kisner, Terre Haute, and Alfred E. Ellison, Anderson, great representatives to the Great Council of the United States.

The warmest contest developed in the race for great junior sagamore. Seven candidates had announced themselves for the place, and it took three ballots to elect Roy W. Emig, Columbus. Mr. Emig has been a member of the Improved Order of Red Men but two years, and it is said no other officer of a Great Council ever has been elected after so short a connection with the order. Mr. Emig is a member of Inguashagua Tribe, No. 84, and the fact that he was seated in the Great Council for the first time was not generally known until after the election. On the final ballot several of the candidates withdrew and the count resulted as follows: Emig, 480; C. E. Elliott, Sheridan, 261; W. H. Larue, Anderson, 120; George W. Schweigert, Hartford City, 71.

Contests were spirited in the campaigns for great keeper of wampum, great representatives to the Great Council of the United States and great trustee. Approximately 700 members were given the obligation of the Great Council at the opening session. It was said 1,400 delegates and other members having votes are in attendance at the council.

A resolution was passed favoring the purchase of Red Cross stamps by every member of the order to aid in stamping out the "white plague."

The building proposition which had received so much attention recently was summed up in the passing of a resolution empowering the newly elected great sachem to appoint a committee of five past sachems to investigate and report on the possibilities of erecting a structure on the property recently purchased by the order at Capitol avenue and Market street.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Columbus.—At a meeting of the city council held here the council leased 30 acres of ground in the north part of the city, known as Perry's grove, for five years and will convert the land into a city park. The city also took an option on the land by which a purchase may be made for $30,000 at any time within the five years.

Terre Haute.—Hoping to escape extradition into Illinois, where it is expected indictments will be returned charging him with bribery, Jacob R. Finkelstein, president of the Greensburg Iron company, has begun an extraordinary coup. Three firms of attorneys have been retained and Mr. Finkelstein hopes to have an indictment returned against himself by the Vigo county grand jury, and thus prevent the honoring of papers from Illinois.

Laporte.—Another link in the chain of evidence against Carl A. Badsing, alleged wife slayer, formerly of Otis, this county, and a large land owner in this county, was announced by Coroner Hoffman. He received from Dr. Walter S. Haines a signed statement that "arsenic in marked quantities" had been found in parts of the organs of Badsing's first wife, Mrs. Mary Badsing.

Franklin.—Alphonso Snyder, thirteen years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Snyder, has disappeared and all attempts to locate him have failed. The boy was at school but left and nothing has been heard of him since. He is about four feet high, with dark hair and eyes.

Newcastle. — The habeas corpus proceedings which were begun to secure the release on bail of Mrs. Etta Johnson, came to an end, the state's attorneys declining to submit any evidence. After an eloquent appeal by the attorney for Mrs. Johnson for nominal bail, so that she might return to her children, Judge Jackson admitted her to bail. He said the amount would be made known by him the next morning, but that it would not be more than $5,000, and possibly considerably less. Bail will be furnished by friends of the accused woman in Montgomery county.

WHAT HE CONSIDERED FAIR

Mr. Olsen's Offer Must Have Come As Surprise Even to Persuasive Claim Agent.

Up in Minnesota Mr. Olsen had a cow killed by a railroad train. In due season the claim agent for the railroad called.

"We understand, of course, that the deceased was a very docile and valuable animal," said the claim agent in his most persuasive claim-agentlemanly manner, "and we sympathize with you and your family in your loss. But, Mr. Olsen, you must remember this: Your cow had no business being upon our tracks. Those tracks are our private property and when she invaded them she became a trespasser. Technically speaking, you, as her owner, became a trespasser also. But we have no desire to carry the issue into court, and possibly give you trouble. Now, then what would you regard as a fair settlement between you and the railroad company?"

"Vell," said Mr. Olsen slowly, "Ay baen poor Swede farmer, but Aye shall give you two dollars."—Everybody's.

Easy for Her.

An extremely corpulent old lady was entertaining her grandchild at luncheon when she found occasion to reprimand the little girl for dropping some food on the tablecloth.

"You don't see grandma dropping anything on the table," she said.

"Of course not," replied the child; "God gave you something in front to stop it."

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Black Duck, Minn.—"About a year ago I wrote you that I was sick and could not do any of my housework. My sickness was called Retroflexion. When I would sit down I felt as if I could not get up. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and did just as you told me and now I am perfectly cured, and have a big baby boy."—Mrs. ANNA ANDERSON, Box 19, Black Duck, Minn.

Consider This Advice.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

That Cold Room

on the side of the house where winter blasts strike hardest always has a lower temperature than the rest of the house. There are times when it is necessary to raise the temperature quickly or to keep the temperature up for a long period. Dear Sir:—

Your letter asking about the Favorite Base Burner at hand. I have owned a Favorite Base Burner about thirteen years. The only repair in that length of time was a new fire pot last year. Am heating an eight room house now and using about 3 tons of coal. My recommendation was genuine and as the years go by I am more than satisfied that I made no mistake in buying a Favorite.

Yours truly,

Anniversary

Of the Ladies Literary Club of St. Joe Celebrated in Fitting Style.

The fourteenth anniversary of the Ladies Literary Club was celebrated on Wednesday, Oct. 26, 1910, at the beautiful home of Mrs. Lenore Kagey with "Our Mothers" as guests. The parlors were beautifully decorated with the club colors, red and green, and as each guest arrived, she was presented with the club flower, a carnation.

Promptly at two o'clock P. M., the president, Mrs. Addie Patterson, called the meeting to order, after which Mrs. Delora Curie greeted the guests with a few well chosen words. This was followed by a piano solo, "Old Folks at Home" with variations by Miss Lela Shilling, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Next on program was a Round Table: "The Home of Fifty Years Ago," conducted by Mrs. Amelia Beuninghoff, in which the guests participated. The modes of living, how they spun, wove and sewed all their own clothing, how they cooked by the old fireplace, the way they went to church, some on foot and some behind oxen, and how they behaved themselves when they arrived; also, how the courting was done, this causing quite a number of the older ladies to blush. Many other things were brought out, altogether proving very interesting to all "The Home of Today,, was then conducted by Mrs. Clara Rhodenbaugh, in which the club members took part. They told of the improvements of living today over that of fifty years ago. Not a few of the guests seemed to think that homes were far happier then than now. Mrs. Frances Lake and Mrs. Lenore Kagey sang a duett "Sunset of Life," in a very pleasing manner. Mrs. Jennie Seebler gave a humorous reading entitled "Our Visit" by Samantha Allen, which was full of homely truths. Mrs. Emma Baker sang "Nobody knows but Mother" and Mrs. Bessie Tustison, "For Somehow Mother's different from the Rest," the sentiment of both songs being very appropriate for the occasion. The roll was then called, each member responding with a quotation on "Mother."

The meeting was then turned over into the hands of the committee, Mrs. Arline Koch, Mrs. Belle Barney and Mrs. Kagey, who asked the guests to take part in a buttonhole contest, Grandma Swineford winning the prize, a dainty sewing basket. Delicious refreshments were then served consisting of ice cream, cake and coffe. Favors were hand painted leaves in autumn colors.

The club was organized in 1896 with sixteen charter members, of which six are still active members. Mrs. Beninghoff was the first president. Many changes have taken place from year to year, old members dropping out and new members coming in, but only one, Mrs. Addie Widney Lake, has been removed by death. The club now has twenty-one active members whose loyal interest has helped to make the club an intellectual and social success.

Hallow'een at M. P. Parsonage Mon. Eve.

Ye Ghosts of Hallowe'en
All stately and serene,
Presented quite a scene
At the parsonage Monday e'en.

As you entered at the door
Ghosts came at you by the score,
Made you wish you hadn't come
Or that you'd brought along your gun.

There were lights from pumpkins yellow
Which made the rooms look mellow.
There were lights from grinning Jack's.
There were Goblins on your track,
They had noses on their mugs
Made you think that they were pugs.

Then they waved you up the stair
With your hair, all standing straight,
Where the Gypsies with their prate
Told your fortunes while you wait.
While the pumpkin's yellow light
Made the rooms a shimmering night.

There were dummies in the corner,
There were cornstalks up the stair,
There were autumn leaves on the tables,
There were black cats—O beware!
While the laughing Jacks so yellow
Made the rooms a golden mellow.

Old "Rip" was there in all his glory
But I'll not begin to tell the story
Of the funny Clown with his peaked hat,
Whom every one had to laugh at.
All the while the mellow light
Made the rooms so gloomy bright.

The Bride now entered with her Groom
(They looked like fresh buds of June.)
The Witch of Endor with her broom
Made them go some round the room
While the big eyed Jack o' pumpkin yellow
Made you think he was some big fellow.

There was a contest for some to whistle,
Which was conducted by Corn the Apostle.
There were games from every part
Which was fun right from the start.
Also songs sung by the Ghosts
Which made us shiver 'most.
All the while the golden haze
Made you feel a sort a maze.

Then they sat us on the floor
(There were three score or more)
Where they passed us apples red,
Not a word by them was said.
Next they gave us nuts to eat.
Which we considered quite a treat.
All the while that big eyed Squash
Kept us thinking some be gosh.

But this story I must close
And seek nature's quiet repose.
I hope that on next Hallowe'en,
When at the parsonage they convene
The Witch of Endor with her broom
Will make them Ghosts git from the room,
And that big Pumpkin Head——
O by that time He'll be dead.

Dr. W. W. Swarts for Coroner.

The office of coroner is not to be overlooked on Nov. 8. While not so important as some of the other offices it must not be forgotten. We assume that every reader knows the duties of this office and if he does he realizes that a physician can do the work better than a layman can. With this in view the republicans nominated a physician for the office, Dr. W. W. Swarts, of this city. The doctor is one of those genial, whole-souled fellows that it is a pleasure to meet, and if elected would perform the duties well. For a time he filled the office completing the unexpired term of Dr. J. C. Baxter. His administration at this time was very gratifying to the board of county commissioners.

Don't forget on Nov. 8 to remember Dr. Swarts. Knowing him as we do, we know that he will appreciate your support and value it as highly as if he was a candidate for the most important office in the county. His superior qualifications should appeal to you.

Hallowe'en Party.

Last Saturday evening was one long to be remembered by the ladies of the Culture Club; it being one of the few times when serious thoughts were banished from the mind and jolly good nature reigned supreme. The members of the club were divided into halves, one half to hide and the other to search for and find them if possible. At the end of one hour, if unsuccessful they were to gather at a certain corner and the party that had been hiding would meet them there. With the aid of Mr. Wineland and the "hack" they were able to so successfully conceal themselves that the searchers had to give up in dispair. At exactly eight o'clock Mr. Wineland drove up at the place agreed upon and the ladies proceeded to unpack, for indeed they were packed, ask one of the ten if you doubt it; then the searchers could be seen coming in from all directions, reluctantly acknowledging their defeat. The ladies had prepared a lunch and this was then taken by two of the ladies, one chosen from each side, and hidden in the home of one of the members, it being understood that they should place a black cat in one of the windows, then all the ladies were to search for the black cat. After considerable searching the cat was found at the home of Mrs. Laura Baker. Cloths were then spread on the floor in true Hallowe'en fashion and from baskets and boxes was brought forth a splendid luncheon, this, while being the last, proved to be not the least enjoyable feature of the evening. Candles placed in apples marked the places, which, when all were lighted, presented a very pleasing appearance. Marshmallows were roasted, and after the lights were turned down and each one supplied with a match, Mrs. Baker lighting her match, began a story stopping when her match had burned out, then each one in her turn continued the story as long as her match burned. The delightful informality helped to make the evening a most pleasant one. Outside of the club there were present Mr. Bernard and Mr. Hamilton, who were asked to help dispose of the many good things At last all departed for their several homes feeling that they had enjoyed themselves to the utmost.

Farewell Reception

On last Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. F. Buchanan, an informal reception was given by the Culture Club, in honor of Mrs. Laura Baker, who will leave soon for her new home in Auburn. After the regular program the husbands arrived to help make merry the evening which was one long to be remembered. The evening was very pleasantly spent in social chat and contests, after which light refreshments were served by the committee. The club regrets very much to lose so worthy a member as Mrs. Baker, but all our good wishes accompany her to her new home.

FOR CLEAN FOODS.

Addressing the American Health association in convention at Milwaukee, Prof. James O. Jordan of Boston, chairman, pointed out the need of protecting foods from contamination not only by dirt, dust, insect life, dogs and cats, but also from handling by human being, says the Buffalo Express. He must have had in mind careless masses to whom the rules of cleanliness are practically unknown. The effort of the day, among civilized people is generally for clean food. Restaurants are sometimes accused of being less particular than they should be, but local health officials can keep them up to the standard or have them discontinued. If such power is not accessible by any health officer, legislation should provide for such an arrangement. Professor Jordan spoke also for milk, saying: "Less money spent on millinery and beer and more devoted to procuring clean milk will yield health dividends more than commensurate with the capital thus invested." It is hardly necessary for the individual to forego much beer or much millinery to provide clean milk. The task is the community's. Only one class of milk should be tolerated, and that, clean, reasonably rich, and delivered in cleanly vessels and vehicles.

A part of the theory touching the nature of matter is that the ions, which are the constituents of atoms, are not only in constant motion, but that this energy is working toward a lower quality of matter; that is, that gold is developing toward copper or toward some other kind of metal of less value. So of silver and the diamond. These precious metals never transmute upward, but always downward. The changes may not be observed in centuries, but in millions of years they will manifest themselves. This disintegration of the atom and its transmutation into the base metals suggest two inferences—either the advance of civilization in the eradication of gold and other precious metals, or that the so-called baser metals are of greater value and use in the social economy. Of course, long before the eradication of gold through this process, mankind will disappear from the planet, yet the lesson is left by this scientific discovery that in the great plan of nature, copper and iron are more to be esteemed than gold or silver.

The day of a doze is no more—that delicious moment as the day breaks, when the sleeper wakes and rolls over in a half dream and yields himself to a drowsy spell that gives to joy a sort of real existence—well, it is no more. These days of advance have blotted it out. Invention and rapid life are too many for it. When a person wakes, he wakes. No lotus-eating for him. No floating away on a silvery mist out into the land of forgetfulness. Listen to that motor cycle running from away down the street, sputtering, cracking and crashing as it comes, rushing past your window as the very devil himself would; and then, that snorting, ripping and slashing clamor sweeping by in the form of an automobile—good-by, old Somnus and Momus, and all ye divinities of night and sleep, fare well, says the Ohio State Journal. Some day we may meet again, but in some other world or some other time when the long, lingering doze at dawn may be looked upon as one of the sacred rights of mankind.

Before the year's outing season is over nearly half a million persons will have sought recreation and health in the national forests. The use of the forests for recreation is as yet in its beginning, but is growing steadily and rapidly—in some of the forests at the rate of 100 per cent. per annum. The day seems not far distant when 1,000,000 persons will annually visit them. The records show that the seasonal use of the forests runs from two months in a Colorado forest, such as the Routt, to 12 months in an Alaskan, such as the Tongass. But the uses differ. In Colorado the 2,000 visitors entered the forest to fish, to camp, to climb and to drink the medicinal waters; in Alaska, the 1,000 almost solely to hunt and fish. The 21,000 persons who went into the Coconino forest, Arizona, during nine months went to camp or to enjoy the scenery. The most popular of the forests is the Pike, containing the famous peak of that name.

The official census-statistics give Chicago a population of 2,185,283, a gain of 484,704 in ten years. This is doing very well, as the returns show Chicago to be the second city in the United States in number of inhabitants, ranking next to New York both in population and in rate of increase. Yet Chicago is not satisfied. The metropolis thought it should have at least 2,000,000. Apparently the only way to get such a total is to annex some more of the outlying territory.

GONE TO COLLEGE

I. C. LOSES TAX CASE

STATE OF ILLINOIS IS VICTOR OVER RAILROAD UNDER DECISION BY HIGH COURT.

OVERRULES LINE DEMURRER

Case Goes to La Salle County Court to Be Heard on Merits—Action Based on Findings of Accountants That Reports Had Been Changed.

Springfield, Ill.—A decision of the supreme court of Illinois was handed down Friday in the tax case of the state against the Illinois Central Railroad company.

The state won every important contention with the exception that the opinion holds the accounts prior to 1905 have been accepted by the state and payment made thereon, and that therefore they are not subject to further inquiry.

But for the future settlements and for the settlement of all accounts since Governor Deneen came into office, the court lays down hard and fast rules for accounting by which the state will reap a reward of $2,000,000 a year more in taxes than it has been receiving from the Illinois Central Railroad company.

When the Illinois Central tendered its first payment under Governor Deneen's administration he accepted the money with the understanding the accounting upon which the money was tendered was subject to revision. This act on the part of the governor, the court holds, makes all transactions with the road during his administration subject to further accounting.

The court remands the case to the circuit court of La Salle county, with instructions to proceed in accordance with the views in its opinion. Unless the railroad accepts the court's decision as final, the circuit court of La Salle county will no doubt appoint a master to go into all the details of the accounting since 1905, and the case may be prolonged indefinitely. At present the railroad is paying approximately $1,000,000 to the state every year.

The suit against the Illinois Central was filed early in December, 1907, by the attorney general, following a message from Governor Deneen to the legislator, declaring that the road had been so manipulating its accounts as to credit millions of its earnings to the non-charter lines, not subject to the tax of .7 per cent. Later accounting swelled the amount which Governor Deneen declared the road owed to the state from $5,000,000 to $15,000,000.

WILSON IS SENT TO OHIO

Secretary of Agriculture Is Fourth Cabinet Officer to Take Part in Ohio Campaign.

Washington.—A fourth cabinet officer has been ordered to Ohio to help the Republican ticket. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson's dates in New York state have been curtailed to enable him to speak in some of the rural districts of President Taft's state.

Secretary Wilson left Monday night for New York state to fill engagements made for him in some of the up-state counties. He is popular among the farmers and the Republicans apparently are more anxious about the voters in the rural districts than they have been for several years.

Secretary Knox, Secretary MacVeagh and Attorney General Wickersham are the other cabinet members who will participate in the Ohio campaign.

VICTORY MEANS HIGH RATES

RAILROAD HEADS ADMIT INTENT TO ADD TO INCREASE.

Burlington Vice-President and Counsel Qualify Statement With Higher Cost Argument.

Chicago.—The hope that a victory in their fight for increased freight rates will give them an opportunity to make still further advances is the reason given by the western railroads for the tenacity displayed in the battle they are waging before the interstate commerce commission.

This was admitted by C. G. Burnham, vice-president of the Burlington railroad, in charge of traffic, and by Attorney Dawes, counsel of the road, at the hearing.

The admission was qualified, however, by statements that the increase asked for in the present hearing would only offset reductions that had been made by the commission in recent cases and that the further advances would furnish the roads the money declared necessary to meet ever-mounting expenses and the cost of needed improvements and equipment.

The advances asked at once would bring the Burlington about $400,000, Mr. Burnham stated, while the further increases would raise the amount to about $800,000. The position of the Burlington is the same as that of all the other roads involved, according to Mr. Burnham. He said that no increase in class rates, the broader field, was sought, the roads desiring only to increase the commodity rates.

J. S. Peabody, statistician of the Santa Fe, testified that state traffic cost the road from two to five times as much to handle as interstate.

DEPUTIES STIR UP TUMULT

Disorder in French Chamber During Strike Debate Rivals Turbulence of Revolution.

Paris.—The debate on the railway strike in which the government has been bitterly attacked in the chamber of deputies by the Socialists, has taken a new and dramatic turn.

During Saturday's session, which was not only the most violent in the history of the French parliament, but rivaled in disorder and turbulence the sessions of the national convention during the French revolution, Premier Briand, smarting under the repeated attacks of M. Jaures, the leader of the Socialists, and others, leaped to his feet and, defending the cabinet's suppression of the strike as a revolutionary outbreak, exclaimed: "If the actual laws had been insufficient we would not have hesitated to resort even to illegality for the purpose of preserving the fatherland."

An uproar followed these words. The Socialists jumped up and were joined by a number of radicals. With shouts of anger they moved towards the tribune, crying "Resign! Dictator, resign!"

Finally, M. Brisson, president of the chamber, amid cries from the Socialists, adjourned the debate.

ASCENDS 9,714 FEET

JOHNSTONE BREAKS WORLD'S ALTITUDE RECORD AT CLOSE OF AVIATION MEET.

IS WINNER OF $2,000 PRIZE

Lack of Fuel Prevents Daring Aviator Going Still Higher—Moissant Captures Another Purse—Englishman Falls in Speed Event.

New York.—The international aviation meet was brought to a close in a blaze of glory Monday when Ralph Johnstone, flying in a Wright "baby" biplane, a craft which he drove for the first time in his aerial flights, broke the world's altitude record by ascending to a height of 9,714 feet.

For his daringly spectacular feat he received a prize of $2,000. If he had been able to soar just 287 feet higher he would have won an additional prize of $5,000 offered on the condition that the altitude record be over 10,000 feet. He was prevented from reaching this height because his machine would not climb and more on account of lack of fuel. The previous record was 9,186 feet.

It took Johnstone about one hour and twenty-six minutes to reach his highest point in the sky. For an hour he was utterly beyond the sight of the naked eye. He made his descent from the perilous height of almost two miles in the air in less than six minutes.

A great air race from Belmont Park around the Statue of Liberty in New York bay and return for a bet of $10,000 a side probably will result from a challenge issued by Claude Grahame-White to John B. Moissant. The challenge is the result of Sunday's race over the same course in which Moissant defeated the Englishman by forty-three seconds.

Grahame-White issued the formal challenge and the Chicago aviator said he would accept it.

Moissant, flying the Blerlot in which he captured the Statue of Liberty prize, won the Aero Club of America's distance prize of $2,000. In two hours he made the course fifty-six times, a total distance of about eight-seven and one-half miles.

Moissant made a sensational landing in front of the grand stand, smashing his propeller and breaking one wheel of his monoplane. He climbed out of the machine, however, uninjured. Latham was second in the race with thirty-five laps.

Just as Moissant came down Grahame-White ascended in his Farman biplane in an exhibition flight.

Grahame-White, who was flying in the speed race against McCurdy, overturned in front of the grand stand and was buried under the machine. Helpers lifted the machine off him and he walked out limping slightly, waving his hand to the crowd to let them know he was not seriously injured. His machine was damaged.

New York.—In the fastest time ever recorded for the full distance of 62.14 miles around a five kilometer course, Claude Grahame-White, flying for the Royal Aero club of the United Kingdom, Saturday won the Gordon-Bennett international speed cup from his American and French competitors.

Brookins was just coming around the turn into the homestretch for a trial circle preparatory to entering into the Gordon Bennett race when four of his eight cylinders ceased firing.

Driven by the wind and his engine, he came hurtling through the air at such tremendous speed that when he touched the earth his front wheels and forward frame collapsed and he was buried under its debris. Neither of the men were badly hurt.

John B. Moisant, the American who flew from Paris to London, was the victor in a most perilous and spectacular race.

Dashing at more than a mile a minute speed from Belmont park to the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor and back again to Belmont park, a distance of 33 miles as the crow flies, he won over Count de Lesseps, the French aviator, and Claude Grahame-White, the English champion, by a margin of 45 seconds.

BATTLES WITH THIEF, DIES

Insurance Man Is Shot by Burglar While Wife and Children Look On.

Chicago.—After a desperate hand-to-hand encounter with a burglar who had entered his home at 2138 Fulton street, Sunday night, Guy Williams, a solicitor for the Prudential Life Insurance company, was shot and killed by the intruder.

Williams' wife and two young sons, cowering behind a door but a few feet distant, saw in the dimly lighted room the struggle of the husband and father with the burglar. They saw the two men fight for mastery. They saw the flash of the revolver shot.

The burglar jumped from a window and escaped.

STUBBS FLAYS HIGH RATES

GOVERNOR STAR WITNESS BEFORE COMMERCE COMMISSION.

Declares Railroads Falsify and Are Guilty of Stock and Profit Juggling—Proves a Tartar.

Chicago — Declaring the western railroads were guilty of stock and profit juggling, W. R. Stubbs, governor of Kansas, held that the assertions of the roads that an increase in freight rates was necessary were not justified by facts.

Governor Stubbs was testifying before the interstate commerce commission at its session here in the rate hearing.

He made one of the strongest witnesses that the shippers had placed on the stand. He insisted that the valuation the roads had put on their property was altogether excessive and he offered to reproduce all the lines in Kansas for $25,000 a mile and to give a bond of $1,000,000 for performance. Such a figure, he said, would yield him 10 per cent profit at least.

Much of the stocks of the railroads, according to Governor Stubbs' testimony, consist of water and profits, and are juggled through the placing in permanent improvements of surpluses and then the capitalizing of the improvements.

The governor proved a tartar for the railroad attorneys when cross-examined, and his sallies kept the officials and others at the hearing in gales of laughter.

CHINA TO HAVE PARLIAMENT

Throne Decides to Yield to Popular Demand for Early Convocation of New Body.

Peking.—It is believed the throne has decided to accede to the demand of the senate and the provincial delegates for the early convocation of a popular parliament.

In the senate Monday and in the presence of the leading grand councilors, Prince Yu Liang, a member of the grand council, stated that the entire nation from the highest to the lowest was agreed on the necessity of the early establishment of a general parliament.

The senators, who understood this to mean that their memorial would be granted, received the declaration of the prince with loud and prolonged cheering.

MAY SEEK MORE POWER IF DEFEATED

Railroad Commission Sees Supreme Test in Big Four Case.

RECOMMENDATIONS IGNORED

The Step Has Been Taken After a Careful Survey of the Situation, and Results May Be Laid Before General Assembly.

Indianapolis.—The railroad commission of Indiana, which has taken steps to obtain an order of court compelling H. F. Houghton, general superintendent of the Big Four Railroad company, to supply the commission with data concerning age, service record, etc., of telegraph operators employed by the company in the state, will try to obtain a final ruling on the question before the general assembly convenes in January.

The step has been taken after a careful survey of the situation, and the result will probably be laid before the general assembly in order that that body may have official knowledge of the railroad company's action in combating the will of the general assembly of 1907, which provided, by express order, that the commission should investigate two fatal wrecks on the company's lines and make recommendations. As a result of the investigation the commission recommended that the railroads of the state, particularly mentioning the Big Four, do not employ telegraph operators under twenty-one years old.

At the statehouse the determination to take the matter into the courts is looked on as a supreme test of the powers of the commission. If the commission loses in the courts it is probable that it will lay the matter before the general assembly, with its report on the interurban situation in the state as proof that the commission needs more authority in order to be effective as a protector of life and property placed in the care of steam and electric road companies.

Mr. Houghton, acting on the advice of counsel for the Big Four, declined to give the commission the data asked for, on the ground that the commission had no right to ask for it. The commission contends that it has the right under the general powers conferred on it by the general assembly to prevent practises by railroads that might prove disastrous to life or property. Basing its conclusions on wreck investigations and the opinions of experts, the commission held that a boy of seventeen or eighteen years is not competent, mentally, carefully to handle train orders, and it asked the Big Four for information, the request being refused. The commission found, in its investigations of the Sandford and Fowler wrecks, that the disasters were largely due to inefficient telegraph operators. The recommendations at that time concerning the employment of operators were not heeded by the Big Four, although this was not known until the commission investigated a Big Four wreck at Sandford in April of this year.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

South Bend.—School superintendents from nearly all of the larger cities of northern Indiana are here attending the annual meeting of the Northern Indiana Superintendents' club. Among the questions to be discussed is the exemption of teachers from examination. Acording to a recent construction placed upon the state school law regarding exemption of teachers, a large per cent. of the licenses issued to teachers believed to be exempt are invalid.

South Bend.—Cities and towns in northern Indiana are facing a coal famine, according to reports given out to the retail trade in South Bend and Elkhart by jobbers. The recent drop in the temperature brought on a brisk demand for fuel and the bins of practically all the coal dealers in this part of the state were soon depleted. Anthracite coal is selling from $7.75 per ton for cash to $8.25 on credit. Soft coal averages $4.50 per ton.

Fort Wayne.—A sanity commission has been called to meet to decide the case of B. T. Corkwell, the motorman held responsible for the the Kingsland trolley wreck. Physicians say he is insane as a result of the wreck. The sheriff was here to serve a warrant on a manslaughter indictment and found Corkwell strapped to a bed.

Fort Wayne.—Workmen employed by the Fort Wayne & Wabash Valley Traction company began cutting down the trees which obscure the curve near Kingsland, where 40 people were killed about a month ago. Negotiations for the purpose of removing the timber on the land were concluded.

Rushville.—William Gilson, sixty-three years old, while walking in his sleep, fell from the roof of the porch at his residence here, after he had walked out of the window of his room and sustained injuries which may result fatally. He toppled 12 feet to the ground, alighting on his head.

South Bend.—Maurice Hammon, twenty-one years old, of Nappanee, was killed here by coming in contact with a heavily charged electric wire while engaged in removing a ground wire for the Indiana-Michigan Electric company.

SERIAL STORY

Archibald's Agatha

By EDITH HUNTINGTON MASON

Author of "The Real Agatha"

Copyright 1910, by W. G. Chapman.
Copyright in Great Britain.

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular and indolent young bachelor of London, receives news that he has been made heir to the estate of his Aunt Georgiana, with an income of $20,000 a year, on condition that he becomes engaged to be married within ten days. Failing to do so the legacy will go to a third cousin in America. The story opens at Castle Wyckoff, where Lord Vincent and his wife, friends of Terhune, are discussing plans to find him a wife within the prescribed time. It seems that Lady Vincent is one of seven persons named Agatha, all close girlhood chums. She decides to invite two of them to the castle and have Archie there as one of the guests. Agatha Sixth strikes Archie as a handpainted beauty. Agatha First is a breezy American girl. Lady Vincent tells her husband that Agatha Sixth already cares for Archie. He gains from Agatha Sixth the admission that she cares for him, but will require a month's time fully to make up her mind. Agatha First, neglected by Terhune, receives attentions from Leslie Freer. Four days of the precious time have passed when Terhune is called to London on business. Agatha First, on the plea of sickness, excuses herself from a motor trip planned by the Vincents. Later they see Agatha First picking flowers with a strange man. The Vincents discuss Agatha's seeming duplicity.

CHAPTER VI.—Continued.

"Our marriage," I corrected.

"Naturally," she said indulgently and laughed. "But I 've always admired her," she went on; "she's so big and strong and has such tremendous vital force. I'm a little surprised that any one of such an open character could develop into such a plotter. It's all so frightfully underhand somehow. Why can't she come and tell me frankly all about it, whatever it is?"

"Perhaps Mrs. Chiltern could throw some light on the subject," I suggested.

"I shouldn't wonder at all!" exclaimed Dearest. "Agatha First stayed much longer with her than Agatha Sixth did. I shall telephone her in the morning. What a smart little boy it is, to be sure, to think of that!" And I was more than paid for my happy thought by a pair of exquisite arms about my neck.

"I wonder what they'll have to say for themselves when they come in?" I said as we were going down to the drawing-room a little later.

"O, they won't come in together," said my wife; "that would be too much of a give away." And just then we perceived Agatha First standing at the foot of the stair-case waiting for us. She was alone, as Dearest had prophesied she would be.

"Hello!" she greeted us composedly. "Was it a nice party? Did you miss me?" And although I couldn't help thinking there was a new beauty about the girl in the unusual brilliance of her dark eyes and the deeper glow of her color as she stood there, I thought such cheek deserved a cropper.

"Rippin!" I said, before Dearest could answer. "But where have you been? I thought you were supposed to be on the sick list today." But she didn't seem a bit embarrassed. "I was," she replied. "I didn't really feel like going way over to Northbury with you, but I thought a little outing would do my head good, so I went for a stroll."

"I see!" I said, and thought with indignation of the scene in the woods even as I noticed that the young lady did not wear the pongee auto coat she had worn then. "Left it in the machine, probably, to prevent suspicion!" I thought to myself, while Dearest said sweetly: "That's nice, dear; I'm glad you felt like going. Run along now and get ready for dinner. It's almost eight."

It was what we called between ourselves "The Incident of the Checked Coat" that really decided my wife to consult Mrs. Chiltern about Agatha First's strange behavior.

The morning was fine and we had planned to take our guests to see some interesting ruins not quite 12 miles away, where an automobile was to meet us at noontime with luncheon.

Dearest had been delayed with making arrangements for our picnic, and the others, the inevitable Freer, Arch and the two Agathas, had started slowly on ahead.

We could hear their voices in the gardens below our windows as she hurriedly got into some walking things. I had of course waited for her.

"I don't know but I'll go up into Terhune's room," I said, when I had finished lacing her long boots, "and see if I can't find that old fishing hat of mine I used to sport last summer. I think I saw it up there. I hate to be an dressed on a tramp like this!" And I threw my panama on a chair in disgust.

"It's in the closet," she replied; "third shelf. I put it there myself. Though what you want with that old thing when you have boxes and boxes full of good hats I can't imagine!"

"Nothing like being comfortable!" I shouted, as I ran up the broad stairs outside the door three steps at a time.

Dearest was all ready and waiting when I came down again, but I didn't need to speak to inform her that something had happened. She saw it by my face.

"What is it, Wilfred?" she asked. "You look as if you'd seen a ghost!"

"I have!" I answered, "or something quite as startling! I say, Agatha, what do you think I found in old Arch's closet?"

"Your hat, just as I told you you would! What else?" But I knew she knew I didn't mean that.

"Why, nothing more nor less than a loud checked automobile coat, or duster!" I replied in measured tones. "Now, what do you think of that?"

"Not like the coat you saw hanging over the back of the machine in the woods?" expostulated Dearest, aghast. "Not that coat, Wilfred?"

"The very same, or its twin brother," I told her. "Come, now, isn't that a go!" But my wife was out of the door and half way up to the third floor by that time.

"I've got to see!" she cried back to me, and I went up after her, although I knew it wouldn't be any use her seeing it, since she had not seen the one in the automobile.

"It surely is!" she exclaimed as I stood by her side. "A checked automobile coat! Did you ever, Freddy, did you ever!" And she held it up and looked it over from collar to coat-tail as if it were enchanted and could tell us more than our own eyes could gather.

"Yes," I said, "the very same!"

"Then it must have been Terhune!"

"Beyond a doubt!" I answered thoughtfully. "But isn't it too queer! In the first place I didn't know he could handle a machine, and in the second, where did he get it from. By Jove!"

"And why does he have to meet Agatha First in secret that way?" wondered my wife as we left the castle and started for the scene of the picnic by a series of short cuts the others did not know.

But all our marvelling brought us no enlightment, only the conclusion on Dearest's part that she would consult Mrs. Chiltern on the subject as soon as an opportunity presented itself.

CHAPTER VII.

We arrived at the group of ruins which formed the goal of our walk in good time, although the others were there ahead of us and were just spreading a cloth and taking things out of the automobile which had met them there, as we came up.

"Hurry up, slow coaches!" called Agatha First cheerily, "or we won't leave you anything to eat!"

"Lend me a hand with this cloth, Vincent!" was Terhune's request, and I fell to with a will and had the thing right in a jiffy.

And maybe it wasn't good fun sitting there on a lot of jolly boulders and clumps of rock that I had collected with great pains and arranged at intervals about the cloth, grinning at each other across its goodly array of picnic dainties.

Dearest is a famous hand at planning that sort of thing. We had camped upon a small rise in the middle of an open space where great oak trees cut us off from sight of the road on the one hand, and broad meadows and wooded slopes fell away toward Hartsmere stream on the other; the latter streaking the green of it all with silver a field or two away.

Close at hand the ruined chapel or convent which we had come to see piled itself in picturesque confusion, and we had reached that point in our merry-making when we were simply content to gaze apathetically upon it and listen uncomprehendingly to Freer recite its history with never-flagging accuracy and zeal.

He knows everything, that chap! And is disgustingly ready to give everybody else the benefit of his learning at all times.

Agatha First was sitting near him tho' not making any attempt to disguise her indifference to his pedantic discourse, while Arch and Agatha Sixth, I am glad to say, were carrying on a whispered conversation together on the other side of the cloth. Dearest and I sat together, of course, at one end of the square, and as I said to her in a low tone so that the others could not hear I thought Arch was playing up to the part she and I had selected for him, that of Agatha Sixth's lover, a little better than usual. He was certainly all attention to the girl at his side and listened to her every word with the eager interest of the most devoted suitor. And the delicate face of Miss Lawrence was alive with feeling and glowed pink even without the aid of the rose-colored parasol she carried.

"O, what do you think!" she cried in her soft, cultivated voice, "Mr. Terhune says that the ruins are haunted! By the ghost of a nun that was shut up in the wall once!" Her really wonderful black eyes were bright with interest and I thought she made a rather dazzling picture in her white frock and the fictitious aureole of pink sunshade about her. But I couldn't swallow a bare-faced whopper like that, for that nun story is so old. So I had just begun to explain that Arch was chaffing her, and the ghost racket his own invention entirely, when I caught his expression and my wife's eye. The former was embarrassed and the latter severe, and I stopped in the middle of a sentence as I fathomed the combined significance of eye and look.

"So that's it, is it?" I thought to myself. "Poor old boy! He's so much in love he doesn't know what he's saying. Anything will do as long as she will listen! And I'm deuced glad to see it, too!"

But Freer showed less perspicacity, though of course there's this to be said, he didn't have the key to the situation as I did, and challenged poor old Arch's story of the nun, and in five minutes had him showed up proper, the old fellow at last having to take refuge in the statement that it must have been some other ruins he had in mind. Strange to say, however, for all his learning Freer did not win a smile from Agatha Sixth, who only turned to Terhune with more interest than ever as a result of his efforts.

It was then that Dearest made her remark about motoring over to see Mrs. Chiltern on the following day. It was an innocent enough remark and very casually said, but it seemed to have an electrifying effect upon Agatha First. She jumped up and came over to my wife.

"Don't do that!" she said, low and earnestly; "please don't, Agatha, dear!" Dearest was surprised, and, by Jove, so was I, or puzzled, at least! The girl seemed so awfully earnest about not wishing us to see Mrs. Chiltern—out of all proportion to the importance of her request, it seemed to me. "But why not?" my wife couldn't help asking.

"Because we have such a little time left to be together, you and Lord Vincent and Mr. Terhune and Agatha Sixth and myself," she said. "Mr. Terhune tells me he has to go back to London in a day or two, and I think it's a shame to waste a whole day by going over to Chiltern house! Besides, you said they owed you a call!" She had lowered her voice during this last statement, but it was not necessary. Freer had strolled off to the ruins and Archibald and Agatha Sixth were too absorbed in each other's company to notice us.

Her reasons were specious and illogical enough, but Dearest, to my surprise, seemed inclined to accept them and I had to interfere.

"They do owe us a call," I said, "but that wouldn't prevent us from having a jolly time of it if we all chose to go over together! On the contrary, it would be something to do!"

Then Agatha First, evidently goaded into a corner, set her young face in a fashion that was almost desperate. "But Agatha Fourth—Mrs. Chiltern—isn't there!" she declared. "She told me she was going down to London for a week or two!"

Dearest stared at her, but she did not ask her, as I wanted to do, why she hadn't said so in the first place. Instead she took pity on Agatha First's white face, for the girl had actually turned pale, and assured her charitably that she had entirely given up all thought of an expedition to Chiltern house, though, as I told her afterward, obviously the young lady was cramming her. But Dearest has the kindest heart in the world.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Fishhawk's Warning.

"The fishhawk tells us when the shad begin to run up the river," said a Gloucester fisherman. "We have learned that it isn't much use to cast nets, no matter how mild the weather may be, until Mr. Fishhawk swoops down on us.

"When he comes sailing up the bay we know it's time to get to work. Lots of farmers down Jersey would never think to start planting until the fishhawks come. I don't believe they have ever been later than April 13, though. They work their way up the coast from Florida and the other southern waters early in March, when the fish begin to come north. They follow the big schools of herring, as a rule, because the herring swim close together, and the hawk has easy picking. The shad follow the herring, and when the fishhawk comes we know the shad are not far behind."—Fishing Gazette.

It Sounded Hopeful.

A young man who was not particularly entertaining was monopolizing the attention of a pretty debutante with a lot of uninteresting conversation.

"Now, my brother," he remarked in the course of a dissertation on his family, "is just the opposite of me in every respect. Do you know my brother?"

"No," the debutante replied demurely, "but I should like to."—Human Life.

GEORGE TUPPER LEARNS TO SING

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyrighted, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

"Of course, I don't means society, spelled with a big S." George Tupper's voice was raised to an argumentative tone.

"Well, I don't either," drawled his companion, whose year in New York had not altered his native tones. "What I mean is that you cannot get into any sort of a decent crowd in the city without some sort of social introduction. I know I've found it so, and when you have been here as many months as I have, you'll agree with me. It's not a bit like anything in the south, or in the west, either. Of course, in a business way they'll take you up fast enough, but when it comes to introducing you to their wives or sisters, it's another matter."

"Pshaw!" broke in his western companion. 'It's just the way you go about it. Why, I'll wager—"

"Oh, of course," interrupted Edwin Carey, the southerner, 'you can get into some crowds, but I mean—"

"What you mean," George Tupper went on, "is that I couldn't get acquainted with a nice, thoroughbred girl in New York without a formal introduction."

"That's just what I mean, George," agreed the other, with the calmness of conviction.

'Well, see here," said George eagerly, 'I'll bet you $25 that I can. Not that I care anything about it, of course, but just to prove it, I'll tell you what I'll do. There is a mighty nice looking young woman I have in mind who lives in one of the brownstone houses across the street. I'm sure I could get acquainted with her if I went about it tactfully. Come on, Carey," he suggested. 'Let's go about it together."

Edwin Carey put out a protesting hand. "No," he said. "I've had enough of that sort of thing."

Then in the pause that followed George vaguely recalled the story his companion had told him of the fickleness of a "pretty little southern flirt," to whom he had once been engaged. It had all happened four years before, but Edwin still felt the sting.

"How long is it going to take you?" queried the southerner at length.

"Oh, to get acquainted with the girl and win the $25? Two weeks—sooner if you wish," answered the other with assurance.

Then, stepping into the hall of the little bachelor apartment where the two men made their home, he called back: "I'll make my first effort now."

The fact was that George Tupper was only too glad to have an excuse to set about the very quest he had just suggested. He had seen the young woman in question on several occasions and had gone so far as to plan to pass on her side of the street at the time when she was in the habit of leaving her house. "She's such a thoroughbred," he thought to himself; "it does one good to see her."

She had a way of leaving home shortly after dinner time, which fact had aroused George's interest and curiosity not a little. With the present wager in view he felt justified, as he had not before, in following her at a distance and seeing for himself where she went. Luck was with him this evening, and before he had waited many minutes the young woman tapped down from the high brownstone porch and passed along in her usual direction. He followed her on the opposite side of the street for three blocks, and then he was somewhat relieved to see her turn into the door of the parish house adjoining a dignified old church.

"Perhaps she sings in the choir," he thought.

A few minutes after she had entered the door he, too, sought admittance.

"Is this practice night?" he asked a small boy who was frisking about in the lower hall of the building.

"Sure," replied the boy. "Who'd ya want to see?"

"Are you a choir boy?" asked George, with another stroke of detective genius.

"Sure," said the boy nonchalantly.

"Do you have women in the choir?" asked George, with an attempt at indifference.

"Yes," exclaimed the boy in surprise. "Didn't you ever hear this choir? They sing the solos and we do the rest. You see they can read the notes better than we can, and they aren't so likely to get scared and chokey on Sundays—"

"And the choirmaster," George interrupted without disguising his eagerness. "Where's he?"

"Oh, he's trying out the new fellows upstairs. Practise doesn't begin for a few minutes yet."

For the next five minutes George, spurred on by the thought of the girl, took the only course that presented itself of making her acquaintance.

"I'm very anxious to get some practise in choir drill," George explained a few minutes later when he had been admitted into the choirmaster's presence.

"Yes," replied the other, with discouraging indifference. "If you have only a fair voice I really can't take the time to hear you. I have more applications now than I know what to do with."

George thought with momentary regret of the many chances he had thrown away to practise with his college glee clubs. A lusty and ready voice he had always had when it came to less formal singing.

"Well, it isn't what you'd call a trained voice," he admitted, "but if you'll let me practise with the choir and help me out a little I'll be glad to make it worth your while."

It was two weeks later and George Tupper sat in the little apartment sitting room laboriously singing to himself from a score which he held before him.

"Say, old man," broke in Edwin Carey from his chair, "if you don't give up that choir of yours, you'll have to find some one else to live with. You're away from home three or four evenings a week and the rest of the time you drive me out. Honest, old man, I can't stand it."

George went on with his singing undaunted.

"How's the girl across the street coming on?" asked Edwin teasingly. "Your time limit is almost up."

George paused briefly to reply. "Oh, she's all right, I guess. She's one of your languid, southern beauties. But how on earth is a man going to sing decently and think about half a dozen things besides." Here he paused and sang a few more notes. "You've no idea," he went on, "how absorbing it is. It just gets hold of you and makes you forget everything else. Even the little fellows 'tend to business. You ought to hear us sing that new anthem, Edwin. It's a rouser!"

"But what about the girl?" persisted Edwin.

"Oh, pshaw!" exclaimed the singer, out of patience. "That Miss Penrose—"

"Miss Penrose," echoed the other. "She's Clara Penrose." He was standing over his companion, looking at him with an unwonted show of eagerness in his eyes. "I knew she had come north to study music, and when you spoke about her being a languid sort of a girl I had a half suspicion. She is a beauty, isn't she?" he asked, feelingly, and then not waiting for a reply, "Which house is it, George—the one right opposite?"

Two hours later George Tupper was still singing to himself from a score before him. He had spent the evening alone after Edwin's sudden departure to the house across the street, and was beginning to feel a little anxiety as to the probable course which events had taken. "She's just the sort of a girl to make a man like Edwin go through fire and water," he thought to himself, and then, as the door of the apartment opened and Edwin appeared, his anxiety departed.

"She's the same Clara Penrose," Edwin exclaimed, holding his hand out to his friend, "only a hundred times sweeter and kinder. Why, do you know she's been waiting these last three years for me to come back to her? And I have been a brute to stay away!"

"Is it—it all on again?" asked George with hesitancy.

The look in Edwin's eyes answered "Yes."

"Here," he said, holding out a handful of new bills, "you're a winner, even if you didn't get the girl."

Friction Unavoidable.

Oscar Hammerstein, in the smoke room of the Lusitania, praised America by contrast with Europe.

"They have to admit in the old world," said the patriotic impressario, "that we've got them beaten on every count. Talk to them about the matter and they can only quibble.

"'Oh, yes,' said an English banker to me the other day, 'you've got a great country, the greatest country in the world—there's no denying that.'

"Then he gave a nasty laugh.

"'But look at your fires,' he said. 'Your terrible fires are a disgrace to mankind.'

"'Oh, our fires,' said I, 'are due to the friction caused by our rapid growth.'"

Vision Impaired.

"I think this motion-picture habit is affecting my sight."

"Too bad. What seems to be the trouble?"

"Every time I watch one of the things I seem to see a film before my eyes."

NO "LAZY" CHILDREN

THEY ARE EITHER ILL OR POORLY NOURISHED.

New Scientific Pedagogics Declares the Normal Child Is Interested, Alert, Bright Minded and Full of Physical Vivacity.

In many ways the world is growing less cruel. For this we must largely thank the scientific spirit which is daily recognizing more and more of the affairs of life which belong to its department. It is coming into fashion not to kick the man who is down, but to call a committee to inquire into why he is down and that leads naturally to helping him up. The new method is to be welcomed most of all as it bears upon the destinies of little children.

The new scientific pedagogics no longer divides children summarily into good and bad, stupid and clever. On the contrary, it takes close cognizance of the wonderful relation between mind and body, stomach and brain and learns thereby that persons, and above all children, are much more naturally divided into the sick or the well, the hungry or the fed, the weak or the strong.

Both in this country and in Europe investigations of this matter have been made, with significant results. One fact proved by them is that there is no such thing as a "lazy" child. The normal child is interested, alert, bright minded, full of waking curiosities about the world into which he has come and endowed with an almost unquenchable physical vivacity. What, then is the matter with the little, inert, stupid, dull-eyed creatures forever at the bottom of the class, who never put a question or seem to pass a given point?

The matter is that they are ill. Some of them are hungry, and it is as hopeless to expect a child to study well when he needs food as it would be to expect a fire that needs fuel to burn well. The hunger may be due to an actual lack of food or it may be that the teeth are in such poor condition that the child cannot chew and therefore does not digest. Or it may be that the food offered to it at home is entirely unsuited to its needs.

Some of the children cannot hear well and some cannot see. They do not complain because they do not know what is the matter. They accept constant rebuke and defeat with the dumb mystification of ignorance. Many of them have never drawn one natural breath since their birth, owing to the presence of enlarged tonsils and adenoids.

These children can never compete with their fellows until all these hindrances have been removed. Some recent investigations made by a French physician show that among well nourished children only 19 per cent. have physical defects, while among the poorly nourished over 60 per cent. suffer from these defects.

This question of feeding is being met in many cities both here and abroad by the supplying of a substantial luncheon either free or at a nominal cost.—Youth's Companion.

American "Outs."

We think it is both fair and desirable that some American novelists should now speak some plain truths to an American audience about the Englishman's love of orderly procedure which makes a London crowd so easy to handle and an English village a delight to the American eye that is accustomed to find tin cans, ash heaps and broken-down fences too often in plain view of the passerby on a public street. If it were not a pretty hot summer and there were not already twice as many societies for social reform existing in this country as we really have any practical need for, we should suggest the creation of a new international organization to be entitled in American fashion, "S. P. C. B. L. O. A. E. G. T. D." (that is to say, the Society for Promoting a Combination of British Love of Order with American Enthusiasm for Getting Things Done), and should nominate Mrs. do la Pasture to be its first president.—The Outlook.

Lurton and Moving Pictures.

Justice Lurton of the United States supreme court, comes from Nashville, Tenn. One day just before the adjournment of congress he met on Pennsylvania avenue in Washington Robert H. Watkins, a correspondent for southern newspapers.

"Bob," said the eminent jurist, "I have made a practice for several years to take my little granddaughter to all the moving-picture shows in Nashville. The other day we started out to see all of them in this town, but there were too many. Let's go and finish up the lost right now."—Popular Magazine.

President Waters on the Chicago Stock Show

Pres. H. J. Waters of the Kansas Agricultural College, on a recent occasion expressed himself as follows:

"The International Live Stock Exposition, which will this year be held from November 26th to December 3rd, is the court of last resort in all matters pertaining to the improvement of live stock. It is the place where all controversies regarding superior merit are settled for the year, and as such contributes more to live stock improvement than any other single agency in America. As an object lesson it is unequaled on the continent. As a means of awakening interest in improved live stock, it and similar shows are indispensable. It is a liberal education in live stock production for any farmer, breeder or student to attend the International."

One on the Drummer.

An Indianapolis traveling salesman picked up in Montreal exactly the sort of sealskin jacket he knew his wife had for a considerable period silently longed for. About a hundred miles out of Niagara on his journey back to the States a woman wearing a sealskin coat entered the car. She would have to pay no duty, he reflected, as the garment was part of her immediate wearing apparel. Directly across the aisle sat another woman, also by herself. She was young, stylishly gowned; but she was not wearing a sealskin; and a sudden inspiration came to the drummer. Why pay that atrocious, heartbreaking, purse flattening duty? Why not— And he had crossed the aisle.

Of course she was willing to accommodate him when he had explained the little difficulty that beset him. "No trouble at all," she said. "I shall really enjoy wearing it immensely."

She was indeed as good as her word in this respect; for when the gauntlet of the customs officials had been safely run and Mr. Drummer turned to thank her, saying: "I shall now take my jacket, if you please," her answer was a stony stare of surprise.

"Your jacket!" she exclaimed. "I don't understand you. This jacket is mine."

And it was; for she added significantly, "You had better go along now or I shall speak to the police."

J. C. C. LaVogue, $1.50 the pair

LaVogue is a corset for the woman of ample developments. The skirt is long, reaching its greatest length at the hips. To prevent stretching or tearing or uncomfortable binding when the wearer seats herself there are two deep vents, held in position by sliding supporters.

The coutil used in this number is of unusual excellence for a corset of this price. The supporters are strong and non-slipable the boning is double and flexible.

LaVogue is a corset that one can count upon to give the best of service and in which one can enjoy ideal comfort.

"A corset for every figure" is a phrase that has been used over much but in this instance it is used advisedly for truly the J. C. C. line provides for women of types.

PREMIUM

The price is one dollar and we confirm the J. C. C. peoples estimate of this value. It is really a premium corset at the price.

It is long as today's fashions dictate: it has an even all the way around unboned skirt extension. Now, the joining of this extension to the body of the garment is made a feature, for it is done in a manner that adds strength and prevents stretching and tearing when the wearer seats herself.

Developed in good coutil, filled with substantial boning, and complete with two pairs of hose supporters, good strong ones.

STATE MERCHANTS IN ANNUAL MEETING

Plans for Entertaining the State Retail Association.

COMMERCIAL CLUB'S PROGRAM

D. Ward King of the Missouri State Board of Agriculture Has Accepted an Invitation to Address the Federated Clubs.

Indianapolis.—With Ralph B. Clark, president of the Indiana Retail Merchants' association, merchants and other business men of Anderson were in conference on details for the annual meeting of the Indiana association, to be held here January 17 to 19.

Mr. Clark thought there would be an attendance of several hundred merchants. Because Mr. Clark has been president for three years, and also is secretary of the Indiana association's fire insurance company, the business men will join in making the meeting in the president's home city one of the most notable for several years. Mr. Clark is preparing the program of speakers.

W. B. Campbell, secretary of the Indiana Federated Commercial Clubs, has word that D. Ward King of the Missouri state board of agriculture, and widely known as a road specialist, has accepted an invitation to address the federated clubs during the annual meeting of the organization here, on November 16 and 17. Gifford Pinchot has notified Mr. Campbell that conflicting engagements will prevent him from attending the meeting unless he can rearrange his dates. Former Vice-President Fairbanks, who has accepted an invitation, will speak on "Forestry in Indiana." R. G. McClure of Indianapolis will speak on the progress of commercial clubs in Indiana. Another speaker is J. J. Berryhill of Des Moines, Ia., one of the leading spirits in the commission form of municipal government.

It is understood that the federation will in its annual meeting, give considerable attention to the commission plan of government and will discuss the question of lending its support to a bill before the next session of the legislature for the commission plan for cities and towns.

Committee Lists Named.

It is probable no important changes in the state laws regarding dependent children will be recommended by the board of state charities to the general assembly. Some changes, however, were discussed at the meeting of the board in the statehouse. A review of the work of the board for the quarter ending September 30 was considered at the meeting.

Governor Marshall has appointed the following standing committees of the board for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1911:

Penal and Reformatory Institutions—Demarchus C. Brown, John H. Holliday and W. H. Eichhorn.

Hospitals for the Insane—Rev. Francis H. Gavisk, Mary A. Spink, M. D., and W. H. Eichhorn.

Institutions for Defectives, Soldiers' Home and Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Home—John H. Holliday, Rev. Francis H. Gavisk and Emma Lee Elam.

County Institutions—W. H. Eichhorn, Emma Lee Elam and Demarchus C. Brown.

Statistics and Publications—Rev. Francis H. Gavisk and Mary A. Spink.

Auditing—Demarchus C. Brown and Emma Lee Elam.

Children—John H. Holliday and Mary A. Spink, M. D.

Pupils in High Schools.

The high school enrollment in all the high schools of the state has increased by 5,254 since the opening of 1907-1908 school year, according to figures compiled by Robert J. Aley, state superintendent of public instruction, for use in his forthcoming annual report. Of this the greater gain, or 3,300, was shown in 1908-1909 over the preceding school year.

Mr. Aley considers the gain a remarkable one and believes it will continue for several years. "It indicates," he said, "that the people have awakened to the value of high school education, and are providing for it, while their children are taking advantage of the provisions made."

The enrollment in the grades in the common schools showed a total decrease of 5,843 during the same period. From 1907-1908 to 1908-1909 the decrease was 1,690, while that from 1908-1909 to 1909-1910 was 4,153.

"The loss," said Mr. Aley, "does not indicate that the people are quitting sending their children to school. Our enumerations have shown for several years that there are fewer and fewer children in the state. This, in my opinion, accounts for the decrease."

Food Exhibit Sent to Richmond.

H. E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner, has sent to Richmond for display in connection with the meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs a special exhibit from the food and drug laboratory, setting out data concerning food and drug conditions throughout the state. John Owen, an inspector for the department, has been placed in charge of the exhibit, which was prepared at the request of the officers of the state federation.

Gives New Light on White Plague.

According to statistics for the past year just completed by Dr. J. P. Simonds of the pathological laboratory of the state board of health, persons between the ages of twenty-one and thirty are most susceptible to attacks of tuberculosis. Of the 1,022 cases which came under the notice of the state board of health last year 401 persons between the ages given above were victims.

Two hundred and two cases were found among men and women between thirty-one and forty. The third critical period is between forty-one and fifty years, and the fourth between the ages of sixteen and twenty years. The report shows also that tuberculosis is more common during the spring months.

Tuberculosis is more common among women than men. Fifty-four per cent. of the cases examined during the last year were those of women and 46 per cent. were those of men. Based upon the reports of 1,022 cases of tuberculosis, following the examination of the sputum in the pathological laboratory, 61 per cent. were on men and women between the ages of twenty-one and forty, the productive period of life. Fourteen per cent. developed under the age of twenty.

Thirty-four per cent. of the cases of tuberculosis during the last year developed from exposure to members of the patient's family or to the patient's associates, who were affected. In 47 per cent. of the cases there was no known cause of infection and Doctor Simonds explains that these were patients who inhaled tubercle bacilli in the dust of the street, of interurban and street cars and of buildings, where careless consumptives have deposited their germ-laden sputum.

Doctor Simonds has prepared a chart showing the relative chances of the various members of the tuberculosis patient's family contracting the disease. The daughter's chances of contracting the disease from the mother are twice that of the son. The sister's chances of contracting the disease from another are a third greater than the chances of the brother.

Ruling on School Licenses.

Robert J. Aley, state superintendent of public instruction, has made a ruling concerning the issuance of sixty-month licenses for school teachers, which is expected to simplify the license question considerably. Under a former ruling an applicant for a sixty-month license was required to take two examinations, the first in the common school branches and the second in designated high school branches. Unless he successfully passed both examinations, no license was issued on either examination, no matter how good a grade was made on the examination in the common school branches.

Under the new rule, the applicant will be compelled to have a thirty-six-month common school license before he may take the examination in the high school subjects to entitle him to a sixty-month license, and any person holding such license may be examined for a sixty-month license at any time during the license year in which the thirty-six-month license was granted. In all applications for sixty-month licenses, the examinations in the common school and high school subjects must be taken in the same examination year.

Relief for Mad Dog Victims.

Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the state board of health, will attempt to have the next session of the general assembly reconsider a bill that failed to pass in the session of 1909, and that would provide relief by the state for persons bitten by mad dogs. It is the general plan of the proposed law to impose a special state tax on all dogs in the state, to be paid into the state treasury, to constitute a special fund which may be drawn on to establish and maintain a laboratory and institute where persons bitten by rabid animals may be treated, without cost to themselves.

The report of the pathological laboratory of the state board, just made public, shows that 165 persons were bitten by mad dogs during the fiscal year ending September 30. Only one of these persons died from the disease. The others were treated in Pasteur institutes, either at their own expense or at the expense of the townships, the trustees advancing the money in extreme cases, although there is no specific law by which the township money may be used for that purpose.

The laboratory report shows that the brains of 213 animals examined during the year contained rabies germs.

Get Funds for Maintenance.

All state institutions, with the exception of the Southeastern Hospital for the Insane, have drawn from the state treasury the funds advanced by the state board of finance for maintenance. The Central Hospital for the Insane, the Indiana reformatory and the School for the Feeble Minded received $2,000 each. The Northern and Southern Hospitals for the Insane, the Indiana prison and the Southeastern Hospital for the Insane each received $1,000; the Woman's prison, $100, and the Indiana School for the Deaf, $500.

Incorporations.

Articles of incorporation were filed with the secretary of state as follows:

Central Closet Manufacturing company, Kokomo; capital stock, $75,000; object, to manufacture sanitary appliances; incorporators, George A. Harper, J. W. Johnson, A. A. Charlse.

Squire Dingee company, Illinois; total capital, $100,000; amount represented in Indiana, $6,667; object, to manufacture pickles, sauces, vinegars, etc.; incorporators, Squire Dingee, William Freestone, R. F. Goldsmith.

YOUTHS' DEPARTMENT

CAMELS THRIVE IN ARIZONA

Circus Animals Run Wild on Western Desert—Brought Over to Make Caravan Path.

Camels live in the African deserts and in circus tents and—where else? Where but in Arizona, a rather out-of-the-way place, as far as most persons are concerned, but nevertheless a part of the United States. There are about sixty of the circus beasts running wild, it is said, and they keep pretty well out of the way of mankind. That is not hard to do. There are great plains in Arizona where men may tramp or ride for days without finding water. It is a desert place, with no growing thing but hard, dry shrubs that keep the earth from blowing into mountains.

Sixty years ago a herd of 15 camels was brought to Arizona. The United States government brought them here from Egypt to make a caravan path across the desert. This was before the time of railroads. The camels were good enough on the plains, but as soon as they struck the rising ground they were of no value. Rough travel made their feet sore. Finally they were all turned loose and forgotten. Nobody except a few frightened Indians ever saw them, and they lived quietly in the desert. Probably most of the original herd are dead now, but their children are left in plenty. As long as the camels stay in the desert and do not come to inhabited regions where there are horses to frighten, there is no reason why they should not live undisturbed.

SIMPLE MOTORCYCLE STAND

Device Is Easily Made Out of Pipe Fittings—Illustration Is Self-Explanatory.

A stand for motorcycles can be made very simply out of pipe fittings, as shown in the accompanying sketch, writes Robert H. Brockman in Scientific American. The pipe used may be three-eighths or one-half inch pipe, but the latter is preferable because it makes a stronger stand. The drawing needs little explanation. The piece of pipe A must have a running thread cut on one end, so that it can be screwed into the tee D about an inch and a quarter; and then when the stand is ready to be put together, the pipe A may be screwed back into the tee E, leaving enough in the tee D to provide a good hold. To keep the stand from spreading and thus to relieve the strain on the elbows B, two pieces C of No. 12 galvanized wire should be used to connect the pipes A. In the elbows B, notches may be cut to hold the motorcycle axle.

The Lamb and the Clam.

The lamb frisked about the fields of May;
The clam kept his house in the depths of the bay;
The lamb always had a new secret to tell;
The clam kept his secrets inside of his shell.
And though I'd a certain respect for the clam,
I always enjoyed more my talks with the lamb.

FIX HOLIDAY GAMES AHEAD

Many Interesting and Amusing Pastimes Known but Not Always Thought of at Time.

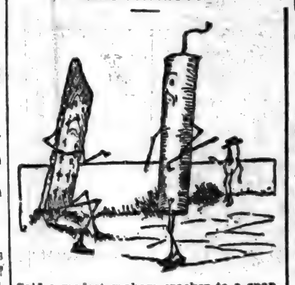
We all know many games to play, but the trouble is to think of them at the right minute. If you are going to give a candy pull or a cobweb party in the holidays, it is well to have a good many games thought up beforehand, alternating the romping games with the quieter ones, in a little program, so that there may be no awkward pauses.

Have you ever been to a "Swap" party? Each one is supplied with four or five little bundles, wrapped so that no one else can suspect the contents. The bundles may contain anything, from a tinsel ball to a sunbonnet. Each one praises up his own property without telling what it is, and the swapping is carried on with great show of bargaining. When every one has swapped, the parcels are opened, and the one who has made the poorest swaps must tell a story, or suggest a game, or in some way entertain the company. After this come other games, with apples and nuts for refreshments.

The Sight of Snails.

Snails have eyes connected with the antennae (the "feelers"). They may usually be seen as black spots, generally, I believe, near the base of the feelers. They are rather simple eyes, but are certainly of use. How much they can see with them is not known.—St. Nicholas.

TWO PATRIOTS.



Said a modest graham cracker to a snappy firecracker,
"I'm very, very thankful that I'm not afraid to die,
For when I see the flying flags and hear the cannons booming,
I shall be consumed with terror on the Fourth of this July."

Said the snappy firecracker to the modest graham cracker,
"You really need not pride yourself on being taken first,
For when I hear the children shout, and gay torpedoes snapping,
I shall feel so patriotic I am sure that I shall burst."

REMOVING HOOK FROM FISH

Neat Little Device, Especially for Ladies, Will Save Many Lines and Cut Fingers.

Fishermen who have trouble keeping the mouth of a fish open while removing the hook, will be interested in the little device shown in the accompanying sketch, writes F. S. Cummings in Popular Mechanics. The spring shown will do the work very nicely and the hook can be easily removed with a disgorger, thus saving many broken lines and cut fingers. This device is especially useful to the ladies who enjoy fishing, but dislike the operation of removing the hook.

Spring in the Mouth.

SOME EXCELLENT OLD GAMES

Queer Little Animals Made From Nuts, Toothpicks, Matches and Other Table Articles.

To make dessert menageries represents an excellent amusement for an afternoon when nursery lessons are over. Chestnuts, cobnuts and filberts, a banana, a few raisins and dried figs, with a couple of champagne corks, a box of spent matches, string and wire represent the stock-in-trade of the dessert sculptor. The matches, sharpened at the ends, are used for limbs, necks, animals' tails or for chair and table legs.

To make a quaint little Maori chieftain three large chestnuts strung on a piece of string should form the body, a match forming the neck, to which a filbert is attached. Then green husk, if pulled back and fringed with a pair of scissors, represents his feathered headdress, while eyes, nose and mouth are notched with a sharp knife and scored with ink. Matches and cobnuts form legs, arms, feet and hands.

A banana with matches as oars, can be turned into an excellent Spanish galley, ingenuity soon adding sails with the aid of paper and sticks.

Swim by Machinery.

A ten pound swimming machine that may be packed in a suitcase is the invention of a Frenchman. It is a safe and rapid semi-craft for the man who swims or the man who doesn't. At the front of the apparatus is a cylindrical metal float, with conical point and a depending rudder. At the rear is another metal float, with stirrups acting upon a propeller, the two ends connected by a wooden bar, on which the swimmer lies as if on the water, kicking with his feet and alternately pushing and pulling with a cross handle bar just back of the forward float. The swimmer on the swimming machine gets a maximum of exercise while making a speed impossible to the ordinary swimmer on the open water.

HIS LIVELIHOOD AT STAKE

Certainly Candidate for Governor Could Not Expect to Get That Vote.

An incident in which former Governor Odell of New York figured as the victim was told by Col. James Hamilton Lewis at a recent banquet.

"When Governor Odell was last running for office," said Colonel Lewis, "there had been a great deal of talk about Niagara Falls and the electrical power that could be conferred on all parts of New York. One day an old negro halted Mr. Odell and said:

"'Mr. Odell, is yo' runnin' for gov'ner, sah?'

"'I am,' answered the candidate.

"'I guess yo' war my vote, den,' said the colored man.

"'Well, I would like to have your vote, Zeb. I have known you for so many years.'

"'Well, I jist want to ask you a question, Mr. Odell, befo' I give mah vote to you. Are yo' for electric lights in dis town?'

"'Well, Zeb, I am for all modern improvements,' said Odell, with a slight flourish.

"'Well, sah, I can't vote for you,' said Zeb with firmness. 'Yo' done forget dat I is a lamp lighter.'"

Procraktination.

"I heard a tale the other day of a postponing chap, who thought he'd buy a wheel so gay, but—'They will be cheaper, perhaps.' And so he dallied year by year, the cheapest wheel to buy; but long before the cheapest gear, that yap he had to die! And so, by putting off the day, we miss the wine of life; and some there are in just that way who thus will miss a wife! Get busy now, you timid swain, procrastinate no more, for time is surely on the wane, and you a bachelor! Some wait too long to make a pick of husbands or of wife, and then some take a broken stick and make a mess of life."—H. B. Benedict, in Judge.

Deserved the Shoes.

The weary wayfarer leaned over the fence and watched the housewife doing her chores.

"Ah, lady," he said, tipping his hat, "I used to be a professional humorist. If I tell you a funny story will you give me an old pair of shoes?"

"Well, that depends," responded the busy housewife; "you must remember that brevity is the soul of wit."

"Yes, mum, I remember that, and brevity is the sole on each of me shoes, mum."

Not Easy.

Pat was a married man—a very much married man. He had married no fewer than four times, and all his wives were still in the fore. According to Pat's own account before the court where he was tried for bigamy and found guilty, his experiences were not altogether satisfactory. The judge, in passing sentence, expressed his wonder that the prisoner could be such a hardened villain as to delude so many women.

"Yer honor," said Pat, apologetically, "I was only tryin' to get a good one, an' it's not aisy!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

AFTER SUFFERING ONE YEAR

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Milwaukee, Wis. — "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman, and I would like to tell the whole world of it. I suffered from female trouble and fearful pains in my back. I had the best doctors and they all decided that I had a tumor in addition to my female trouble, and advised an operation. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman and I have no more backache. I hope I can help others by telling them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me." — Mrs. Emma Imse, 833 First St., Milwaukee, Wis.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

NATURE'S SIGNALS.

The first indication of kidney disorder is often backache. Then comes pain in the hips and sides, lameness, soreness and urinary troubles. These are the warnings—nature's signals for help. Doan's Kidney Pills should be used at the first sign.

Ira Clark, North Main St., Savanna, Ill., says: "I was confined to bed with kidney trouble and never expected to be up again. A doctor said I had acute inflammation of the bladder, but he could not help me. How grateful was I for the prompt relief Doan's Kidney Pills gave me! Continued use removed every sign of kidney trouble."

Remember the name—Doan's.

One of the Best Rest Cures.

Is a good story.

To many women it is as good as a trip away from home.

When you are tired out and your nerves are on edge, try going off by yourself and losing yourself in some good story. You will, in nine cases out of ten, come back rested and invigorated.

One woman who has passed serenely through many years of hard work and worry that go with the managing of a house and bringing up of a large family of children, said that she considered it the duty of every busy housekeeper to read a certain amount of "trash," light fiction, for the rest and change to the mind that it would give.

Try it, you who lead a strenuous life, and who sometimes grow exceedingly weary of the same.

Church Unity.

Richard, aged five, was being interviewed in regard to his school work.

"And where do you go to Sunday school?" was next asked.

"To the Episcopal," he replied.

"What have you learned there?"

"'Honor thy father and thy mother,'" he said. "And, do you know, I went down to the Methodist church the other day and they were teaching the same thing there!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

His Point of View.

"John, dear," queried the young wife, glancing up from the physical culture magazine she was perusing, "what is your idea of a perfect figure?"

"Well," replied her husband, "$100,000 may not be perfection, but it's near enough to satisfy a man of my simple tastes."

THE FIRST TASTE

Learned to Drink Coffee When a Baby.

If parents realized the fact that coffee contains a drug—caffeine—which is especially harmful to children, they would doubtless hesitate before giving the babies coffee to drink.

"When I was a child in my mother's arms and first began to nibble things at the table, mother used to give me sips of coffee. As my parents used coffee exclusively at meals I never knew there was anything to drink but coffee and water.

"And so I contracted the coffee habit early. I remember when quite young the continual use of coffee so affected my parents that they tried roasting wheat and barley, then ground it in the coffee-mill, as a substitute for coffee.

"But it did not taste right and they went back to coffee again. That was long before Postum was ever heard of. I continued to use coffee until I was 27, and when I got into office work, I began to have nervous spells. Especially after breakfast I was so nervous I could scarcely attend to my correspondence.

"At night, after having coffee for supper, I could hardly sleep, and on rising in the morning would feel weak and nervous.

"A friend persuaded me to try Postum. My wife and I did not like it at first, but later when boiled good and strong it was fine. Now we would not give up Postum for the best coffee we ever tasted.

"I can now get good sleep, am free from nervousness and headaches. I recommend Postum to all coffee drinkers."

The Office Cat

By TEMPLE BAILEY

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

The judge had always looked upon Miss Staley as a machine. Every morning she took his dictation for an hour and later she brought the letters to be signed. That was the beginning and the end of their intercourse. The judge was a very busy man, and it was only when some one interrupted his routine that he gave exasperated attention. Expertness was the price of indifference. Hence the first time he saw the human side of Miss Staley it came as something of a shock.

She was feeding the office cat. That forlorn feline, as far back as the judge could remember, had been a thin-bodied reproach to the community. There was a tradition that she lived by catching rats. But such living was evidently precarious, for she had always gone about lean and lank, and somewhat plaintive. On warm days she took her airings in a restricted back court, but in cold weather she curled herself, apologetically, near a radiator in a corner of the hall, subject always to the moods of the janitor.

Today, however, things were changed. There was a bottle of milk on Miss Staley's desk and her sponge cup had been converted into a feeding dish, from which the cat ate ravenously while the little lady watched her with a tender smile on her lips and a tired relaxing of her slender figure which made her seem, for the first time, to the judge's eyes exquisitely feminine.

The judge's post of observation was his window, which looked across an airshaft into Miss Staley's small room, where a typewriter and a great oak desk hobnobbed with a pot of pansies on the sill.

Moved by a sudden impulse, he raised his window and motioned, and the girl came blushing to hers.

"I couldn't help it," she confessed, across the space; "she is such a poor little creature."

"Why didn't some of us men think of it?" the judge demanded. "We are selfish—"

"Oh, but men are so busy," was her defense.

"We aren't much busier than you."

"No, but a woman—oh, it's a woman's privilege to do such things, isn't it?"

The judge liked that. So many women of his own world seemed to have forgotten the claims of compassion, and at times the judge, remembering his own mother and her gracious personality, had yearned for some evidence of brooding tenderness.

He had certainly not expected to find it in his office girl. Yet here was Miss Staley looking after a distressed animal as his own lady-mother would have done.

He thought about it so much after he left the office that the next day Miss Staley was surprised by a large parcel, upon the delivery of which the judge came over to make explanations.

"It's a basket for the cat. That old box doesn't look in keeping with the rest of the furniture."

He had chosen it of sober brown wicker, and there were two linen covers for the cushion, to be washed weekly.

"Oh, Pussykin, Pussykin," Miss Staley rejoiced, "you won't quite know what to do with such magnificence."

But her eyes were shining as she thanked him. "Now she can keep her white fur. It is hard for her, poor thing, when there are so many ashes."

The screen made such an effective hiding place that no one but the judge and Miss Staley knew of the good fortune that had come to the office cat. It furnished them, too, with a little secret and delightful interest, and brought into the judge's somewhat staid bachelor life a freshness which was a relief from the stale excitements of late suppers and showgirls which seemed to satisfy his clubfellows.

Reverence for women had been instilled into the judge by his mother, but he had found few who had justified it. It was a real joy to discover the depths of Miss Staley's nature.

Thus all went well until one cold morning, when Miss Staley came in for dictation. The judge saw that her usual self-possession had forsaken her. He gave her three letters before she broke down, and then she wrung her hands and said, wistfully, like a child: "Oh, I've lost my cat."

"How," the judge sat up, "you don't mean—?"

"Yes, I do. I haven't seen her for two days. The janitor has had it in for me ever since I told him that if I heard him beating his boy again I would report him to the police."

"Well," the judge stated, "he will find out that I—"

The janitor, after much compulsion, admitted that he had carried the cat to the edge of the city.

"I will get you another cat," was the way the judge tried to comfort Miss Staley.

But Miss Staley shook her head. "Oh, no, you mustn't. I think the reason I liked this one was because she was alone, and nobody seemed to care for her, and since I came here—among strangers—I know how it feels."

Then, lest she should seem to claim his sympathy, she turned it off with a little laugh. "But I have enough to eat—"

"As if that sufficed," the judge soliloquised, when she had left him. "Why what she needs is—love—"

The suddenness of the revelation brought him up with a jerk. "Oh, look here," he admonished himself, "you mustn't think of such a thing, you know."

But he did think of it, and the outcome was an invitation to Miss Staley to go with him that afternoon in his car to hunt for the office cat. Under stress of circumstances, Miss Staley consented. They did not find the cat, but the judge found out where Miss Staley lived.

During a second search, the judge discovered that Miss Staley's name was Margaret, and on the third trip he had the joy of buying her a bunch of violets.

The fourth day Miss Staley declined to go with him. "I am busy, and I am afraid it's of no use to look further," she said.

The judge wasted the next day in meditation, and having come to a decision, he went back late to his office to look over a case that was coming up the next day. Thus it happened that, at midnight, he heard in the hall an unmistakable "mew."

He was out of his room like a shot, to find before Miss Staley's closed portal a shivering, foot-sore creature who dragged herself to him over the stone floor.

"Why, Pussykin, Pussykin," he said, and petted her and carried her back to his office, and made her comfortable beside his radiator. Then he telephoned to the corner lunchroom for a bottle of milk and a box of fried oysters, and they had their late supper together, happily.

The rapture of Miss Staley the next morning was his reward. But he was not content to let it end there. "We've got to plan it out," he said, firmly, and shut the door of Miss Staley's sanctum and sat down and faced her, while the regenerated Pussykin purred at their feet. "That cat can't stay here—it isn't really businesslike, you know—"

"I know," Miss Staley's tone was deprecating. "But I live in a boarding house, and—"

"I don't," said the judge.

"You mean," her glance met his, "that you want her?"

"I want both of you," the judge glared, bluntly; "my house is empty, and my heart is empty—Margaret."

When they planned their wedding journey the judge suggested England in general, and Cheshire in particular.

"Because of the cheese?" was Miss Staley's demand.

"Because of the cats," was the whimsical response.

Youthful Hungarian Robbers.

A well organized band of boy robbers, led by a ferocious chieftain aged thirteen, have just been captured by the police of Sopron, Hungary. The band consisted of 11 lads, aged from eight to thirteen years, who had left their parents for a life of adventure. They lived in a large cave and during the last three months have committed 128 robberies and one murder.

In the cave booty to the value of $4,000 was found. The young chieftain, who shot and seriously wounded a policeman who was sent to arrest him, has been sentenced to ten years' confinement in a reformatory.

The Key to Germany.

Capt. Charles King, the author, praised, at the Milwaukee club, the German element in Milwaukee's population.

"I know a soldier," said Captain King, "who met the kaiser last year in Berlin.

"'You have a thorough knowledge of our best thought and customs,' said the kaiser. 'Have you ever been to Germany before?'

"'O, yes, sir,' said the soldier.

"'What cities have you visited? Berlin and Hamburg?' asked the kaiser.

"'No, sir,' said the soldier. 'Milwaukee.'"

Planning a Desperate Revenge.

The haughty, imperious beauty handed him back his ring.

"Now that all is over between us," she said, "I suppose you will buy a revolver and put an end to your wretched existence?"

"Worse than that!" he hissed, being careful to introduce the necessary sibilant; "far worse-e-er! I shall steal a revolver! And I shall shoot your measly little sore-eyed poodle!"

A wild shriek burst from her lips. She fell upon her knees and——

But he had gone.

AWFUL BURNING ITCH CURED IN A DAY

"In the middle of the night of March 10th I woke up with a burning itch in my two hands and I felt as if I could pull them apart. In the morning the itching had gone to my chest and during that day it spread all over my body. I was red and raw from the top of my head to the soles of my feet and I was in continual agony from the itching. I could neither lie down nor sit up. I happened to see about Cuticura Remedies, and I thought I would give them a trial. I took a good bath with the Cuticura Soap and used the Cuticura Ointment. I put it on from my head down to my feet and then went to bed. On the first of April I felt like a new man. The itching was almost gone. I continued with the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and during that day the itching completely left me. Frank Gridley, 325 East 43rd Street, New York City, Apr. 27, 1909." Cuticura Remedies are sold throughout the world; Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props, Boston, Mass.

Mutual Expectations.

A notoriously close-fisted man was taking his golfing holiday in Scotland, where he hoped to improve his game, and, by driving a hard bargain, had managed to secure the exclusive services of a first-class caddie, who was known to be a very good player. "Mind, now," said the ambitious southerner, "I expect to receive some really good tips from you during my stay here, you understand?" "Aye," replied the Scotsman, hitching up the heavy bag, "an' Ah'm expectin' the like frae ye, ye ken."—Golf Illustrated.

Weak Heart

Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, their heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which contains no dangerous narcotics nor alcohol.

The ingredients, as attested under oath, are Stone root (Collinsonia Canadensis), Bloodroot (Sanguinaria Canadensis), Golden Seal root (Hydrastis Canadensis), Queen's root (Stillingia Sylvatica), Black Cherry bark (Prunus Virginiana), Mandrake root (Podophyllum Peltatum), with triple refined glycerine, prepared in a scientific laboratory in a way that no druggist could imitate.

This tonic contains no alcohol to shrink up the red blood corpuscles; but, on the other hand, it increases their number and they become round and healthy. It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anaemic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing. Stick to this safe and sane remedy, and refuse all "just as good" medicines offered by the druggist who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do you half as much good.

For Coughs and Colds

Troubled with a cough? A hard cold, bronchitis, or some chronic lung trouble? There is a medicine made for just these cases—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Your doctor knows all about it. Ask him what he thinks of it. No medicine can ever take the place of your doctor. Keep in close touch with him, consult him frequently, trust him fully. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Democratic Victory.

Now that election is over everybody is wondering how it came out and we are compelled to say everything democratic on the state ticket and nearly so in DeKalb county with the exception of Hubert Hartman, Republican candidate for re-election to the office of Prosecuting Attorney, and Geo. Scattergood, County Assessor. Frank Bowers is reported elected Judge by 200 majority. Cyrus Cline it is thought will carry by 10,000 votes. The exact figures we are unable to obtain. The results are surprising to everybody. The campaign was an exceedingly quiet one until the last few days, when everyone interested was working with all his might. The democrats will control the next National House of Representatives.

Saves an Iowa Man's Life.

The very grave seemed to yawn before Robert Madsen, of West Burlington, Iowa, when, after seven weeks in the hospital, four of the best physicians gave him up. Then was shown the marvelous curative power of Electric Bitters. For, after eight months of frightful suffering from liver trouble and yellow jaundice, getting no help from other remedies or doctors, five bottles of this matchless medicine completely cured him. Its positively guaranteed for Stomach, Liver or Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Only 50c. at H. L. Dunkle's.

A Big Time.

Last Thursday evening, friends and neighbors to the number of 65 had gathered at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Alva Reasoner, on West Main Street, to spend the evening with them. The cause of the meeting was due to the fact that he was about to leave for Columbus to work. The evening was a most enjoyable one for both old and young. The ladies had prepared for a taffy pulling and they surely had a sweet time. After this, games were played and a lunch served consisting of pressed chicken sandwiches, coffee, cake, and pickles. The event was one that will long be remembered by everyone.

Thanksgiving

One week intervenes until our popular national holiday. During this pre-Thanksgiving season the housewife is particularly interested in the table and so we deem it an opportune time to call attention to Our Thanksgiving Offering of Table Linens.

It will be a pleasure for us to show you—a pleasure for you to see and examine the splendid assortment of table linens which comprises our stock. From now on until the Christmas time the demand for linens will be great and those who choose to buy early will get the cream of these table coverings.

Our stock comprises some of the very best Irish linens in beautiful patterns of Rose, Chrysanthemum, Dice, etc., with wide borders to match. The better ones all come 72 in. wide and are full bleached. The cheaper grades come in 64 and 68 in. widths, in very pretty patterns of Dots, Scrolls and Roses. These come bleached and half-bleached.

You Save Money on Winter Wear

By trading at "The Home Store". Our prices are as low on the same quality of merchandise as can be found elsewhere, and the convenience of trading at home should not be underestimated. The home buyer, too, can easily return any article that does not prove satisfactory and have it exchanged or money refunded.

You Need Warm Underwear Now

Many do not change to heavier underwear until Thanksgiving. Buyers now will find a very complete showing of winter underwear. Velastic and Set-Snug garments for Ladies and Misses, separate suits 25c and 50c, unions 75c and $1.00; Men's Oneita union suits $1.00. Boy's sizes 50c and 75c, separate garments 50c. SCHOOLS IN PUBLIC PARKS.

Boston's finance commission has placed itself upon record as favoring the building of one of the public schools in one of Boston's public parks. If the suggestion should be acted upon by the Boston city government it would probably involve a unique experiment. A schoolhouse is to be built in a portion of the city where property is high-priced, and even at a high price it is difficult to get a suitable site. In Washington park the city has an area of 396,135 square feet in such location as to make an ideal site, says the St. Paul Dispatch. The commission argues that the school building will occupy but 12,000 square feet of this space, and that the curtailing of the breathing area will, therefore, not be serious. On the other hand, the fact of having a school in the park will attract to it a maximum number of children and promote the object of the park.

While the finance commission does not wish to make its recommendation a precedent, it has in it a suggestion of value. The plan might be worked both ways, locating schools where convenient in public parks so as to give the children a maximum of ground for recreation, and turning the grounds about such buildings into breathing spots for the use of the neighborhoods, especially in vacation times.

A Brooklyn woman lately wrote to the marriage license bureau of that city to know if she could be supplied with a good, honest, sober husband. The clerk in charge explained that, while he had a few model men on hand, they were all married and the supply was entirely too limited for the demand. The fact that the matrimonial market is understocked with honest, sober husbands may be one reason why the divorce courts are overcrowded.

The pessimist can always find food for gloomy thought. The facts that the census shows a big increase in population while the death rate is decreasing will prove to that individual, who, like the proverbial Scotchman, is never happy unless he is miserable, that the nation is going to be overcrowded until somebody has to be shoved off the earth to make room for the rest.

Those who have been wondering as to whether America would produce a new race have their answer. The hobble skirt race has been inaugurated on Long Island. It was won in seven falls.

That marriage is the worst kind of a failure is the opinion of a Gotham broker who is paying his first wife $240 a month alimony and whose second wife wants alimony to the tune of $600 more.

Trust science to rise to every emergency. It says we are all going insane from living in flats, and now a French surgeon is going to saw open our heads and scrape away the foolish fancies.

A Japanese scientist claims that he can educate oysters to produce perfect pearls. This may be glad news, now that the season is open to the patrons of the restaurant pearl fisheries.

Football this year will have to compete with aviation, but as there seems to be no good way to use a college yell in connection with an airship the gridiron sport will have some advantages.

A Tokyo cable announces the Japanese will make a dash for the south pole to try and beat the American and British expeditions. The more the merrier. And may the best man win.

Girls caught shoplifting in Philadelphia explained that "they wanted to be stylish." In order to satisfy that desire they should have confined their misdeeds to smuggling.

A western man claims he is insane and brings forward as proof the fact that he was married three times in three months. "Insane" is an inadequate word, we opine.

New York has formed a league to banish French from the bill of fare. Merely to call a chef a cook would be a great gain.

We gather that the Brooklyn woman who named sixty-three co-respondents in her divorce suit really deserves to win it.

New York bulldog turns on the gas and commits suicide. Even a dog can't stand the dog's life in New York as he leads.

Now the sultan of Sulu says that one wife is a plenty. Thus he destroys his usefulness as a comic opera prop.

ENGINEERS TO VOTE

RAILWAY EMPLOYES WILL BALLOT WHETHER TO STRIKE OR NOT.

SIXTY-ONE ROADS INVOLVED

Negotiations That Have Been in Progress Since September 26 Are Broken Off—Men Demand 15 Per Cent. Raise in Pay.

Chicago.—According to the grand officers of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, for whom Grand Chief Warren S. Stone of Cleveland, O., was the spokesman, a strike of all railroad engineers upon the sixty-one roads running north, south and west of Chicago may be called in January next.

According to Mr. Stone, and admitted by railroad representatives, conferences were begun between a committee from the engineers and the Western Managers' association September 26, and nearly twenty-five sessions have been held since, and Monday all negotiations were broken off as the last amicable arrangement of differences was declared to be unacceptable.

The union committee was composed of fifty-two general chairman from all over the country, with six grand officers, and the railroads, sixty-one in number, were represented by a conference committee of ten, being General Manager F. E. Ward, Burlington road; F. C. Bachelder, first vice-president B. & O. C. T.; F. Durham of the M., K. & T.; G. H. Emerson, assistant general manager G. N.; T. J. Foley, assistant general manager I. C.; F. D. Fox, general superintendent motive power C. P. R.; H. J. Simmons, general manager E. P. & S. W., and A. W. Trenholm, general manager C., M. & St. P.; W. B. Scott, assistant director of maintenance and operation, was chairman of the committee.

The engineers presented a demand for an increase of 15 per cent in salaries, together with a number of arrangements improving conditions. The railroad men offered compromises which were refused, and the word was taken back to the local unions to vote whether or not to strike. The reply will be brought back by December 15. The present working agreement in force can be terminated on thirty-days' notice. The brotherhood contains 60,000 members in the United States, Canada and Mexico, and 33,780 engineers will be affected on the lines in dispute.

DR. CRIPPEN GAINS DELAY

Convicted Slayer of Belle Elmore Given Lease of Life While Attorney Prays for Reprieve.

London, England.—It was announced officially Monday that Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, convicted and sentenced to death for the murder of his wife, would not be executed Tuesday as originally arranged, as the law provides that two weeks must elapse between the dismissal of an appeal and the carrying out of the sentence.

November 23 has been fixed upon as the date of the execution. Solicitor Newton, Crippen's counsel, is drafting a petition for a reprieve.

Giant Bank; Steal $2,000.

Toledo, O.—After blowing a portion of the vault through the ceiling with nitroglycerin, cracksmen secured $2,000 from the Southern bank, a private institution of Jerry City, O., 25 miles from Toledo, Tuesday. The robbers escaped in an automobile.

Illinois Bank Is Robbed.

Champaign.—The vault of the bank of Penfield, Champaign county, was entered Tuesday and $900 in stamps deposited by the postmaster for safekeeping were taken.

TIDAL WAVES SWEEPS NOME

VOLCANO ON BOGOSLOV ISLAND BELIEVED THE CAUSE.

No Wind Blowing When Sea Rushes In, Wrecking Houses and Flooding Streets.

Nome, Alaska.—Seventeen houses were destroyed, a number of vessels were washed away and the streets of the city filled with water when an unprecedented and mysterious surf swept in from the ocean.

It is believed by many here that the high sea, which was not accompanied by any wind, is due to volcanic activity, and it is thought that Bogoslov Island, the "new island" in Behring sea, is to blame for the tidal wave. Bogoslov is an "intermittent island;" sometimes it is twins and sometimes it is single. Again it is large, and then the next ship that passes may report that it has dwindled to a mere volcanic speck in the sea.

Bogoslov, it is thought, may have doubled again or may have blown itself to nothing, sending the tidal waves which all but inundated Nome.

For several years the water here has been remarkably low, and this resulted in the building of houses close to the shore. It was these that were swept away by the sea.

No lives were lost, but many persons had narrow escapes. The water swept far up the streets, those near the shore being completed inundated.

BLIZZARD TIES UP THE EAST

Towns Are Isolated and Railroads Blocked by Storm From the Atlantic—Snow 3 Feet Deep.

New York.—A storm of midwinter intensity rode up the Atlantic coast on a gale Friday that left 31 inches of snow in places in Pennsylvania, wrecked telephone and telegraph wires everywhere and tied up hundreds of miles of electric car lines.

Sleet and snow caused much wire trouble between New York, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Scranton and Harrisburg.

Washington was almost entirely cut off from New York during a greater part of the day, the conditions being not unlike those prevailing during the storm of March 4, 1909.

A 50-mile gale sweeping Mineola aviation field brought damage to six aeroplanes and wrecked six of nine tents erected for the air men.

Terrific gales, driving snow and sleet across the Hudson and turning the Palisades into a typical winter landscape, marked the progress of the storm for many miles north of Newburg, while down the bay and outside Sandy Hook the storm was so severe as to cause ocean liners to be delayed and serious damage to the steamship Honduras of the Compagnie Generale Trans-Atlantique.

The snow in eastern Pennsylvania was reported at from eighteen inches to three feet deep. Five of the seven collieries of the Susquehanna Coal company in the Shamokin district had to suspend operations on account of the storm.

The snowstorm extended to Harrisburg on the west, but in damaging proportions did not come further east than New Brunswick, N. J.

In Philadelphia a high northwest wind sweeping through the streets at from 30 to 40 miles an hour came as a climax to the storm of rain, sleet and snow that swept the city for 36 hours.

Twelve Injured in an Explosion.

New York.—Twelve men are under the care of Brooklyn physicians as the result of a boiler explosion Tuesday. The men were working on a "dead" boiler in an electric lighting plant near the water front, when another boiler ten feet away exploded.

Killed Over a Pool Game.

Evansville, Ind.—Edward Singleton and Joseph Fitchinger quarreled over a game of pool Tuesday and Singleton was killed by Fitchinger, who used brass knuckles.

EXPLOSION SEALS 60

BELIEVED MANY MINERS ARE DEAD IN DELAGUA (COL.) MINE SHAFT.

FIFTY MAY HAVE ESCAPED

Force of Blast Felt Four Miles Away—Rescue Parties Are Rushed to Scene—Mouth of Main Slope Badly Caved.

Trinidad, Col.—Sixty or more miners were entombed and may be dead as a result of an explosion Tuesday in Mine No. 3 of the Victor American Fuel company at Delagua, 20 miles northeast of Trinidad. Three men were killed at the mine's mouth.

Fifty of the men in the wrecked mine are reported to have escaped through entry No. 2. Two of the men who were in the mine at the time of the accident have been taken out. They were unable to tell anything that would lead to the belief that their comrades are still alive.

The force of the explosion was felt at Hastings, four miles down the canyon, and the news of the disaster spread rapidly. Rescue car of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company was manned with a force of 75 trained rescuers and taken by special engine to the scene.

W. S. Getchel, general manager of the Colorado division, was at Gray Creek when notified of the disaster and left at once in an automobile and is in personal charge of the rescue work. The mouth of the main slope is badly caved and rescuers are directing their efforts to reaching the entombed men through the rear of No. 3 mine.

Two of the men injured at the south of the mine were brought to the local hospital in a serious condition. Officials seem to be unable to state how many men were in the mine.

BRANDS DR. COOK A SWINDLER

Rasmussen Sends Report From Far North—Eskimos Say Traveler Did Not Reach Pole.

Copenhagen, Denmark.—Knud Rasmussen, the Danish explorer, brands Dr. Frederick A. Cook as a swindler in a communication sent to his wife in this city.

Rasmussen incloses a narrative given by the two Eskimos who accompanied Doctor Cook and Commander Robert E. Peary on their recent arctic expeditions in which they declare that Doctor Cook journeyed in a circle and did not reach the north pole.

The explorer writes in part as follows:

"Already in the fall of 1909, when I was on an expedition to Greenland there existed grave doubts as to whether Doctor Cook had been near the north pole and I made up my mind to secure through thoroughly disinterested people a bona-fide report of his Eskimo fellow travelers, Itsukusuk and Apilak.

"These young men belong to a tribe near Smith sound, the members of which still live the life of savages. They possess no written language and therefore I had to get somebody to write down the young men's report. Rev. Gustav Olsen and Kateket Sechmann Rosebach, both born in Greenland and newly-arrived missionaries to this tribe, did the writing. Further, I received from the manager of a copper mine in Greenland, a man named Nyboe, assistance in getting the report. In the fall I forwarded a letter from South Greenland by sledge to the missionary station and the letter reached its destination in the winter.

"On my arrival at North Star bay this summer I found the report in the Eskimo language awaiting me containing the narrative given by Doctor Cook's companions to Rev. Mr. Olsen. I myself have not seen the young men since they returned with Doctor Cook, but I know them from earlier times. They are clever and trustworthy men and I consider their report, obtained by wholly disinterested persons, on the question of the reaching of the north pole by Doctor Cook, more valuable than any I myself could have obtained."

CIVIL WAR IN HONDURAS

President Davila Will Probably Appeal to U. S. to Take Charge of Affairs.

San Salvador.—A general rebellion has broken out in Honduras and insurgents are gathering in the interior, according to reliable dispatches received here. It is likely that President Davila will appeal to the United States or the Cartago court to take charge of his administration, as his government is in no condition to meet a crisis at this time.

Marks Birthday by $50,000 Gift.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—John Bigelow, the veteran diplomat and author, who will celebrate his ninety-third birthday this month, Monday presented to his native village of Malden on the Hudson, in honor of the occasion, a $50,000 recreation hall and library.

Japs to Seek South Pole.

New York.—The explorers' club was notified Monday that a Japanese expedition to the south pole will leave Tokyo November 15.

PEACE PLANS ARE REFUSED

STRIKING GARMENT WORKERS REPUDIATE AGREEMENT.

Citizens' Committee Declares Tailors' Strike Is Justified After Investigation of Trouble.

Chicago. — Just when everybody thought peace was in sight the 40,000 striking garment workers turned down almost unanimously an arbitration agreement signed by Thomas A. Rickert, president of their national union, and officers of one of the largest firms concerned in the walkout.

The rejection of the agreement puts the strike back where it was before the peace negotiations were started.

Simultaneous with the rejection of peace terms the committee of citizens interested in the strike—several of them social settlement workers—issued a report covering a week's investigation of the strike troubles.

The report declared the walkout justified on the ground of numerous grievances existing in the various establishments. The investigators found the strike was spontaneous in origin and not the result of dissension spread by union agitators.

The report closed by recommending a union or shop organization of the employes, for the purpose of dealing collectively with the employers in the adjustment of possible future disturbances.

The effect of the report undoubtedly will be to encourage the strikers to hold out for recognition of the union and for the closed shop as a condition for the termination of the strike.

DEITZ GIVES $40,000 BAIL

He Is Released But Rearrested on Charge of Attempting to Shoot Man in 1904.

Hayward, Wis.—Attorneys Zabel and Schultz, head of the Deitz defense committee, arrived here Monday from Eau Claire, where they received Judge Wickham's approval of the bonds of $40,000.

The bond was approved and recorded after which procedure Deitz was notified that for a time at least he was again a free man. His wife and Clarence were overjoyed and quickly bringing his overcoat, Clarence assisted his father to put it on and stepped out on the porch of the jail. However, his period of freedom was very short. Barely had the overcoat been placed on him, when Sheriff Madden read a warrant to him for the alleged attempted shooting of Patrick McGin on May 8, 1904, and once more the famous Cameron Dam defender was placed behind the bars.

IOWA LOSES IN POPULATION

Decrease of 7,082 Shown by Census Returns—Result Is No Surprise to Officials.

Washington. — The population of Iowa is 2,224,771, according to the enumeration in the thirteenth census. This is a decrease of 7,082, or 0.3 per cent, under 2,231,853 in 1900. The increase from 1890 to 1900 was 319,572, or 16.7 per cent.

The decrease did not surprise census bureau officials, as it was in line with what was expected in the agricultural regions of the middle west.

Unless the present basis of apportionment is retained it is probable that Iowa will lose one of her 11 members of congress.

Director Durand attributes the falling off to the fact that the land already is fully occupied and a general tendency toward larger farms. He says a growth cannot be expected unless there is a change to more intensive cultivation.

65 MILES IN 66 MINUTES

Aeronaut Flies Across Country with Cargo of Silk in Fastest Time a Biplane Ever Made.

Columbus, O.—Phil O. Parmelee, one of the Wright brothers' aeroplane operators, made the fastest cross-country flight ever made in a biplane. He flew from Dayton to Columbus, passing over South Charleston and London.

The air line distance as given by the Wrights is sixty-five miles. The flight was made at a height of 2,000 feet in sixty-six minutes.

Parmalee carried $1,000 worth of silk for a dry goods firm. It is said this is the first time the biplane has been put to such commercial use.

Fate Is Decided by Cards.

St. Louis. — After a game of solitaire, had decided, his fate, Charles W. Eggers, twenty-nine years old, ended his life by swallowing a mixture of carbolic acid and wood alcohol. Eggers took the fatal mixture when the ace and nine of spades, which he considered the worst cards in the deck, came out while he was playing a game of cards to which he had determined to leave the question of life or death, and blocked further play.

Caught Printing Pay Checks.

Salt Lake City.—While in the act of printing forged Chicago, Burlington & Quincy pay checks at an engraving plant, F. H. Reckmeyer, a printer, and Elmer Peterson, a boy of seventeen were arrested here Tuesday.

Coronation Band Leader Dead.

Seattle, Wash.—Thomas Cannell leader of a band at the coronation of Queen Victoria, died here Tuesday in his ninety-sixth year, leaving 89 descendants, including seven great-grandchildren.

RICHER UP FOR LIFE

ENTERS PLEA OF GUILTY TO CHARGES OF SECOND DEGREE MURDER.

WIFE SECURES A DIVORCE

He Wept as He Left the Court Room But Did Not Speak to His Wife—Other News.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—For the most diabolical crime ever committed in the confines of Allen county, and one of the most revolting and unusual in criminal history, Moses Richer entered a plea of guilty to murder in the second degree in the circuit court and will serve a life sentence at Michigan City for the death of Charles Coates.

The ink on Judge O'Rourke's court docket was not dry when a subpoena was read to the weeping prisoner notifying him that his wife, Judith Richer, had applied for a decree of divorce, and as he sat speechless with the suddenness of the whole proceeding, she testified that they were married February 18, 1909, and lived together until July 15 of this year.

Judge O'Rourke took judicial knowledge of the fact that the husband had just been convicted of a most heinous crime and entered a decree giving her a divorce.

Before being arraigned Richer deeded to his wife, who is a daughter of one of the wealthiest Amishmen in Adams county, his farm near Grabill, valued at $10,000, paid off all his debts and arranged that his personal property go to his blood relatives.

The only statement made by Richer was: "I was a man before this happened and I intend to be one in prison."

The remorse that has been with him since committing the crime caused him to break down when taken from jail to court and he wept continually.

Richer took Charlie Coats from an orphan asylum and for some reason did not like the boy. For four months he abused him, finally, during a fit of rage, kicking and trampling the lad to death.

Street Is Littered with Silver.

St. Louis, Mo.—One thousand dollars was scattered over Olive street when a bag of silver coins split as it was being carried from an automobile into the Bank of Commerce. The bag had been lying twenty-four years in the sub-treasury, and had decayed. A score of spectators scrambled for the money and restored it to the messenger. Newsboys gathered with yells of delight to assist in the work of picking up the scattered coins. Bank policemen and guards rushed out to help. Among those who rushed from the building was J. A. Lewis, cashier of the bank. Lewis did not recognize the dollars, but he did recognize the bag which had inclosed them. "Why," said he, "I put up this money twenty-four years ago when I was a teller in the sub-treasury. It has my mark on it, and the date, 1886." Bank guards and policemen formed a circle around the pile of coin to keep the curious crowds back and to prevent the newsboys from helping to collect the scattered coins. It was nearly twenty minutes before all the coins had been collected, and the crowd had been dispersed. Then Olive street at Broadway resumed its normal appearance.

Fifty to Seventy-five Miners Entombed.

Trinidad, Col.—Between 50 and 75 men are believed to be entombed in mine No. 3 of the Victoria American Fuel company at Delagua, 22 miles northwest of here, as the result of an explosion. Fifty men came out alive and unharmed through mine No. 2, which is connected with the main mine No. 3, and, according to reports to the mine officials, they did not even know there had been an explosion in No. 3. If the report is true the explosion, which badly caved the entrance to No. 3, did not extend far into the mine and it is hoped therefore that the men far within the workings are unharmed.

Burglars Blow Illinois Safe.

Danville, Ill.—Burglars blew the safe in the Penfield, Ill., bank and it is reported that a large amount of cash was stolen, together with $910 worth of postage stamps, which had been placed in the same over night. There was $20,000 in cash in the vaults when the bank was closed in the afternoon, and it is reported that much of this has been taken. Detectives have been called from Chicago. The robbers escaped in a buggy.

Fate of Porter Charlton.

Washington, D. C.—The fate of Porter Charlton in the question of extradition to Italy for the alleged murder of his wife at Lake Como is now in the hands of the state department, which will view the case from all angles of law and treaty obligations.

Boat Afire; Ask Aid by Wireless.

San Francisco, Cal.—Wireless messages were picked up at various points along the coast from the steamer Falcon of the American-Hawaiian Steamship company, stating that the boat was afire and asking for aid. The Mare Island station received a message that the Falcon had flashed distress signals about while off of the Columbia river bar. The fire was put out, it was reported shortly after midnight when a tug had gone to her assistance and the steamer proceeded on her way to Astoria, Ore.

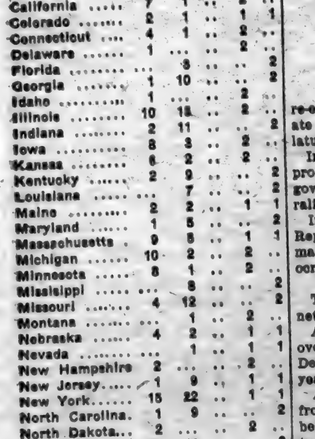
Plurality		68

Washington.—The Democratic party has won the battle of ballots. It has turned many so-called doubtful and some Republican states into its column, and a Democratic congress is one of the results. From unofficial returns the record stands as follows:

Democrats elected	211
Republicans elected	180
Socialists	1
Democratic majority over all	32

New York, Ohio, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Indiana, Connecticut all reported Democratic successes. Even rock-ribbed Iowa elected a Democratic governor.



John A. Dix.

Dix Wins in New York.

New York elected John A. Dix Democratic candidate for governor, over Henry L. Stimson, candidate of Col. Theodore Roosevelt, by about 68,000.

Ohio re-elected Gov. Judson Harmon, Democrat, by a majority ranging between 40,000 and 60,000 votes. Two years ago Harmon was elected by 19,372.

New Jersey introduced Woodrow Wilson to national politics, until recently president of Princeton university, by electing him to the governorship by a plurality of 15,000 over Vivian M. Lewis, Republican. The previous Republican plurality was 2,000.

Massachusetts kept up with the times by electing Eugene N. Foss governor by 30,000 plurality, defeating Gov. Eben S. Draper, whose plurality two years ago was 8,000. The legislature remains safely Republican, however, which means that Henry Cabot Lodge will be returned to the United States senate.

Baldwin Wins in Connecticut.

In Connecticut, Judge Simeon H. Baldwin, Democratic candidate, was elected governor over Charles A. Goodwin, Republican, by 4,000 plurality, reversing the previous Republican plurality of 16,000.

Indiana went as far in a Democratic way as it could, electing twelve out of thirteen Democrats to congress, and defeating Albert J. Beveridge for re-election to the United States senate by choosing a Democratic legislature.

In New Hampshire, Robert P. Bass, progressive Republican candidate for governor, was elected by 6,000 plurality.

In Michigan, Chase S. Osborn, the Republican candidate for governor, maintained a safe lead over his Democratic opponent, L. T. Hemans.

Election Result in Brief.

To sum up the elections briefly, the net result is:

A national house of representatives overwhelmingly controlled by the Democrats for the first time in fifteen years.

An unrecognizable national senate from which notable standpatters have to be eliminated and which promises to be dominated by Republican progressives and Democrats.

Democratic governors in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Ohio.

The first formal entrance of the Socialist party upon the congressional stage.

The Next Speaker.

Uncle Joe Cannon was returned to congress by his usual majority, but there is no possibility of his again ruling over the destinies of the lower house. In place of Uncle Joe Champ Clark of Missouri will be the most conspicuous candidate for speaker of the next congress, and Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama will figure for the chairmanship of the committee on ways and means. Both were re-elected. Both are members of the ways and means committee now and are not only close personal friends, but Underwood is Clark's principal lieutenant in the minority of the present congress.

The loss of seats in the United States senate by the Republicans to the Democrats includes that of one progressive, Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, and such standpatters as Chauncey M. Depew of New York and John Kean of New Jersey.

The election assures an unrecognized national senate, from which notable standpatters, including Aldrich and Hale, have been eliminated, and which will be dominated by Republicans, progressives and Democrats.

How great has been the defeat suffered by the Republican party in connection with the house of representatives will be understood when it is recalled that the present Republican majority in that chamber is 43.

This majority ceased to be of any value to the house organization following the insurrection led by such progressives as Congressmen Murdock and Madison of Kansas, Hayes of California, Cooper of Wisconsin, and others.

Not content with replacing Republicans by Democrats, the people of Wisconsin sent Victor Berger, Socialist, to Washington.

Democratic Gains.

The Democrats gained from the Republicans seats in congress in eight states. In New York seven Republican seats were taken by the Democrats.

In New Jersey the slaughter was terrific. In Maryland, Massachusetts, North Carolina each the Republicans lost two seats. In Illinois they lost at least four, and losses were sustained also in Oklahoma, Kentucky, Missouri, Iowa and Ohio. There were two Republican gains from the Democrats, one in New York and one in Pennsylvania.

Beveridge is Beaten.

Indianapolis.—John W. Kern will be the next United States senator from Indiana, succeeding Albert J. Beveridge. Mr. Beveridge conceded his defeat and issued the following statement:

"It is the fortunes of war. It's all right. I have had twelve years of hard work and have a clean record. I am content."

Stokes Jackson, chairman of the Democratic state committee, says the legislature will be Democratic on joint ballot by at least thirty, that the Democratic state ticket has been elected by 30,000, and that the entire Indiana delegation in congress will be Democratic.

John W. Kern issued the following statement at a late hour:

"It looks like a splendid victory all along the line. Many Republicans rallied to our standard. Not only will the victory be complete, but it looks now overwhelming. I am deeply grateful to all the people for their generous and loyal support. My labors have been most arduous and exhausting, but I am fully compensated by the result of our united efforts. Out of the fullness of my heart I am saying, 'God bless old Indiana and her splendid people.'"

It is Dix in New York.

New York.—The Democrats elected John A. Dix governor of New York by a plurality of about 68,000 votes. New York city gave Dix 299,078; Stimson, 194,613, and Hopper, 39,630.

Stimson's upstate plurality was only 36,396. Early in the evening he sent a telegram of congratulation to his victorious rival.

T. F. Conway, for lieutenant governor, was swept into office only slightly behind Dix. The entire Democratic state ticket was elected, and the legislature will be Democratic on joint ballot. This means that a Democrat will be the successor of Chauncey M. Depew in the United States senate. The Democrats have made a gain of ten members in the congressional delegation from this state.

According to the latest figures obtainable the legislature will stand thus:

Senate—Republican, 22; Democrats, 29.

Assembly—Republicans, 70; Democrats, 80.

Among the notable defeats of representatives in congress were Herbert Parsons in the Thirteenth, J. Sloat Fassett in the Thirty-third, and W. W. Cocks in the First. All are particular friends of Roosevelt, and Cocks represents the colonel's home district. Martin W. Littleton, who defeated Cocks, had to overcome a normal Republican plurality of about 6,000. Mr. Littleton's wife assisted him in the campaign. Henry George, Jr., defeated W. S. Bennet, the Republican incumbent in the Seventeenth district. Representative Hamilton Fish gave ground to Richard E. Connell, a Democrat.

Iowa Elects Democrat.

Des Moines, Ia.—Claude R. Porter, Democrat, has been elected governor over B. F. Carroll, incumbent, by a majority of from 5,000 to 6,000. The normal Republican majority is 60,000.

Returns from Cedar Rapids, Des Moines, Iowa City, Davenport, Sioux City and other large river towns indicate that the Republican candidate was cut unmercifully there. The same loss seemed to be suffered in other centers of population throughout the state.

Iowa has eleven congressional districts. I. S. Pepper, the young Democratic candidate in the Second district, walked away with the election, carrying every county over his opponent, Charles Grilk. It was in behalf of the latter that Colonel Roosevelt recently made an address at Davenport.

S. F. Prouty, the progressive Republican candidate of the Seventh district, who wrested the nomination from the veteran "standpatter," Captain Hull, seems to have landed the position so often sought unsuccessfully before.

Walter I. Smith, a member of the Cannon rules committee, and who is credited with speakership aspirations, was elected in the Ninth district, but his majority was cut to 500 from the 2,506 he expected.

Other Republicans who were elected were Pickett, Third district; Good, Fifth district; Towner, Eighth district; Woods, Tenth district.

The legislature will be strongly Republican, although the liquor interests worked hard to carry twenty-four doubtful counties.

The control of the general assembly is of especial interest in view of the fact that a successor of the late Senator Dolliver will be chosen this winter. The progressives will have twenty or twenty-two majority in the Republican caucus.

Harmon in Ohio.

Columbus, O.—Gov. Judson Harmon, Democrat, has been re-elected with a plurality of about 60,000 over Harding, his Republican opponent.

Governor Harmon made phenomenal gains in Cincinnati, where eighty precincts that in 1908 gave him only 1,324 votes to his opponent's 10,826, this year gave him 9,947 to 9,979 for Harding. Harmon also gained 940 votes in twenty-nine rural precincts near Cleveland. He also more than doubled his former vote in Cuyahoga county.

A noticeable feature of the election was the gain made by the Socialists. In many precincts the Socialist candidates polled twice as large votes as ever had been given the party before. The Socialist gain seemed to be made up by defections from the old parties in about equal numbers.

In the First congressional district Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of former President Roosevelt, has been re-elected by the Republicans.

Governor Harmon has carried with him two Democratic congressional candidates in districts that have heretofore elected Republicans.

Ohio will send ten and possibly twelve Democrats to congress out of the twenty-one in the delegation, instead of eight, as at present.

Tennessee Goes Republican.

Nashville, Tenn.—The Republicans have elected B. W. Hooper governor by a plurality of 15,000 over R. L. Taylor.

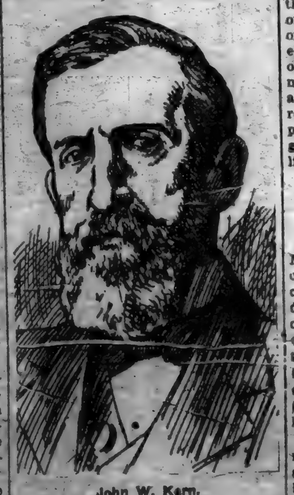
Eight Democratic congressmen and two Republicans have been elected. The legislature remains Democratic.

The Democratic counties in middle and west Tennessee, which nearly all went for the independent judicial ticket in August, went back into the Democratic column, but the majorities were not large enough to overcome the heavy Republican vote in east Tennessee.

St. Paul, Minn.—Minnesota Republicans elected a complete state ticket and eight Republicans and one Democrat will be sent to congress. Congressman Hammond, Democrat, apparently has been re-elected by a reduced majority. This leaves the party complexion of the Minnesota delegation unchanged.

Republicans Keep Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia.—John K. Tener, Republican, carried the state by about 35,000 plurality over William H. Berry, the Keystone party candidate.



John W. Kern.

Webster Grim, the regular Democratic candidate, ran far behind.

Tener needed Philadelphia to win, the city giving him a plurality of 45,254. Allegheny county, which includes Pittsburg, gave Tener a plurality of 18,000.

The Democrats gained two congressmen.

The Democrats and Independents made slight gains in the legislature. One of the notable victories of the Democrats was the capturing of the Fifth congressional district in Philadelphia, which two years ago gave W. W. Foulkerod a majority of 13,268.

The Socialists elected their first member of the legislature.

Milwaukee.—Francis E. McGovern, a La Follette Republican, and a legislature of La Follette Republicans were elected in Wisconsin, the Democrats conceding McGovern a plurality of 50,000 over A. J. Schmitz, Democratic nominee. The Republican vote shows a falling off of about 15 per cent.

Eight Republican congressmen have been elected and one Democrat in the Sixth district. The Fifth district, in which Henry F. Cochems, who nominated La Follette for president in the last Republican national convention, gave a plurality for Victor L. Berger, Social Democrat. The contest in the Fourth district between Gaylord, Socialist, and his Republican opponent is so close that only the official returns will indicate the winner.

The election of a La Follette legislature assures his return to the United States senate.

STATE BOARD TAKES UP "FRAT" QUESTION

May Lead to Revocation of School Commissions.

A VIOLATION OF THE LAW

High Schools of the State That Permit Fraternities Among Their Students Will Lose Their Authority.

Indianapolis.—If a feeling expressed by the members of the state board of education in its meeting is put into execution, as proposed, high schools of the state that permit high school fraternities and sororities among their students will lose their commissions, which are issued by the board. Because of numerous reports and complaints about such organizations the state board decided that the question of their existence should be looked into, since they exist in violation of a state law. A committee, composed of Supt. C. N. Kendall of this city, J. N. Study of Ft. Wayne and George W. Tapy of Crawfordsville, was named to take up the matter with city superintendents and high school principals and report to the state board, which will then decide on what action shall be taken.

In addition to passing on the questions for teachers' examination for the examination year, beginning in January, the board members reported on a number of visits made to high schools. President T. C. Howe of Butler college, Supt. F. S. Morganthale of Rockport, and County Supt. C. E. Talkington of Columbus were named a special committee to make the annual visit of inspection to the State Normal school at Terre Haute.

The meeting was the last to be attended by Robert J. Aley, state superintendent of public instruction, who will leave in a short time to assume the presidency of the University of Maine. The members gave a breakfast for him, when several speeches were made. Resolutions were subsequently written in the minutes of the board containing the following:

"Bringing to the administration of the office to which the people of his state chose him a ripe scholarship, a broad and varied experience, sound, practical judgment and the highest ideals of public service, he (Mr. Aley) has conducted the affairs of the department of public instruction with signal success, and with the greatest possible benefit to the educational interests of the state."

The board, in its meeting, accepted the resignation of James E. Watson of Rushville as a member of the board of trustees of Indiana university and elected to the vacancy Dr. S. R. Lyons of the Reid Memorial church of Richmond, the change becoming effective at once. The reason given for the resignation of Mr. Watson was that pressing legal duties prevented his giving to the board the time he believed it ought to have.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Anderson.—That the Rider-Lewis Motor Car company, which recently went into the hands of a receiver, had been operated at a loss during its entire history was brought out in the report submitted by Receiver Thomas J. Delahunt to the superior court. The report shows that the company has sold 250 cars which cost to manufacture $289,967, while the cars sold for $240,876, making a loss in operation of $49,090.

Kokomo.—Orin Jones, who formerly operated a garage, is under arrest on a charge of larceny and embezzlement, growing out of his having, it is alleged, sold the tires off an automobile belonging to Peter Van Briggle of Elwood and also having had the machine repaired and repainted. When Mr. Van Briggle came to this city after an extended absence he found a bill of $100 against his automobile.

Columbus.—After getting up and preparing breakfast Mrs. Martin Vancleave returned to awaken her husband, but found him dead, he having died sometime in the night. He was sixty-six years old, and retired in apparently good health.

Hartford City.—Hopping on a wagon which passed just as school was out, William Trant, nine years old, son of City Clerk James T. Trant, was instantly killed when he slipped and fell under the wheels.

Richmond.—The courts were called upon for the first time in connection with the molders' strike at the Robinson Machine works, Emmett Haas, one of the strikers, being fined for provoking Walter Sheard, a nonunion molder, by applying epithets to him. Haas's fine was paid by the Molders' union.

Anderson.—It was learned that Virgil Sears, a well-known teacher of Stony Creek township, eloped to St. Joseph, Mich., with Marie Badgely, fifteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Charles Delawter, where they were married. The couple returned and the girl was forgiven by her mother.

Logansport.—Physicians, after a consultation, have diagnosed as infantile paralysis the ailment of Miss Marie Myers, daughter of Supreme Justice Quincy A. Myers of this city. Miss Myers, a Belmont college graduate and social leader, is practically helpless.

THOUGHT SHE HAD PRACTICED

Frenchman's Suspicions Really Something of a Compliment to the Men of America.

Claude Grahame White, the English aviator, praised, at a dinner in New York, the good fellowship of Americans.

"The American woman is regarded abroad as an angel," he said. "The man is admittedly a good fellow, but an angel he is far from being.

"You've heard of the Frenchman perhaps, whose sweetheart spent the summer in America? After her return the poor Frenchman seemed quite blue.

"'What's the matter with you?' a friend asked.

"'I am worried,' the other muttered, 'about my fiancee. You see, since her return from America she kisses so much better than she used to.'"

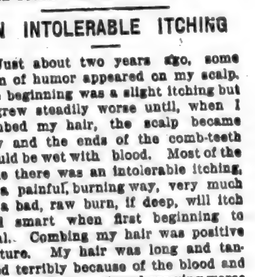
AN INTOLERABLE ITCHING

"Just about two years ago, some form of humor appeared on my scalp. The beginning was a slight itching but it grew steadily worse until, when I combed my hair, the scalp became raw and the ends of the comb-teeth would be wet with blood. Most of the time there was an intolerable itching, in a painful, burning way, very much as a bad, raw burn, if deep, will itch and smart when first beginning to heal. Combing my hair was positive torture. My hair was long and tangled terribly because of the blood and scabs. This continued growing worse and over half my hair fell out. I was in despair, really afraid of becoming totally bald.

"Sometimes the pain was so great that, when partially awake, I would scratch the worst places so that my finger-tips would be bloody. I could not sleep well and, after being asleep a short time, that awful stinging pain —would commence and then I would wake up nearly wild with the torture. A neighbor said it must be salt rheum. Having used Cuticura Soap merely as a toilet soap before, I now decided to order a set of the Cuticura Remedies —Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills. I used them according to directions for perhaps six weeks, then left off, as the disease seemed to be eradicated, but toward spring, eighteen months ago, there was a slight return of the scalp humor. I commenced the Cuticura treatment at once, so had very little trouble. On my scalp I used about one half a cake of Cuticura Soap and half a box of Cuticura Ointment in all. The first time I took six or seven bottles of Cuticura Pills and the last time three bottles—neither an expensive or tedious treatment. Since then I have had no scalp trouble of any kind. Standing up, with my hair unbound, it comes to my knees and had it not been for Cuticura I should doubtless be wholly bald.

"This is a voluntary, unsolicited testimonial and I take pleasure in writing it, hoping my experience may help someone else. Miss Lillian Brown, R. F. D. 1, Liberty, Me., Oct. 29, 1909."

WHAT?



Weeks—Why are you stopping? You didn't run over that man.

Swiftly—I know it. I just want to see what ails the steering gear.

SICK, SOUR, UPSET STOMACH

Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn or Dyspepsia Relieved Five Minutes After Taking a Little Diapepsin.

Here is a harmless preparation which surely will digest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out of-order stomach within five minutes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your Pharmacist a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store here in town.

These large 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Gastritis or any other stomach disorder.

Many a man who put his money in a mine comes out minus.

Mrs. Austins Buckwheat Flour gives the real genuine old time flavor.

Retrospection and Prophecy.

Once more, has an election come and gone. Big guns and little have hurled their missles into the ranks of the enemy, and now we are permitted to view through the clearing smoke the victors and the vanquished. What a variety of emotions are felt, ranging from utter indifference to exultation or deepest gloom. When one stops to consider, seriously, thoughtfully, how much is involved in an election, how events of great importance depend upon some apparently unimportant thing or event, it ought to make him pause, and take a square look at himself as the mirror of the past is held up to him. Empires have risen, and empires have fallen, all according to a law as certain in its action as that law that guides the planets in their course, that causes the apple to seek the earth when it leaves the parent tree. An Omnipotent hand through Whom we live, move and have our being. Some how, somewhere, the idea has taken hold upon some of us, that religion and politics are absolute strangers; that some things, questionable under ordinary circumstances, are perfectly right if done in political circles. "Let ministers take care of your souls, we'll take care of the country", say these political wiseacres. Shame on such philosophy! such thinking as this when acted upon has caused the downfall of every country, that once held worldly power, and influence and such doctrine as this will eventually drag the emblem of our own country in the dust. No such feasts were ever entertained by the heros of Valley Forge, nor did they hold sway in the breast of Lincoln or Washington. Poverty and adversity it seems, developes nation building heroes. Affluence, begets pride and arrogance, and decay sets in. It seems to us, when we view the action taken by the leaders of the two great political parties, on a question of greater importance than any other question that has confronted this or any other nation; that a moral leprosy is gnawing at its vitals that will, if a reaction does not set in, place this nation in the list of has beens, but we will try not be too pessimistic, we will take a short retrospective view of some of Indiana's politics, and then try to show you the silver lining. Just a matter of a very few years ago, an Indiana governor grew eloquent and registered about forty hates against the iniquitous liquor traffic, if eloquence could kill, this arch fiend of humanity would be deader than an Egyptian mummy; but somehow Providence has made different arrangements to destroy evil. Our governor calls a special session at a great expense; and a number of counties closed the taps connected with the great distilleries and breweries; and counting on the help of prohibitionists and dry democrats, defeated Watson the republican candidate for governor. Now the republicans repudiate Hanley, we wonder (?) why. Why was not Local Option made an issue by republicans in this year's campaign? We know, so do you. And we wonder what they will do two years hence. It is painfully apparent to one who can read between the lines, the cause of the present democratic landslide. This pandering to the liberal element, so liberal that it recognizes that man is very prone to be influenced by his passions and appetites, and those same passions must be granted at any cost. This exultation and its cause, democrats can not hide from the public eye. Neither can the foes of the liquor element much longer be hoodwinked by any tommy-rot Local Option foolishness, bounty, or township and ward, it is all the same; a cowardly, cringing, prostitution at the foot of the shrine of Bacchus. But it will end. "God moves in mysterious ways, his wonders to perform," human instrumentality is His means, the leaven is at work, great men no longer ignore the temperance question, and their voices are being heard, no matter what motives are the inspiration, "straws show which way the wind blows" and our prediction is, that when people have seen the utter foolishness of trying to worship both God and Mammon, when politicians to the great political parties see the way of political preferment lies not in truckling to the baser element in man's nature they will incorporate into the platform of one of the parties, the great principle that license is sin, thereby absorbing; not for the love of principle perhaps, but for political gain, the party that has manfully, in the face of all opposition, defied the commercial ungodly hosts of sin for more than twenty-five years. The prohibition principle like that of abolition will be arrayed in a new garb. As a party it may meet the fate of the Abolition party. Truth will win "So what's in a name."

WINTER CARNIVAL!

Opens Today and Continues until $10,000 worth of Goods are Sold.

This winter carnival is a bargain feast. Everybody is invited. You will all be interested when you see the class of Merchandise we are selling at prices that have no competition. This warm fall has caused many merchants to cancel orders, therefore factories at this time will sell goods on hand at a big sacrifice for immediate cash. Our buyers bought over $10,000 worth of goods-the very choicest of the season at figures so low that we can sell at prices other merchants pay. This is a deal that requires a lot of nerve. Our confidence in you-the public-inspired us to buy quantities that would stagger ordinary merchants. It also takes nerve to sell goods at the prices quoted in this circular. But that is the way we do business. We buy for cash and sell for cash. We invite you to compare our prices with any firm or Chicago catalogue houses.

This ad is a Reproduction of the Front Page of Our Big Yellow Circulars. If you did not get one Please Write or Phone to us.

W. R. HOLDEN & CO.

BUTLER, INDIANA.

To the Public

On behalf of the members of John C. Carnes Post No. 144, G. A. R., I want to thank most heartily the people of St Joe and surrounding country, for their very prompt and liberal response in subscribing to the fund for the building of the beautiful Monument we hope to erect in Riverside Cemetery the coming year. In almost every case our solicitors met with expressions of best wishes for our success and ready response with liberal subscriptions to the fund and with the remark "If you can't raise the amount you want, call again and I will give you more." No one, but those who have undertaken the disagreeable task of raising money for a public benefit, can realize how much this kindly reception lightens the burden.

We have now, over sixteen hundred dollars subscribed, but this amount is not enough to buy us fine a monument as we want and we are going to try to raise it to two thousand dollars. For that sum we can have put up a magnificent Memorial. One that will stand for ages as a tribute to the Loyalty and Patriotism of the Volunteer Soldiers of the Civil War, 1861 to 1865, and a speaking testimonial to the public spirit and liberality of the people of this part of DeKalb County. You all want a part in it and when our solicitors call on you, will you please do the rest.

In addition to the G. A. R. committee, the following named gentlemen have kindly consented to serve as solicitors: D. J. Baker, Harry A. Kees and U. A. Patterson. Subscriptions can be made to either of the above named or the G. A. R. Committee.

Very truly,
J. D. Leighty,

Shall Women Vote?

If they did, millions would vote for King's New Life Pills the true remedy for women. For banishing dull, fagged feelings, backache or headache, constipation, dispelling colds, imparting appetite and toning up the system, they're unequaled. Easy, safe, sure. 25c at H. L. Dunkle's.

Unprecedented Opportunity

Three Great Shows at One Time in Chicago.

One of the most valuable features of the International Live Stock Exposition at Chicago this year, and which takes place on the dates of November 26th to December 3rd, inclusive, is that it occurs at the same time at which the "Land Show" and "Apple Show" are held. These great exhibitions, presented at the same time in the great city of Chicago, that wonderful metropolis of the West, and the food depot of the world offers an unprecedented opportunity to everyone who is interested in farming, breeding, the developement of land, and the apple-growing industry, such as has never occurred before, to pay a visit to Chicago at this time. Apart from the pleasures of the trip, they will be able to kill three birds with one stone, as well as do their shopping and domestic purchasing at the most interesting season of the year, when the stores are filled every thing that appeals to everybody, in addition to taking away with them a fund of practical knowledge that will be of incalculable value in after years.

A ticket on Dolly's Favorite Range with each 25c purchase at Burwell's.

It's a great beat to beat a beet and this beet is on exhibition in the large window of the J. Beams hardware store. This beet has the record of making two beats. First it beat St. Joe's 10½ pound beet one pound, making this beet 11½ pounds. This beet was grown on the Greely Wearley farm, consequently its a Democratic beet. Mr. Wearley feels very proud of this last beat, well he should, for perhaps it will be the last he will witness in his day. Never-the less its a great beet so if you have anything in that line or any other bring it in.

A New Hall.

The writer is reliably informed that we are to have a hall. R. U. Bowser proposes to raise the roof on the implement store two feet, put on iron ceiling, install gasoline lights and make a modern hall for the benefit of the town at large. This is indeed a necessary thing and Mr. Bowser will make the improvement as soon as men can be secured. An outside stairway will be constructed on the north side of the building.

J. C. C. LaVogue, $1.50 the pair

LaVogue is a corset for the woman of ample developments. The skirt is long, reaching its greatest length at the hips. To prevent stretching or tearing or uncomfortable binding when the wearer seats herself there are two deep vents, held in position by sliding supporters.

The coutil used in this number is of unusual excellence for a corset of this price. The supporters are strong and non-slipable the boning is double and flexible.

LaVogue is a corset that one can count upon to give the best of service and in which one can enjoy ideal comfort.

"A corset for every figure" is a phrase that has been used over much but in this instance it is used advisedly for truly the J. C. C. line provides for women of types.

PREMIUM

The price is one dollar and we confirm the J. C. C. peoples estimate of this value. It is really a premium corset at the price.

It is long as today's fashions dictate: it has an even all the way around unboned skirt extension. Now, the joining of this extension to the body of the garment is made a feature, for it is done in a manner that adds strength and prevents stretching and tearing when the wearer seats herself.

Developed in good coutil, filled with substantial boning, and complete with two pairs of hose supporters, good strong ones.

High School

Saturday the High School Room was reseated. The seating capacity is now forty-six.

At present the Magnolias are leading the percentage column, with the Red Sox and Handkerchief Boys tied for second place.

Last Friday the High School was honored by a visit from the Misses Maud Kline and Pearl Pervines of Spencerville and Inez Magionis of Newville.

The Basket Ball team representing the school was defeated in a very close and interesting game with Harlan on election day. The first half ended 8—8 in favor of Harlan. The final score was 12—8. Harlan's team has our boys beaten in height but practice may develope a better team. The Harlan school was well represented which shows an excellent school spirit. Attendance in all nearly 250.

MARVEL PENINSULAR POLISHED STEEL RANGE

The New Marvel Peninsular Steel Range

which is furnished with either a black or nickeled steel leg base is a unique piece of goods. It is made in two sizes, with a six-hole top.

Body of the Stove

is very compact. It is ideal for a small kitchen or where the stove space is limited. It has all the advantages of a regular Steel Range and includes such convenient attachments as our drop toaster door with draft slide and left pouch feed which can also be used for broiling.

Extension Fire Box

which makes it convenient when burning wood and a very complete substantial sectional fire box for either hard coal, soft coal or coke.

Oven Door

drops flush with the oven when open, and forms a very convenient shelf for baisting meats.

End Top Shelf

in the square style is solid and the full depth of the body of the range.

Extreme Bottom

is reinforced and protected with an extra sheet of steel with an air space between.

Direct Draft Damper

is on top as on our other ranges.

The Material

used throughout is of the same class as our other ranges and all the parts are reinforced by asbestos filling and extra steel sheets as well as cast iron protection plates.

Nickel Ornamentation

as represented by the illustration is of the Peninsular Quality, which shined like burnished silver.

Obituary

Susana Davis was born in Marion County, Ohio, December 16, 1837, and departed this life November 8, 1910, aged 72 years, 10 months and 22 days. On April 23, 1857, she was united in marriage to Martin Davis and for almost fifty-four years was his faithful wife. A length of time that is not given to very many to live together. She united with the church when a girl and after her marriage transfered her membership to the Lutheran Church at Spencerville and thus for sixty years has been a faithful member of the church. Faithful to the very end, for at our last Communion in October she was present and communed. She enjoyed her home, her church, her friends and manifested an interest in every good thing of life. She was a type of the faithful Christian testifying for her Christ everywhere and anywhere. Not "hiding her light under a bushel," but as the Master said "putting it upon a hill where everyone could see it."

She is survived by her husband Martin Davis, three daughters and one son, Samantha of near Spencerville, Mary in Arizona, Sarah near Fort Wayne and Robert in Spencerville.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Hitchner from the Lutheran Church on Friday forenoon, Henry Beams funeral director.

CURED SIX YEARS.

No Fear of Further Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Josiah Clinker, State St., Tama, Iowa, says: "My first symptom of kidney trouble was intense pain in my back. This grew worse until I ached in every part of my body. I rested poorly and was so stiff in the morning I found it hard to dress. I became tired easily, lost flesh and was in a bad way. I was well pleased with the quick relief Doan's Kidney Pills gave me. They drove the pains away and restored my kidneys to a normal condition. I have been free from kidney trouble for six years."

Good Arrangement.

A genial looking gentleman wanted an empty bottle in which to mix a solution, and went to a chemist's to purchase one. Selecting one that answered his purpose he asked the shopman how much it would cost. "Well," was the reply, "if you want the empty bottle it will be a penny but if you want anything in it you can have it for nothing." "Well, that's fair," said the customer; "put in a cork."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. A Lover's Lobster

By DONALD ALLEN

Copyrighted, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

Miss Kitty Henderson bought all her shoes at Smith & Brown's. She didn't do so because she had any wish to keep the firm out of bankruptcy, but because Horace Walpole White was one of the clerks, because he complimented her on her instep, because she was a stenographer, because Horace was a fine young man, and because, in time, they became good friends—and more.

Mr. Walpole was no villain. He was earning a fair salary and lived with his widowed mother. He had thoughts of matrimony. When Miss Kitty came along with her number two-and-a-half feet, with a high and dainty instep, he quite lost his heart. He had paid more attention to the instep than to the face, but Miss Kitty had a fair-looking face and figure.

Miss Kitty also lived with her widowed mother. She also earned a salary of $12 per week. She never even glanced at the young man's feet, and cared not a cent whether he had a high or low instep, but she also had thoughts of matrimony. Why not? Like a sensible girl, she was not waiting for a young lord or prince, or for an old dotard with his millions. A good looking shoe clerk on a fair salary looked good to her.

All the young woman had to do was to keep buying her shoes from Smith & Brown—high shoes, low shoes and slippers, and all Mr. White had to do was to stand ready to wait on her. Cupid did the rest. He gets in his work in a shoe store as well as in a palace. In time there came a call at the house; then more calls. Then the theater and little dinners. Then moonlight, sentiment, engagement and bliss!

It was just at this happy period that the good mother of the filial son lost her appetite. Something must be had to liven it up again. Horace thought of pickles, clam broth, jellies, malts and other things, but finally decided on a lobster—a live, active, aggressive lobster—a fighting-mad lobster, would be taken home and boiled alive and afterwards served to the ailing mother. It would either kill or cure her.

What more natural than a clerk in a shoe store at $12 per who wanted to take home a live lobster should select one of the hundreds of pasteboard boxes around him? It was done.

"Horace, the Man Here—He Has Pinched Me!"

The fish market man brought out the victim. The lobster, who had bitten him three times that day was trying for the fourth bite.

Mr. White had to take the Elm street car line to reach home. So did Miss Henderson. They didn't meet on the car by accident. He walked down the street one block to find her waiting, and they got on together.

It is surprising how easy it is to talk love on a street car. On one side of the happy pair is a deaf old man, and on the other is an old woman who is thinking of the pork roast in the market basket at her feet, and the two opposite have their noses in newspapers. The pair can go right ahead and plan bridal tours, costly flats and bank accounts. It's almost the same as sitting in the parlor, and there is a constant change of scenery. This had been going on for weeks when the event took place to try the to-be-bride's soul.

On this particular evening she was waiting on the corner, as usual. Not a thought of danger entered her mind. Not one horror appeared on her horizon. She was happy. She was watching for the appearance of the shoe clerk she adored. He came. He hastened. He had that shoe box under his arm. A young man in Miss Henderson's place would have saluted with: "Hello, old man!" and asked about the box later on. She, of course, asked about it the first thing. Heretofore, there had been no weak points in the armor of Horace Walpole White. But now, one was to be disclosed.

Mr. White was sensitive about carrying packages on the street or car, and especially so when his lady love was with him. To have stated in reply that he was carrying home a live lobster was beyond him. He would perish first. He would lie first. He did lie. He said it was a pair of shoes for his mother. The falsehood was believed. It even gave Miss Kitty a warmer feeling at the heart to know that she was soon to wed a man who cared whether his old mother went around barefooted in the nipping frosts or had shoes to her feet.

Once aboard the car, they sat down together as usual. They were chatty and happy. She was going that evening to learn how to trim her own hats, and he was going to revive his mother's lost appetite. Then, of a sudden, the dull thud came. Cupid flew out and the live lobster crawled in.

Shoe store boxes get a great deal of handling. When business is dull the clerks throw them across the store at each other in sportive mood. The one in which Mr. White was carrying home the champion fighting lobster had been sported with and more or less wrecked. One end had been busted and weakened. The lobster hadn't been in the coop ten minutes before he caught on. It was escape or boiling death for him. He didn't want to boil. He went at that weak corner and clawed and bit and tore, with the result that ten minutes after the lovers were seated in the car, with the box between them, he emerged into the sunshine of liberty.

It is not necessary to read natural history to learn that the first idea of a lobster on getting his freedom is to make for the salty sea; the next is to nip any one in the way. This lobster dropped to the floor with a thud and clawed the happy Miss Kitty on the ankle belonging to one of those aristocratic insteps. He clawed in earnest. She sprang to her feet with a scream, and then shouted:

"Horace, the man here—he has pinched me!"

Horace didn't lose time swearing by the beard of his father. The man was undersized and thin and unhappy. He had lost a dollar on the street the day before, and was thinking of it when the gallant Horace knocked him to the floor.

Miss Henderson got another bite, screamed another scream, and Horace picked up a drug store clerk and slammed him around without mercy. Then the lobster started for the rear platform, and that car became a circus for the next five minutes. Women shrieked and men swore, and the conductor called for a shotgun.

In the midst of the uproar one could hear the voice of the girl with the instep. She had solved the riddle. "Mother's shoes" were a monster lobster! Horace had lied to her! He had caused her to be clawed. He had caused an uproar that must disgrace her for life. He sought to explain, but it was no use. How could such a thing be explained? The undersized man said it couldn't possibly be, and the drug clerk said he'd be hanged if it could. The conductor also said that a man who would deliberately permit a fighting lobster to get away on a street car was no gentleman, to say the least.

Did Cupid come again? Oh, yes. That match was made in heaven, and an earthly lobster couldn't spoil it. After weeks and weeks, with a written confession and apology daily from Horace—after the mother's lost appetite had been restored by salt mackerel, there was a making up. The papers said that there was a marriage—marriage and a dinner—with lobster left out!

FOUND FOUR-LEAF CLOVER

Little Woman Sees Leaf, and All the Passengers on the Train Think That She Is Lucky.

A northbound Frisco passenger train stood on the siding in the Ozarks. Many of the passengers were at late breakfast in the diner.

Just as a waiter began to pour coffee for a quick-eyed little woman, she said: "Oh, wait; I must get out. Just there by that tie," motioning, "I see a big four-leaf clover." The waiter brought it, and the passengers exclaimed, "How lucky," and the little woman said, "It will bring good luck all the day."

Now—you know, and we know, that it wouldn't do any such thing. Clover leaves, rabbit feet, buckeyes, and all made pennies, or any other inanimate thing, do not bring either good or bad fortune. But when a fellow, or a girl for that matter, finds a four leaf clover, he is exhilarated. It stimulates, by reason of giving additional heart-beats; he tries harder, he walks faster, he looks happier, he speaks cheerier; he is therefore more attractive to others, and he hits the old world harder, and makes it give down its milk.

Did you ever see a calf getting its dinner? You know how it butts if the cow doesn't give down the milk? Well, the stronger the calf, the harder the "butt," the more milk. So the leaf makes us butt harder and we win; hence, we call it lucky. Maybe it is.

FLORISTS WORKING ON SHOW OPENING

Entries of the Prize Seekers Are Now Pouring In.

DOING WORK IN SECRET

The Use of Flowers for Decorating Dining Tables Will Be a Feature of the Show—Several Tables Will Be on Display.

Indianapolis.—Members of the Indiana State Association of Florists, who have for many weeks being doing committee work in preparation for the flower show, are now turning their efforts toward shaping the exposition for the opening at Indianapolis this month. The preliminary construction work for the general scheme of decoration is being carried out. They will come in large pine cases, the contents carefully wrapped in paper, and the promoters of the show are hopeful that frosty weather will prevail, for it means that the blooms will arrive in fine condition.

The growers of the higher qualities of flowers have been holding back their entry lists to the last day possible, that they might be sure of the condition of their prize ribbon seekers, and they are now pouring in on Secretary A. F. Baur, and he expects that the number of exhibitors will not only be larger than any other year of the flower shows, but that the quantity of blooms and plants will be greater.

The use of flowers for decorating dining tables will be a feature of the show, and several tables will be on display. The florists who are arranging the tables are doing their work in secret. They will, however, show the use of carnations, chrysanthemums and roses, plants and ferns. Electric lighting effects, the proper placing of china, silver and other adornment will figure in the table exhibitions. In other years a judge has tied the ribbons on the winning tables, but at the coming show the visitors will make the awards.

The show of orchids, the rarest flower known to local flower lovers, promises to be larger than in any other year of the exposition. Homer Wiegand has charge of the orchid division and will arrange the blooms in artistic displays.

The noncompetitive exhibits will be one of the features. Florists who are extensive growers and who are identified with the exposition, will contribute these displays in many forms. A big flower booth will be erected at the head of the hall stairway, and it will be stocked twice a day with large quantities of cut flowers, fresh from the greenhouses.

Stand Ready to Settle.

The four former county officials here and the one present official who have been charged with various amounts by the state board of accounts have issued the following statement:

"The county officials of Bartholomew county, Indiana, and ex-county officials of said county, whose conduct as such officials has been criticized by examiners from the state board of accounts, desire to make this statement: The examination was conducted by the examiners without any opportunity to be heard by the parties criticized, as to the charge made of illegal payments to the treasurers and to the auditors for services of secretary of the board of directors of gravel roads. The commissioners entered into a contract with the auditor for such services at an agreed salary, the county council made the appropriations to pay the same, the county commissioners made the allowance and the only ground for the examiners for reporting the allowance illegal is the opinion of a deputy attorney general. This has never been decided by any court. If, however, this allowance shall be determined illegal, or upon investigation if anything is due the county from any one of the officials or ex-officials, we stand ready to settle."

State Board Disappointed.

Members of the state board of agriculture, who have charge of conducting the state fair, are greatly disappointed over the failure of the state to redeem the $100,000 worth of coliseum bonds, which were not paid because of lack of funds.

It had been the purpose of the state board to go before the next general assembly and ask for an appropriation for an additional building for fine arts and machinery in time for the state fair next year, and it was believed by a majority of the board that such an appropriation could be obtained.

Articles of Incorporation.

Articles of incorporation have been filed in the office of the secretary of state for the following:

The Columbia Conserve company, Indianapolis; capital stock $25,000; to manufacture conserved food products; directors, Charles H. and William F. Hutchins, Norman and Miss Inor Page Hapgood.

The Newcastle Theater company, Newcastle; capital stock, $10,000; to conduct a theatrical business; directors, C. E. Harmon, Edward Arganbright and Dolph Dellinger.

Reiterate the Freeman Charges.

I. D. West and Will A. Marah, field examiners in the employ of the state board of accounts, whose finding of a specific charge of $112.22 against former secretary of the state board of forestry, W. H. Freeman, was criticised by Mr. Freeman as being incorrect, have filed an amendment to the original finding, in which they reiterated the charges made and submitted additional evidence in support of their charges. Mr. Freeman went over the amendment with the board of examiners, before it was made public but stood pat on the explanation he made at the time the first report was made public.

Mr. Freeman took exceptions to a charge of $10 reported in connection with the expenditure of $16,000 for land for the state forestry reserve in Clark county, and to a charge of $10.23 alleged discrepancy in the labor fund. The examiners reiterated their charges on both these items and submitted a complete copy of all items in the vouchers filed for the receipt of the money. The items set out by the examiners taken in connection with checks issued, account for only $157.900.

Freeman says the missing $100 can be accounted for in the cash expenditures, but the examiners found no record of its being accounted for. Freeman recently submitted a statement from Ramey R. Freeman, who handled the land deal for the state, in which it was attempted to show where the difference existed, but the examiners have declined to accept the statement for what it was intended, relying, they say in the second report on the statement made to them by Ramey Freeman, to the effect that he received no money except that paid by checks. The canceled checks, the examiners reported, do not account for the $100 which is alleged to be missing.

The examiners reported that on May 11, 1903, Freeman drew from the state treasury $16,000, and that on the same day he deposited in the First National bank at Jeffersonville $15,590. On May 12 he issued and cashed a check for $4,000, and on May 28 he deposited the amount less $50. On July 22 he issued and cashed a check for $500, and deposited the amount again on July 25. In these transactions he overdrew the account 26 cents.

Egg Dealers to Form Organization.

Under the direction of the agricultural department of Purdue university a meeting of all the egg buyers of the state will be held at Indianapolis this month. The purpose of the meeting will be to effect the organization of an Indiana Car Lot Shippers' association and to work for a new pure food law relating to the sale of eggs. The main feature of the proposed law will be that no egg which has not been candled shall reach the consumer.

At present there is no organization in the state of this nature, and while all shippers are agreed on the benefits of buying eggs on a loss-off basis (the farmer bearing the loss of all bad eggs) they hesitate to adopt that policy for fear they may be unable to obtain a sufficient supply.

There is an organization of Indiana and western Ohio dealers, of which J. A. Long of Union City is president. There are about one hundred members in this body, and it will meet here with about fifty independent dealers. If the meeting proves successful, the Ohio part of the association will be dropped and a strong Indiana organization formed. A. G. Phillips, associate in charge of poultry husbandry at Purdue, has sent out letters to shippers, most of whom are enthusiastic over the proposed change, provided it is adopted by all their competitors.

The first steps proposed by the Purdue faculty will involve a campaign among the farmers. They will be shown the proper methods of caring for their eggs and nests and an effort will be made to stop the habit of holding back the supply for higher prices. Copies of Bulletin 140, of the government department of agriculture, will be distributed. This bulletin deals with several "don'ts" in the method of keeping eggs.

Conference of M. E. Women.

The twenty-third annual meeting of the Women's Missionary society of the Indiana conference of the M. E. church closed. Over one hundred delegates were present at the sessions. An illustrated lecture on missionary topics was given by Mrs. F. M. Cope of Kansas, and the remainder of the time was taken up with the reports of the different secretaries and transacting the business of the society.

Reports were made by the different department secretaries as follows: Supply, Mrs. James Garrard of Vincennes; training school, Mrs. C. Behymer, Indianapolis; young people, Miss Lee Stevenson, Irvington; field, Mrs. C. R. Jones, Indianapolis; mite box, Mrs. J. U. Park, Indianapolis, and literature, Miss Lizzie Lathrop, Greensburg.

Fewer Inmates Shown.

Figures compiled by Amos W. Butler, secretary of the board of state charities, concerning the population of the state penal and correctional institutes, September 30, the last day of the fiscal year, show that the total population of all the institutions was two hundred less than the total on the corresponding day of the preceding year. All the institutions shared in the decrease except the girls' school, which had four more inmates than on the same day of last year.

A Condition, Not a Theory.

A sociologist, in conversation with a practical person from the middle west concerning the labor problem in her part of the country thereby learned the lesson of the situation.

"Are there many men out of work?" he asked.

The lady admitted that there were quite a number.

"What," said he then, "do the unemployed do?"

"Nothing," said the lady. "That's the trouble."—Youth's Companion.

City Editor—'Bout your size. That's lucky. I want you to report a big society wedding in an hour. Rush around to the morgue and ask the keeper to lend you that dress suit.

STOPPED SHORT

Taking Tonics, and Built Up on Right Food.

The mistake is frequently made of trying to build up a worn-out nervous system on so-called tonics—drugs.

New material from which to rebuild wasted nerve cells is what should be supplied, and this can be obtained only from proper food.

"Two years ago I found myself on the verge of a complete nervous collapse, due to overwork and study, and to illness in the family," writes a Wisconsin young mother.

"My friends became alarmed because I grew pale and thin and could not sleep nights. I took various tonics prescribed by physicians, but their effects were off shortly after I stopped taking them. My food did not seem to nourish me and I gained no flesh nor blood.

"Reading of Grape-Nuts, I determined to stop the tonics and see what a change of diet would do. I ate Grape-Nuts four times a day, with cream and drank milk also, went to bed early after eating a dish of Grape-Nuts.

"In about two weeks I was sleeping soundly. In a short time gained 20 pounds in weight and felt like a different woman. My little daughter whom I was obliged to keep out of school last spring on account of chronic catarrh has changed from a thin, pale, nervous child to a rosy, healthy girl and has gone back to school this fall.

"Grape-Nuts and fresh air were the only agents used to accomplish the happy results."

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. AUGUSTE VESPERMANN, De Forest, Wisconsin.

De Forest, Wis.—"After an operation four years ago I had pains downward in both sides, backache, and a weakness. The doctor wanted me to have another operation. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am entirely cured of my troubles."—

Another Operation Avoided.

New Orleans, La.—"For years I suffered from severe female troubles. Finally I was confined to my bed and the doctor said an operation was necessary. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial first, and was saved from an operation."—Mrs. LILY PEYROUX, 1111 Kerlerec St., New Orleans, La.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

He Was a Boston Boy.

"Your little boy must be very intelligent," said a visitor to a Boston school teacher whose five-year-old son was forming Greek words with building blocks.

"Intelligent!" exclaimed the proud parent. "He is phenomenally gifted. As an example of his early erudition, what do you suppose were the first words he ever spoke?"

"'Papa' and 'mamma?'"

"Stuff and nonsense!" ejaculated the father, in a tone of disgust. "Why, the day he was 12 months old he suddenly laid down his algebra and said to me: 'Father, the longer I live the more indubitable proofs I perceive that there is in Boston as much culture to the square inch as there ever was in the ambient area of ancient Athens!'"

The Test of Time.

Benjamin Hapgood Burt and U. S. Epperson of Kansas City were motoring in Long Island the other day and stopped at Evan's hotel in Douglaston. They ordered large quantities of raw oysters, some of which were thrown aside by the oyster opener.

"How do you determine when an oyster is bad?" asked Epperson.

"You wait a short time and if you have ptomaine poisoning the oysters were bad," said Mr. Burt. "If you are not ill they were good. That's the only safe way to tell good oysters from bad ones."

The worst deadbeat is he who refuses to pay a debt of gratitude.

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular and indolent young bachelor of London, receives news that he has been made heir to the estate of his Aunt Georgiana, with an income of $30,000 a year, on condition that he becomes engaged to be married within ten days. Failing to do so the legacy will go to a third cousin in America. The story opens at Castle Wyckoff, where Lord Vincent and his wife, friends of Terhune, are discussing plans to find him a wife within the prescribed time. It seems that Lady Vincent is one of seven persons named Agatha, all close girlhood chums. She decides to invite two of them to the castle and have Archie there as one of the guests. Agatha Sixth strikes Archie as a handpainted beauty. Agatha First is a breezy American girl. Lady Vincent tells her husband that Agatha Sixth already cares for Archie. He gains from Agatha Sixth the admission that she cares for him, but will require a month's time fully to make up her mind. Agatha First, neglected by Terhune, receives attentions from Leslie Freer. Four days of the precious time have passed when Terhune is called to London on business. Agatha First, on the plea of sickness, excuses herself from a motor trip planned by the Vincents. Later they see Agatha First picking flowers with a strange man. The Vincents discuss Agatha's seeming duplicity. The following day the party visits the ruins of an old convent. Terhune continues his attentions to Agatha Sixth.

CHAPTER VII.—Continued.

Freer had returned from his visit to the ruins and was endeavoring to interest the rest of us, Arch and Agatha Sixth and Dearest and myself in a dissertation upon rose-windows, when Agatha First interrupted us by running up and exclaiming: "Do come and see the waterfall. Pederson says there's a beauty over there in those woods!" She had been down to the road with something or other from the spread, where the automobile and the chauffeur awaited our return.

"A waterfall!" said Archibald. "Dear me! How jolly! Let's go and see it!"

"Come on, then!" cried Agatha First, pausing and looking at him expectantly. He rose obediently, but before he could more than utter the words "Delighted; I'm sure!" Agatha Sixth had risen also, and was now confronting him, as she coldly and haughtily reminded him that he had promised to go and look for wild flowers with her. It was putting the old boy in an awkward position, I admit, but that's no excuse for his subsequent behavior. A tactful speech would have saved the day, but that something perverse about him, which he has in common with most men, made him want most at that moment the girl who wanted him least. And that girl was certainly Agatha First, for without waiting to see whether he came or not, she had run off by herself, all eagerness to see the waterfall.

Without considering the rashness of such a speech, Archibald replied to Agatha Sixth's rebuke by remarking casually: "So I did promise to go and look for wild flowers, but I didn't know about the waterfall then; wouldn't you rather come and see that first?" We shuddered to hear him, Dearest and I. It was pretty bad, you know. Yet, as I say I thought I understood just how he came to say the fatal words—just what spirit prompted him. But Dearest thinks not. She says that he's far too calculating—far too much on the lookout for his own interests to run the risk of losing Agatha Sixth deliberately. She thinks he was only embarrassed. But we both thought that the most peculiar thing about the whole affair was the fact that Agatha First, having left the group immediately her unfortunate invitation was given, must have been quite ignorant of the trouble it had caused. She seemed, indeed, the whole time to be absolutely oblivious to the situation in regard to Agatha Sixth and Terhune. And this was the more extraordinary because any one else, any impartial observer with his eyes open, must, it seemed, have been aware of an affair of some kind or other between the two. But Miss Endicott, it appeared, walked with her eyes shut, like a person in a dream, her thoughts upon some other world or scheme of things removed from ours.

As matters stood, however, the result of the waterfall proposition and Terhune's mismanagement of the crisis it brought about, was a flat refusal on the part of Agatha Sixth to accompany him anywhere, and his frightened and tardy pursuit of Agatha First, who was beckoning him to follow from the edge of the woods. By Jove, it made me feel ashamed to go after him and tell him what I thought of him then and there. Miss Lawrence looked so forlorn and wretched as she watched them disappear into the woods together.

"The beast!" I began, "he ought to be—" But Dearest interrupted me, and I realized it was because the young lady was still standing within earshot. "Don't, Wilfred!" she said, "Agatha doesn't mind a bit—do you, dear?" And she smiled confidently and encouragingly into the other woman's face. It was the required tonic evidently, for Miss Agatha Lawrence—sometimes called Agatha Sixth—at once controlled her quivering lip with a display of self-command upon which I inwardly complimented her. It's a trait of the American girl, I think, that fine self-control, and something that I admire greatly in my wife.

"Of course not," she replied steadily, and turning upon the bewildered Freer, who was standing by, with the sweetest possible smile, asked him if he would mind hunting wild flowers with her. The invitation, I need not say, was accepted with servile gratitude by that undiscriminating and impressionable young man. Like the little dog under the table, Freer was never too proud to partake of the crumbs.

My wife and I left alone, she broke at once into lamentation. Her plans were all going astray, she declared. Match-making was perfectly horrid and she would never, no, never, undertake it again. As for Archibald, she gave him up. She couldn't understand it, at all. Why couldn't he make up his mind which girl he wanted and stick to it? A man who only had ten days in which to choose a wife had no business to go on as he did. Why, she'd never get him married, and he'd lose his fortune! But that wasn't the most important point to be considered by any means. What bothered her most was that poor Agatha Lawrence had fallen in love with the marplot, and so far as she could see—and this in spite of her best efforts—the poor girl was destined to lose him after all! O, it was really too bad. Terhune was too, too trying! I must really speak to him and find out what he meant by playing fast and loose like that! I give you my word I've seldom heard her go on so about anything. She really felt distressed by the unaccountable and rather mysterious color our matrimonial project had assumed, and was much concerned for Agatha Sixth's happiness. The other Agatha we did not seem to be as interested in somehow, as she had neither a husband or a fortune at stake with which to enlist our special sympathies.

"Here You've Gone and Asked Us to Help You."

"After all, Wilfred," she said, heaving a deep sigh, "the course of true love never did run smooth!"

"Nor yet the course of true match-making!" I answered and we strolled down the side of the little hill where the picnic had been to go and look for wild flowers ourselves.

CHAPTER VIII.

It was on the return trip to the castle that I found an opportunity to talk confidentially with Terhune. He and I were walking home, as seven was rather a crowd in the machine and we wanted the exercise.

"What in thunder do you mean by it?" I demanded when I had finished setting his erratic and inconsiderate conduct before him in its true light—excepting, of course, the details of the incident of the automobile in the wood, and our later discovery of the checked coat in his closet. All reference to this little episode and the suspicions of Dearest and myself in regard to his connection with it, I had felt obliged to omit. We had decided not to mention the subject to him as we had after all only circumstantial evidence upon which to base our belief that Terhune had been Agatha First's companion that day. For, after all, the checked coat we found in his closet might only have resembled the one I saw in the car, and he might easily have owned one of the kind without our ever having seen it. Our friendship with Arch was too dearly prized by us to risk falsely accusing him. And then I couldn't help feeling that after all I had rather surprised them when I had come upon them in the woods, and in seeing what I was not meant to have seen, had rather played the spy, however inadvertently it might have been done. And I did not relish making use of information so obtained. It was better, much fairer to Arch, we decided, to act simply as if my discovery had never been.

"Here you've gone and asked us to help you," I went on, "in the matter of getting a fortune, not to mention a wife, and when it's made as plain as it could well be that Agatha Sixth is the girl for you and you admit frankly ing her yourself, why, then, what do you do?" I stopped and faced him. We were crossing Hartsmere common and the castle was already in sight, and his eyes fell before my just indignation. He didn't seem anxious to tell me, so I set to and told him myself. "Why, you go and spoil it all by flirting with Agatha First, now don't you!"

"Spoil it all?" he asked, without looking up. "Yes," I affirmed impatiently, "that's just what you're doing. I should think you could see you're jeopardizing your chances with Agatha Sixth every time you so much as glance at Agatha First, and really, when you consider that you've asked the girl to marry you and are supposed to be awaiting her answer with all a lover's impatience, it doesn't look well. It doesn't really! What do you want to do it for, anyway?" I paused in my tirade, but he made no motion to answer. "Why, it's plain loony of you!" I exploded in my irritation. "For a man in your position, it's positively suicidal to fool the way you're doing. I shouldn't wonder at all if Miss Lawrence refused you eventually, and then the game would be up indeed!"

"What game?" said Arch, if you please, just as if he didn't know what I was talking about.

"Why, your aunt's property in Australia," I bellowed in his ear. "You can't inherit it if Agatha Sixth won't marry you, can you?"

"Can't I?" he said simply, as if it didn't matter at all, and I nearly lost my patience.

"How could you?" I returned. "The time's up in two days; is it likely you could get anyone else to marry you in that length of time?"

He looked up. "I shouldn't care to marry anyone else," he said. "I happen to care about her," and his expression was so earnest and sincere I had to believe him.

"Well, then, for heaven's sake, make a little more effort to convince her that you care!" I advised, but more gently, and we walked on in silence. I broke it first, as he didn't seem inclined to talk. "Honest, old man," I said, "I wish you'd tell a fellow what you're up to! I hate to see you making a mess of this thing, for no good reason. If you didn't like Miss Lawrence it would be different. But you're self-confessed as to that, and it's especially hard to bear when Dearest and I have been doing our very best to help you. Tell me what it's all about, can't you? Why will you persist in running after Agatha Endicott just at this critical stage of the game?"

"My dear fellow," he replied, "I'd tell you everything in a minute if there were anything to tell. But there isn't, not a blooming blessed thing; I deny your last statement, however. I can do that much for you. I am not running after Miss Endicott, not the least bit in the world. I give you my word I'm not!"

For a moment I felt a curious sense of positions reversed, as if some time not long ago I had been the one to speak so to Terhune, and he to lecture me. He is older than I and has always been the one to look after me, not I after him. And this feeling almost impelled me to drop my inquisitorial tone. But I thought of the automobile in the woods and the scene I had stumbled upon and grew firm. Really it was too much. I couldn't let him string me like that!

"I don't know what you call it," I retorted indignantly, "but whether you think so or not, you're with Agatha First all the time lately. Why can't you let her alone and 'tend strictly to business?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Chinese Wedding.

A Chinese marriage is all ceremony—no talk, no levity, and much crying. The solemnity of a funeral prevails. After the exchange of presents the bride is dressed with much care. A feast is spread upon a table, to which the blushing bride is led by five of her best female friends. They are seated at the table, but no one eats. The utmost silence prevails, when finally the mother leads off in a cry, the maids follow and the bride echoes in the chorus. Then all the bridesmaids leave the table, and the disconsolate mother takes a seat beside the chair of state, where the bride sits. The bridegroom now enters, with four of his best men. The men pick up the throne on which the bride sits and, preceded by the bridegroom, form in procession and walk around the room or into an adjoining parlor, signifying that he is carrying her away to his own home. The guests then throw rice at the happy couple.

A Fat Reducer.

Before starting to starve or drug off your extra layers of fat try the effect of this simple exercise, which is a great reducer of adipose tissue.

Standing with knees close together, rise on the tips of the toes, and, at the same time, elevate the chest and force down the palms of the hands as if pushing hard on a board. Bend the hands up slightly so the muscular strain comes on the fleshy part of the hand close to the wrist.

Do this whenever you happen to think of it during the day, and you will soon notice a decided difference in your flesh, particularly in a prominent abdomen.

The Important Personage.

"Are you the owner of this place?" asked the book agent.

"I am," replied Farmer Cornstossel. "Anything I can do for you?"

"No. The chances are that you are too hard-worked to have time to read anything, and that you haven't any spare change anyhow. Let me talk to the hired man."

Strong Preaching.

The minister's eight-year-old daughter was returning with her parents from church, where the district superintendent had that morning occupied the pulpit.

"Oh, father," asked the little girl, her face alive with enthusiasm, "don't you think Brother C. is a very strong preacher? I do."

"Gratified by this evidence of unusual intelligence on the part of his offspring, the minister eagerly inquired into her reasons for her statement.

"Oh," replied the little miss, artlessly, "didn't you see how the dust rose when he stamped his feet?"—Judge.

you do not have to work close to the stove, which is usually far from the window. You can work where you wish, and be warm. You can work on dull winter days in the full light near the window, without being chilled to the bone.

The Perfection Oil Heater quickly gives heat, and with one filling of the font burns steadily for nine hours, without smoke or smell. An indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font. The filler cap, put in like a cork in a bottle, is attached by a chain. This heater has a cool handle and a damper top.

The Perfection Oil Heater has an automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back, so the wick can be quickly cleaned. The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged and can be unscrewed in an instant for rewicking. The Perfection Oil Heater is finished in japan or nickel, is strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

An Expensive Nuisance

are the detestable chicken lice. There is a National formula now which you can get at your local drug store that has proven a boom to poultry keepers, its explosive qualities prevent it from being put on the market in a general way. It is in a heavy liquid form and to use it you remove all the chickens from the coop in the morning, clean the roosts, and then paint them with the liquid, also the sides and posts want to be sprayed or painted; then close up coop tight, the fumes does the work; by afternoon open the doors so it can air out, there will be enough left on the perches to thoroughly fumigate the fowls. Care should be taken to not have it too strong so as to hurt the fowls. Mr. Dunkle has this formula and can give you information about it.

Plant a Tree

Many years ago it was a custom when a child was born to commemorate the event by planting a tree. Today there are many trees sacredly guarded because they were planted by or for some one whose memory it was desired to perpetuate. Every reader of this article no doubt recalls one or more trees with which are associated pleasant recollections. It may be the one in the yard under which you were accustomed to play. It may be the one that sheltered you when overtaken by a storm on your way to and from school. It may be the one on the river bank under which you sat with fishing pole in hand. It may be the one under which you and your lover exchanged vows, or it may be made dear to you by any one of the many incidents of life. When your child is grown, give it an opportunity to possess a living tree which it can call its own. Mary's and John's trees will always be cared for with tender hands, and when their namesake has forsaken the old homestead, there will always be a yearning to see "my tree" again.

Does Not Stimulate

Ayer's Sarsaparilla does not stimulate. It does not make you feel better one day, then as bad as ever the next. It is not a strong drink. No reaction after you stop using it. There is not a drop of alcohol in it. You have the steady, even gain that comes from a strong tonic and alterative. We wish you would ask your doctor about this. He knows. Trust him. Do as he says. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

What are Ayer's Pills? Liver Pills. How long have they been sold? Nearly sixty years. Do doctors recommend them? Ask your own doctor and find out.

He is a Plunger

Is the word passed around when it was learned that W. B. Holden of Butler had bought over Two Thousand Dollars worth of merchandise in addition to the tremendous stock on hand. Some of the older and more conservative merchants predicted failure for this young hustler, and the corporation of which he is the head. It now developes that Mr. Holden has a clear mind and level head, for the big quantity of merchandise was bought at prices which enabled him to sell goods at prices way below the market value. Mr Holden has advertised a big sale and their Store is constantly crowded with people eager to take advantage of the wonderful bargains offered. Their ad in this issue is a reproduction of the first page of a big four page circular which they have passed out.

The Sol Barney store underwent some repairs last week which adds greatly to its appearance. The grocery department was moved into the main room and shelving placed across the north end of the room, making less space for them to heat and making it more convenient in many ways.

A ticket on Dolly's Favorite Range with every 25c purchase at Burwell's.

Frank Hart and his men moved the Wm. Leighty barn last Friday and Saturday from 4th street to the rear end of his lot on the east. Mr. Hart hustled the work and by Saturday night it was unloaded. It will give Mr. Leighty a much better view toward main street as well as adding to the appearance of the place.

J. B. Shilling had a thrilling experience last Friday with his team. He was carting baled hay at the elevators and just as they finished the load a passing train freightened the horses and they commenced to run. Mr Shilling was thrown from the wagon the horses going at break-neck speed until stopped by Chas Benjamin at the Wabash tracks one mile west of town. Nothing serious resulted.

If one drives an automobile very long they will have some peculiar experiences. Dr. Bowman and two sons Frank and Ray and Frank White made a drive near Hicksville Saturday and upon returning home their inner tube went up causing them to leave their machine. The doctor hired a farmer to haul him in while the rest of the party walked in. They discovered that they had nothing to remedy the fire and as it was quite chilly they concluded to leave the machine. That all goes in with automobiling.

Prof. Geo. Leland made a business trip to Hicksville, Saturday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Mell Herrick, spent Sunday with the latter's brother, Mr. Curtis Hilkey and family of Auburn.

Mrs. Frank Sechler and daughter, Agnes, spent Saturday and Sunday with Marion Smith and family of Auburn.

Frank Ulm of Ft. Wayne, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ulm of Butler, visited over Sunday with their parents at this place.

F. H. Bishop, of Garrett, was in town Monday.

Mrs. Wm. Curtis was a Ft. Wayne shopper Friday.

Mrs. J. D. Leighty, Mrs. E. C. Coy and Mrs. F. B. Leighty spent Thursday in Ft. Wayne.

A ticket on Dolly's Favorite Range with each 25c purchase at Burwell's.

Abner Copp, wife and daughter, Miss Flossie, and Miss Grace Leighty were at Hicksville, Friday afternoon.

Dale Widney can also relate some experience with the auto. Sunday afternoon he started to take Miss Inez Rhoads to her home east of Spencerville. When he had reached the grade south of the Chris Curtis home he went to go around a mud hole and giving it a quick turn out of the road the rear of the machine began to slide until it became unmanageable and it made a dart for a telephone pole, throwing out Miss Rhoads but not injuring her. The machine was broken up considerable and the telephone pole is also considerably damaged. It was a lucky accident for the occupants.

Clean-Up Sale of Ladies Coats.

We have decided to discontinue handling Ladies' and Misses' Coats and give our entire attention to enlarging and promoting sales in other departments. We still have some very good selections and will make

Low Prices to Move Them Quickly.

This special sale will begin FRIDAY morning and continue until every coat in our stock is sold at some price. This is your last opportunity to get a winter coat at a big saving.

Twenty-Five Ladies' Coats to Close Out

These are all good values embodying some of the season's most wanted styles, made from all-wool, kerseys and broadcloths. The tailor made effects and trimmings of these coats are particularly pleasing to those who are looking for a coat in which the style, fit and workmanship are beyond criticism. Were it not that we desired to move these coats quickly we would not think of offering them at such low prices. Some of them, made of broadcloth lined and faced with yarn-dyed satin, usually retail as high as $25. Our low prices should interest you

$3.75, $5.50, $6.75 and $9.50.

15 Bargains in Misses Coats

And everyone a good one. Many of them are worth twice what we are asking for them during this Clean-Up Sale. These coats simply must go regardless of the price, and the earliest buyer will get the choicest bargain. Misses Coats made of novelty striped cloaking, some in military style with jewel buttons and velvet trimming. The tailoring is substantial, the material durable. Coats any Miss would be proud to wear and all priced during this sale at $3.50 and $5.00

SARTORIAL SNOBBERY.

That elusive individual to whom the New York tailors owe a large debt of gratitude—which may be more than balanced by the amount he owes the tailors—has tendered the public another profound statement. He says that a man "who doesn't go out much" can dress decently on $5,000 a year, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Observe the subtle malguity of that qualifying phrase. The man who goes out much, the fellow who romps through routs and dinners and teas and al fresco twaddlefests, must pay his tailor—no matter what he does for the piper. While the poor chappie who is hampered by a measly $5,000 will cut his pleasures carefully according to his cloth, being so closely menaced by that deadly line of decency. Just now this distinction will be regarded by the possessor of two coat hangers, with only one in active use, can easily be imagined. He will smile at the ukase and snap his fingers at a code of decency that is based on 20 coats and countless trousers. Nevertheless, if you are ambitious to be of the patricians you must do as the patricians do—provided your income exceeds the paltry $5,000—and it will be an exhibition of extremely bad form if you regard this sartorial declaration of the man who knows in any other save the most serious light.

There is beginning to be comment on the growing respectability of trade in Germany. Time was when a man of title was believed to soil his hands by making money. The tradition can hardly be insisted on, however, when the kaiser himself has a business interest in the manufacture of terra cotta. From the old American standpoint it is much more honorable to get money in trade or industry than to acquire it by marriage; but it may be a long time before European aristocracy of any description sees the mercenary marriage problem in its true light.

Within the next three years the Malay states will export $50,000,000 worth of rubber. This goes far toward putting the rubber plant on a plane with the ice plant as a source of revenue.

A man in Massachusetts turning to look after a hobble skirt fell and broke his leg. He would not be a true son of Adam if he does not put all the blame on the hobble skirt.

A Paris dentist who tinkered with the teeth of the royalty of Europe at about $500 a tinker, has just died, leaving an estate worth only a little over a million.

A New Jersey pastor says that women who wear hobble skirts should be spanked. True, but in that skirt there's no chance of getting them in the proper position for spanking.

When people discover that it is cheaper to buy at home than to smuggle from abroad, smuggling will cease. The pocket nerve is a powerful moral agent.

Another man in the big woods has been shot, being mistaken for a deer in order to be reasonably safe the hunter might disguise himself as game.

There is a school in Dubuque which is trying to teach boys to love farm work. One course should be on the abolition of the corn-husk mattress.

A Pittsburg man has received a legacy of $850,000 because he didn't marry. Not being married we can't see that he needs the money.

A Washington man dropped dead while using his lawn mower, and we presume his neighbors rolled over and enjoyed a little morning sleep.

BLOWS UP WARSHIP

AVIATOR HURLS BOMBS AT VESSEL AND SOON WRECKS IT.

WAR EXPERTS ON THE SCENE

Thrilling Demonstration Is Given at Baltimore of What May Be Expected From Air Craft in Time of War.

Baltimore, Md.—An aviator dropped bombs upon the deck of a battleship, as he circled in the air far above it and blew the water craft almost to pieces.

One bomb went down the aft funnel exploding in the boiler-room and completely wrecking the machinery of the ship, beside ripping a hole in the bottom. Another bomb struck the deck near the forward turret and dismantled two 12-inch guns and killed every man in their crew. A third landed near the conning tower and put the ship's steering gear out of commission.

All this happened "constructively" and at the aviation meet where a thrilling demonstration of what airships may be expected to do in time of war was given by several of the aviators.

Latham was the most successful, scoring several hits on the "battleship," which was outlined on the grass. He fired six shots in all and scored 15 points.

Drexel in his Bleriot followed Latham in the bomb-throwing contest. His first shot hit the deck. He was flying fast. Drexel's second shot was a fine hit. His sixth bomb struck the deck. His official score was given as 6. He made no bull's eyes.

What the crew of the battleship could have done to the aviator while he hovered 200 feet above them was not demonstrated.

DEITZ GIVES $40,000 BAIL.

He Is Released But Rearrested on Charge of Attempting to Shoot Man in 1904.

Hayward, Wis.—Attorneys Zabel and Schults, head of the Deitz defense committee, arrived here Monday from Eau Claire, where they received Judge Wickham's approval of the bonds of $40,000.

The bond was approved and recorded after which procedure Deitz was notified that for a time at least he was again a free man. His wife and Clarence were overjoyed and quickly bringing his overcoat, Clarence assisted his father to put it on and stepped out on the porch of the jail. However, his period of freedom was very short. Barely had the overcoat been placed on him, when Sheriff Madden read a warrant to him for the alleged attempted shooting of Patrick McGin on May 8, 1904, and once more the famous Cameron Dam defendant was placed behind the bars.

BLAST IN MINE KILLS FIVE

Eighteen Are Hurt in Explosion at Panama (Ill.) Colliery—Fifty Workers Are Rescued.

Hillsboro, Ill.—Five miners were killed and 18 were injured in an explosion in the Shoal Creek Coal company's mine at Panama, a mining town in the southern part of Montgomery county Friday.

Fifty men who were working in the section of the mine in which the explosion occurred were rescued, according to the mine managers. Altogether, 350 men were underground at the time, but 300 of them were in no danger.

The cause of the explosion is not known. The dead and injured were burned by the flames of the explosion. The mine was not set on fire.

G. A. Murray, chief clerk in the mine offices, denied the report that 50 men still were in the mine. Owing to the mutilation of the bodies, the dead have not been identified.

LORD MAYOR IS INSTALLED

SIR VESEY STRONG TAKES OATH IN LONDON.

Civic Pageant Through City Streets Includes Presentation of Four Scenes From Shakespeare.

London. — The first prohibition mayor of London was installed in office when Sir Vesey Strong took the oath of office amidst much ceremony and pomp.

The procession from the Guild hall through the streets of the city to the law courts, where the oath was administered and thence back to the mansion house, was devoted to the representation of four scenes from Shakespeare connected with independent incidents in the history of the city of London.

Episodes pictured were: First, the return of Henry V. and his army after the battle of Agincourt; second, Sir John Falstaff and his companions leaving the Boar's Head, East Cheap; third, Richard, duke of Gloucester, conducting King Edward V. and the young duke of York to the tower; fourth, King Henry VIII. and Cardinal Wolsey going to the papal inquiry concerning Queen Katherine at Blackfriars.

EXPLOSION SEALS 60 MINERS

Force of Blast Felt Four Miles Away —Rescue Parties Are Rushed to Scene.

Trinidad, Col.—Sixty or more miners were entombed and may be dead as a result of an explosion Tuesday in Mine No. 3 of the Victor American Fuel company at Delagua, 30 miles northeast of Trinidad. Three men were killed at the mine's mouth.

Fifty of the men in the wrecked mine are reported to have escaped through entry No. 2. Two of the men who were in the mine at the time of the accident have been taken out. They were unable to tell anything that would lead to the belief that their comrades are still alive.

The force of the explosion was felt at Hastings, four miles down the canyon, and the news of the disaster spread rapidly. Rescue car of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company was manned with a force of 75 trained rescuers and taken by special engine to the scene.

W. S. Getchel, general manager of the Colorado division, was at Gray Creek when notified of the disaster and left at once in an automobile and is in personal charge of the rescue work. The mouth of the main slope is badly caved and rescuers are directing their efforts to reaching the entombed men through the rear of No. 3 mine.

New York. — A huge galvanized tank, containing 40,000 barrels of kerosene exploded and ripped itself to pieces like a gigantic firecracker in the yards of the Tidewater Oil company at Bayonne, N. J. The explosion was felt in this city. Staten Island, from Mariner's Harbor to Tottenville, trembled for a full minute. One man is known to be dead.

CHINESE MOB BURNS CHURCH

Gentry Foils Rioters in Attempt to Slay Presbyterian Missionaries Who Flee.

Hongkong.—Mail advices from Linchou, in Kwang-Su province, report that rioters have burned and demolished numerous buildings there, including the American Presbyterian church, hospital and college, and proceeded to Tsoi Yuen Po, intending to slay the missionaries. The gentry, however, assisted the latter to escape in boats to Canton.

Three battalions have left Canton to quell the disturbances. The British gunboat Sandpiper is also proceeding thither. The mob was enraged at officials numbering their houses, believing this was an excuse to impose taxation.

Harding Will Quit Politics.

Columbus, O.—Warren G. Harding, defeated Republican candidate for governor, who for 12 years has been active in state politics, Thursday announced his retirement from politics. With his wife he will leave soon for a trip to the orient.

Gold Rush to Australia.

New York.—Glowing accounts reached this city Thursday of wonderful gold discoveries in the district of Yilgarn, West Australia. The rush to the fields continues unabated.

STONE U. S. CONSUL

MEXICAN MOB AT CIUDAD PORFIRIO DIAZ ATTACK AMERICANS' HOMES.

LYNCH INQUIRY IS BEGUN

Governor of Texas, at Request of Secretary Knox, Starts Probe Into the Execution of Rodriguez—Bull Fights Prohibited.

San Antonio, Tex.—A dispatch from Eagle Pass, Tex., says that rioting by Mexicans took place across the river at Ciudad Porfirio Diaz Friday. The residences of several Americans were stoned, including that of United States Consul Luther Ellsworth. No one was injured.

Washington.—Complying with a request made by Secretary of State Knox, an inquiry was begun Friday by Governor Campbell of Texas into the lynching of Antonio Rodriguez at Rock Springs November 3.

Word to this effect was received at the state department, and until the result of the inquiry is learned definite reply will not be given to the request of the Mexican government by Ambassador De La Barra that official explanation be made of the incident. It is believed here that the Mexican government will be content with this course and will do its utmost to prevent further hostile demonstrations against Americans.

Fifty-one men are in jail in Mexico City for acts of vandalism during the riots, according to information received by the state department from United States Ambassador Wilson. The ambassador says the streets are being patroled and he does not expect further acts of violence. The Mexican authorities have furnished ample protection for the American embassy.

Mexico City, Mex.—To guard against a possible repetition of the anti-American riots, the government Friday issued orders forbidding bull fights next Sunday. Quiet prevails in this city.

Special dispatches from Gaudalajara confirm reports of violence by a mob, actuated by the same unfriendliness toward Americans responsible for the demonstrations here. At Guadalajara a mob of students and others started for the American consulate, crying "Death to the 'gringos!'"

The police prevented the rioters from reaching the consulate building, but after listening to inflammatory speeches the crowd vented its wrath on American-owned property. It smashed the windows of the American bank, the Masonic hall and the quarters of the American Candy company, the American Drug company, the West End Realty company and the offices of two American dentists.

Many of the rioters were arrested, and American Consul McGill was assured by the authorities that precautions would be taken to protect the property of Americans.

Washington.—The relations between Mexico and the United States are dangerously strained by reason of the demands made on the United States by Mexico for reparation for the lynching of Rodriguez by American citizens and the demand made on the Mexican government by Ambassador Wilson, backed up by the state department for apology and reparation for the insult to the United States flag and damage to its citizens in the riots in the City of Mexico.

One of the matters to be inquired into, especially by Secretary Knox, is whether the Mexican government had any advance information looking to impending riots and whether it failed to take proper precautionary measures. It is alleged informally that the Mexican government had such information. The other view is that events subsequent to the rioting and especially the charging of the mob and killing of some of the rioters by the police will go far to make the matter easy of settlement by Mexico.

CONVICT STABS OFFICIALS

Son of Senator Gallinger Is One of Victims—Deputy Warden May Die.

Concorn, N. H.—Armed with a knife which he had wrested from a "trusty," John Doe, a life convict in the state prison here, Friday attacked two prison officials, wounding one probably fatally and the other slightly.

The victims are Deputy Warden Frank R. Bailey, whose condition is critical, and Dr. Ralph H. Gallinger, prison physician and son of Senator Jacob H. Gallinger.

After wounding the two men Doe attempted to fight his way to liberty, but was overpowered by guards and trusties and locked in a solitary cell.

Blow to Women in Arizona.

Phoenix, Ariz.—Woman's suffrage received a blow when the constitutional convention Friday defeated the Connelly proposition to submit the question to a referendum vote.

Second Posse After Outlaw.

Lexington, Ky.—Jake Noble, who has intrenched himself in the mountains to resist arrest for murder, will have a still larger army to face, a second posse of fearless men started Friday to get him, dead or alive.

RENEW WAR ON HOUSE RULES

MANY SUPPORT MOVE TO CURB SPEAKER'S POWER.

Harmony Is In Peril If Senior Members of Committees Do Not Get Chairmanships.

Washington.—It is anticipated that when the house of representatives meets next month that the question of taking away the speaker's power to appoint the committees will be taken up and the matter fought to a finish.

This time it is not unlikely that the movement will receive the support of Speaker Cannon and his allies, inasmuch as the next assignments will be made by the Democrats.

Interviews with Representatives Murdock of Kansas and Norris of Nebraska indicate that they intend to lose no time in reopening the fight waged by insurgent Republicans last session which reformed the rules and deposed Speaker Cannon.

Some members of the house believe that if the power to appoint committees is taken away from the Democratic speaker and handed over to the house membership all hope of harmony in the Democratic ranks may be abandoned.

On the other hand it is pointed out that harmony also would suffer from a maintenance of the seniority rule, as that rule would give to the south the chairmanships of all of the great committees and leave unrecognized the new Democratic membership from northern and western states. Under the seniority rule the chairmanship of the committee on ways and means, the most important of all, would go to Underwood of Alabama, unless Champ Clark of Missouri, who is now the ranking minority leader, should fail to capture the speakership.

GIVES HIS LIFE FOR OTHERS

Engineer Turns Over His Oxygen Helmet That Mine Victims May Reach Surface.

Delagua, Col.—The bodies of 35 men were found Wednesday in the north entry of the Victor American Fuel company, where the explosion originated. They were brought out slowly over the debris, but not all were identified.

Willis Evans, engineer of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company at Primero, gave his life in the rescue of four miners taken out alive. He came to Delagua with the rescue car of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company.

The rescuers worked their way along the entry and heard the faint tapping of a pick on solid rock, the wireless call of the miner. They attacked the fallen mass of rock that blocked the entry with renewed hope. When they tore through the cave they found four Slav miners alive and unhurt. They were 2,600 feet from the surface, and the passages were filled with after damp. The rescuers feared to take the imprisoned men to the surface without helmets, and without a moment's hesitation Evans and one of the other rescuers took off their helmets and gave them to two of the rescued men and waited for the return of the rescue part.

When the rescuers returned Evans had disappeared. The rescue party supposed he had followed them out without a helmet and went out without searching for him. They discovered he had not reached the surface and another party was sent in after him.

SAYS COOK FAR FROM PEAK

New York.—Prof. Herschel Parker of Columbia university, who returned recently from an exploration trip to Mount McKinley, made public Thursday a series of photographs taken near the Alaskan mountains which he asserts are indisputable evidence that Dr. Frederick A. Cook, the Brooklyn traveler, never reached the top of the highest peak in America.

Professor Parker says that he found the mountain peak which Doctor Cook photographed and called Mount McKinley, "the top of the continent," and in support of his statement showed a photograph of a peak taken by his expedition last summer and pointed out that a comparison of the photographs shows in detail identical outlines of rock formation, proving that they are pictures of the same mountain.

"The mountain which I photographed," said Professor Parker, "was twenty miles from Mount McKinley and 15,000 feet below its summit. This is the same peak that Cook photographed and called the 'top of the continent.'"

Professor Parker corroborates the confession made a year ago by Edward Barrill, guide of Doctor Cook, that the latter's party never reached the top of Mount McKinley.

Breaks Bone Buttoning Collar.

Los Angeles, Cal.—While trying to button a collar on a button that was too large, Thomas Cawley, a boiler maker, exerted himself too violently Thursday and fractured his collar bone.

Held in $21,000 Swindle.

New Orleans.—Charles P. Converse, charged with swindling the First National bank of Dallas, Ore., out of $21,000 by means of worthless checks, was arrested in this city Friday.

ENCOURAGEMENT.

First Boy—Mother says if I go swimming she'll lick me when I get back.

Second Boy (encouragingly)—But perhaps you won't get back; there's been lots of fellows drowned in that swimming hole.

BABY WASTED TO SKELETON

"My little son, when about a year and a half old, began to have sores come out on his face. I had a physician treat him, but the sores grew worse. Then they began to come out on his arms, then on other parts of his body, and then one came on his chest, worse than the others. Then I called another physician. Still he grew worse. At the end of about a year and a half of suffering he grew so bad that I had to tie his hands in cloths at night to keep him from scratching the sores and tearing the flesh. He got to be a mere skeleton, and was hardly able to walk.

"My aunt advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I sent to a drug store and got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of the Ointment and followed directions. At the end of two months the sores were all well. He has never had any sores of any kind since. I can sincerely say that only for Cuticura my child would have died. I used only one cake of Cuticura Soap and about three boxes of Ointment.

"I am a nurse and my profession brings me into many different families and it is always a pleasure for me to tell my story and recommend Cuticura Remedies. Mrs. Egbert Sheldon, Litchfield, Conn., Oct. 23, 1909."

Looking After the Eggs.

Lady Betty, who is four years old and never misses a trick, was taken the other evening to a restaurant for her supper, and with all the importance and sprightly dignity of her years calmly ordered poached eggs on toast. While the little family group was awaiting its service the "kiddie" amused herself by looking out of the window, pressing against a screen to get a closer view of something below. She was warned by her mother that the screen might give way and let her fall to the sidewalk, perhaps injuring her terribly. She drew away, thought a minute, and then said naively: "Would I fall if the screen went out?" "You certainly would," was her mother's reply. "And would I get awful hurted?" "Very likely." "Then what would the man do with the eggs?"

Easy Marks.

"Talk erbout yore easy marks," said Uncle Silas Geehaw, who had been passing a week in the city, "us rubes ain't in it with them air teeve chaps."

"Did yew sell 'em enny gold bricks, Silas?" queried old Daddy Squashneck.

"Naw, I didn't," answered Uncle Silas, "but I seed a feller peddlin' artificial ice—led th' sign right on his wagon—an' blamed of th' chumps didn't buy it for the real thing, by grass!"

DRINK WATER TO CURE KIDNEYS AND RHEUMATISM

The People Do Not Drink Enough Water to Keep Healthy, Says Well-Known Authority.

"The numerous cases of kidney and bladder diseases and rheumatism are mainly due to the fact that the drinking of water, nature's greatest medicine, has been neglected.

Stop loading your system with medicines and cure-alls; but get on the water wagon. If you are really sick, why, of course, take the proper medicines—plain, common vegetable treatment, which will not shatter the nerves or ruin the stomach."

To cure Rheumatism you must make the kidneys do their work; they are the filters of the blood. They must be made to strain out of the blood the waste matter and acids that cause rheumatism; the urine must be neutralized so it will no longer be a source of irritation to the bladder, and, most of all, you must keep these acids from forming in the stomach. This is the cause of stomach trouble and poor digestion. For these conditions you can do no better than take the following prescription: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime, but don't forget the water. Drink plenty and often.

This valuable information and simple prescription should be posted up in each household and used at the first sign of an attack of rheumatism, backache or urinary trouble, no matter how slight.

SERIAL STORY

Archibald's Agatha

By EDITH HUNTINGTON MASON

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular and indolent young bachelor of London, receives news that he has been made heir to the estate of his Aunt Georgiana, with an income of $30,000 a year, on condition that he becomes engaged to be married within ten days. Failing to do so the legacy will go to a third cousin in America. The story opens at Castle Wyckoff, where Lord Vincent and his wife, friends of Terhune, are discussing plans to find him a wife within the prescribed time. It seems that Lady Vincent is one of seven persons named Agatha, all close girlhood chums. She decides to invite two of them to the castle and have Archie there as one of the guests. Agatha Sixth strikes Archie as a handpainted beauty. Agatha First is a breezy American girl. Lady Vincent tells her husband that Agatha Sixth already cares for Archie. He gains from Agatha Sixth the admission that she cares for him, but will require a month's time fully to make up her mind. Agatha First, neglected by Terhune, receives attentions from Leslie Freer. Four days of the precious time have passed when Terhune is called to London on business. Agatha First, on the plea of sickness, excuses herself from a motor trip planned by the Vincents. Later they see Agatha First picking flowers with a strange man. The Vincents discuss Agatha's seeming duplicity. The following day the party visits the ruins of an old convent. Terhune continues his attentions to Agatha Sixth. Then suddenly he transfers his attentions to Agatha First. Vincent scores him for his apparent fickleness.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

He glanced at me in a half embarrassed, half triumphant way, much as he used to do in the first Castle Wyckhoff house party days, when he was about to tell me of his latest clue in regard to the identity of the real Agatha.

"Well, to be quite frank with you," he said, "the truth of the matter is that Agatha First won't let me alone!"

"Meaning," I said, "that she's in love with you?"

"Well, of course," he replied, removing his eye-glass and polishing it desperately as is his custom when he pretends to be embarrassed, "I wouldn't like to say that exactly. I couldn't say positively, that is, but to a man of my experience in such matters and knowledge of the fair sex, the indications are—"

"O rot!" I interrupted, rudely, I fear, but really the old boy is quite too insufferably conceited to encourage. It's an old failing of his.

"What makes you think so?" I asked after a moment's consideration. Although I couldn't quite believe that Agatha First was actually in love with him, still I wanted to hear his reasons for the conclusion. I didn't want to believe it, that was certain. I thought we had trouble enough on our hands as it was, without having to reckon with a broken heart on the part of Miss Endicott. And as this contingency assumed an air of probability to my mind, I inwardly vowed again never to undertake another match-making project. Gad, no! Let people marry themselves hereafter without any interference from me. I had had all I wanted of the thing this time.

"What makes you think so?" I repeated.

Arch shrugged his shoulders. "Can't help it. She's after me the whole time! I suppose she can't help fancying a man of my—er—if I may so—my attractions. I daresay I'm a revelation to her in comparison with the American college youths she has probably been used to. Experience and intellect does count, you know, Wilfred. Besides, the results show—" But I cut him short again.

"The results show," I said sternly, "that you're just enough of a chump to heed her mania for amusing herself with you—for I can't think she is in earnest." I had to tell him that for his own good, though I could have wished I felt surer this was the fact. "Her fondness for flirting with you flatters you so much that you'd run the risk of losing the girl you care for, just for the sake of having that egregious vanity of yours pleasantly tickled, as her apparent fancy for your society undoubtedly tickles it! Your old failing again! 'Pon my word, old chap, I thought better of you! Better of your prudence and foresight! Why, I couldn't have had less of an eye out for my own interests myself in the days when you and I were contending suitors for the hand of one of the Agathas, and you insisted that it should be the heiress and no other, and bullied me so because I didn't take the same view! And the Lord knows you made enough fuss about that!"

But when I reported the result of my remonstrance to Dearest, she said I hadn't been half severe enough with him, and it was with difficulty that I persuaded her that speaking to him herself would only make matters worse and Terhune more obstinate.

CHAPTER IX.

It was the very last evening of the time that had been alloted Terhune in which to select a wife. The following day was to see Solicitor Barnes at luncheon with us at one o'clock precisely, Dearest having invited him in accordance with Mrs. James' request that he should be the referee present at the house when the last minute of Terhune's ten days of grace should expire, and his expected presence at the meal brought it home to us what a decisive one it must of necessity be. Decisive was indeed the right word to use in connection with that meal! For if old Arch was still free and unaffianced when he sat down to it, he might as well never have been nephew of his aunt as far as inheriting that aunt's property was concerned.

Dearest was inclined, being optimistic enough to hope for a consummation of his engagement to Agatha Sixth before that time—to make of the luncheon a sort of marriage-feast in honor of that event, and was already planning famous ices and cakes of a hymeneal nature. But Arch seemed not to view the approach of the crucial day with such a light heart. His thoughts at dinner that night were so absent, in fact, as to force one to conclude that the spectre of his aunt's third cousin seated upon the veranda of the house in Australia with possessive feet on the railing had become his familiar spirit.

It was this apparent anxiety of his and his feverish devotion to Agatha Sixth that utterly unprepared me for the unfortunate denouement later.

The evening had ended at last and Dearest and I had succeeded in starting a general move toward retiring for the night. We had been playing bridge—that is, the two Agathas had—with Terhune and the inevitable Freer, while my wife and I stood by and cut in now and then. We had observed with pleasure that the party of four had divided itself exactly as we would have arranged it ourselves; Terhune and Agatha Sixth were partners, as were Agatha First and Freer. Better still, Agatha Sixth seemed quite to have forgotten the unhappy episode of the waterfall, when Arch had so obviously missed his cue, and was openly basking in the return of her admirer's devotion. And Agatha First, too, seemed quite contented, not a whit disturbed by this attitude on my friend's part and mildly amused by the attempted gallantries of the rector's son from Wye. It was, in fact, a thoroughly happy little foursome, and as a spectator of its content I felt particularly pleased when I thought of what Arch had confided to me just before dinner. That he intended to obtain a definite, and what he seemed to consider, a favorable answer, from Agatha Sixth on the morrow.

We had all gone to bed, and the night was well advanced, when I was awakened from the rippingest kind of a sleep by the loudest kind of a bang you ever heard in your life. It came from the big drawing-room, which we did not often use, directly below my room, and woke me at once. It sounded for all the world as if some one or something had knocked over one of the endless number of statuettes, heavy vases or little tables that make a regular auction shop of the place, and I struggled into my bath robe in a minute to go and see what it was.

Dearest's room adjoined mine and I listened at the door to find out if she had been awakened, and hearing nothing from her, went on my way downstairs.

I didn't much believe it could be a burglar; I had a hazy notion that it might be one of the dogs who had gotten in there somehow. There are no end of the big brutes about the place and sometimes one gets into the house for the night in spite of Dearest. So I wasn't in the least alarmed or apprehensive, and was just about to lay my hand on the drawing-room folding doors, which were at the foot of the stairs, when I heard the lightest possible tread on the stairs behind me and a soft hand clutched my arm.

It was Dearest, of course. "O Freddy!" she gasped, "what is it?"

"One of the dogs, I expect," I told her. "What made you come?"

"Why," she said in an indignant little whisper, "I came after you, of course! Do you think I'd let you go all alone?"

"Why not?" I whispered. "I'm a man. Besides, there's nothing to be afraid of!"

"O, but there is!" she assured me. "It's burglars—I know it is! They've come to steal the Wyckhoff emeralds, I know they have!"

"Burglars nothing!" I answered. "It's one of the dogs, I say. Besides, if it were a burglar that's all the more reason why you should go back!"

"And leave you to be killed all alone? Never!"

Sometimes, I admit it with a sort of fond regret, my wife is unreasonable.

"It wouldn't help any if you were killed, too!" I told her. "Besides, you'll catch cold. It's chilly down here, and I want you to go back."

She caught the tone of authority in my voice, a tone I seldom use toward her, and fell to pleading with me.

"O Freddy, can't I stay?" she begged. "It's so exciting! See! I've brought you a pistol and here's an umbrella for me!" She came close up to me as she spoke and the gleam of starlight from the hall windows fell upon her supplicating face and the old blunderbuss she had taken down from some wall and carried in her right hand, and the other weapon of defense she had mentioned in the other.

I laughed, if one may be said to laugh in a whisper, and hugged her for her spirit, armament and all. Then we turned to the folding doors again. Beneath them and through the crack between a faint light showed.

"Making himself pretty much at home for a burglar to light the lamp," I remember thinking. And I slowly and cautiously widened the aforesaid crack until a space of some two or three inches wide was obtained, the doors rolling back softly on each side without any noise at all. Then we looked in, my wife making it possible for us to do this at one and the same time by kneeling on the floor at my side, and thus obtaining a chink to look through all to herself.

It was lucky she was so near the floor, I thought afterward, or she would certainly have fallen upon it with surprise when she beheld the thing our eyes asked of us to believe.

For there at the far end of the drawing room dimly distinguishable by the light of a lamp on the table, turned low, was Agatha First. We recognised her even in that light without fail, dressed as she had been that evening for dinner, and standing with his back toward us and his arm around her was a man in an attitude unmistakably lover-like and possessive. And through the hush of that late hour the low murmur of their absorbed voices penetrated the inmost recess of our staggered consciousness. Agatha First and a man meeting in secret at that hour!

What could it mean? Who could it be? The surprise of my discovery in the woods the day of our trip to Northbury was as nothing to this! But alas! We knew only too well this time who the man was, and without requiring any further proof such as we had had on the other occasion when we had waited until the discovery of the checked coat before we felt sure. In this instance we neither of us doubted for a moment the identity of Miss Endicott's companion in her equivocal position.

Freer had said good night and gone on down to the village at ten o'clock when the party had broken up. It could not be he. Then it must of necessity be Terhune. Indeed, what other man would have the opportunity for such a meeting? Who else was staying at the castle?

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Art Leads Language and Science.

The fact is that art is working far ahead of language as well as of science, realizing for us, by all manner of suggestions and exaggerations, effects for which as yet we have no name; nay, for which we may never perhaps have a direct name, for the reason that these effects do not enter very largely into the necessities of life. Hence alone is that suspicion of vagueness that often hangs about the purpose of a romance; it is clear enough to us in thought; but we are not used to consider anything clear until we are able to formulate it in words, and analytical language has not been sufficiently shaped to that end. . . . It is not that there is anything blurred or indefinite in the impression left with us, it is just because the impression is so very definite after its own kind, that we find it hard to fit it exactly with the expressions of our philosophical speech.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

A Sparkling Novelist.

A New York editor, at the Century club, told a story about Robert W. Chambers, the well-known young novelist.

"Chambers went one summer," he said, "to Sunapee with his brother. At the Ben Mere Inn the aristocratic old ladies in rocking chairs, seated on the cool piazza that overlooks the lake, were very much stirred up by Mr. Chambers' arrival. Whenever he appeared they gathered about him and talked books.

"Chambers was always ready for them. He had always on his lips some witty saying to double them up.

"'Oh, Mr. Chambers,' cried an old lady one day, 'I admire "Lorraine" so much! I've read it eight times!'

"'Madam,' answered Chambers, with a bow, 'I would rather hear you say you'd bought eight copies.'"

His Literal Answer.

In all policies of insurance these, among a host of other questions, occur: "Age of father, if living?" "Age of mother, living?" A man in the country who filled up an application made his father's age, "if living," one hundred and twelve years, and his mother's one hundred and two. The agent was amazed at this, and fancied he had secured an excellent customer; but, feeling somewhat dubious, he remarked that the applicant came of a very long-lived family. "Oh, you see, sir," replied he, "my parents died many years ago, but, if living, would be aged as there put down." "Exactly I understand," said the agent.

Sunless Hours.

Again the night is wild with rain;
Again, distracted, with the gale;
Upon the hills I hear a wail
Of lamentation and of pain.
As when, on some high burial place,
Moaning among the windy graves,
The Indian squaws lament the braves,
Who fell in battle for their race.

Another day of storm shall dawn
Within the east; and, darkly lit,
Its brows of stern abstraction knit,
Absorbed in moody thoughts pass on.
Bear not too hard, is all I ask,
Upon the hearts that toil and yearn!
O despotism of days that spurn
All gladness, with your frowning mask!

The Skeleton in His Closet

By STACY E. BAKER

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

The soul-racking tale poured into the ears of little Ethel Murray could result only in one thing—a missive promptly penned to the profligate Emery Jarvis, assuring him that she had learned all, and asking to be released from the engagement.

"I know of the skeleton in your closet, wrote Ethel (here she applied a dainty bit of cambric to streaming eyes ordinarily as sunshiny and blue as the sky of a June morning). "I am surprised at you! Had you come to me and told me all, I feel that I could have forgiven you—but never, now that I find the truth through other people. I return herewith your ring."

The rest of the letter was a rambling plaint, save on one subject—the engagement existing between these two must be considered past history. That was plain.

For more than a year the daughter of Burgess Murray, the biggest man politically in the community, and Emery Jarvis, a clerk in Gisson's drug store, had been making plans for a future that would embrace them both. Jarvis was an ambitious young fellow, well liked by every one, and seemingly having the best of habits.

Ethel had believed in him thoroughly until the gossiping tongue of old Mrs. Pollit had disclosed certain things that no girl of spirit could tolerate in her fiance. Therefore the return of the handsome solitaire that she had so proudly worn and the letter to her betrothed asking for her release.

Jarvis read the lines in the seclusion of the little prescription room in the rear of the drug shop and his dark eyes clouded as he vainly strove to solve the cause of the maiden's anger.

"I know of the Skeleton in Your Closet," Wrote Ethel.

"She couldn't be cross about a little thing like this," he ruminated. "I wonder how she found it out, anyway?"

That evening Jarvis called up the girl. She was not at home. During the ensuing week he made several other fruitless attempts to see her.

It was after this that the ire of the youth assumed significant proportions.

"My dear Ethel," wrote Jarvis, "I know, and you have not been at home. Patience has ceased to be the proverbial virtue, and I shall not try to see you again. I am done. I release you from the engagement, as you ask. I also acknowledge the skeleton in my closet, but why a normal-minded maid should take this amiss is beyond me. If anything, my dear, I am rather proud of it."

Ethel positively stormed when she read this communication. She clinched her fists until the nails bit cruelly into the tender flesh and angrily tossed her little blonde head.

"I shall never, never have anything more to do with men," she complained bitterly. "The very brazenness of that Emery Jarvis—to say that a 'normal-minded' girl shouldn't take such things amiss. I'm sure no girl with common sense would allow her fiance to act in that scandalous manner. Anyway, I'm glad it's all over." To prove this, Ethel burst into convulsive sobs and hid a flushed and tear-wet face in a convenient pillow.

Weeks passed, but the two erstwhile lovers seemed hopelessly estranged. Ethel made no attempt to salve the wound caused by her letter, nor did Jarvis try to explain away the misunderstanding.

Gradually the gossips in the little town—and there were many—grew accustomed to the new order of things, and everybody ceased to interest themselves in the affairs of the young couple.

It was a month after this that old Pollit (he was a portly butcher, owning the meat shop next to the drug emporium) ventured to incorporate something of a remark that caught the youth's puzzled interest.

"What was that?" demanded Jarvis, ears metaphorically a-cock. "Just repeat that last sentence."

"I said," came from the butcher, "that that there book I've been reading—'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde'—reminds me of your doings." He poked a pudgy forefinger playfully into the ribs of the youth.

"You'll have to be more explicit," snapped the drug clerk. "I can't understand. What are you driving at?"

"Can't understand, eh?" commented the other, sourly. He was angry at the tone of the lad. "Well, I guess I can put it plainer, all right. I mean that you tried to play double just like that Jekyll-Hyde feller did. Every evening after you called on the girl you was engaged to, you went straight to the house of old Doc. Blyly to see his daughter. My wife she seen you do it time and again, she did."

The dull red stained the face of the angry butcher. "She's the one that put a crimp in you, too. Ethel Murray is too fine a girl to be galavanting around with a young fellow that she thinks thinks a heap of her, and all the while he don't, but is making her out a fool by sneaking away from her house to call on another girl."

"So it was your wife that caused this trouble between Ethel and me, was it? Pity she can't learn to attend to her own affairs, isn't it?"

The butcher, his mind relieved, stamped heavily out of the drug store, but he left a knowing youth behind him. Mrs. Pollit was a gossip monger of some notoriety in the community. She resided just opposite the Blyly home, and now that the late meat man had given him his cue, Jarvis could understand many things.

That evening, his heavy jaws set firmly and his broad shoulders thrown defiantly back, the drug clerk mounted the steps to the Murray home and rang the bell.

Ethel answered the summons. An angry flush dotted her cheeks when she saw who her visitor was, but Emory ignored these trouble signs, and pushed by her and into the familiar parlor.

"I am here to explain," began Jarvis. "Mrs. Pollet's loquacious husband has just told things, and I think I understand."

"I don't care for explanation," interrupted little Miss Murray formally.

"Nevertheless," persisted Jarvis, patiently, "you are about to receive them. 'Listen, dear, I have never called on Millie Blyly in my life—let alone after I left here. When you referred to the skeleton in my closet, I took the phrase literally. There is a skeleton in my closet—a six-foot skeleton of a man that Dr. Blyly loaned me to aid me in my studies, because—well, I'm studying medicine with him, you see. I don't want to be a drug clerk all my life. I—"

But here his late fiancee, face aglow, interrupted his sentence in a very pleasing way.

Financier by Inheritance.

Joseph Morgan, J. P. Morgan's paternal grandfather, fought in Washington's army until the Revolution closed, and then settled down to farming near the village of Hartford. He made money enough to invest it in stage lines and eventually rose to the control of the chief roads of transportation in the state. Hartford, during the first quarter of the nineteenth century, had a great prosperity as the center of long-distance traffic, the main line of stage from New York to Boston passing through the city. Hartford also held the key to the trade of the Connecticut River valley, northward nearly, or quite, to the border of Canada. Innumerable taverns were sprinkled along the countryside, and Joseph Morgan also dipped into this thriving business. Later he opened a large hotel in Hartford, the City hotel, and soon afterward began to figure as a capitalist in connection with the Aetna Fire Insurance company of that city.—From the Life Story of J. Pierpont Morgan in the Metropolitan Magazine.

UNABLE TO MOVE.

Helpless With Kidney Trouble But Cured by Doan's Kidney Pills.

M. C. Walker, 933 Grand Ave., Connersville, Ind., says: "For ten years I suffered from kidney complaint and was on the verge of Bright's disease. I was often so helpless I could not move and neighbors two blocks away heard me scream with pain. I had no control over the kidney secretions and the pain in my back was almost unbearable. After several physicians had failed to help me I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills and was soon relieved. I have had no return of kidney trouble in five years."

Farmer—I dunno; they never took any away from here.

Back to the Wild.

There was a time when all dogs were wild and when what we call wolves were different from other dogs only as a collie now is different from a Newfoundland, for instance. From time to time you will hear of dogs that have returned to the life of their ancestors and have run wild with the wolves of the prairie or of the woods. In the town of Sandy in Oregon a greyhound one night made the acquaintance of a coyote, which is a kind of wolf, and ever since he has lived away from the town, running with the coyotes and approaching human dwelling-places only to steal a hen or two when he has been more than usually hungry.

Little Myra Explains.

Little Myra Lee had been in school but a few days when her mother had occasion to write a note to the teacher, and signed herself Mrs. Kent. Thinking she might have misunderstood the child's name, the teacher asked an explanation.

"Oh," said Myra, with a charming confidential air, "you see, my mama got married again but I didn't."—Lippincott's.

A Touch of Family Life.

When the country youth proposed to the city girl, he received the conventional assurance that she would be his sister. It happened that this youth had sisters at home and knew exactly his privileges. So he kissed her. At his juncture she availed herself of the sisterly right to call out to father that brother was teasing her. Father responded in good, muscular earnest. Then the new brother-and-sister relation was dissolved by mutual consent.—Judge.

What's In a Name?

"See here, waiter," said Mr. Grouch, growling deeply over his plate, "I ordered turtle soup. There is not even a morsel of turtle flavor in this."

"Of course not, sir" returned the waiter. "What do you expect? Shakespeare said there was nothing in a name. If you ordered college pudding would you expect a college in it? In Manchester pudding would you look for a ship canal or a cotton exchange? And tea, sir?"—Tit-Bits.

MORE THAN EVER

Increased Capacity for Mental Labor Since Leaving Off Coffee.

Many former coffee drinkers who have mental work to perform, day after day, have found a better capacity and greater endurance by using Postum instead of ordinary coffee. An Illinois woman writes:

"I had drank coffee for about twenty years, and finally had what the doctor called 'coffee heart.' I was nervous and extremely despondent; had little mental or physical strength left, had kidney trouble and constipation.

"The first noticeable benefit derived from the change from coffee to Postum was the natural action of the kidneys and bowels. In two weeks my heart action was greatly improved and my nerves steady.

"Then I became less despondent, and the desire to be active again showed proof of renewed physical and mental strength.

"I am steadily gaining in physical strength and brain power. I formerly did mental work and had to give it up on account of coffee, but since using Postum I am doing hard mental labor with less fatigue than ever before."

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville, in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

An Ordinance Concerning Nuisances

Be it ordained by the Board of Trustees of the Incorporated Town of St. Joe, DeKalb County, Indiana:

Section One: It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to throw or deposit, or to suffer to be thrown or deposited, or suffer or permit any servant, employe, child or member of the family under his or its control to so throw or deposit or suffer to remain any offal, garbage, ashes, manure, rubbish, filth, slops, putrid or unsound animal matter, or noisome or unwholesome liquid, in, onto, or upon any street, lane, alley, sidewalk, gutter, catch basin, crossing, or other public place within said town.

Section Two: It shall be unlawful for any person to burn or set fire to any material of any kind whatever in any street, alley or other public place within said town.

Section Three: It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, corporation or occupant or tenant of any store, dwelling, or other building, to permit or suffer snow to accumulate upon any public sidewalk adjacent to said building, and it is hereby declared to be the duty of any such person, firm, corporation or occupant or tenant of any store, dwelling, or other building to remove the snow from any and all public sidewalks each day between the hours of 8 a. m. and 4 p. m.; provided, that upon failure of any person, firm or corporation or occupant or tenant as aforesaid to remove the snow from the sidewalks as aforesaid, the marshal of said town, shall immediately employ some person to remove such snow and the cost thereof shall be chargable to and collectable from the person, firm or corporation, tenant or occupant whose duty it was to remove said snow.

Section Four: Anyone violating any one of the provisions of these ordinances shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined in any sum not exceeding ten dollars. H. C. Hathaway,
Pres. Town Board

Shall Women Vote?

If they did, millions would vote for King's New Life Pills the true remedy for women. For banishing dull, ragged feelings, backache or headache, constipation, dispelling night mares, tired feeling, toning up the system they're unequaled. Easy, safe, sure. 25c. at H. L. Dunkle's.

Hogs Going Down.

Hogs are going down in price and the price of other farm products must do so if the party pledges of the democrats are carried out. They declared that the cost of living was too high and they must be reduced. The only food products that are appreciably higher than they were ten years ago are those raised by the farmer, hence down they must go. But this is what every farmer who voted the democratic ticket voted for—lower prices—and when they come he should accept the situation without a murmur. It is of his own making.—Dispatch.

The people seem more interested in party success so that they do in the welfare of the party. It's the party and for those they would defeat the greatest and most powerful orator for the rights of the people that ever sent to the U. S. Senate from this state. We will see harder times yet, but the democratic politicians will find a mighty else to blame it onto than the real thing.—Butler Record.

"And the pot called the kettle black."

And Here's Another.

Again they are in a predicament on the temperance question. If they fail to repeal the county option law, they fail to carry out their platform promises; if they repeal the county option law they will thrust upon the people of over seventy counties in Indiana, unless where the people of those counties have said by decisive votes that they do not want saloons, and they will place upon the democratic party the odium of being controlled by the brewers of Indiana. And there you are. Talking is one thing but doing is another.—Dispatch.

Well, what's the "dif", anyway? What if county option is repealed? By the number of empty beer cases we see around railroad depots, it strikes us that county option hasn't been a howling success. And as for the odium that the democrats will incur, we suppose there can be none of that article attached to the republicans for their failure to make county local option a plank in their state party platform. "Oh consistency" etc, etc.—Ex Probi.

Good Roads

That is what St. Joe is striving for. The grade east of town that was commenced by Marshal Leighty last fall, is nearing completion by Marshal Bleeks. The road has been straightened and raised three or four feet with a good wide top so that three teams may pass at one time. The work is being done with poll work and it is surely a good piece of work and one that will mean a great deal to St. Joe in time of high water and also to the farmers east. Let the good work go on.

NEWVILLE

Mae Hollinger went home Saturday.

Romeo Tusselman, who has been sojourning in the West for about four years, has returned to his native town.

Little Oral Richmond got one of the fingers on her right hand badly lacerated by getting it caught in the cog of a fanning mill, one day last week.

That wonderful neighborly visiting dog that was mentioned last week, ate two pounds of butter for Wm Meek. Butter isn't very cheap neither.

Mrs Fred Webster is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Young. Mr. Webster has gone to the Coast of Mexico to find a location for a future home. Mrs. Webster expects to leave for that place in the near future.

(Too Late for Last Week)

Clyde Dean and family of Auburn, were Sunday guests of John Whitehurst and family.....Mrs. Fred Thomas had for her guest last week, her mother from Hamilton.....The Misses Cora Harter and Jessie Headley, who have been employed away from home, are at home for the present.....Don Blair and family drove over from Butler for a short time Sunday afternoon.....Jake Nicholas and wife were Sunday callers of Wm. Meeks and wife.....Miss Ines Maginis was a Spencerville visitor, Sunday.....Mrs. Beauchamp and little son are away visiting relatives.....Mack Richmond's dog pays untimely visits to everybody in the neighborhood, devouring what so ever he can find.....Mrs Lilly Engle moved to Auburn, Wednesday of last week. Her husband is employed at the carpenter trade at Jackson, Mich. John Wechter and Ott Blood done the moving.....Mrs. Caldwell, who had employment in the Henry Maxwell home near St. Joe, came home Thursday to help her daughter Sesna, prepare for winter, returning to her work Saturday or Sunday.....Mrs. Ann Akins had the misfortune to have a load of dirt thrown into her right eye while driving the other day. The horse flung the dirt from his hind foot. Mrs. Akins had to give up sewing for a few days.....Miss Goldie Farner, south of town, was sick and absent from school, Thursday and Friday of last week.....The school library received $1 50 out of the funds from the concert here last week. Home talent would have done better than that, try 'em.....We miswrote a birth date last week. Mark Richmond's baby was born Saturday not Sunday. We had been visiting and love's day. Beg pardon.....The sound of the thresher and the shrill toot of the cider mill whistle will no doubt now be hushed for the season, but the song of the storm king will fill the vacancy.....Mrs. Stella Webster has gone to Chicago to spent the winter.

Black Nancy

The proprietors of the L. & B Coal Yard of this place, are striving to supply the demands of their trade in the way of good coal and for the trade the gentlemen have secured two cars of West Virginia Blank Nancy soft coal. The people of St. Joe are willing to pay for the goods when they can get what they want and the coal dealers are pleased when they can supply their demand. It is like all other coal in one respect, it burns. It contains more heating qualities than cheaper grades and will last longer in the stove. THE NEWS can say it is a dandy for we tried it.

Wedded.

Last Thursday afternoon occured the marriage of Mrs. H. V. Kinsey and Mr. Ballard Bowen at Auburn. From there they went to Decatur to visit relatives a few days, returning home Saturday. They spent the first of this week in Ohio. The couple needs no introduction to the public as they have lived in this vicinity for years. They will make their home in St. Joe. Congratulations.

Farm Telephones as Viewed in the City.

The interest with which the farm telephone movement is viewed in the cities is a certain indication of the importance of this idea of the spread of communication among rural residents. The following editorial on this subject recently appeared in the New York Commercial:

In all the present day agitation of the question of the necessity for getting a portion of our swarming and congested urban populations "back to the farms", the argument against the movement a most invariably advanced is its alleged impracticability; briefly, that the average man or woman will always be found preferring a roof and a dry crust in the city to a comfortable home, good clothes and an abundance to eat and drink in the country.

There is a good deal in the contention, it must be admitted. But it loses sight very largely of the fact that country life in years comparatively recent has undergone a most wonderful improvement, has experienced an almost complete metamorphosis.

To day nothing of importance in the doings of the world escapes the knowledge of the average American farmer, provided he cares to learn about it. The telegraph starts the news going, the country telephone does the rest.

By the use of the country telephone American farmers can, and do constantly, prevent gluts of produce at the nearby markets, by this means they keep in touch with produce market quotations the country over, the system saves them millions of dollars a year in the aggregate in preventing the destruction of perishable products through over-accumulation in local market, and in a thousand and one ways the rural telephone contributes to the safety, prosperity and happiness of the American farmer. This is particularly true of the vast agricultural regions of the West and Southwest.

Speaking of the latter section specifically the Texas Commercial Secretaries Association says in a recent bulletin: "Statistics show that the growth of the telephones among the farmers during the past five years has been tremendous. Statements by the farmers themselves are to the effect that they prize their telephone as much as they do their rural delivery. There are many corporations, private owner-ships and kindly duals to day engaged in the business of supplying the telephone needs of the Southwest. They; one and all should receive such encouragement as their energy, courage and capital invested warrant.

"While providing for the telephonic needs of the Southwest has progressed greatly during the past few years, nevertheless the necessities of our people have as yet by no means been cared for. A tremendous amount of money as well as courage and energy is yet needed in the telephone field. The problem will not have been solved as long as there is a single farmer in the Southwest whose home has not this modern utility in it."

The Southwest is no exception. There are hundreds of thousands of fertile acres in the Middle and New England States to-day only waiting the tickle of the intelligent farmer's plow, hoe and rake to make them as profitable. Get out into the soil, produce something, sell it, pocket your profits, and don't forget to put in a telephone.

Many farmers are now planning to install this valuable telephone service, for nearly all realize the benefits to which this editorial writer refers. The fact that farmers can do nearly all of the work of construction and installation themselves makes the improvement an easy one for them to undertake.

The spread of the rural telephone idea in the past couple of years is indicated by the sales figures of the Western Electric Company, the largest manufacturer of telephones in the world, which reports that in the past twenty months it has sold over a quarter-million rural telephones.

The telephone connection on the farm is of the utmost importance, as nearly everyone nowadays realizes.

Saves an Iowa Man's Life.

The very grave seemed to yawn before Robert Madsen, of West Burlington, Iowa, when, after seven weeks in the hospital, four of the best physicians gave him up. Then was shown the marvelous curative power of Electric Bitters. For, after eight months of frightful suffering from liver trouble and yellow jaundice, getting no help from other remedies or doctors, five bottles of this matchless medicine completely cured him. Its positively guaranteed for Stomach, Liver or Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Only 50c. at H. L. Dunkle's.

Fall Footwear for the Fashionable and The Practical

A shoe that fits perfectly, outwears any shoe that fails of this object. It gives the wearer a satisfied feeling—with himself, with the world and of course, with the department whence the satisfying shoes came.

If you have been having "trouble with your feet" drop in upon us and let us show you what skilled shoe people and the right lines to select from will do for you.

We've made a study of feet and a study of shoes. A long, narrow foot requires one style of last; a short, broad foot requires another; a high instep foot still another, et cetera.

It is paying attention to these classifications of nature in fitting shoes that brings after-satisfaction to the wearer.

The fall lines for men, women and children are in. The line includes everything from the strictly practical working or school shoe to the strictly fashionable evening or dress shoe.

Ladies from
$1.75 to $3.00

We can also please the demand made by the Gents for fine and work shoes of different kinds. The Wonder, Lyconing and Sensation shoe sell for $3.00, $3.50, $4.00

MARVEL PENINSULAR POLISHED STEEL RANGE

The New Marvel Peninsular Steel Range
which is furnished with either a black or nickeled steel leg base is a unique piece of goods. It is made in two sizes, with a six-hole top.

Body of the Stove
is very compact. It is ideal for a small kitchen or where the stove space is limited. It has all the advantages of a regular Steel Range and includes such convenient attachments as our drop toaster door with draft slide and left pouch feed which can also be used for broiling.

Extension Fire Box
which makes it convenient when burning wood and a very complete substantial sectional fire box for either hard coal, soft coal or coke.

Oven Door
drops flush with the oven when open, and forms a very convenient shelf for heating meats.

End Top Shelf
in the square style is solid and the full depth of the body of the range.

Extreme Bottom
is reinforced and protected with an extra sheet of steel with an air space between.

Direct Draft Damper
is on top as on our other ranges.

The Material
used throughout is of the same class as our other ranges and all the parts are reinforced by asbestos filling and extra steel sheets as well as cast iron protection plates.

Nickel Ornamentation
as represented by the illustration is of the Peninsular Quality, which shines like burnished silver.

A Thanksgiving Prayer

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

"And let them sacrifice the sacrifice of thanksgiving."—Psalm cvii, 22.

Lord, what have I but empty hands,
And aching feet from hopeless quests,
And memories of barren lands,
And days and years of sore unrests?
The censer that I fain would swing
Holds neither fragrant herb nor spice;
There are no first-fruits I may bring
To heap in thankful sacrifice.

Shall I amid life's stubble glean
To find the grain the harvest leaves,
Then gaze, contented and serene,
The while my neighbors count their sheaves?
There is no gold, nor house, nor land
That I may thank Thee it is mine;
I may not measure with my hand
Thy tithing of my corn and wine.

Had I all these, then might I kneel
And pray with fervent, easy speech
That were an echo of my weal,
Of all that was within my reach.
Shall I with pharisaic grace
Bow down and play the hypocrite,
And fling my prayer in Thy face—
With not a heartborn word in it?

Nay, not in money let me count
The worth of all that I have had,
Nor miserlike tell the amount
Of what rich gifts have made me glad.
Though I have tasted of defeat,
Still have I left the strength to rise,
The tempter or the foe to meet
With newer courage in my eyes.

So, thus I pray with empty hands—
But not, Lord, with an empty heart,
Though from fair houses and rich lands
My lines are ever cast apart;
Poor in all things save this: That I
Need never thank Thee for my spoil
And that there is no haunting sigh
To break my slumber after toil.

DAY OF FAMILY REUNIONS

Thanksgiving Not Complete if a Face Is Missed From the Household Gathering.

During the first long winter in Plymouth one-half the little band of pilgrims died. The winter snow covered their leveled graves, and when spring warmth removed that friendly covering the survivors planted grain above the graves, that waving blades of wheat or corn might hide the colony's loss from the cruel eyes of the foe whom fear alone restrained from open warfare. The pilgrims' hearts were stout, and though their eyes might grow dim at times in looking over the fields where only mysterious patches of a brighter green revealed to their sad knowledge the secret of a hidden grave, they dashed away the tears and only strove the more to carry on the task those tired fingers had let fall. And when autumn came with its abundant harvest the great thanksgiving feast they held was in communion with the lost. Secure in the belief that their dear ones in happier spheres were rejoicing with them, they gave thanks for home, for harvest, and for hope.

Since then Thanksgiving day has been a day of family reunions. The distant son returns, the grandchildren gather around the table, the old people take pleasure in welcoming the familiar faces that time is changing and the new faces added to the widening family circle. It is a day of careless mirth and thankful gladness. Some go to church to find an expression for the feelings which find them voiceless, and others feel only vaguely, if at all, the need of more than the tacit acceptance and enjoyment of all.

For what is secure in memory, for the blessings of the year and the day, for the promise of the future, may we be truly thankful.

A girl is seldom satisfied to be born with a silver spoon in her mouth. She expects it to be filled with ice cream soda.

SET APART FOR GRATITUDE

Thanksgiving the Day of All Days on Which We Should Remember Our Blessings.

On Thanksgiving day most of us, with deliberate intention and perhaps no little effort, close the door by which grumbles enter and open wide the other door that lets in praise. For once gratitude has the right of way and we are just a little bit ashamed to be found in the dull company of complaint. At the Thanksgiving service, if we attend it, we give ourselves to a deliberate enumeration of our blessings and remember, perhaps, how many there are less favored than ourselves. There is not time for a complete and permanent smoothing out of the wrinkles of care and perplexity before we sit down at the bountifully laden table, but on the whole we are ready to enter into the spirit of the time. Is Thanksgiving, then, a reversal or an occasional accentuation of the proper habit of a Christian's life? If there must be rusty hinges, should they be upon the doors of praise, while the other door of grumbling works with constant ease? The undisputed right of way in the Thanksgiving season ought to be the right of way for all the year. Praise first then grumble, if you positively must, but be sure to give the right of way to gratitude. That would be better for our homes than a big legacy, and more smoothing to our foreheads than any of the measures the beauty makers recommend.—Congregationalist.

Friendship Defined.

It is rare to have a friend. It is scarcely difficult to be a friend. When you call another friend, you give him rights. You give him the right to expect you to honor his confidence—not till you fail out, but forever. You give him the right to expect your unshaken loyalty; your eyes blind to many faults; your lips deaf to any gossip; your lips mute except for quick defense and sincere apology. You give him the right to expect to find you heart, changing only to sound new depths of friendship. Such friendships are not the swift, hot, overwhelming kind that cool like taffy in snow. Rather they grow slowly, naturally, carefully, picking their way, like sure-footed chamois on untried cliffs.

A Boston Getaway.

"That Boston girl didn't seem to like her dinner.

"No, she's used to beginning it with a bean soup cocktail."—Cleveland Leader.

Ichthyological Harmony.

"And what are you composing?" asks the friend, entering the studio of the musician and hearing him developing a theme on the lower half of the keyboard.

"I am writing a class song for a school of fish," patiently explains the musician, "and I can't get it out of the bass clef."

All That Saves Them.

"Is there a law in this town against scorching motorists?"

"There must be; if there wasn't some of them would get scorched every day."

CAP and BELLS

WHY THEY CHANGED SUBJECT

Discussion Over Sweet Little Honeysuckle-Covered Cottage Is Dropped Abruptly.

"Yes," said he, "life is so lonely."

"It is lonely sometimes," she answered.

"Wouldn't it be sweet to have a little cottage covered with ivy and honeysuckle and roses?"

"Oh, wouldn't it?"

"And when a fellow comes home tired from business to have a nice little wife to meet him at the door with a kiss?"

"Ye-e-e-s!"

"And then the winter nights, the blazing fire in the cosy parlor, and you—I mean a wife—at the piano singing in the gloaming. It would be lovely."

"I think it would be sweet!"

"And then——"

At this point a careworn woman came round the corner with a pair of twins in a perambulator. A dead silence fell upon the pair; the air——

Then they changed the subject.

Studies of the Vernacular.

"Saylis, hoosat?" said the girl at the notion counter.

"Hoozoo?" queried the girl at the glove counter.

"Jessa siffew diddeno!"

"Lookeermin, wotcha mean?"

"Fewdon't knowlis, wotchablushinbout?"

"Aintablushin!"

"Yartoo!"

"Minjones yunobetter!"

"Swat yar!"

"Hoojoo mean, anyhow?"

"Fellerspoke wennypass choorcounter."

"Diddunsee anyfeller."

"Diddunteerim, either, didja?"

"Coursenot."

"Awkumoff!"

"Sayookkids," interrupted the floorwalker, "quitcherchininer I'll reporcha!"

Caesar's Lament.

The wild beasts gnashed their teeth and roared like a circus calliope; the gladiators shouted hoarsely; the arena was knee-deep with gore.

In the amphitheater the pleasure-seeking populace clamored tumultuously.

"More blood! More death!" they yelled ferociously.

Great Caesar in his private box heard their cry and sighed.

"Would that I might grant their prayer," he muttered. "If only——" and imploringly he raised his eyes heavenward—"I could pull off an automobile cup race!"

Great Caesar wept.

For with all his boasted power he was unable to hasten the flight of time.

AN IMPORTANT CONSIDERATION.

Caroline—So you do not believe in early marriages? You think a man ought to have made his way first, I suppose.

Hobart—To tell the truth, what weighs chiefly with me is that the later one marries the less time one has to outlive one's illusions.

Reason for Ajax's Madness.

Ajax had defied the lightning. "However, there's very little in it for me with nobody wanting the picture rights," he sighed discontentedly.

It was by such advanced ideas, though he held them but vaguely, that he at length got himself considered mad.—Puck.

Charitable.

"I'd have you know, sir," snorted the loud-voiced individual, "that I'm a self-made man."

"Oh, very well," retorted the other, calmly. "I'll accept your apology."

GLEANINGS FROM THE OPERA

Society Woman Forgot Name of Play but She Enjoyed Herself Immensely in Gossiping.

"Well, did you enjoy your evening, my dear?"

"Indeed I did, John. I went to the opera."

"Oh, what did you hear?"

"Rather, what didn't I hear? I heard that Ruth Jackson was engaged to Tom Harris, the one who got drunk at the golf club ball last year. And that Jack Courtney and Edith Pascoe have quarreled and are not going to be married after all. Then I heard that the Singletons have a baby, and Mrs. Singleton wants it called Peter Garibaldi, after her mother's stepfather; but Mr. Singleton wants it called Primus, because it's the first. Then I heard that Baron von Schmeldt is not a baron at all, and that the Johnsons——"

"But——"

"Don't interrupt. I thought you wanted to know what I heard?"

"So I did, but——"

"Keep quiet, then. Well, I also heard——"

"What I meant was, what opera did you hear?"

"Oh, I don't remember. I saw the name on the program."

FAR LOOK FOR SMALL THINGS.

He—Often when I look up at the stars in the firmament I cannot help thinking how small, how insignificant I am after all.

She—Gracious! Doesn't that thought ever strike you except when you look at the stars in the firmament?

Exasperating.

All afternoon Mr. Stubb had been moving pictures from one room to another and his only reward was dust and perspiration.

"Hurry up, John," chided Mrs. Stubb, impatiently. "You will never finish at that rate."

Mr. Stubb removed the cobwebs from his florid brow.

"Woman, do you think I'm a machine?"

"Gracious, how funny!"

"Madam, may I ask what is funny?"

"Why, dear, if you were a machine you would be a moving-picture machine."

And then and there Mr. Stubb washed his hands and started for the club.

An Expert's Opinion.

A student in a medical college, while learning the use of the ophthalmoscope, was told to examine a man's eye and report upon the condition of it. The doctor-to-be adjusted the instrument and looked long and searchingly into the subject's left optic.

"Most remarkable," he ejaculated, with a surprised look. Readjusting the ophthalmoscope, he again carefully scrutinized the eye. "Very extraordinary, indeed," he exclaimed. "I never heard of such an eye. This must be some new disease. Have you ever had an expert's opinion on it?"

"Once," was the laconic reply. "The man who put it in said it was a fine bit of glass."—Tit-Bits.

The Inventive Parent.

Woodbury—I noticed that Knewpop had electric lights put on his lawn last summer.

Seaforth—Yes, and he also had a baby sling put on his lawn mower. He figured if his baby was wakeful, so he would have to walk with it, that he might as well push the lawn mower and cut the grass at the same time. I have often seen him come from the house at midnight, turn on the lights, put the baby in the sling and start out on his double job.

Impossible Employment.

Seymour—Did you have steady employment during the time you were living in South America?

Ashley—Steady employment? What are you talking about, man? Don't you know that such a thing as steady employment is a physical impossibility in South America?

Seymour—No; why should it be?

Ashley—Why? Simply because there are so many earthquakes there.

A Criticism.

First Angel—What is that spirit fussing about?

Second angel—She says her hatpins stick out beyond her halo.—Harper's Bazar.

Or Did He Escape?

"I met Miss Elderly and Miss Sere going for a tramp yesterday."

"Which one of them got him?"

An Exciting Town.

Los Angeles is a truly exciting town to live in. To say nothing of its heavenly climate and its bombs, there is always something stimulating in the occult line going on. Just the other day a widow of the angelic city began to long for a sight of one of her schoolmates whom she had not seen for 45 years. The longing brought its fulfillment. A spirit told her to look for him in Brooklyn. She obeyed, met him on the street a few hours after she arrived, and promptly married him. It is worth while to live in a city where things like this happen, even at the risk of being blown up now and then.

You Can't Tell by Faces.

Cheerful Pessimist—Well, how's things these days?

Dolorous Optimist—All right: Lots of work, money coming in hand over fist! Can't complain a bit!

Cheerful Pessimist—Well, that's certainly good news! Now with me things are simply rotten!—Puck.

May Put Flower Show "on Wheels."

Some of the florists who hold membership in the State Florists' association of Indiana are promoting a movement to place the flower show "on wheels" and keep it moving over Indiana, the purpose being to give an exposition in some city every year. The show now in progress at Tomlinson hall is the first one of such magnitude ever undertaken by the state organization, the others having been promoted by Indianapolis men, and the exposition has proved so successful that the association doubtless will make the show an annual affair, but not in two successive years in one city.

While the public was admiring the flowers at Indianapolis the men who grew the blooms slipped away to the Commercial club dinner and, while the feast was under way, the subject of an annual show was brought up by Fred H. Lemon of Richmond. He said the growers of his city are anxious that the state association hold a show in that city next year. There are several other cities in Indiana where the commercial flower interests are large among them Fort Wayne, Lafayette, Anderson and Newcastle. By sending the show around a Hoosier circuit it would not be repeated in any one city oftener than once every five or six years. This, it is said, would prevent the people of the different cities from losing interest in the enterprise, while the shows would go far toward spreading among the people a greater love of flowers.

Reminders of Old Days on Books.

B. Wilson Smith, a field examiner in the employ of the state board of accounts, who formerly was engaged in the office supply business, found some of his old accounts in the affairs of Henry T. Van Cleve, former trustee of Coal Creek township, Montgomery county, according to a report just certified. The items which Van Cleve had bought of Smith totaled only $35.50, but the examiners could find in the office of the trustee no itemized bill for the goods bought, nor could they find such bills for hundreds of dollars worth of supplies bought from other dealers.

Van Cleve and his advisory board went into court to settle a difference during the closing months of his term with the result that the trustee paid into the township treasury a total of $273.70 because of errors, etc., and this is set out in the report. No charge is made by the field examiners, but on the contrary, Van Cleve is credited with $3.55, due to an error in his final settlement.

J. J. Clements, trustee of Brown township, in the same county, for the four years ending December 31, 1908 is charged with a total of $384.01, included in which is a constructive charge of $370.08 for material sold the township by Clements when he was trustee.

Precisims Day for Giving Thanks.

Thursday, November 24, has been officially set aside in Indiana by Governor Marshall for the observance of the annual Thanksgiving day, a national and state holiday, nationalized through proclamation by the president and state through that of the governor. In his proclamation the governor says: "The never ending procession of the seasons has brought the people of Indiana again to their harvest home. The common parent of us all has poured from her lap the corn and wine and oil of fertile fields and fruitful vineyards."

Indiana Canners Meet.

The Indiana Canners' association, at its annual meeting at Indianapolis, decided to ask the next legislature to change the Indiana child labor law. The canners are hoping for a change which will permit children to work in the canning factories during the canning season, on obtaining permits from the state factory inspector. Members said in the discussion that children would be better off at work in sanitary canning factories than in running in the streets.

Club Program is Issued.

Wallace B. Caldwell, secretary of the Indiana Federated Commercial clubs, completed the program for the third annual convention, which will be held in Anderson November 16-17. The program follows:

REPORT URGES HIGH SCHOOL INSPECTOR

Dr. Aley Favors Law Creating New Positions.

FAVORS TEACHER'S PENSIONS

Retiring School Superintendent in Last Statement Declares for Many Changes in Office He Is Leaving.

Indianapolis.—Robert J. Aley, retiring state superintendent of public instruction, in his final report to Governor Marshal, urges the passage of a teacher' pension act, a medical inspection and school sanitatio nact, a law placing county superintendents upon a salary basis and a law providing for the appointment of a high school inspector to work under the direction of the State Board of Education.

"Indiana should take an advanced position," Dr. Aley said, "concerning the medical inspection of children in the public schools. Children have a right to be protected from exposure to other children affected with disease and the state ought to do this much to safeguard their health. The law ought to contain a provision regulating the construction of school buildings in conformity to sanitary principles and proper sanitataion ought to be required in all public school buildings."

In the opinion of Dr. Aley the growth of the public school has reached such a stage that high school inspectors are required to do the work which it has become impossible for the State Board of Education to do efficiently. The state superintendent said the enrollment of the public high schools has grown $6,300 in two years, and that the increased number of high schools makes inspection of high schools by members of the State Board of Education impossible. State of Minnesota provided for inspectors several years ago, and their high schools are superior to those in Indiana, Dr. Aley thinks.

A special appropriation for paying those school corporations which failed to receive state aid because of the exhaustion of the fund in 1909-1910 is recommended. A change in the deficiency law so that a levy of 35 cents is necessary to obtain aid for a six-months term and a levy of 50 cents for a seven months' term is urged also. There are a number of school teachers who received little if any salary in 1909 because of the exhaustion of the fund set apart for helping needy school corporations. Dr. Aley says this is an injustice and that they should be paid. Other recommendations to the Governor were:

An extension of the teachers' exemption license law so as to include state licenses and all kinds of three-year licenses.

A law authorizing school officials to pa yteachers for a limited number of days spent in visiting schools or attending educational associations.

A law making the state superintendent a member of the boards of all the state institutions that engage in educational work and giving the State Board of Education general supervision of the school work in these institutions.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Shelbyville. — When John Burk, former sheriff of Shelby county, is ready to die, he has the satisfaction of knowing that he has a coffin in which to be buried, provided it is not destroyed or given out of his possession. Before the election Marshall G. Tindall bet him that Alonzo Blair would not be elected judge of the Sixteenth judicial district, and he agreed to deliver a fine coffin at the Burk home for Mr. Burk free of charge.

Rushville. — Henry Troubaugh, a prominent farmer, living east of here, cut his throat with a razor, but failed in the attempt to take his life. He severed his windpipe and cut an artery in his throat. Troubaugh was found in the barn by his wife, and physicians arrived in time to save his life. The members of his family and Troubaugh himself give no reason for the act, and declare that he is perfectly rational.

Laporte.—Harry B. Darling, secretary of the state board of pardons, has received letters indicating that the date suggested for the consideration of the case of William E. Hinshaw is satisfactory. The board will meet at the Michigan City prison Saturday, December 10. The physical condition of Hinshaw is but little changed, though the evidence of tubercular complications have become more marked. Hinshaw appears to have little hope that the board will take favorable action.

Fort Wayne.—Burglars broke into the pawnshop conducted by William Dygert, and when they left booty valued at approximately $700 went with them. The men forced an entrance through a rear window and took about everything in the establishment, with the exception of the stove and the show cases.

Lafayette.—E. J. Levengood, aged forty-seven, a well-known real estate and insurance man, was found dead in his office, a bullet hole in his temple and a revolver by his side. Financial trouble is believed to have caused the deed.

Good Example of Scottish Humor in Remark Made by Railroad Porter.

Scottish humor is dry rather than boisterous, and I always think there is exquisite drollery in the story of the Stonehaven railway porter and the Salvation Army "captain." To catch the hang of a little yarn readers must remember that Stonehaven lies to the south of Aberdeen. The London train had drawn up at Stonehaven on account of a slight mishap a mile or two ahead, and Andra, the old porter, had got into conversation with a Salvation Army officer who had popped his head out of the compartment to ask the reason for the delay.

"Aye aye," mused Andra, after giving the desired information, "ye'll be for Alberdeen, I'm thinkin'?"

"Yes, my man," was the reply; "I'm bound for Aberdeen—a very wicked place, I'm told!"

"What micht ye be goin' to dae there, sir, if it's as bad as a' that?" asked Andra, rather amused at the visitor's words.

"Ah," was the pious answer, "I'm going to drive the devil out of Aberdeen."

Like lightning came from the old porter the pawky retort:

"See an' drive him north, chell; hand him well to the north!"—Exchange.

PUTS STOMACHS IN ORDER.

No Indigestion, Gas, Sourness or Dyspepsia Five Minutes After Taking a Little Diapepsin.

There should not be a case of indigestion, dyspepsia or gastritis here if readers who are subject to Stomach trouble knew the tremendous anti-ferment and digestive virtue contained in Diapepsin. This harmless preparation will digest a heavy meal without the slightest fuss or discomfort, and relieve the sourest, acid stomach in five minutes, besides overcoming all foul, nauseous odors from the breath.

If your stomach is sour and full of gas, or your food doesn't digest, and your meal don't seem to fit, why not get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any druggist here in town, and make life worth living. Absolute relief from Stomach misery and perfect digestion of anything you eat is sure to follow five minutes after, and besides, one fifty-cent case is sufficient to cure a whole family of such trouble.

Surely, a harmless, inexpensive preparation like Pape's Diapepsin, which will always either at daytime or during night, relieve your sick, sour, gassy, upset stomach and digest your meals, is about as handy and valuable a thing as you could have in the house.

Supreme Test.

"I thought you said this bathing suit was in fast colors," said Binks, indignantly, to the bathing master of whom he had bought his dollar suit that morning.

"Yes, that's what I said," returned the bathing master.

"Well, every blessed stripe on the blooming thing has come off on my back," retorted Binks.

"Ah, but wait until you try to get 'em off your back," smiled the bathing master, suavely. "Then you'll see."—Harper's Weekly.

Have You Tried?

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? We can furnish positive proof that it has made many remarkable cures after all other means had failed.

Women who are suffering with some form of female illness should consider this.

As such evidence read these two unsolicited testimonial letters. We guarantee they are genuine and honest statements of facts.

Cresson, Pa.—"Five years ago I had a bad fall, and hurt myself inwardly. I was under a doctor's care for nine weeks, and when I stopped I grew worse again. I sent for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, took it as directed, and now I am a stout, hearty woman."—Mrs. Ella E. Aikey, Cresson, Pa.

Baird, Wash.—"A year ago I was sick with kidney and bladder troubles and female weakness. The doctors gave me up. All they could do was to just let me go as easily as possible. I was advised by friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. I am completely cured of my ills, and I am nearly sixty years old."—Mrs. Sarah Leighton, Baird, Wash.

Evidence like the above is abundant showing that the derangements of the female organism which breed all kinds of miserable feelings and which ordinary practice does not cure, are the very disorders that give way to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who are afflicted with similar troubles, after reading two such letters as the above, should be encouraged to try this wonderfully helpful remedy.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1909. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 2 and 3 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 120 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1909.

The Silver Cup

at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta Government for its exhibit of grains, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1910 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Faint?

Have you weak heart, dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals? Or do you experience pain over the heart, shortness of breath on going up-stairs and the many distressing symptoms which indicate poor circulation and bad blood? A heart tonic, blood and body-builder that has stood the test of over 40 years of cures is

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

The heart becomes regular as clock-work. The red blood corpuscles are increased in number—and the nerves in turn are well fed. The arteries are filled with good rich blood. That is why nervous debility, irritability, fainting spells, disappear and are overcome by this alterative extract of medicinal roots put up by Dr. Pierce without the use of alcohol. Ask your neighbor. Many have been cured of scrofulous conditions, ulcers, "fever-sores," white swellings, etc., by taking Dr. Pierce's Discovery. Just the refreshing and vitalizing tonic needed for excessive tissue waste, in convalescence from fevers or for run-down, anæmic, thin-blooded people. Stick to this safe and sure remedy and refuse all "just as good" kinds offered by the dealer who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing will do you half as much good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

Culture Club

On last Wednesday evening at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Krabill, the ladies of the Culture Club entertained their husbands.

Promptly at 8 o'clock the vice president, Mrs. Buchanan, called the meeting to order and the following program was carried out:

Piano Solo ..... Pluma Hamilton
Thanksgiving Old and New ..... Maude Woodcox
Piano Duett ..... Jessie Benjamin—Flossie Copp
Noted Women ..... Mrs. F. Buchanan
Reading ..... Agnes Krabill
Vocal Solo ..... Mrs. B. Leighty
Quotations ..... I am thankful that—
Piano Duett ..... Jessie Benjamin—Flossie Copp

At the conclusion of the program the guests and members were ushered upstairs, where the committee had prepared several excellent tableaux representing Faith, Hope and Charity. They then repaired to the parlors below where an elaborate two course luncheon was served while sitting in quartettes at small tables distributed throughout the rooms. At each cover was a place card decorated with a turkey and a sheaf of wheat. The meeting was certainly enjoyed by all from the first greeting until the last Au Revoir was said.

This was one of the meetings especially planned so the husbands could enjoy the delights of club life. The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Sheffer of Kendallville and Mrs. Emma Abel of Cobourntown.

SPIRIT OF ROMANCE.

To the spirit of chivalry and love of adventure that characterized the wonderful days of long ago the average writer turns for his romantic tales of love and war, but it seems somehow as though enough of romance can be found in the world at every period of its existence, even in its present most practical and, perhaps, its most unpoetical stage, to make volumes of absorbing interest, but the mystery of the past appeals to the ordinary mind with more persistence than the wonders of the present; perhaps, because the intervening periods of time have endowed the occurrences of other days with something of the charm of their own uncertainty. The influence of poetry, of music, of art of the drama, of literature, helps to mold a world of loveliness, and contributes in no small way to the happiness of living, says the Charleston News and Courier. Into each profession some of the spirit of romance has crept, much of which has been handed down from generation to generation as a priceless heritage. The artistic temperament best understands the making of those rose-sweet romances which breathe their fragrance far and wide and make the world a better place in which to live, but even those of us who are not blessed with poetic natures cannot, indeed must not, fail to trace along our daily paths the romance of the world itself with all its throbbing beauty—a romance of life and color, of effort and achievement, and above all of joy and happiness.

Sometimes the question is asked, "What becomes of all the gold?" It is a well-known fact that the total of the precious metal mined is not fully accounted for by the amount of gold coins in use or the quantity of gold employed in the arts. A good deal of it "gets away" in some fashion and hides from the sight of the statisticians and the economists. Perhaps a little light may be thrown on the mystery by the experience of a woman in South Bend, Ind., who while digging in her flower garden found $1,145 in gold pieces. It is believed the money was buried by the woman's father, who died some years ago. How much more has been disposed of in like fashion or stored away in miser's hoards and in secret places by those who wish to keep the coin against a time of need?

The remarkable instance of a cure of tetanus after the jaws were locked, effected in Milwaukee not long ago, has been paralleled in New York, the patient being a seven-year-old boy. He lacerated his right hand and left knee which were cauterized by a physician. Ten days later, however, he became violently ill, showing symptoms of tetanus, and being removed to a hospital, where for four days his jaws were locked and for eight days he was subject to frequent spasms. At the first injection of the improved serum from the New York board of health 6,000 units were used. After 30,000 units had been administered the lad showed improvement and gradually grew better, until a week ago he was discharged from the hospital completely cured.

One of the precious things that escaped destruction in the fire that wrought such havoc at the Brussels exhibition was the priceless collection of lace loaned by the former queen of Italy. As all the world interested in lace-making is aware, Queen Dowager Margherita has revived the lace industry in Italy, and her endowed lace factory at Venice is visited by many travelers. Brussels as well as Venice in old times was famous for its lace, and no doubt the Belgians inspected the Italian collection like connoisseurs. The collection is now again in the the possession of the queen dowager.

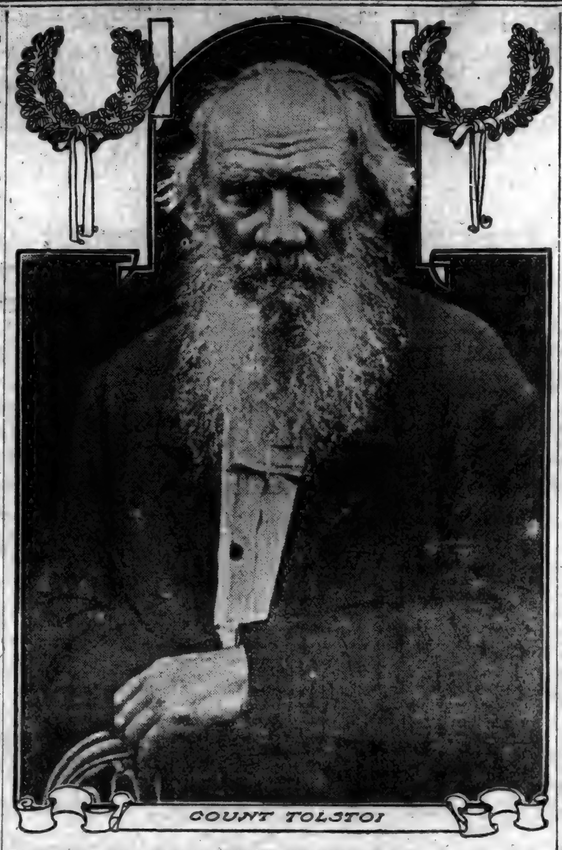
Women arriving at the port of New York from abroad, who wore their furs to escape paying duty on the wraps, had it made even more warm for them by the explanation that their excuse of nonpayment for duty wouldn't wear.

The champion fish story, not only of this, but also of many previous seasons, was told lately at a meeting of the American Fisheries Societies. It was to the effect that fishes grow on trees in Alaska. This record triumphantly challenges all comers.

A Seattle man wants a divorce because his wife eats seven pounds of meat a day. And then has the nerve to ask him for ostrich plumes, too, we presume.

A French student has discovered that man is superior to all machines. We might add that the common man is superior to the machine politician.

A New York paper says its city has "4,766,000 souls." The census says only that number of people.



COUNT TOLSTOI

LEO TOLSTOI DIES

AGED NOVELIST CLOSES HIS LIFE IN VOLUNTARY EXILE.

COUNTESS IS AT BEDSIDE

Sinking Man Fails to Recognize Wife and Passes Away Without Regaining Consciousness—Remained Under the Ban of Church.

Astopova.—Surrounded by his wife, children, Doctor Makovetsky and the other attending physicians Count Leo Tolstoi passed away peacefully at 6:30 Sunday morning in the lonesome little railway station of the town.

Efforts of the church to gather the famous reformer into its folds effected nothing, as neither side yielded.

It was recognized long before he passed away that his case was hopeless.

Several of the physicians were greatly overcome by the approaching death of Russia's great writer.

His heart beat its last apparently without a clear moment to enable him to say farewell or cast a forgiving look upon his wife and children.

Tolstoi, accompanied only by Doctor Makovetsky, left his home at Yasnaya Poliana for the purpose of ending his days in solitude, to which he more and more inclined during his later years. His pilgrimage led him to the monastery at Shamardine, in the province of Kaluga, where he remained as the guest of his sister, Marie, who is a nun in the cloister.

Learning that his retreat had been discovered, he insisted upon proceeding on his journey to the Caucasus, where he hoped to spend his last days close to the Tolstoian colony on the shores of the Black Sea.

But during the railroad journey he was overcome with exhaustion and the cold, and Doctor Makovetsky was compelled to have him transferred to the flag station at Astapova, where he was made as comfortable as possible in the rude wooden building.

For five days he had lain there suffering first from bronchitis and later from inflammation of the lungs. Specialists were called from Moscow and other places, but notwithstanding their utmost efforts, the heart of the great Russian responded but feebly to the restoratives and stimulants.

Aviator Johnstone Killed.

Denver, Col.—From ten to fifteen thousand persons saw Ralph Johnstone, the holder of the world's aviation altitude record, plunge in his Wright biplane, at Overland Park Thursday, from a height of 800 feet to a terrible death, nearly every bone in his body being fractured.

His tragic flight was not without a thrilling struggle with the grim messenger, for when the daring birdman realized that the earthward dive might mean the loss of his life, he tried to climb swiftly to the top of his aeroplane, lest the heavy machinery crush out his life.

GUN EXPLOSION KILLS FOUR

RIFLE TEST AT INDIAN HEAD PROVES FATAL.

Premature Blast Blows Breech Lock Back Among Crew—Inquiry Is Ordered.

Washington.—By the premature bursting of a five-inch 51-caliber gun at the Indian Head proving grounds four men were instantly killed.

The gun, which was a new one from the navy yard gun factory and was being tested for the first time, had already been fired twice. The accident occurred during the third round, just as the breech was being closed. The accident was similar to the explosion that caused the death of ten soldiers in the pit of one of the disappearing guns at Fort Monroe, Va., last summer.

The explosion ppobably was due to a bent or fouled firing pin which projected beyond the face of the breech plug of the gun.

The breech block of the gun, which was being tested, blew backward into the crew. Lieut. Arthur G. Caffee, who was in charge of the gun, was one of the men killed.

The ordnance bureau has ordered a board of inquest to inquire into causes of the accident, the only witnesses to which were John C. Coleman and Sidney Dyson, both colored.

The employers' liability act will come into play in this case, and the families or dependent parents of the victims will receive the equivalent of one year's pay.

OFFICERS RAID STOCK FIRMS

Burr Bros. and Continenstal Wireless Heads Arrested Charged With Misusing the Mails.

New York.—Burr Brothers, a corporation dealing in stocks and other securities, were raided Monday by post office inspectors and its members charged with using the mails to defraud.

The raid was made on warrants charging use of the mails to defraud investors. Post office officials said the concern had sold to investors at par value between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000 of stock in various companies, most of which had gone out of existence or become bankrupt.

Officers of the corporation were arrested and its books and papers seized.

The raid was planned by Post Office Inspector Warren W. Dickson. Postmaster General Frank H. Hitchcock and Robert S. Sharpe, chief post office inspector.

The officers arrested were Sheldon C. Burr, president; Frank H. Tobey, vice-president, and Eugene H. Burr, secretary and treasurer.

The three officials were arraigned before Commissioner Shields and held in $20,000 bail each. Pending the furnishing of bail the officials of the company were placed in the prisoners' pen.

Arrests are expected to be made in Cleveland, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco, where the corporation has extensive offices.

REVOLT IN MEXICO

FORTY ARE KILLED IN BATTLE AGAINST DIAZ'S SOLDIERS.

WOMAN SLAYS POLICE CHIEF

Puebla, Seething With Rebellion, Is Scene of the Clash—Francisco Madero, Head of Revolutionary Party, Claims the Presidency.

Mexico City, Mex. — Revolution broke out Friday in the city of Pueblo between the anti-re-electionists and the federal forces and it is reported that 40 persons were killed and three wounded

A woman killed the chief of police and another wounded a major of infantry.

Eleven Mexicans were arrested at Buena Vista and lodged in jail at Cananea charged with attempting to foment a revolution.

At Orizaba numerous arrests were made and the police captured a large quantity of arms and ammunition.

Details of the anti-Diaz conspiracy have come to light. The conspirators had extended their operations to the state of Vera Cruz, Hidalgo, Coahuila, San Luis Potosi, Nuevo Leon, Pueblo, Jalisco, Guanajuata, Yucatan and Zacatecas. Circulars sent out by Madero or his agents from San Antonio, Tex., outline his campaign and announce Madero as constitutional president of Mexico.

Laredo, Tex.—Reports reaching this city from what is considered to be a reliable source are to the effect that rioting was renewed in Puebla, Mex., Monday and that 30 persons were killed in the fighting.

It is said on the streets here that the Mexican military authorities are conscripting large numbers of the residents of Nuevo Laredo into the army for emergency service.

United States troops have been sent to the border to be stationed at many points to protect Americans.

Washington.—Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Hoyt, commander of the department of Texas, has been instructed by the war department to hold troops in readiness to meet any call made by the governor of Texas to preserve neutrality on the part of the United States in connection with the revolt in Mexico.

Belated telegrams reaching the state department from its officials in Mexico mention various revolutionary disturbances at different points in that country, but all agree in one respect, and that is that the Diaz government is strong enough to repress the revolutionists.

A report from Marathon, Tex., states that revolutionists are gathering in Chihuahua State, south of Marafa, and are preparing to attack Chihuahua City. The regions thereabouts are sparsely settled.

A report from El Paso, Tex., says that 100 persons had been killed in riots which took place at Zacatecas in the interior of Mexico, opposite Tampico.

It is reported that riots have taken place at Alnieso, seventy miles south in Mexico, and several killed there.

Eagle Pass, Tex.—"General Bernardo Reyes is coming."

This is the whisper which has gone with telegraphic swiftness up and down the Rio Grande. If it is true, as many Mexicans assert, it means that the revolutionists have at their head a man superior in military training to any other man in Mexico, not even excepting President Diaz himself.

COMMONS RAIDED BY WOMEN

Militant Suffragettes Storm British Parliament and 116 Are Arrested After Lively Fight.

London.—One hundred and sixteen of the 1,000 militant suffragettes who marched on the parliament building were arrested after a lively fight with the police.

Led by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the women made a determined attempt to force the police cordon about the house of commons and, reaching Premier Asquith, to insist upon the introduction of a woman's suffrage bill.

The women made every effort within their power to break the lines, bringing into play some rare military strategy and football tactics. Fighters in the front ranks retired many times to make way for fresh reserves, but the police were too strongly intrenched. Orders had been given the officers to make as few arrests as possible, but it soon became necessary to jail as many of the women as could be captured. After Parliament Square had been cleared the three leaders of the demonstration, led by Mrs. Pankhurst, were permitted to enter the lobby of the house of commons, where they were met by Mr. Asquith's secretary and informed that the premier would not see them and said that there was no chance for a suffrage bill at the present session.

Slays Four of Family.

Maryville, Mo.—Oda Hubbell, a farmer near Barnard, Mo., and his wife and two children were shot and killed at their home Sunday night by an unidentified person, who set fire to their house to conceal the crime.

Robbers Overpower a Doctor.

Norfolk, Va.—Two young men entered the office of Dr. L. B. Firey Monday and at the point of a pistol bound him hand and foot to a chair. After taking all the money in the office the men hastened away.

LANDIS OUT OF MEAT CASES

DECLINES TO HEAR CHANGE OF VENUE ARGUMENT.

Judge Declares It "Impossible" for Him to Preside at Beef Trust Trials.

Chicago. — The packers won first blood when Judge Kenesaw M Landis ruled that he could not hear the cases pending against J. Ogden Armour and others charged with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

He announced to attorneys appearing before him in the United States district court who sought a change of venue in the case against Chicago meat packers, that he would be unable to hear the case in any event, and irrespective of argument for or against such a course, either by attorneys for the government or those for the packers.

The announcement was made during a lull in arguments in the effort of the packers to have the case transferred to the United States circuit court. The packers are charged with conspiracy to restrain trade, and are specifically charged with having formed the so-called "beef trust" in the shape of the National Packing company.

Judge Landis gave no hint of his possible action on the venue argument. It lies within his power to refuse certification to the circuit court, and, instead, to transfer it, as dean of the district court, to another district judge, particularly Judge Carpenter.

Shortly after his announcement, Judge Landis put off till November 23 further arguments. The question at issue is, Shall Judge Landis certify to the circuit court the whole case against the packers, or will he refuse such certification, compelling the defendants to accept trial before a district judge?

Judge Landis explained his refusal to sit in the case. "Considering the character and nature of the defendant's averment and the proximity in point of time of my employment as a member of this bar as agent of the department of justice, as at least the beginning of the period respecting which the grand jurors heard evidence, regardless of the technical proposition involved, it becomes obvious I cannot hear the case," he said. "I will send the case to my colleague in the district court, Judge Carpenter."

STANDARD OIL WINS CASE

Indiana Concern Is Declared Not Guilty by Jury Through Instruction of Judge.

Jackson, Tenn.—Judge John E. McCall of the United States district court Thursday instructed the jury in the case of the government against the Standard Oil company of Indiana to return a verdict of not guilty.

Judge McCall sustained the contention of counsel for the defendant that the United States had failed to prove the allegations set forth in the indictment. The oil company has been on trial for a week charged with receiving freight rate concessions in violation of the so-called Elkins law.

The Tennessee suit against the Standard Oil company of Indiana was one of a number of federal attacks based on anti-rebate laws to be inaugurated by the department of justice under the Roosevelt administration, and the line of prosecution followed in a number of significant details the case in which a $29,000,000 fine was imposed by Judge Kenesaw M. Landis in Chicago; only to be set aside by the federal court of appeals.

HENRY M. HOYT PASSES AWAY

State Department Counsellor Dies of Peritonitis After Illness Lasting But Four Days.

Washington.—Henry M. Hoyt, counsellor of the state department, died here Sunday of peritonitis after an illness of only four days.

Mr. Hoyt was graduated from Yale in President Taft's class, 1878. Mr. Hoyt has just concluded the preliminary work at Ottawa for the reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada. He held the position of solicitor general at the department of justice, in which he was succeeded a year ago by the late Lloyd Bowers.

BRIAND HIT BY ROYALIST

Premier Struck In Face Twice—Guards Save Assailant From Hands of Mob.

Paris.—Premier Briand, while attending the ceremonies in the Tuileries Sunday in connection with the dedication of a monument erected to the memory of Jules Ferry, the French statesman, was assaulted by a Royalist, who struck him twice in the face with his fists. The premier was not seriously hurt.

The large crowd which had gathered set upon the premier's assailant and only prompt intervention from the guards saved him from serious injury.

Inventor Gets Rich Reward.

San Francisco.—The first payment of a total of $17,000,000 which is to be turned over to George Gates, a seventy-year-old G. A. R. veteran of San Jose, who invented the concrete railroad tie, is now in escrow in the Crocker National bank. A syndicate of eastern railroads has been formed to buy the patent rights of the San Jose man and $500,000 was given to him when the contract was signed Tuesday and by January 2, 1911, the total of $17,000,000 will be placed to his account.

CRIPPEN IS HANGED

AMERICAN DOCTOR PAYS THE EXTREME PENALTY.

FOR MURDER OF HIS WIFE

Only Small Group of Official Witnesses Attended—Miss Leneve Sails for America—Other News of the Day.

London, Eng.—Dr. Hawley H. Crippen was hanged in the yard of the Pentonville prison.

The execution of Dr. Crippen completed the criminal records of one of the most sensational of recent murder cases. The brutality of the crime committed by a man who had been known as of a gentle and kindly nature, the murderer's spectacular fight to his native land and the fact that the case against the doctor was purely circumstantial combined to make the tragedy of absorbing interest not only in England, where the murder was done, but as well in America, where both Crippen and his wife were born.

Only a small group of official witnesses attended, and every effort was made to prevent morbid crowds from gath ring in the neighborhood. Even the customary official announcement of the hanging was not posted until the evening before. The body was buried in quick lime in the prison yard. This is the custom at Pentonville, although not in all English prisons.

Father Carey, who has visited Crippen frequently, spent the night with the condemned man and walked with Crippen to the scaffold.

A paper caused excitement by flooding the city with placards that Crippen had made a written confession. Everyone in a position to know denies this. Ethel Leneve said: "I was the last person to see Dr. Crippen. So far as my knowledge extends he has not made such a statement."

It was also reported that Crippen wrote a statement for a Sunday paper which bought a previous story of his. The paper, however, denied that it had his confession.

Leneve Sails for America.

London, Eng.—Ethel Leneve has booked passage on the steamship Majestic, which sails from Southampton for New York.

CRUSHED BY FALLING WALLS

Babe Saved by Bureau Which Supported Tons of Weight.

Cleveland, O.—The wife of Simon Frutkin, a tailor, his two small children and Mrs. J. E. Jackemy, a customer, were crushed to death by the collapse of a new concrete building at Lorain avenue and West Thirtieth street. An explosion of unknown origin is believed to have caused the disaster. A baby, youngest of the Frutkin children, was saved by the strength of a bureau under which it had rolled, and which supported a weight of many tons until rescuers found the little one unharmed. Frutkin and a servant were severely injured. His two apprentices and a woman and a child escaped at the first warning sound. Frutkin's little tailor shop stood next to the concrete structure. He was at work in the front room, while Mrs. Frutkin with the children was asleep in a bedroom in the rear.

Bag of High Explosive.

Cincinnati, O.—Explosives enough to blow the city hall here into fragments were found in a trunk in the police clerk's office. Just why it had not exploded, is almost past understanding, according to the clerk's office, inasmuch as the trunk had been kicked from corner to corner for the last two months with no regard to delicate handling. The trunk was found by local detectives while searching the room of several men who were supposed to have been members of the "Black Hand." This was last September. The trunk was brought to the clerk's office at that time and has been moved from one place in the room to another until it was decided to store it away. It was cleaned out thoroughly and in the bottom were found two packages of explosives carefully wrapped. On each package was the label "thirty per cent. nitro-glycerine."

Taken From Train and Lynched.

Pensacola, Fla.—In the presence of the passengers and crew of the train, Bob Matthews, a negro, charged with attacking Mrs. E. Snowden, near Pensacola, several months ago, was taken from a train at Gull Point by forty masked men and lynched by the side of the railroad track.

Pink Eye Closes Military School.

Richmond, Va.—An epidemic of pink eye at the Virginia military institute, Lexington, has closed the institution until January 4.

Valuable Horses Burned.

Wichita, Kan.—Forty-five head of race horses valued at $30,000 were burned in a fire in the stables of the Wichita & Southwestern Fair association. The horses were being wintered here after a racing season on the fair circuits of Kansas and Oklahoma.

Missing Steamer Reports.

New York.—The four-masted schooner John T. Wopy which left New York on October 11 for San Juan, Porto Rico, and was many days overdue at that port, has reached her destination.

SERIAL STORY

Archibald's Agatha

By EDITH HUNTINGTON MASON

Author of "The Real Agatha"

Copyright, 1910, by W. G. Chapman. Copyright in Great Britain.

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular and indolent young bachelor of London, receives news that he has been made heir to the estate of his Aunt Georgiana, with an income of $20,000 a year, on condition that he becomes engaged to be married within ten days. Failing to do so the legacy will go to a third cousin in America. The story opens at Castle Wyckoff, where Lord Vincent and his wife, friends of Terhune, are discussing plans to find him a wife within the prescribed time. It seems that Lady Vincent is one of seven persons named Agatha, all close girlhood chums. She decides to invite two of them to the castle and have Archie there as one of the guests. Agatha Sixth strikes Archie as a handpainted beauty. Agatha First is a breezy American girl. Lady Vincent tells her husband that Agatha Sixth already cares for Archie. He gains from Agatha Sixth the admission that she cares for him, but will require a month's time fully to make up her mind. Agatha First, neglected by Terhune, receives attentions from Leslie Freer. Four days of the precious time have passed when Terhune is called to London on business. Agatha First, on the plea of sickness, excuses herself from a motor trip planned by the Vincents. Later they see Agatha First picking flowers with a strange man. The Vincents discuss Agatha's seeming duplicity. The following day the party visits the ruins of an old convent. Terhune continues his attentions to Agatha Sixth. Then suddenly he transfers his attentions to Agatha First. Vincent scores him for his apparent fickleness. The last evening of the time allotted in which to become engaged arrives.

(CHAPTER IX.—Continued.)

The conclusion was obvious and we fell away from our point of vantage at the door and looked at each other with scared and troubled faces. Our attempts to make a match for Agatha Sixth and win Terhune a fortune were certainly going wrong with a vengeance.

But the worse was not yet. Before we had time to more than breathe a new complication presented itself in the shape of the sudden appearance of Agatha Sixth upon the scene.

We met her at the foot of the stairs just as we were going up, wrapper-clad and with long black braids hanging over her shoulders. I felt myself grown quite cat-like in regard to seeing in the dark, and had perceived who she was and the vital necessity of keeping our discovery a secret from her, before my wife had time to more than gasp a greeting.

"Is that you, Agatha Lawrence?" she inquired.

"Yes. What is it?" whispered back Agatha Sixth, peering at us from the stairs, and by Jove, I felt so sorry for the poor girl if she should see what we had just seen that I rather lost my head.

"Dogs," I said, my voice quite hoarse with whispering, "one of 'em's got shut in the drawing-room some way, and he's knocked over a vase!"

"Did he also light the lamp?" demanded Miss Lawrence suspiciously, as she came and stood beside us. And I cursed myself for a blunderer as she said it. Then Dearest had a go at the situation, and I felt that if the attempt failed we could do nothing more to save the girl from the certain misery she seemed so eager to bring upon herself.

"I lit the lamp, darling," she said, standing directly in front of the doors so that Agatha Sixth's view was cut off, "to see if there was much damage done. We forgot to turn it out, but Wilfred will do it now if you'll come along upstairs with me and not bother." But the girl was not to be turned from her purpose so easily. Some instinct seemed to tell her that what lay behind those closed doors concerned her nearly.

"Let me look—Dearest," she said, using my name for my wife for the first time, as she's usually a cold little thing, and Dearest, as if convinced that it was for the best after all, stepped aside.

It didn't take long, the delivery of the blow, and Agatha Sixth took it like a martyr. One glimpse was enough. Then she turned and silently led the way to the stairs.

At the door of our guest's room which we passed before reaching our own suite, my wife stopped.

"Good night, Wilfred," she said. "Agatha, dear," to the girl, and taking her hand, "you must let me spend the rest of the night with you." And as I stumbled on to my own room I couldn't help thinking that if anything in the world could comfort her, if consolation was to be found, Agatha Sixth would find it in those dear arms.

PART THREE.

CHAPTER X.

The following morning dawned upon the Castle Wyckhoff house party clear and balmy and typically June. For all the world as if the day it heralded was not a critical one for one of its members, and an axious one for his two friends, Dearest and myself, who had invited Terhune to the castle solely to further his interests and welfare. At least that was the way I felt about it. Dearest may have had some other object in view. I hadn't seen her since last night, by the way, and I own I felt alarmed for the success of our plans when I thought of the events of that evening and the shocking disclosure of Terhune's inconstancy, to the very one of all others from whom it should have been hidden.

"Poor old Arch!" I said to myself as I sat down at the breakfast table and began to read the paper until the others should join me. "I'm afraid he's gone and done it now! He's made a bally mess of it this time, as sure as eggs!" And yet even in spite of appearances, secretly I hoped, if Agatha Sixth were really as daffy about him as my wife had seemed to think—But the entrance of both the young persons my thoughts had just named interrupted my meditations and I rose as they seated themselves and with an amazing calm began a commonplace little chatter about unimportant things, just as if nothing had happened at all. Nor did the appearance of Agatha First and Terhune one after the other at all disturb their beautiful serenity.

Strange to say, Terhune gave no evidence of any inward disquiet or cause for alarm. He showed not the faintest symptoms of a guilty conscience, but laughed and chatted with his customary sociability. If it had not been for his persistent avoidance of conversation with Agatha First I should have been convinced in spite of the evidence of my own eyes that he was not the traitor and double-dealer we had every reason to think him, but an upright and innocent gentleman deeply in love with Agatha Sixth and Agatha Sixth only, his straying toward Agatha First having been but a temporary swerving from the path of loyalty, born only of his conceit and thirst for flattery. I'm bound to concede, however, that he made no sort of headway with Miss Lawrence, who met his advances with unfailing courtesy, it is true, but a pillar of ice could scarcely have been more unyielding and the look on her little white pansy face was rather pitifully hard. Dearest was only a little more cordial herself, and I pitied the poor old boy as I saw an expression that I could almost have sworn was hurt and bewildered growing upon his face.

But I didn't get a chance to observe them much longer than a first glance before I plunged myself into the duty of entertaining Agatha First, which naturally devolved upon me. The poor girl wasn't game for much conversation, though, I could see that. And by Jove, if Agatha Sixth looked badly, Agatha First looked worse. Never saw such a hopeless wretched looking young woman in my life. If it hadn't been for the presence of the footman, who was in the room, I believe she would have given way to tears at any moment. She certainly looked as if she'd cried all night as it was, and there was hardly a trace of her splendid color left.

"What Do You Want to Know For?"

Gad! If ever a girl had the appearance of having been run through a wringer, she had. I began to feel more sorry for her than I did for Agatha Sixth, even though her conduct had been more open to criticism.

After all, I soliloquized, the poor thing had as much right to be in love with Terhune as Agatha Sixth did, and perhaps it wasn't quite fair of Dearest to side so entirely with the latter. Of course it was true, as Dearest had explained to me often enough, that Agatha Sixth had cared for him months before Agatha First had ever thought of such a thing, and I suppose had therefore a sort of first claim upon him. And of course the point that she should have seen how things were from the beginning and not allowed herself to get interested, was good, though I didn't argue with them, that she had deliberately tried to alienate Terhune from his acknowledged preference for Agatha Sixth. The girl had never seemed to me to be aware of such a state of things in regard to Terhune and Miss Lawrence and had always gone about her business with the air of a sleep-walker, or as if her mind were on other things.

However, whether that was true or not, I must confess I made rather a mess of my efforts to converse with her and frankly abandoned them for an attempt to get her to eat, but failed also in that. She steadfastly refused everything, even though Dearest, who can't bear anyone to go hungry, however displeased she may be with them, urged her with the utmost cordiality. Dearest makes the prettiest hostess imaginable, and it's only recently that I've been half able to eat for looking at her. Today in honor of its importance I suppose, she had put on my favorite white linen dress with a lot of lace or crochet or something of that sort let in, and I tell you she looked wonderful good. Gad! It's nice to have a wife!

But as I was saying, we were all of us under a rather unusual strain of excitement. I could see as we left the breakfast table that old Arch had begun to have misgivings as to the success of his suit, and was looking very serious as the realization began to dawn upon him that between breakfast and one o'clock he would have to put the decisive question. When he had confided to me last evening that he intended to ask Agatha Sixth today, he had also told me that he meant to wait until the last possible minute to try his fate, in order to humor Agatha Sixth's coquettish desire to keep him waiting for his answer. But he spoke then with a good deal of confidence as to the favorable nature of that answer, while now doubt and anxiety seemed to be his only allies. I was sorry for him, though I couldn't help wondering if his flirtation and disloyal conduct in regard to Agatha First did not make his refusal a just punishment, and I surmised that he had begun to wonder himself if the crowning offense of last night had not become known. In any event, troubled was no word for his expression as we separated in the breakfast room, each to his own pursuits. However deserved his refusal might be, I couldn't help wishing that such a calamity would not overtake him. I think the world of the old boy and I want to see him as happily married as I am—though of course that's not literally possible, as there's only one Dearest in the world.

For myself, I followed my wife out upon the veranda and began to tell her my apprehensions for my friend.

"Look here, Agatha," I said, "I want to know what Terhune's prospects are. What chance has he with Agatha Sixth now? Any at all?" As I have said, I had not yet had an opportunity of speaking privately with her, and she had been with Agatha Sixth all night and was of course in her confidence. I expected to hear how matters stood with Miss Lawrence that moment and with the fullest detail. I was therefore as disagreeably surprised as I've ever been in my life by Jove, when my darling eyed me coldly and impersonally and remarked, "What do you want to know for?"

"Why, because I'm interested in Terhune!" I cried, a little injured. "I want him to succeed in inheriting his aunt's property of course! What else?"

"What else indeed?" retorted my wife scornfully. "If you don't know what else," emphasizing the word "know," "I can't waste any more time talking to you!" Then, as she caught my look of utter astonishment, "O, you men! You men!" she added, shaking her head at me, "you're all alike, after all! But I thought better of you, Wilfred!"

"Thought better of me? But what about?" I queried.

"Have you forgotten?" she asked me, without answering my question. "Have you forgotten last summer, not quite a year ago, when you and Mr. Terhune first came through the fields of Wye and stayed at Castle Wyckhoff with us all—my aunt Mrs. Armistead and the six other Agathas?"

"Rather not!" I exclaimed. "But what's that got to do with the present case? What do you mean, dear?"

"Don't you remember," she persisted, still ignoring my question, her voice thrilling with tears, "how you yourself behaved at that time? Have you forgotten why it was that you wanted to marry me?"

"Because I loved you!" I burst out, as vehemently as if it were indeed that wonderful self-same moment when I first had asked her. "What else?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"Grey" and "Gray."

What is the difference, if any, between "grey" and "gray," aside from the matter of spelling?

The editor of the Oxford Dictionary some years ago made extended inquiry as to usage, and found that opinions in London varied. Replies to his questions showed that in Great Britain the form gray is the more frequent in use, despite the authority of Dr. Johnson and later lexicographers, who give the preference to gray. Many correspondents said that they used the two forms with a difference of meaning, or application, the distinction most generally recognized being that grey denotes a more delicate or lighter tint than gray. Others considered the difference to be that gray is a warmer color, or that it has a mixture of red or brown. Another group held that gray has more of sentiment, gray more of color, which may mean that grey is a suggestion rather than a positive outline.

Saying Grace.

I own that I am disposed to say grace upon twenty other occasions in the course of the day besides my dinner. I want a form for setting out upon a pleasant walk, for a moonlight ramble, for a friendly meeting or a solved problem. Why have we none for books, those spiritual repasts—a grace before Milton—a grace before Shakespeare—a devotional exercise proper to be said before reading the "Faery Queen?"—Charles Lamb.

His Awful "Break."

The little god of bad breaks is ever seeking victims. He made a young man at a social gathering the other evening blush for a week. The young man had been introduced to a young woman. "Why, I know a lady by the same name in Kansas City," he remarked, "only she's a beautiful girl." The young woman frose him to the spot, and he was glad of an excuse to leave the gathering.

For a Friend and One Other

By ANTOINETTE PATTERSON

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

Nichols pulled his hat well down to hide the worried look his face wore.

"It's a pretty piece of business," he said to himself. "I'm convinced the woman's an adventuress, but how am I to find out, and Cyril getting every day more bewitched? If only she claimed some civilized country—but Poland, where I haven't a friend—or even an enemy!"

John Nichols and Cyril Thornton were close friends. Nichols, much the elder, and Cyril's sister were to have been married, but she died.

Nichols was a lawyer from New York, and in the interest of a client was now in Los Angeles. Cyril, recovering from typhoid, had come with him for a quicker convalescence. Everything had been going on smoothly when their train met with an accident.

They had escaped injury and saved the life of a beautiful woman. The woman, whom Cyril thought the most charming he had ever seen, was very grateful, apparently very frank. Her name, she said, was Marie Laska; she had been a widow two years. Her father—and she said this with lowered voice—was deep in Polish politics. He had sent her away fearing she might come under suspicion. She never would have left him, but illness had made another northern winter dangerous, and she had taken a small house near Pasadena. She intended to live in retirement and have a complete rest before returning to Poland. But these two friends, they must come to see her whenever they could spare the time.

It was surprising how much time had been spared by both, for Nichols, unwilling that Cyril should spend days and evenings alone with the charming foreigner, found himself in Walked Forlornly Home.

Pasadena whenever his business would permit. This had been going on for a fortnight.

As a further complication, Cyril, just of age, would shortly be in possession of $25,000.

Nichols walked forlornly home and went to bed.

Next morning he showed Cyril a business letter requesting his presence in San Francisco on Wednesday. His friend, though decidedly adverse to any move, consented to go with him.

Cyril had promised to take Mme. Laska a song that morning, but while dressing to the whistled accompaniment of a Polish air, word came that she had a headache, so would he—and Mr. Nichols, too—come in the evening?

Mme. Laska was tying up a spray of white rose-tree when they arrived. She gave them each a hand in her pretty foreign way.

On a porch table was a half-burned cigarette. Nichols felt sure he detected the faintest aroma of a very fine cigar also.

The professional instinct was aroused. Mme. Laska had repeatedly said she knew no one in California but themselves. The cigar seemed to tell a different story.

Nichols threw his coat in a corner of the porch. In the pocket there was an important letter. If he forgot his coat he would have to come back for it—tonight—on account of leaving the next day.

Cyril pressed a guitar into Marie Laska's hands, seating himself where he could watch the singer's face. The boy was of a poetic nature, and here was everything to speak to it—the flowers, the music, that lovely face.

"Cyril," Nichols said after a time, "as we have a journey before us tomorrow we must say goodby."

"It will be lonely for a few days," he heard Marie Laska say to Cyril.

After bidding Cyril good night, Nichols took the car back to Pasadena. Later he walked toward Mme. Laska's house, and then, hearing Cyril's name, stopped.

A man was talking in English, presumably that the servants might not understand.

"Twenty-five thousand dollars will see our project through and help Poland to her own again. Young Thornton will have the money and you must get it—somehow. You are beautiful and still young, and can make a boy like that do anything."

Nichols knew he was listening to an unscrupulous fanatic. As for Marie, if a tool, she was a willing one.

Even as a lightning flash reveals in an instant miles of country and throws into relief the most prominent features until they are seen more clearly than ever before, so things revealed themselves to Nichols at this moment. Cyril should not marry Mme. Laska, or give up his money. One word from Nichols could fix all that. But if he spoke that word just now, while the boy was still dreaming dreams, would that nature ever be the same again? A sudden rude awakening has been the making of many a man, but it was borne in upon Nichols that it would not do for Cyril.

Nichols had deliberately listened. He now as deliberately went up the steps of the porch and faced the man and the woman sitting there.

"I have heard everything," he said quietly.

Marie's companion put his hand to his hip pocket.

"Don't do that," Nichols said with a little deprecating gesture. "I am worth more to you just now alive." Then he went to the end of the porch and picked up his coat.

"I came back for this," he said. "It has papers in the pockets which I shall want in San Francisco to morrow."

The man and woman watched him curiously. He put on his coat; then he turned to the Pole.

"I will give you $5,000," he said, "for what in return I know you will do. My lawyer, Mr. Henry Stanton, in Los Angeles, will arrange all matters. In consideration of this money you will both leave Pasadena within two days—and the country in the shortest possible time. I will write this down," taking a pen and paper from his pocket, "so there can be no misunderstanding. If there should be I might feel bound to inform the Polish government that I have knowledge of a suspect."

Nichols stepped inside and drew up the document in legal form. The man and woman both signed. Then he turned to Marie.

"Write," he said, "what I tell you." She obeyed silently.

He then told them that this note should be mailed the following night to Cyril at the hotel in Los Angeles.

He turned to go. "You believe that I will keep my end of the contract," he said, "and I that you will keep yours. Good-by." He raised his hat to Marie Laska.

"A little while," he said musingly on the way back to his hotel, "and the boy will have learned discrimination instead of distrust, and the fine edge which is so a part of him will still be there. Ah, Nellie, Nellie, if was something I could do for you too, dear!"

On their return to Los Angeles they went first to Cyril's rooms. There was a note in Mme. Laska's hand writing.

Nichols walked toward the window. He was feeling keenly for the boy as he went over in memory each word he had dictated.

"When you return," it ran, "I shall have left California. I have only time to write you a few lines, for word has come which takes me immediately to Poland. My country has need of me, and still more a man of whom you have often made me think, and with whose fate it now seems best I should unite my own. For my father's sake I shall travel under an assumed name. I shall always think of you, and Mr. Nichols with the greatest kindness and gratitude. Farewell. MARIE LASKA."

Cyril read the letter twice and then, after a moment's silence, handed it to Nichols.

Nichols saw there had been no shock that would be serious.

"Jack," he said, "it's all over—my dream. She was a star too high for me to hope to reach, but I want you to see this letter, for you never rightly understood her. She was so fine and noble and would risk even her life for her country and for her love. I had thought at times she cared for me, but it was just that I reminded her of that other man."

Cyril's eyes had the trusting look of Eleanor's—his dead sister—at that moment and John Nichols turned away his head.

Dickens Read in All Countries.

Dickens' public passes beyond the bounds of our empire. There is America—with its 85,000,000 of people and its widespread, its fervent regard for Dickens. There is France, where Daudet could write: "Little Nell and Paul Dombey came to me as a revelation of purity and innocence." There is Germany, where, as Bunson said: "Dickens compels tears and laughter amongst Germans as amongst his own people." There is Russia, where Tolstoy relates that he found the "Christmas Carol" in the cabins of the humblest serfs, and where "Oliver Twist" and "Nicholas Nickleby" are read in seven different translations in the realms of the czar.—The Dickensian.

M., we will draw out the tickets. The thirteenth ticket out takes the range. The people who will have charge are Harry Kees and Fred B. Leighty.

All who can are requested to be here. If the party that holds the Lucky ticket is not present the number will be advertised for two weeks. If the number does not show up in two weeks then the tickets will be put in the box (except the one) and the drawing repeated and so on until the Lucky number shows up. Remember that the 13th ticket is the Lucky Ticket each time. We are advertising this week to see if the plan suits you. If not tell us and we will keep your name in confidence and change same to suit you. Don't forget to kick if it don't suit you.

YOU'LL HAVE TO PAY UP.

A special agent of the Post Office department, Mr. Harry Strohm, a newspaper man of Kentland, Ind., called on the Kendallville Standard and Sun last week and examined the subscription list under the ruling of the department which will not allow a publisher to send a weekly paper over one year through the mails at regular postage rate without payment of subscription —Waterloo Press. We also have a few people on our list that will have to be dropped unless they pay up soon. We would like to accomodate them but we cannot afford to place a one cent stamp on all papers in arrears. The law is very strict and gives you one year to pay up in and that is as long as we can give you. Please respond promptly. We are trying to give you your money's worth.

Ends Winter's Troubles.

To many, winter is a season of trouble. The frost bitten toes and fingers, chapped hands and lips, chilblains, cold sores, red and rough skins, prove this. But such troubles fly before Bucklen's Arnica Salve. A trial convinces. Greatest healer of Burns, Boils, Piles, Cuts, Sores, Eczema and Sprains. Only 25c. at H. L. Dunkle's.

Prohibition Party victories

The Prohibition party won distinct gains in the recent elections.

Five Prohibitionists were elected to the Minnesota legislature. That is the largest number we ever had in any state legislature. A thousand more votes properly distributed would have elected a dozen more. One sheriff is elected for the third time; a county superintendent of schools was elected and a number of minor offices were also won.

In New York state the new mayor of the city of Cortland is a Prohibition party man, elected in a straight party fight, with Republicans and Democrats working hard to defeat him. It is the greatest victory yet recorded in the New York state fight, and Linn R. Lewis is the first Prohibitionist to be elected mayor of any Empire State city.

The city of Lockport came near giving the new mayor of Cortland a "comrade in arms;" the Prohibitionists polling 1,412 votes for their mayoralty candidate, losing to the Democrats by a plurality of 238. The Republicans deserted their own candidate to help the Democrats beat the Prohibitionist.

The state ticket also shows a good increase—the largest vote for governor since 1892. Other splendid gains were made in New York state, and a large number Prohibitionists were elected to minor offices. But for the heavy blizzard that swept the state on election day, the results would have been even greater.

Iowa reports a total vote double that of two years ago. Texas sends along a word of cheer. Illinois reports one Prohibitionist elected to the legislature, while another has doubtless been counted out. Oregon moves forward with a big increase of party vote and one county carried for state treasurer.

Other states which show no actual increase of the total vote, or perhaps an apparent loss, measure higher in the percentage column than two years ago.—Indiana's gain over last election on governor 998

Last Year Was Record-Breaker for Drinks and Smokes.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The United States has just passed through a banner year for drinks and smokes and oleomargarine. Here is the nation's record for the twelve months ended on June 30, as it shows in the figures of the internal revenue bureau:

163,000,000 gallons of distilled spirits, 30,000,000 gallons more than the year before.

59,485,111 barrels of fermented liquors, an increase of 3,000,000.

7,600,000,000 cigars, 160,000,000 more than 1909.

6,830,000,000 cigarettes an increase of a solid 1,000,000,000.

402,000,000 pounds of plug, fine cut, cube-cut, granulated or sliced smoking tobacco or snuff; 4,000,000 more than the year before.

141,862,282 pounds of oleomargarine, 50,000,000 pounds increase.

Illinois leads all the states of a producer of internal revenue. More than $49,000,000 was collected in that state. New York was second, Kentucky third and Indiana fourth.

Fall Footwear for the Fashionable and The Practical

A shoe that fits perfectly, outwears any shoe that fails of this object. It gives the wearer a satisfied feeling—with himself, with the world and of course, with the department whence the satisfying shoes came.

If you have been having "trouble with your feet" drop in upon us and let us show you what skilled shoe people and the right lines to select from will do for you.

We've made a study of feet and a study of shoes. A long, narrow foot requires one style of last; a short, broad foot requires another; a high instep foot still another, et cetera.

It is paying attention to these classifications of nature in fitting shoes that brings after-satisfaction to the wearer.

The fall lines for men, women and children are in. The line includes everything from the strictly practical working or school shoe to the strictly fashionable evening or dress shoe.

Ladies from

$1.75 to $3.00

We can also please the demand made by the Gents for fine and work shoes of different kinds. The Wonder, Lyconing and Sensation shoe sell for

CHEERFUL WORDS FOR SUFFERING WOMEN.

No woman can be healthy with sick kidneys. They are often the true cause of bearing-down pains, headaches, dizziness, nervousness etc. Keep the kidneys well and health is easily maintained. Doan's Kidney Pills make strong, healthy kidneys.

Mrs. John A. Link, 122 East Perry St., Bucyrus, O., says: "I was so terribly afflicted with kidney complaint, I could not stir out of bed. I was attended by several doctors but they all failed to help me. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me relief after I had given up all hope and soon cured me. I have had no kidney trouble in three years."

Remember the name—Doan's.

Kidding Worse Than Cutting.

Talk about making good with your friends, a New Orleans man told everybody he knew that he was going to Philadelphia for the dual purpose of seeing the world's baseball series and having a slight surgical operation performed. Reaching this city, he consulted a specialist, and was told that an operation was not necessary.

"But, doctor," the New Orleans party urgently interposed, "it must be done."

"Why must it?" wonderingly queried the surgeon.

"Because," was the startling rejoinder of the Southern man, "I told all the boys at home that I was going to have an operation performed, and if I don't make good they will kid the life out of me."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Note From the Basswood Bugle.

Somebody took the rope off the bell in the fire engine house to use for a clothesline, and now, when there is a fire, the constable has to climb up into the tower and ring the bell with a hammer. Somebody took the hammer the other day and, when Hank Purdy's cornerib ketched fire, the constable had to hurry down to Hilliker's store for to borry a hammer. Hilliker had lent his hammer to Deacon Renfrew, who lives four miles out in the country, and by the time the constable had got there and hunted around in the barn for the hammer and got back to the engine house, the angry elements had done their worst and Hank's cornerib was a mass of smoldering ruins.—Judge's Library.

Mixing His Dates.

There is a story of a man who was so transported with joy as he stood up at the altar rail to be married, that his thoughts reverted to a day when he stood up at the prisoner's bar in a court of justice to plead "guilty" or "not guilty" to a criminal charge. So powerfully did that, the most painful event of his life, obtrude itself upon his mind, that when the clergyman put the question, "Wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?" and so on, the poor distracted bridegroom answered with startling distinctness, "Not guilty, so help me God!"—From Tuckerman's "Personal Recollections."

Reason for Strange Names.

A little colored girl appeared on one of the city playgrounds the other day, accompanied by two pickaninnies, who, she explained, were cousins of hers, visitors in Newark. "What are their names," asked the young woman in charge of the playground. "Aida Overture Johnson and Lucia Sextette Johnson," the girls answered. "You see their papa used to work for a opera man."—Newark News.

HEALTH AND INCOME
Both Kept Up on Scientific Food.

Good sturdy health helps one a lot to make money.

With the loss of health one's income is liable to shrink, if not entirely dwindle away.

When a young lady has to make her own living, good health is her best asset.

"I am alone in the world," writes a Chicago girl, "dependent on my own efforts for my living. I am a clerk, and about two years ago through close application to work and a boarding-house diet, I became a nervous invalid, and got so bad off it was almost impossible for me to stay in the office a half day at a time.

"A friend suggested to me the idea of trying Grape-Nuts food which I did, making it a large part of at least two meals a day.

"Today, I am free from brain-fag, dyspepsia, and all the ills of an overworked and improperly nourished brain and body. To Grape-Nuts I owe the recovery of my health, and the ability to retain my position and income."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

MAN MAKES AWFUL MISTAKES

Did Not Recognize Cook on Street Car, Allowing Her to Stand—Wife Afraid of Criticism.

"Why didn't you get up and give her your seat or permit me to give her mine?" said a woman to her husband.

They had just got off a car. The woman's face expressed great anxiety of mind.

"Why should we give her a seat?" the husband asked. "Just because she was so richly dressed, I suppose," he added.

"Is it possible that you did not know her?" the wife exclaimed.

"Of course; I am not supposed to know every well-dressed woman who comes along."

"Oh, James, she is our cook, and I'm afraid she will treasure up against us our lack of courtesy."

"Why didn't you tell me?" the husband exclaimed.

The woman did not reply, but, trembling violently, leaned heavily upon his arm.

According.

Mistress (to prospective servant)—And what wages have you been getting?

Servant—Well, you see, ma'am, wages vary according to what you do.

Mistress—You mean that the more you do the more wages you would expect?

Servant—Oh, no, ma'am. That's what you might think, ma'am, but my brother is a student of political economy and he said it's just the other way: The more you do, the less you get. And so, ma'am, if I take charge of the whole house and do the washing, I get $3 a week. If I just cook and help with the upstairs, I get $5. If I do nothing but the cooking I get $7. —Lippincott's.

Real Considerate.

The aeroplane was stranded in the top of the apple tree.

"Help! Help!" shouted the air pilot. "Can't you see I am up here in the top of your apple tree?"

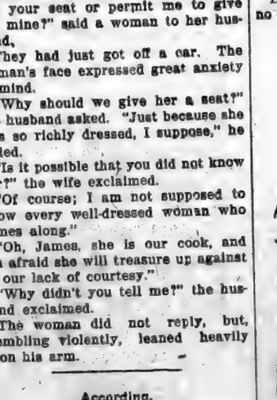
The old farmer blew a quid of tobacco at a wide-eyed grasshopper and chuckled softly:

"I see yeou, bub," he drawled, "an' I was just wondering."

"Wondering what?"

"Haow much yeou would charge to pick them thar apples, being as yeou are so close to them. The hired man has the rheumatism an' can't climb a ladder."

AWFUL HOT.



She—Do you believe in the theory that the sun is losing its heat and eventually will be burned out.

He—Sure. The sun is losing its seat and we are getting it.

Beyond the Styx.

"I believe you were called the father of your country," remarked the shade of Bonaparte. "Did you like the title?"

"I did," answered the shade of Washington, "but between you and me, I'd rate to be even a stepfather to some of the cities therein today."

Proof of Her Ability.

The Other—That's just it. She shows remarkable discretion in the selection of things to be left unsaid.

Just Asking.

Bobby—I say, dad—

Dad—What is it now? Can't you let me have a minute's peace?

Bobby—I only wanted to ask you if near-sighted man could have a far-away look in his eyes.—London Sketch.

SHARPERS MAKE A CLEAN-UP

Three Amateurs Get Roll From Inebriate and Later Arrested on Charge of Counterfeiting.

The three amateur sharpers smiled. They thought they had found an easy mark. He was well dressed and grossly inebriated. And he bore a tight roll of bills that looked like a bologna sausage.

"Boys," he thickly said, "I'm goin' to shend thish wad of shtuff to th' gov'ment laundry an' have it dry cleaned. It's sho fearful dirty. Maybe one of you gents would kindly shee it's addressed to proper place?"

"Why, yes," replied the gang. "We'll take care of it."

"Thanks," replied the victim. "An' now I mush ashk you to lemme have a few clean bills for emergensish don't you know?"

So they searched themselves and gave him a twenty and a ten and a five. Then taking the soiled wad they hurried away.

Two days later the three clever ones were arrested for having counterfeit money in their possession.

But the guileless inebriate was seen no more.

Reversed the Order.

A young clergyman who was of a shy disposition was rather embarrassed at his first marriage ceremony and unwittingly reversed the usual order of the service, thus making the bridegroom promise to love and obey his blushing bride. The error passed unnoticed at the time, but shortly afterward it dawned upon the father of the bride that a mistake had occurred, and he said to the clergyman: "I believe, Mr. ——, you have made John promise to love and obey my daughter. Ah, well," he added, after a pause, and with a sly look at his better half, "I suppose it won't matter much; it generally comes to that in the end, anyway."

He Was Right.

An old Irishman had been employed on the docks as watchman for 36 years. One night his son came home and told him that the superintendent of the docks had decided to get a new watchman.

"Phwat's that? Get a new watchman is it?"

"That's it, old man."

"An' he's goin' to foire me, is it! An' when am Oi to git me discharge?"

"Next month," replied the son.

"Sure, an' Oi could ye the furrst day Oi went t' wurrk there it wouldn't be a stiddy job, an' Oi wur roight."—Housekeeper.

Declined to Interfere.

"Sir," began the nervous young man, as he entered the presence of the dear girl's father, "I want to marry your daughter, and—"

"Oh, don't come to me with your troubles," interrupted the old man. "She told me six months ago that she intended to marry you, so you will have to fight it out between yourselves!"

Ever Chivalrous.

"What do you think I ought to say to you for coming home so late—and in such a condition?" demanded the lady of the house.

"Perish the thought!" graciously replies the courteous husband. "Perish, she thought! M'dear, surely you would not sh'pose I would ever shink you ought to shay she things I shink you ought to shay!"

A Great Change.

"There goes a man," said Miles pointing to a commuter laden with parcels, who was hurrying to catch his train, "who was a great social lion before he got married."

"Alas, poor man!" rejoined Giles. "He looks more like a beast of burden now."

A Hurry Call.

"I see where a hypnotist put his wife in a trance and she didn't speak for 24 hours. Where are you going in such a hurry?"

"I'm going to buy a book on hypnotism."

Something in That.

Customer—Mr. Cutter, why is bacon so high?

SIMILARITY OF MANY PEOPLE

Woman Says That Husband and Wife Who Resemble Each Other Have Same Thoughts.

The woman who is a close observer was discussing with a few friends the matter of resemblances.

"I often see very ordinary persons," she said, "who look almost exactly like some one else who is perhaps highly educated or intellectually brilliant or socially prominent. For instance, some man working on the streets as I pass may look like some college professor I have seen, except that of course the expression of intelligence and ability will be lacking. In other words, they are the same type, but their environment and experiences have been different. It is not at all unusual for husbands and wives to look alike, especially if they are elderly and have lived happily together many years. The explanation of that is perfectly simple. Everybody has seen such cases. On a few occasions I have been much amused at seeing a husband and wife who looked like some other husband and wife respectively. That is, the man would look like another man I knew and the woman would look like that other man's wife. In those cases I could see that the man in each case—perhaps a tall, dark man—had liked his opposite—a petite blonde. The action of thought had been the same in each case and had brought out similar results.

"Another thing that interests me is that people who look alike have the same diseases. I can sometimes tell, half a block away, what diseases a person will be likely to have. I know a croupy child the minute I see one. I do not mean I can diagnose a case of croup. I don't know a thing about medicine or physiology, but I know the look of a person who would be likely to have diphtheria if exposed to it and of one who might have rheumatism later in life. It's all in the way they think, you know—or perhaps you don't believe that?"

WANTS MAN SHE PAID FOR

New Jersey Woman Asks a Commissioner to Hold Immigrant So That She Can Marry Him.

Commissioner Williams expects an interesting session at Ellis Island when the inspectors pick out a husky shoemaker of Trieste and hold him for the arrival of his fiancee.

The commissioner received a letter from a young woman of Jersey City, who described herself as an orphan twenty-eight years old, who had "to work all my lifetime for my existence." She wrote that she received a letter several months ago from a young man in her native city saying that if she would send him the price of a ticket he would cross the seas and marry her.

She explained that the man was "a shoemaker and healthy." She sent a second-cabin ticket for passage on the Red Star line Vaderland, which arrived the other night from Antwerp. Also she forwarded the healthy mender of bad soles $28.16 in cash.

She learned recently, she said, that his relatives in this country had planned to steal him as soon as he arrived and prevent the marriage. She wants the shoemaker herself, and asked the commissioner to hold him and unite them in marriage as soon as she arrives at the island.

The Literary Man.

When I get home where I live at I will remove my wife's new hat from my desk, and my daughter's socks and my wee baby's building blocks, three spools of thread, some tatting frames, a box or two of cut-out games, some scissors, and my wife's new waists, a box of tacks and some tooth paste, a cook book and a sewing kit, some letters that my wife has writ, some apple cores the kids put there, one or two wads of hand-made hair, a bottle of shoe polish, too, a hair brush and a baby shoe, some stockings that are worth a darn, a skein or two of darning yarn, a picture book or two or three, a picture babe has drawn for me, a rubber ball, a piece of gum, some picture postcards and a drum. I'll do'all that when I get home and then write an immortal pome that will have Swinburne double-crossed—if all my pencils are not lost.—Houston Post.

They Do Things Better in France.

It is no easy matter to be married in France, says F. Berkeley Smith, in Success Magazine. One great thing in favor of so sacred a ceremony is that it cannot be hastily performed. It is an event requiring months of preparation, of the signing of endless papers, the certificates of birth and the consent of parents, until at last the wedding day, which has been arranged for to the entire satisfaction of every one concerned, including the legal authorities, arrives. If marriage is difficult, divorce is even more so. There are no such romantic and youthful adventures as eloping on a $12 capital—handing ten to the accommodating parson and wiring for forgiveness with the change.

Couldn't Understand It.

"This stock," said the promoter, "is fully paid up and nonassessable."

"Well, if it's fully paid up," replied the man who was inexperienced in such matters, "I can't see why you want me to put money into it. Wouldn't that be unfair to the people who paid it up?"

When You Think

Of the pain which many women experience with every month it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womanhood seem to be almost a miracle. While in general no woman rebels against what she regards as a natural necessity there is no woman who would not gladly be free from this recurring period of pain.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well, and gives them freedom from pain. It establishes regularity, subdues inflammation, heals ulceration and cures female weakness.

Sick women are invited to consult us by letter, free. All correspondence strictly private and sacredly confidential. Write without fear and without fee to World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of wrapping and mailing only, and we will send you a free copy of Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in handsome French cloth binding.

Schurz Was Sure of Him.

Carl Schurz was dining one night with a man who had written a book of poems, so called, and who was pleased with himself.

The poet was discoursing on the time-worn topic of politics of the men who take office.

"I consider politics and politicians beneath my notice," he said. "I do not care for office. I wouldn't be a senator or cabinet officer, and I doubt if I could be tempted by the offer of the presidency. For the matter of that, I would rather be known as a third-rate poet than a first-rate statesman."

"Well, aren't you?" Schurz shouted at him.

AN EFFECTIVE HOME MADE KIDNEY AND BACKACHE CURE

Easily Prepared Medicine Which Is Said to Regulate the Kidneys and End Backache.

To make up enough of the "Dandelion Mixture" which is claimed to be a prompt cure for Backache and Kidney and Bladder trouble, get from any good Prescription Pharmacist one-half ounce fluid extract Dandelion; one ounce Kargon Compound and three ounces Compound Syrup of Sassaparilla. Shake well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

Those who have tried it say it acts gently but thoroughly on the Kidneys and entire urinary system, relieving the most severe Backache at once.

A well-known medical authority recommends the prescription to be taken the moment you suspect any Kidney, Bladder or Urinary disorder or feel a constant dull Backache, or if the urine is thick, cloudy, offensive or full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a scalding sensation; or for too frequent urination during the night.

This is a 'real harmless vegetable mixture which could not cause injury to anyone and the relief which is said to immediately follow its use is a revelation to men and women who suffer from Backache, Kidney trouble or any form of Urinary disorder.

This is surely worth trying, as it is easily mixed at home or any druggist will do it for you, and doesn't cost much.

The Farmer's Son's Great Opportunity

Why wait for the old farm to become your inheritance? Begin now to prepare for your future prosperity and independence. A great opportunity awaits you in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, where you can secure a Free Homestead or buy land at reasonable prices.

Now's the Time

—not a year from now, when land will be higher. The profits secured from the abundant crops of Wheat, Oats and Barley, as well as cattle raising, are causing a steady advance in price. Government returns show that the number of settlers in Western Canada from the U. S. was 60 per cent larger in 1910 than the previous year.

Many farmers have paid for their land out of the proceeds of one crop.

Free Homesteads of 160 acres and pre-emptions of 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. Fine climate, good schools, excellent railway facilities, low freight rates, wood, water and lumber easily obtained.

BABY'S GIFT FROM HIS PAPA

Inheritance for Which Mother Did Not Seem to Be in Any Great Degree Thankful.

Richard Harding Davis, at a football game in Philadelphia, praised the voices of the young undergraduates shouting their weird college yells.

"It makes me think of a Locust street wife," said Mr. Davis, smiling. "She turned to her husband one night at dinner and remarked:

"'My dear, the first time I saw you was at Franklin Field. Your head was thrown back, your mouth wide open and your face was very red—you were yelling your college yell.'

"'Yes, I remember,' said the young man.

"'And I noticed,' she continued, 'what a remarkable voice you had.'

"'Yes, you spoke of it at the time,' said he. 'But what makes you think of it now?

"'Oh, nothing,' said the bride. 'Only I wish the baby hadn't inherited it. That's all.'"

All in Good Time.

Seven-year-old William had become the proud owner of a pet pig, and insisted upon having all the care of it himself. After a few weeks, as the pig did not seem to thrive, his father said to him:

"William, I'm afraid you are not feeding your pig enough. It does not seem to be fattening at all."

"I don't want him to fatten yet," William replied, knowingly. "I'm waiting until he gets to be as long as I want him, then I'll begin to widen him out."—Tit-Bits.

UNSIGHTLY COMPLEXIONS

The constant use of Cuticura Soap, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, for toilet, bath and nursery purposes not only preserves, purifies, and beautifies the skin, scalp, hair and hands, and prevents inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the complexion and skin. All who delight in a clear skin, soft, white hands, a clean, wholesome scalp and live, glossy hair, will find Cuticura Soap most successful in realizing every expectation.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are admirably adapted to preserve the health of the skin and scalp of infants and children, and to prevent minor blemishes or inherited skin humors becoming chronic, and may be used from the hour of birth. STOMACH MISERY VANISHES

Indigestion, Gas, Sourness and Dyspepsia Go and Your Stomach Feels Fine in Five Minutes.

If your meals don't tempt you, or what little you do eat seems to fill you, or lays like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn or a sick, sour, upset or gassy stomach, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Ask your Pharmacist for a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a little just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and besides, there will be no undigested food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it prevents fermentation and takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store here in town.

These large 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Gastritis or any other stomach disturbance.

DEMAND INCREASE OF LIBRARIES

State Commission Shows 34,405 Books Out in Two Years.

FARMERS EAGER READERS

Woman's Clubs Over the State Have Turned to the Commission for Their Libraries and a Large Demand Now Exists.

Indianapolis.—The forthcoming report from the state library commission, in charge of Carl H. Milam, secretary and executive officer, will show that in the traveling library department, the number of books sent out by the commission into various corners of the state from September 30, 1908, to September 30, 1910, was approximately two and one-third times as many as were sent out during the preceding two years.

The figures in the report are as follows: Volumes circulated from 1906 to 1908, 15,158; volumes circulated during the ensuing two years, 35,405. During the former period, 803 traveling libraries were used, while in the latter period 1,405 were used.

The large increase in the number of books circulated has been due, Mr. Milam reports, to an increased demand from all over the state for the circulating libraries. In the two years just closed a large number of points were placed on the circulation list which were not listed during the preceding years. A large number of additional circulating library clubs have been organized, and the libraries themselves greatly increased in number.

Especially among the farmers has the increase been noted. There has been evolved a plan by which a family in an agricultural community has been made the center for the library circulation, and community clubs have been organized about this family as a center. Once established the clubs have never been dissolved, but have led to the establishment of additional clubs nearby, thus contributing to the general increase of the traveling library field. These clubs in the farming communities average about twenty-five families each. Books sent to these communities always return with signs of excellent care, and the commission has been able to make the books in the collections serve a wide territory without the expense of rebinding.

Women's clubs over the state have in the last two years turned to the commission for their libraries, and a large demand now exists for books on subjects commonly discussed in these clubs. To serve this purpose the commission has established what is known as an "open shelf list," from which are supplied books for special study in the clubs, or books which are not included in the regular circulating libraries. These are held to be sent out on special requests, while in addition sets of books especially adapted to study club work are maintained.

Condemns Five Dairies.

Five dairies at Lawrenceburg, Ind., have been condemned by H. E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner. Mr. Barnard says he found all the dairymen used distillery slop for feed, which is under the ban of the pure food authorities. Thirteen of the dairies inspected during the month of October were pronounced "poor," two "fair" and one "good."

Speaking of dairy inspection, Mr. Barnard said:

"We never class a dairy as 'poor' unless it is unsanitary from almost every point of view. When the buildings are dilapidated, the light insufficient, the milkroom poorly equipped and unclean and the cows dirty we grade the dairy as 'poor.' These inspections were made in the early fall when all the cattle were on grass and in the stable only during the night. How much worse the conditions would be in the winter when the cattle are in the stables all day, it would be impossible to anticipate."

The omission of the word "himself" in the pure food and drug act invalidated the law so far as the sale of milk from cows which have been fed from the refuse of distilleries is concerned. At present, the law makes the sale by the servant or agent illegal, but neglects to prohibit the sale by the dairyman himself. The state board of health will seek to have this law amended by the next general assembly.

The distillery refuse or waste paper from distillery operation, which contains quantities of starch, fats and proteids, is hauled from the distilleries and fed to the cattle, while yet warm.

Pensions for Indianians.

Pensions were granted to Indianians as follows: James Maloy, $15; William H. H. Middleton, $15; J. Miesse, $30; F. M. Parman, $24; Edward Roesly, $30; Josephine Smith, $12; Warren S. Smith, $15; Mary Sparks, $12; Andrew J. Whelchel, $30; Wiley Bragg, $15; Edwin C. Burks, $15; Edward T. Gardner, $20; L. L. Gilpin, $30; G. G. Grimes, $14; A. Hollingsworth, $8; William A. Hoskins, $15; William B. Lewis, $10; P. Liggin, $30; James P. Long, $14; William McGaffigan, $20.

New Head for State Children's Home.

John L. Peetz, who was elected superintendent of the Indiana Children's Home society at a directors' meeting to take the place of Sumner W. Haynes, who resigned to take up the practise of law at Portland, took charge of the position. When Mr. Peetz, who is state statistician, retires from the state office he will be succeeded in that position by Thomas Brolley.

Mr. Peetz will direct the work of all persons in the employ of the society. There are four district superintendents, each of whom was placed on a salary of $65 a month by the directors. Rev. Morton C. Pearson, president of the board, said that Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Carey, who have charge of the children's home maintained by the society at Hadley, will be retained as superintendents of the home. Mr. Peetz's salary will be $1,800 a year.

There were several candidates for superintendent of the society and two ballots were necessary to make the selection. On the first ballot the candidates were voted for as follows: Mr. Peetz, 11 votes; R. M. Elliott of Marion, 9; John W. Prior of Freedom, 1, and J. K. King of Indianapolis, 1. On the second ballot Mr. Peetz and Mr. Elliott were the only candidates, and the vote was 12 for the former and 11 for the latter.

As chairman of a committee appointed by the directors to investigate the advisability of merging the Indiana Children's Home society and the Children's Aid association of Indianapolis, Rev. Joshua Stansfield reported that the committee had decided that the proposed merger would not be advisable at this time. The report of the committee was unanimously indorsed by the directors.

The action of the directors does not dispose finally of the merger question. It was the general opinion that the merger idea was a good one and that it might be well to consider it later on.

"Our society is on very friendly relations with the Children's Aid association," said Felix T. McWhirter, a director. "We decided, at our meeting, to co-operate with this association in every way possible, and to prevent duplication in the work of the two organizations. However, we do not feel that the time is ripe at present for a merger."

Says State Needs Roads.

C. A. Kenyon was the guest of the Plainfield Public Improvement league. A large and enthusiastic audience greeted Mr. Kenyon, who delivered an address on "Good Roads." Mr. Kenyon said that Indiana was far behind her sister states in the quality of her roads, and attributed this to the fact that our laws are antiquated and need revision to bring them in time with modern thought and practise. He said that all of the states east and many of those west and south of us have state highway commissions and state aid for the building and maintenance of their roads, while Indiana has her roads maintained by working out road taxes—a relic of the middle ages.

Mr. Kenyon went on to show how poor roads levied a tremendous invisible tax on the farmer in the extra cost of hauling. Produce, he said, can be hauled on good, hard, smooth roads at from 1 to 5 cents per ton per mile, while on Indiana roads it costs from 16 to 35 cents per ton per mile, according to the condition of the roads.

Last year, according to the Indiana bureau of statistics, the farmers raised 6,690,315 tons of wheat, corn, oats, potatoes and other produce. If this produce were hauled on an average of five miles at a cost of 20 cents a ton per mile, when it could be marketed over good roads at from 1 to 5 cents per ton per mile, the farmers were paying an invisible tax, or sustaining a loss of $10,000,000 per annum without knowing it. He spoke also of the use of convicts for the building and maintenance of roads by some of the states, and suggested that Indiana could use with advantage some of her able-bodied convicts in the preparation of road material and perhaps the jail prisoners for repairing roads.

I. O. O. F. Officers Appointed.

At the closing session of the meeting of the grand lodge, I. O. O. F., of Indiana, the following officers were appointed by the newly elected grand master, J. M. Stipp: Grand chaplain, C. L. Airhart, Roachdale; grand instructor, George P. Bornwasser, New Albany; grand marshal, W. W. Swank, Wingate; grand conductor, C. J. Robb, Michigan City; grand guardian, R. M. Coleman, Indianapolis; assistant grand guardian, H. Terry Winamac; grand herald, W. H. Taylor, Rochester; assistant grand herald, George G. Sherwood, Valparaiso.

The new officers of the grand lodge were installed, various matters of routine business disposed of, and, on behalf of the grand lodge, Past Grand Master Enoch G. Hogate of Bloomington, presented a grand master's jewel to Past Grand Master A. L. Miller of Terre Haute.

OFFICIALS FAVOR GRAPE GROWING

B. W. Douglas Points Out Reason for Cultivation.

VINEYARDS NOT CARED FOR

Entomologist Cannot Understand Why Housewife Pays 35 Cents a Basket for Grapes When the Farmer Can Raise the Fruit.

Indianapolis.—With the Indiana housewife just completing her fall making of grape jelly, grape marmalade, and stowing away in the cellar her bottle of choice home-made grape wine or unfermented grape juice, all made from grapes for which she has paid 35 cents a basket of five pounds of grape and a pound of basket, B. W. Douglass, state entomologist, is at a loss to understand why the enterprising Indiana farmer or fruit grower has not had his share of the money the housewives have expended willingly for the raw material.

There is no soil reason and no climatic reason why Indiana should not grow grapes for Indiana consumers, according to Mr. Douglass, who has included in his annual report a large number of pages devoted to grape culture. With the same attention given to grape growing, as is given to growing corn, wheat, or oats, Mr. Douglass contends, as in the case of the apple, that the Indiana land owner can realize large profits from vineyards properly cared for.

In his examination of the vineyards of the state in preparation for his report, Mr. Douglass found that few landowners, save in parts of the southern districts of the state, give any great amount of attention to grape growing. True, virtually every farmer has a small grape arbor which supplies a few grapes for home use, but very few of them have attempted to grow grapes either for market or for wine making.

Mr. Douglass advocates making grape wine, saying that he is inclined to agree somewhat with a German of his acquaintance, who says that a high tax ought to be placed on beer and whisky and a small tax, if any, on grape wine, as a means of reducing drunkenness.

The first attempt at grape culture in Indiana, Mr. Douglass found, was made by a colony of Swiss in Switzerland county. European varieties were attempted, but the effort failed, as has every similar attempt made since. In 1870 it was found that European vines in America were attacked by an insect known as the grape phylloxera, which killed the European varieties. Attention was then turned to grafting on native American roots, with the result that hardy varieties were obtained which withstood the ravages of the insect. On these grafts has been built up the American grape industry.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Terre Haute.—Although probably fatally wounded, Albert E. Lee, station agent for the Pennsylvania railroad at Edwardsport, on the Indianapolis & Vincennes division, grappled with a robber who forced his way into the station, and held him until help arrived. Lee was shot just below the heart. The robber was taken into Vincennes, where he gave his name as George Boyd and said he lived at Indianapolis.

Fort Wayne.—So far pork is the only food product which has dropped in Fort Wayne in accordance with the decreases in prices noted all over the country. Dealers are now paying 75 cents less a hundred pounds for pork than they were two weeks ago. No appreciable change in the price of pork has as yet been made, however.

Columbus.—A seven-year-old son of Ferdinand Waughtel, a farmer near here, was bitten by a four-weeks-old dog, which is believed to have been suffering from the rabies and the head of the animal was sent to the state chemist at Indianapolis for examination. The mother of the dog died of hydrophobia a few days ago.

Richmond.—Rev. Thomas J. Graham, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, in an address in the high school chapel, struck a blow at the large class in the city, members of certain clubs and others, who devote their Sundays to playing golf and tennis. He declared such Sunday amusement immoral.

Evansville.—John T. Luton, who died a week ago after taking two draughts from a bottle supposed to contain gin, was poisoned with wood alcohol, according to a finding of Coroner Laval, after an analysis of the contents of the bottle by the state board of health laboratory. The bottle contained 91 per cent. of wood alcohol.

South Bend.—Miss Lorenna Brittenham, it was announced, has withdrawn her breach of promise suit against Contractor Frank L. Shipe, upon the payment of an amount of money not made public. She asked for $3,000 in court. Shipe was recently married to Mrs. Delos R. Metzger.

South Bend.—Practically all city trams was put out of commission by a fall of sleet and a cold rain. The combination placed the pavements in an almost impassable condition. Horses could not be used and during the morning [illegible] their feet [illegible].

Dry Your Clothes on a Wet Washday

With a New Perfection Oil Heater

When clothes can't be hung outside, and must be dried in a room or cellar, the New Perfection Oil Heater quickly does the work of sun and air. You can hang up the wet clothes, light your Perfection Oil Heater, open the damper top, and the heat rises and quickly dries the clothes.

Do not put off washing to await a sunny day in order to avoid mildew. Dry your washing any day with hot air from a

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Absolutely smokeless and odorless

It gives just as much heat as you desire. It is safe, odorless and smokeless.

It has an automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back, so the wick can be quickly cleaned. Burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, because of a new device in construction, and can always be easily unscrewed for rewicking.

An indicator shows the amount of oil in the font. Filler-cap does not need to be screwed down, but is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain. Finished in japan or nickel, strong and durable, well-made, built for service and yet light and ornamental. It has a cool handle and a damper top.

WHY pay good money for ALCOHOL when buying flavors, perfumes, and toilet preparations? Do you realize that this is what you are doing when you buy LIQUID goods? Liquid extracts are from 80% to 95% alcohol. NO-AL products contain no alcohol. Use them and save money as well as securing greater satisfaction.

C. H. Stuart & Co., of Newark, N. J. have invested Mr. Geo. Milliman of St. Joe, Ind. with the sole agency for their NO-AL goods in this territory and he is now ready to fill all orders. If in need of goods of this nature, use these and save money.

ASK HIM about the merits of the NO-AL Hair Tonic, retailing at one dollar. This is a product that is backed by a $25.00 guarantee of satisfaction in addition to the guarantee that is back of all of the NO-AL products. When used in combination with the Shampoo Powder it will keep the hair and scalp in perfect condition, no matter what may be the trouble. It is NOT a "cure-all" but a radical and sensible method of restoring health to diseased hair follicles.

DO not take our word for this! Try the goods on our guarantee and if they are not satisfactory, get your money back.

Voting Contest

News announces first and the greatest Voting Contest ever held in this vicinity.

Any lady can enter. Many prizes given away.

When it became known that The News intended to inauguarate a popular voting contest interest began to develop and many are inspecting the plan with the view of aiding some friend in winning the handsome $400.00 Oakland piano or some of the other prizes that are offered.

Many nominations will soon be in and votes will be cast.

Such valuable prizes as are offered are worth working for and will no doubt fall to the lot of the industrious, worthy and interested ladies who make an effort to win. A piano is the pride of any household and the fact that a number of other prizes not usually found in contests are being given away make it doubly interesting.

The prizes given by the merchants in the list are good ones and the contestant who makes a good showing and fails to win the piano will be awarded one of the other valuable prizes.

Read the rules elsewhere in this issue or we will mail them upon request. Inspect the offerings of the merchants and learn how you may secure votes for yourself or friend. Be sure and ask these merchants for coupons.

A large vote is given on subscriptions.

Use the twenty-five vote coupon in this issue and cast it for someone, as it may be the starter of a winner. Fill out the nominating blank and send it or hand it to the publisher, as this act may be the means of helping some deserving lady to win a handsome piano or some of the other valuable prizes enumerated in this list.

The contest is without doubt the biggest business getting enterprise that has ever been presented to the people in this section.

In this issue will be found a display announcement concerning this contest; also nominating blank and a 25 vote coupon. Nominate some friend, and send in the coupon.

While The News enjoys a prosperous business it is always reaching out after more and in our present method of helping we hope in turn to help ourselves.

We expect to increase our subscription list at an exceedingly rapid rate, therefore benefiting the advertiser.

Remember that the merchants interested in this contest will give 25 vote coupons with every $1 cash purchase.

If you can't understand the rules of this contest, call or write to this office, and we will be pleased to go over the proposition with you.

Remember and have your friends trade with merchants who are giving the coupons. They are as follows:

Odd Clothing Materials

The Russians are manufacturing a fabric from the fiber of a filamentous stone from the Siberian mines which is said to be of so durable a nature that it is practically indestructible. The material is soft to the touch and pliable in the extreme, and when soiled has only to be placed in a fire to be made absolutely clean.

Iron cloth is largely used today by tailors everywhere for the purpose of making the collars of coats set properly. This cloth is manufactured from steel wool, and has the appearance of having been woven from horsehair.

Wool not the product of sheep is being utilized abroad for the making of men's clothing. This is known as "limestone wool," and is made in an electric furnace. Powdered limestone mixed with certain chemicals is thrown into the furnace and, after passing through a furious air blast, it is tossed out as fluffy white wool. When it comes from the furnace the wool is dyed and made into lengths like cloth. A pair of trousers or a coat made of this material cannot, it is claimed, be burned or damaged by grease, and is as flexible as cloth made of sheep's wool.

A novelty in dress for women is spun-glass cloth, which may, it is said, be had in white, green, lilac, pink and yellow shades. The inventor of this fabric was an Austrian, and his invention is said to have resulted in the production of a material as bright and flexible as silk. The first lady to wear a gown of this material was of royal rank. The dress was of a very delicate shade of pale lavender shot with pink, and its peculiar sheen reminded her admirers of the sparkle of diamond dust.

Paper clothes were worn by the Japanese troops, who found them very serviceable and much warmer than those of cloth. Paper dressing gowns, bath robes and similar articles of attire are now turned out by the carload in England, France, Germany and other European countries. The paper whereof they are made is of the "blotter" variety, and after being treated by a new process is dyed in various colors or printed with a pretty floral design.

Even gloves are made of paper, the principal claim to its advantages that they are susceptible of being cleaned many times.

Edward M. McKennan, recently elected representative from DeKalb county to succeed himself, declares he will throw into the waste basket any petition presented him by the temperance element in his constituency praying him to oppose the repeal of the county local option law. He bases his action upon his belief in the democratic platform that declares for ward and township option also upon the fact that this same element bitterly opposed his election and are now entitled to no sympathy from him. He so advised a delegation of ladies who waited upon him declaring he would "stand upon the democratic platform through thick and thin"—Dispatch.

A few days ago, the writer picked up in one of our business houses, one of the many metropolitan daily papers which find their way into the small rural towns. Glancing over its columns, our attention was arrested by the headlines over an article relating to the great deluge, or Noah's flood. The writer of this article, if our memory does not fail us, was a professor in one of the large universities. In referring to the building of this ark, he said it was all a myth, that the people in that age and locality, were very ignorant and had to be treated as children, that they could not comprehend any teaching that was not in the form of an allegory or a parable. We are not in a position to either deny or affirm the truthfulness of his statement, nor can we know the motive that inspired him to write it, but it seems to us that there is a disposition manifested on the part of some of the educators of our land, to discredit many of the things that are, if not really beneficial, at least cherished traditions that could do no harm. Some people take an insane delight in climbing upon some pinnacle where they can be seen and heard, then aim their shafts of ridicule at some one whose works will be an everlasting monument to their memory, while these same iconoclasts will be buried in the dust of their own puerile, dribbling rubbish. What does it matter whether Shakespeare or Bacon was the author of Shakespeare? What satisfaction can these imbiciles derive, who say that Washington and the cherry tree business is all folderol? And we could go on further, if it would be of avail, to give further instances, of this battering at granite walls with pop guns, in the hands of these intellectual pygmies but these few instances will be enough to remind you that you, too, have no doubt noticed exhibitions of this same spirit evinced by this same brood. Every age has had them, and may have them 'till the day of judgment, so we needn't be scared, for in spite of it all, the world will continue to move.

SAVE YOUR COUPONS AND VOTE FOR YOUR FRIENDS

ST. JOE NEWS.

NEWS POPULAR VOTING CONTEST IS IN FULL PLAST.

VOL. XXIV. ST. JOE, DeKALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY, DEC. 8 1910. NO. 49

Many are Nominated

Their Number Adds Great Interest and a Strenuous Endeavor will be made by Prospective Winners

Trade With Merchants Who Give Vote Coupons

The big prize voting contest announced in these columns last week is creating more interest than we imagined it would at the beginning. Names of the contestants are being sent to this office, and soon there will be many other valuable prizes enumerated.

All of these handsome prizes are enumerated in the announcement on another page and will be given to some of the ladies of this city and adjacent territory.

The question is "How can I do it?" All that is necessary is to get your relatives and friends to trade with the merchants who are donating prizes in this popular voting contest. For each $1.00 spent with merchants you will receive 25 votes, which can be voted for any of the contestants. Also get your friends to subscribe for THE NEWS. For each one year new subscription you will receive 600 votes; for one year renewal 500 votes; for each one year back subscription, 400 votes Voting can commence at any time in a city ballot box which will be placed in THE NEWS office, and the keys to the box will be given to the awarding committee whose names will be announced in another issue of THE NEWS

Use the free coupon in this issue. If you know of any lady who has not been nominated and whom you think would make a good race, use the nominating blank in this issue and send her name to the office, or bring it in person and her name will be entered. It matters not if she is married or single. This is a popular lady voting contest not necessarily a "young lady," voting contest.

Read the rules and regulations on another page and govern yourself accordingly. Some one is going to receive these prizes, and you can help decide who it will be.

First count in contest will be Jan. 10th at which time $10.00 in gold will be awarded to the contestant receiving the largest number of votes.

Get busy and vote for your choice. The contest will be conducted squarely and no partiality will be shown to any one. Do it now, and help some one reap the benefits of this offer.

Remember that many of the merchants of St. Joe are interested in this contest and give a 25 vote coupon with each $1.00 purchase Those who do not fully understand the rules and regulations of this contest can call or write this office and we will be pleased to go over the proposition with them, or phone No. 10.

Following is a list of the parties that have been nominated in THE NEWS voting contest.

Santa's Letter

North Pole
Dec. 8, 1910.

Dear Children:

This is the time of the year that my little girls and boys are beginning to think of Christmas presents. Now children, I have got a big supply this year, and I want you to write a nice letter to the Editor of the NEWS and tell just what you want, so I won't make any mistakes when I come. It would be awful funny wouldn't it if I would give some little girl an air gun when she wanted a doll that shuts its eyes when you lay it down; or give some little boy a doll when he wanted a sled or a pair of shiny new skates. Now if you will write a letter and tell me just what you want not forgetting to put on the name and date, and the name of your post office, (for this is necessary) I won't make any such mistake. You see I could not get along without the St. Joe News and I will read all your letters, yes everyone, so if you don't want to get left, write to me and hand your letter to Mr. Leighty. Now don't forget to sign your name for that will spoil it all. Ever your loving

Santa Claus.

Three weeks of the evangelistic campaign is ended at the Concord church. So far unbounded success has attended the work. The great number of unsaved people who are attending the services and confessing their sins shows that the spirit of God is in their midst. Everybody is doing personal work and when such a spirit as that is manifested you can always count on having a revival. Rev. Corn and wife and Rev. Frank Lineberry and wife are conducting the meetings.

FOR SALE:—Thoroughbred Buff Leghorns roosters and pullets also Black Monorcas roosters and white Wyandotts. All good enough for the show room.

Daniel J. Baker has launched in business at Montpelier, Ohio, with his cousin, Mr. Peter Reasoner. The hardware and implement business is their line and as Mr. Reasoner has been there for some few years in business with the experience that Mr. Baker has, the two gentlemen should make things move. Mr. Baker is A-1 hardware man. For five years and four months he sold goods in St. Joe and was successful in the business. The Montpelier stock is extra large and has a heavy trade. Mr. Baker was also a firm believer in advertising and should they carry out this line of their work, there is no reason why they should not prosper. He will move in the spring.

COUCH OF LUXURY.

The most perfect resting place ever devised for a human being is just beneath the roof, and then you must be able to see the shingle nails sticking through. If a gentle rain be falling, so much the better. Five minutes spent in that sweet retreat are enough to banish the memory of every trouble. Debt and death lose their terrors, and the peace that passes understanding comes upon you, says the Washington Post. You become a boy again and enter once more into the world that used to be. Soon the dark corners of the room are peopled with the images of childhood. Over where the old clothes are hanging you can see the outlines of a dismantled ship, while down the sandy shore come Robinson Crusoe and Man Friday. A swarthy face peeps from behind the big trunk. It is Faringhea, the strangler, creeping stealthily upon his victim. Faster and faster they come, some pleasing, some ferocious. You welcome them all and are not a bit afraid, and the rain drips, drips, with a steady, monotonous sound. Then comes a blank. Next morning the spell is broken, but the memory remains. You see the old clothes and the trunk, and find that the only gobelin tapestry in the room is a cluster of cobwebs over the little dormer window. But you had slept the sleep of the just, and found it most refreshing.

The passenger traffic between the United States and Europe continues to offer most alluring inducements. Many of the big companies are adding the newest, largest and swiftest vessels to their fleets. One of the latest launchings is that of a ship that is being built by a French line, to run to New York. This is one of the greatest craft yet completed, and when put in commission will be able to carry 2,020 passengers. The total cost will be about $5,000,000. That is what foreign concerns are doing to get American trade. And Americans permit them to monopolize a business that should be in American control and which should be a most important auxiliary in extending American commerce.

English owners of homing pigeons have lost so many of them this season that they believe there is an especial cause. This cause, many of them are inclined to suspect, is wireless telegraphy. Many will dismiss the indictment as fanciful, on account of the comparative weakness of the current which wireless telegraphy brings into play. The answer to this is that the current does not kill the birds, but only confuses them, causing them to miss their way. If the Marconi current affects pigeons, why not gulls? Indeed, it would seem not impossible that wireless telegraph stations may be the means of greater disaster to gulls than lighthouses.

From London comes the announcement of the death of the woman who claimed to be the original of "Little Dorrit," that famous character of Dickens. The lady was entitled to the benefit of the doubt, but it is a fact that similar claims have been made by others. It is also asserted that a brother of the woman who has just died was the original "Tiny Tim," and that he served in part as the model for "Paul Dombey." If all those assertions can be proved it would seem that the family formed a sort of trust for Dickens characters.

Perhaps if the truth were known a considerable proportion of the so-called automobile "accidents" would be found to have resulted from befuddled heads and unsteady nerves. The menace of a man under the influence of liquor and in an automobile is easily appreciated, and when it is demonstrated that crashes on the road are due to drunkenness the punishment should be severe. Those who insist upon running amuck on the highways should be made to pay a heavy penalty, whether they be sober or drunk.

The usual fate of get-rich-quick schemes is collapse at the end. And the "lambs" are fleeced as a preliminary. A speculative scheme of this kind in Connecticut has brought up in the bankruptcy court, with unsecured claims of $500,000 to be settled. And the further sequel no doubt will be the charging of the sum to the profit and loss account of those foolish enough to "invest."

THIS MODERN AGE

TAFT URGES KNIFE

INFORMS CABINET OFFICERS THEY MUST CUT THEIR ESTIMATES.

ASKS FOR GREATER ECONOMY

It Is Planned to Reduce Expenses So That They Will Measure Up With Actual Necessities of Government Service.

Washington.—President Taft Tuesday informed his cabinet officers, after scrutinising the final draft of the estimates of the various departments for the next fiscal year, that there must be a further and deeper cut in them.

To give effect to his orders, the president had the chiefs of departments before him and the rather extraordinary picture was presented of the head of the nation delving into figures and asking the whys and wherefores of routine expenditures which ordinarily the president is not supposed to know anything about.

Economy is to be the watchword of the forthcoming message. The cabinet chiefs were informed that in cutting down their estimates by $40,000,000 last year they did good work; but that better still must be done this year. The plan is to cut down expenses so that they will measure up accurately with the actual necessities of the government service. In addition to the members of the cabinet, Chairman Alexander of the house, rivers and harbors committee, and General Bixby, chief of the engineers of the army, were called in and told of the plans of the president for retrenchment and reform.

Speaker Cannon and Representative Mann of Chicago were at the White House for more than an hour in consultation with the president, who had a general talk with them on the outlook for legislation in the short session. The outlook for any material accomplishments in this line grows darker every day.

SAILORS WIN THEIR DEMANDS

Brazilian Congress Grants Amnesty and New Concessions to Rebellious Tars and Revolt Ends.

Rio Janeiro.—The mutiny among the sailors of the Brazilian navy was ended Friday.

Congress, meeting in extraordinary session, voted to concede every demand of the ultimatum presented by the sailors, including general amnesty for the men who, after murdering as many of their superior officers as was necessary to place them in complete control, trained the guns of the warships on the capital.

What effect the outcome will have eventually on the discipline in the navy is a matter of some concern. The immediate effect is to give the sailors increased pay, shorter hours of service and less work, through the recruiting of additions to the crews, and to abolish corporal punishment in the fleet.

During the debate in congress the mutinous vessels put to sea and disappeared. Their destination is unknown.

Following the action of congress the city resumed its normal activities and the public excitement subsided.

There is no attempt to give a political color to the revolt.

PARLIAMENT IS DISSOLVED

KING'S SPEECH MAKES ONLY BRIEF REFERENCE TO CRISIS.

Expresses Belief That Good Will of U. S. Will Be Increased by Fisheries Settlement.

London.—With the dissolution of parliament all formalities preliminary to the election of a new parliament were completed. The proclamation of dissolution summoned the new parliament to assemble on January 31, 1911.

There was a beggarly array of nearly empty benches when Black Rod summoned the house of commons to the house of peers. Winston Churchill, the home secretary, was the only minister present.

Lord Loreburn, the lord high chancellor, read the speech of the king. It was brief. In referring to the constitutional crisis his majesty said that he regretted that the conference between the leaders of the opposing parties had failed of an agreement over the reformation of the upper house.

Following an allusion to the death of his father, King Edward VII., the king referred to the recent arbitration of the New Foundland fisheries dispute with the United States, as follows:

"I confidently hope the questions connected with the North Atlantic fisheries between Canada and Newfoundland on the one hand and with the United States of America on the other, which have been the subject of controversy for nearly a century, have been at last finally settled by the award at The Hague tribunal.

"It is the cause of special satisfaction that it has been found possible to solve by arbitration problems of such an intricate and difficult nature, and the award has been received by both sides in a spirit which must send to increase good will."

REBELS HOLD UP A TRAIN

Cars Ditched, Three Women Killed—Passengers Held Prisoners 24 Hours, but Well Treated.

Torreon, Mexico.—Americans arriving here Tuesday from points in the state of Chihuahua tell of the holding up a few days ago of a passenger train on the Chihuahua & Pacific railroad by revolutionists. Cars were ditched and three Mexican women were killed. There were said to be about 100 revolutionists in the party and the train was wrecked in the belief that it carried soldiers. The affair occurred between Chihuahua and Madera. The passengers were held prisoners by the revolutionists for 24 hours, but were well treated. Upon extorting a promise from the railroad officials not to send a train of soldiers, the passengers were released and were taken back to Chihuahua in a special which went out after them.

INDICT JAMES J. GALLAGHER

Assailant of Mayor Gaynor Is Held on Charge of Assault With Intent to Kill.

Jersey City, N. J.—The Hudson county grand jury Tuesday handed up to Judge Blair of the court of common pleas three indictments against James J. Gallagher, the assailant of Mayor Gaynor. Two of the indictments charge atrocious assault with intent to kill Mr. Gaynor and Street Cleaning Commissioner Edwards, and the other the carrying of a concealed weapon.

BEGIN WAR ON TRUST

U. S. FIGHT TO CRUSH AMERICAN COMPANY STARTS WITH DISSOLUTION SUIT.

H. O. HAVEMEYER IS ACCUSED

Late Head of Sugar Corporation Said to Have Pocketed $10,000,000—Executors Made Defendants—Government Files Petition.

New York.—Attacking the American Sugar Refining company, familiarly known as the sugar trust, as a lawless combination, the federal government Monday began in the United States circuit court its long-expected suit for the dissolution of the corporation.

A voluminous petition was filed by United States District Attorney Henry A. Wise. Before the bill finally was completed it had the approval of Attorney General Wickersham.

The petition, to which as yet no answer has been made by the sugar company, alleges that the trust has employed the usual means of all such large industrial combinations in stifling competition, by purchasing a controlling interest in competing concerns where that method proves necessary and by crushing out other concerns by underselling in their territory. To accomplish the latter result the petition refers to the systematic rebating arrangement the trust for years maintained with the railroads.

One of the most sensational allegations is that the late Henry O. Havemeyer, for many years head of the sugar combine, received $10,000,000 in common stock of the National Sugar Refining company of New Jersey as a gift at the time that corporation was formed to take into the combine four independent companies—the National Sugar Refining company, run by B. H. Howells, Son and Company; the New York Sugar Refining company of Long Island City, operated by Claus Bosher; the Mollen Havre Sugar Refining company of Brooklyn, and the W. J. McCabe Sugar Refining company of Philadelphia. Up to 1900 these companies were independent and it is claimed the American company was determined to acquire them. Under a plan inaugurated by Havemeyer, John E. Parsons and James H. Post, the National company was organized and took over the four plants. When the new stock was ready for distribution, the petition sets forth, Post delivered to Havemeyer the entire issue of 100,000 shares with a par value of $10,000,000. The petition asks that the Havemeyer executors, who are named among the defendants, be enjoined from voting this stock. It is the government's contention that these shares were issued contrary to law and in violation of the company's charter.

In general the petition sets up that the defendants "for some time past have been and are now engaged in an unlawful combination and conspiracy to restrain the trade and commerce between the several states and with foreign countries in raw sugar, sugar beets, refined sugar, molasses, sirups and other by-products of raw sugar and sugar beets, and to monopolize the same. Such unlawful combination and conspiracy is the result of a series of wrongful acts extending over a period of many years. In participating in these acts all of the defendants have been actuated by wrongful intent to restrain interstate and foreign trade in raw and refined sugar and related articles and to monopolize parts thereof."

The petition then prays for a perpetual injunction against the parties and corporations named from continuing the evils practised. It further more asserts in effect that within the American Sugar Refining company there are two other trusts—the National Sugar Refining company of New Jersey and the Western Sugar Refining company of California—and that each of these be enjoined from engaging in interstate and foreign commerce.

Another allegation is that the trust has obtained unfair advantages over competitors through the customs frauds by receiving rebates from railroads and keeping up the prices of sugar.

MICHAEL CUDAHY IS DEAD

Last of Great Pioneer Packers Passes Away from Pneumonia Following Operation.

Chicago.—Michael Cudahy, president of the Cudahy Packing company, and the last of the four great pioneer meat packers of the country, died last evening at Mercy hospital. The end came peacefully. All of his immediate relatives, including his three brothers, three sons and four daughters were at his bedside.

Mr. Cudahy was operated on early last Wednesday morning for appendicitis. Double pneumonia afterward set in and his age, sixty years, was a big factor against him.

Funeral Stops All Wheels.

Cleveland, O.—Every street car in the city stood still for five minutes while the funeral services were being held for Robert W. Taylor, late judge of the United States circuit and district court and ex-congressman.

Nebraska Count Is 1,192,214.

Washington.—The population Nebraska is 1,192,214, according statistics of the thirteenth census made public Tuesday. This is an increase of 125,914, or 11.8 per cent over 1,066,300 in 1900.

CORPORATION TAX RUNS HIGH

262,490 CONCERNS MAKE RETURNS UNDER NEW LAW.

Total Amount Collected First Year Totals $27,000,000, Averaging $103.97 Per Company.

Washington.—The sweeping importance of President Taft's order for the publicity of corporation tax returns is emphasized by the figures contained in the annual report of Royal C. Cabell, commissioner of internal revenue. According to this report, the books of his office show that these returns have been filed by 262,490 corporations chartered by the various states.

The total capital is $52,471,626,752. The interest bearing indebtedness of those corporations is $31,333,952,896.82; net income for the year which the tax ran, $3,125,481,101.04.

The tax collected for the first year was $27,290,767.43. This is an average of $103.97 per corporation.

In the state of Illinois there are 17,908 corporations; aggregate capital, $31,191,058,968.74; total indebtedness, $3,032,803,126.87; net income, $274,321,933.85.

The average indebtedness of corporations in the whole country is 60 per cent. of the whole capitalization. In the state of Illinois average is 94 per cent.

According to the report Illinois stands first in internal revenue taxes, the total it pays being $49,165,273.75. New York is next with $36,000,000 in round numbers; Kentucky, $32,000,000 and Indiana, $28,000,000. There were twenty-four million more gallons of distilled spirits this year than last year, and three million more barrels of fermented liquor than last year.

The total receipts of the bureau for the past year were $289,957,220.16.

BOMB WRECKS FIVE STORES

Thousands of Tenement Dwellers in New York in Peril by Black Hand Outrage.

New York.—The most densely populated block in New York city, a solid square of tenements in Elizabeth street in the heart of the east side of Sicilian colony, was Tuesday the scene of a Black Hand bomb explosion which wrecked five stories and smashed 500 tenement house windows.

Francesco Le Barbera, owner of the saloon where the bomb was exploded, gave the police his theory of the animus behind the outrage. About five years ago, he said, his son, Peitro, six years old, was kidnaped and he has never heard from him. Lieutenant Petrosino worked on that case. Le Barbera received many letters threatening his life if a large sum of money was not paid for the return of the boy, but paid no attention to them.

The kidnaping case originating five years ago, in which Lieutenant Petrosino, who was murdered in Italy, played the part of investigator, is believed to have led indirectly to the bomb explosion.

IRISH POLITICS ARE BITTER

Ulster Delegation Defy Dublin Parliament and Will Refuse to Obey Its Decrees.

London.—The political situation in Ireland is growing more bitter daily. Resolutions were adopted by delegates representing every constituency in Ulster to formulate a solemn pledge to pay no tax imposed by any Dublin parliament and obey none of its decrees. A fund of $50,000 was also raised for the purchase of arms. Men were appointed to form regiments, and many speakers advocated an armed resistance if home rule should be forced on Ulster.

ILLINOIS CENSUS 5,638,591

Government Figures Show Chicago Has More Than Half of the Increase.

Washington.—Illinois has a population of 5,638,591, according to the 1910 census figures, announced here Monday. Cook county contains 2,405,233.

This is an increase of 817,041, or 16.9 per cent. over 4,821,850 in 1900. The increase from 1890 to 1900 was 996,199, or 26 per cent. Cook county is one of those showing the largest increases. Many rural counties lost in population.

Shakeup for Secret Police.

Washington.—The secret police system of the customs service, which extends over the United States and Europe, is to be reorganized.

Secretary MacVeagh has designated John E. Wilkie, chief of the United States secret service, to undertake the job. The two organizations, however, will remain separate and distinct.

Instructions to Chief Wilkie are to bring the customs agents up to the same standard as has been established in the organization which detects counterfeiters and protects the life of the president.

UNKIND JOLT FROM ADAM

As If Eve Hadn't Sorrow Enough, Her Partner Had to Add to the Affliction.

Adam had just received his notice of ejectment.

He stared at it a long time in silence, while Eve crouched in a dusky corner, softly whimpered:

Presently the father of mankind looked around.

As Eve caught his angry eye her whimper changed to a gulping sob.

"Well," he sternly said, "you've certainly put us in a fine mess with your silly curiosity! And yet when I refused to have anything to do with your apple scheme you called me a poor fool. Do you remember that you called me a poor fool?"

"Ye-es," sobbed Eve.

"Well, there's just one question I want to ask you?" said Adam.

"What is it?" gasped the first mother.

"Who's looney now?" he harshly demanded.

Then he turned away abruptly and started to pack up the family gourds and the tent poles.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Doctors More Thorough.

A physician at a dinner in Denver sneered at certain Biblical miracles.

"Lazarus," he said, "was raised from the dead—and yet I don't see any dead folks being raised in our time."

"No," said Rev. Herbert T. Tregham, the Biblical scholar, with a smile. "Modern medical science has progressed too far for that, eh?"—Washington Star.

BABY'S SCALP CRUSTED

"Our little daughter, when three months old, began to break out on the head and we had the best doctors to treat her, but they did not do her any good. They said she had eczema. Her scalp was a solid scale all over. The burning and itching was so severe that she could not rest, day or night. We had about given up all hopes when we read of the Cuticura Remedies. We at once got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and followed directions carefully. After the first dose of the Cuticura Resolvent, we used the Cuticura Soap freely and applied the Cuticura Ointment. Then she began to improve rapidly and in two weeks the scale came off her head and new hair began to grow. In a very short time she was well. She is now sixteen years of age and a picture of health. We used the Cuticura Remedies about five weeks, regularly, and then we could not tell she had been affected by the disease. We used no other treatment after we found out what the Cuticura Remedies would do for her. J. Fish and Ella M. Fish, Mt. Vernon, Ky., Oct. 12, 1909."

NEWSPAPERS TAKING IT UP

Metropolitan Dailies Giving Advice How to Check Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble.

This is a simple home recipe now being made known in all the larger cities through the newspapers. It is intended to check the many cases of Rheumatism and dread kidney trouble which have made so many cripples, invalids and weaklings of some of our brightest and strongest people.

The druggists everywhere, even in the smallest communities, have been notified to supply themselves with the ingredients, and the sufferer will have no trouble to obtain them. The prescription is as follows: Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce, and Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle. The dose is one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

Recent experiments in hospital cases prove this simple mixture effective in Rheumatism. Because of its positive action upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys, it compels these most vital organs to filter from the blood and system the waste impurities and uric acid which are the cause of rheumatism. It cleanses the kidneys, strengthens them and removes quickly such symptoms as backache, blood disorders, bladder weakness, frequent urination, painful scalding and discolored urine. It acts as a gentle, thorough regulator to the entire kidney structure.

Those who suffer and are accustomed to purchase a bottle of medicine should not let a little inconvenience interfere with making this up, or have your druggist do it for you.

SERIAL STORY

Archibald's Agatha

By EDITH HUNTINGTON MASON

Author of "The Real Agatha"

Copyright in Great Britain.

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular and indolent young bachelor of London, receives news that he has been made heir to the estate of his Aunt Georgiana, with an income of $20,000 a year, on condition that he become engaged to be married within ten days. Failing to do so the legacy will go to a third cousin in America. The story opens at Castle Wyckoff, where Lord Vincent and his wife, friends of Terhune, are discussing plans to find him a wife within the prescribed time. It seems that Lady Vincent is one of seven persons named Agatha, all close girlhood chums. She decides to invite two of them to the castle and have Archie there as one of the guests. Agatha Sixth strikes Archie as a handpainted beauty. Agatha First is a breezy American girl. Vincent tells her husband that Agatha Sixth already cares for Archie. He gains from Agatha Sixth the admission that she cares for him, but will require a month's time fully to make up her mind. Agatha First, neglected by Terhune, receives attentions from Leslie Freer. Four days of the precious time have passed when Terhune is called to London on business. Agatha First, on the plea of sickness, excuses herself from a motor trip planned by the Vincents. Later they see Agatha First picking flowers with a strange man. The Vincents discuss Agatha's seeming duplicity. The following day the party visits the ruins of an old convent. Terhune continues his attentions to Agatha Sixth. Then suddenly he transfers his attentions to Agatha First. Vincent scores him for his apparent fickleness. The last evening of the time allotted in which to become engaged arrives. The following day Solicitor Burns will arrive from London, and the Vincents are anxious to consummate the engagement. Vincent discovers Agatha First and a man with his arm around her waist. Vincent decides that the man must be Terhune. The next morning Terhune and Agatha First are very friendly at the breakfast table, while Agatha Sixth seems somewhat displeased. Solicitor Burns arrives. The Vincents are anxious. In an interview of Vincent and his wife the latter cries in desperation over the puzzling condition of affairs.

CHAPTER X.—Continued.

"Then don't you understand?" she said. "Don't you see?"

"Well, really, Dearest, I don't," I had to acknowledge. "I don't see what all that has to do with—"

But her quickly bent head and low choked cry of "Wilfred!" interrupted me and then the oddest thing of all happened. There was my own wife crying and there was I, her own husband, unable to comfort her because she pushed me away every time I came near her.

It was too much. And hang it all! The cause of all the friendships in the world wasn't worth that moment's pain. I was disgusted with the whole business, and in my agitation I went down to the stables and flung myself on a horse to try and ride the rancour of my first taste of Dearest's displeasure out of my veins. But I didn't make very good work of it and I am afraid anathematized Agatha First and Agatha Sixth and even old Terhune himself all the way out and all the way back.

When I returned it was twelve o'clock and the footman told me at the door that Solicitor Barnes had arrived and was in the library. As I have said, in accordance with Terhune's aunt's wishes, Dearest had invited Mrs. James' solicitor, Mr. Barnes, of Barnes, Willoughby & Sons, up from London to take luncheon with us, that he might be present at the time when the stipulated ten days expired and be witness to the fact that the time was not overstepped by so much as a minute. They had sent the station wagon to meet him as per Dearest's arrangements, and he had reached the castle not ten minutes before my own arrival. I was glad of that, for I remembered, with a new and troubled sense that I was no longer in her good graces, that my wife had instructed me to meet him myself.

Impelled by this thought, I hurried into the library without changing my riding things and found Solicitor Barnes pacing restlessly up and down the apartment and glancing at his watch from time to time.

"Ah! Lord Vincent?" he asked—we had not yet met—and as I assented I shook his thin impassive hand as cordially as I could. He was like most barristers I have met, a fishy looking beast, though one couldn't help admiring the look of omniscience about him, as if never so much at home.

"And how is Lady Vincent?" he inquired politely, when I had finished apologizing for my attire and for my neglect to meet him at the station.

Conversation was certainly flagging. I had no heart for it, with all I had on my mind, and had begun to feel pretty well talked out, when a footman appeared in the doorway and wanted to know if he was to show the gentleman upstairs.

I didn't answer his question. It seemed too much trouble to have to explain to William that the barrister was not a guest overnight, and instead I inquired where Lady Vincent was. I thought it rather odd that she did not come down and welcome Mr. Barnes, and was almost annoyed when the man informed me that "Her Ladyship" was in her room and by her express orders was not to be interrupted.

"But does she know that Mr. Barnes is here?" I asked, rather impatient of all this mystery. Mr. Barnes himself answered me before William could speak.

"My dear Lord Vincent," he said. "Don't, I pray, trouble about it! I have been welcomed by your lordship and shall await Lady Vincent's pleasure in regard to meeting her, which will be soon, no doubt, for we lunch at one, do we not?" He took out his big open-faced watch.

"What time is it?" I asked anxiously, as a sudden remembrance of the importance of that same luncheon rushed over me. Would Terhune sit down to it an affianced or a free man?

CHAPTER XI.

"The noon hour exactly," said he.

"Great Scotland!" I exclaimed aloud. Then the deed, I thought, must be done; I had been two hours riding. Terhune must have decided his fate one way or the other during that time. It was quite exciting. I rang for a footman and when William had appeared again I asked him where Mr. Terhune was, realizing at the same time that it was just as much Arch's duty to entertain old Barnes, since the solicitor had come upon his business after all.

"Oh, as to that," he said, speaking from the depths of his misery and the arm chair, "as to having another try, look at the clock!" I looked. It was half after twelve.

"Time's up at one, isn't it, Barnes?" he asked, taking notice of that worthy barrister for the first time.

"I believe it is, Mr. Terhune," replied Mr. Barnes, as indifferently as if it were only a question of boiling breakfast eggs.

"You see," said Arch, looking at me despairingly, "there's no use talking of urging her again. I could do nothing at all with her in that short time, even if I were inclined to. It's a pity, of course. I rather fancied that property of my aunt's. An income of $20,000 a year is a good deal to lose at one blow. Especially when the blow is unexpected! By Jove, you know, she did half way promise to marry me, after all! Can't think why she changed her mind!" But of course I could think, and I didn't quite see how Terhune could call the blow unexpected.

"You know I warned you that you were paying far too much attention to Agatha First," I said, "but you would indulge your fondness for flirtation and you see the result—an upset kettle of fish!" It was all the reference to the scene in the drawing room of the night before that I intended to make. After all, as in the case of my discovery of the red automobile in the wood, we had seen what we were not meant to have seen. And until Arch came to me and spoke of that event himself and asked my advice, my hurt friendship made me resolve not to demand his confidence or thrust advice upon him. Let him keep his secret if that was his wish. I would not intrude upon it, though his reticence pained me ever so much.

"I couldn't very well help it," he replied. "Upon my word I couldn't. The girl's very fetching, you know, and she seemed to take such an extraordinary fancy to me that I couldn't help responding. Agatha Sixth, on the other hand, had hardly a word to say to me!"

"Of course not!" I said hotly. "The more attention you paid to Agatha First, the less Miss Lawrence paid to you. That was quite natural. You'd asked the girl to marry you, you know, and she couldn't understand why you should want to have anything to do with anyone else!"

"Yes, I did ask the girl to marry me, and she chose to keep me waiting for an answer," replied Arch impatiently, "which kept everything at a standstill. I couldn't go ahead till she said the word, and as time hung heavy on my hands—"

"You made love to some one else. Deuced clever!" I interposed sarcastically.

"Well, I couldn't make love to her very well, could I, when she wouldn't say positively whether she wanted me to or not? She kept me at arm's length all the time!"

Lights on Baby Carriage.

"I was puzzled the other night by two lights which kept approaching me on the sidewalk," said a wayfarer. "I finally made out that they were on a baby carriage. It struck me as a pretty good idea, for the lights didn't seem to bother the baby at all and they certainly kept people from running into the carriage in the dark. The lanterns were made like small carriage lamps and were fastened in sockets."

When Virginia Bought a Dog

By JANE OSBORN

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

One cool autumn evening as Burton West was leaving the Comstocks, after his usual game of cribbage with his senior partner, Virginia was waiting for him on the porch.

"Hello, Jinny," said Burton, somewhat surprised. "Where have you been?"

"Haven't been anywhere," was Virginia's answer. "Just waiting for you."

Virginia started down the stone steps from the door and beckoned Burton to follow.

"I have something to tell you," she exclaimed. "I don't want him to know." She cast a furtive glance at the house to indicate her father, Mr. Caleb Comstock.

She drew close to Burton's side and spoke eagerly. "It's something I want you to do. It would be the most natural thing in the world and it won't cost you a penny. Say you'll do it!" She looked steadily at him. It struck Burton quite by force that her eyes were pretty and that the "child" Virginia had grown to be quite a woman.

"Go on, child," he said. "I won't promise till I know."

"There is a perfectly lovely terrier—one of those nice, little brindle Bostons with little round brown eyes that make you want to hug him—and he's going at $50. I saw him at the dealer's today and I want him dreadfully."

Virginia checked herself with a deep sigh. "He'd keep me from getting lonesome. I know I'd like him."

"You lonesome, Jinny!" exclaimed Burton with sudden sympathy. "Why didn't you ever let us know before?" He recalled guiltily that he and Mr.

At First the Dog was the Chief Object of Interest.

Comstock had never thought to invite the girl to join their game.

"I could get him for fifty dollars," Virginia went on rapidly. "I am sure that is a great bargain. Now, there is my birthday money that father gave me, fifty dollars, and it is all mine to spend as I choose. Father would think I was silly to put it all on a dog. He thinks all dogs are alike. But if some one gave him to me he couldn't object, could he?"

"Go on," commanded Burton, unwilling to commit himself.

"I would pay for him and see about everything, and all you would have to do would be to give him to me. Won't you, please?"

"I wouldn't very likely give you a fifty dollar dog. Your father would surely see through the trick."

"I should think you would," pleaded Virginia. "You are in business with father and you spend so much time at our house. People always feel indebted to their hostesses, and I am your hostess. If you don't want father to think you bought the dog you could intimate that he was yours and you didn't want him and you thought I might. It wouldn't be a fib, because I can have him sent right to your rooms."

Something—caution or discretion—was at work within Burton West, but this new feeling of pity for the lonely girl and anxiety to make her happy, led him, with little further delay, to agree to his end of the bargain. He knew well enough how stern Mr. Comstock was in spite of his love for Virginia.

The next morning Virginia went to the pet store with $50 in neatly folded bills. "Please send him to Mr. Burton West," she told the dealer, giving the young man's address. "Be sure to have him there by five o'clock."

That night Mr. Comstock was somewhat surprised and distinctly pleased when his junior partner put in his appearance shortly after dinner for a game of cribbage. He never came more than two evenings a week and Mr. Comstock had sometimes feared that young West was growing weary of the older man's society.

"Don't mean you are ready for another game," said Mr. Comstock, warming up with pleasure. "Well, well, Burton, you can stand more cribbage than any other man I ever saw."

When they had settled down to their game and their cigars, Virginia slipped into the room.

"Want to watch my hand, daughter?" asked the father, who always thought of Virginia as a child in spite of her nineteen years.

Virginia drew a chair up to her father's side and cast an anxious look at Burton. Burton winked reassuringly when Mr. Comstock's eyes were on his cards, and when a suitable pause came he said slowly and deliberately:

"I say, Mr. Comstock, I brought a trifle for Virginia. It is in a basket in the passage under the front porch. Shall I get it, Virginia, or do you want to discover it for yourself?"

Virginia dashed out of the room, out the door, to embrace her pet. In the meantime, Burton with what tact he could command tried to explain and make light of the matter with Mr. Comstock. But Mr. Comstock was not to be appeased, and Burton was more than relieved when their usual number of hands were over and he was on his way home. In his hat on the hat rack in the hall Burton found a little slip of a note.

"I am so happy. Thank you a million times. Devotedly,

"Jinny."

"Poor little girl," said Burton to himself as he slipped the note into his pocket.

The next day Burton did not see Mr. Comstock, and when he returned from business he was surprised to find the dog whining in his rooms. There was no note accompanying him, and no explanation had been left by the Comstock servant who had delivered him.

The next day Mr. Comstock summoned the young man to his office.

He looked at him with an expression that was expected to carry with it utter scorn, but which, in spite of itself, showed a grain of amusement. Then he cleared his throat and rose.

"See here, young man," he began, solemnly. "Is this honest? Is it fair? When I have been entertaining you in my house as a gentleman, and have cared for you as a son!"

Burton actually turned pale with alarm, for he was in a difficult position and could think of no means of escape.

"If you cared for the girl—mere child like that—you should have told me."

"It was a mere trifle," stammered Burton. "I thought she might care for the dog."

"A mere trifle, indeed," broke in Mr. Comstock. "I guess I know the value of a dog as well as any one else. That dog is a thoroughbred, and I know it. Don't try to fool me!"

Mr. Comstock had worked himself into such a state of indignation that the grain of amusement had disappeared. Any explanation on Burton's part, had he had any to make, would have been useless, and the young man slipped out of the room to think over the unfortunate affair.

As Burton thought the matter over, it occured to him that really the most embarrassing problem he had to solve was concerned with Virginia and not with Mr. Comstock. The dog for which she had spent her hoarded birthday money was in his possession, and she was in the meantime without dog and without money.

As he could not return the dog, he could return the money, and it was with this conviction that he counted out five ten-dollar bills from his wallet and folded them into an envelope. He could get it to her somehow, though he wasn't sure how. Then a note came from Virginia. She thanked him again for his kindness.

"I have a great idea about the dog," she went on to say. "If you will keep him I can still manage to see him. Could you send some one out in the park with him in the morning before father is up? I will meet him there, and then perhaps I can think of some place to send him, where I can visit him."

This seemed to Burton a fairly good scheme, and as he put the fifty dollars back into his wallet he decided to conduct the dog to the park himself the next morning.

It was decided that for the present, at least, Burton should keep the dog and for two weeks Virginia and the young man arose early for a morning stroll in the park. At first the dog was the chief object of interest, but when on the fourteenth day Burton in his hurry forgot the dog entirely, Virginia did not notice the omission.

"Do you remember, Jinny," Burton asked her, "when you wanted me to give you that rascal of a terrier, do you remember how you went about it?"

Virgina denied any recollection with a pretty toss of her pretty head.

"You made me promise to do it before you told me what it was. Now I want you to say 'yes' to what I have to ask."

"Yes," said Virginia, promptly. "Now tell what it is."

"Jinny, I want you to marry me" Burton looked down laughing into Virginia's blushing face.

Newville A Dry Town

Newville is supposed to be a dry town, but it seems to be a little swampy around the edges. It is nothing to see several cases of beer bottles loaded into a carry-all and started off about sundown. It is nothing for those who would rather watch than sleep to see the same carry-all return about midnight with the cases laden, judging by the effort to carry them in—in where? It is nothing to see a man stagger and reel like a broken reed and fall down in front of his own gate and be carried into his house. It is nothing to see a child not yet in his teens made drunk and put to bed to sleep it off. It is nothing to hear a father say "if my boy wants beer and hard cider, he shall have it, this is my own business." Are these things nothing to us, are they nothing to God? We hope the day will come when it will be an inexcusable act by the law of justice, to bring intoxicating stuff into a dry town and that the day will be when all towns will be dry, not bogsy around the edges, nor with a pond in the middle. If anyone tries to put this shoe on, they'll expose their big foot sure.

Simeon Winel nd drew the load of coal that was given away by the coal dealers last Saturday night, guessing the weight within one-half pound. The load was weighed by a disinterested party and the weight sealed in an envelope until time of drawing. The weight was 1727½ lbs. Mr. Winland put the load at 1737. He was greatly pleased.

The home of J. W. Burwell was shot into last week one day. The shot came from the north entering the small window and passing through the large window in the south. The shot was evidently from someone hunting along the creek. The town council prohibits the use of fire arms within the city limits, and any person using them will be held responsible for their act.

SANDUSKY, O.—I have carefully inquired among our people who are best prepared to judge, and I find the feeling is unanimous, that all were well pleased. I did not hear a single unfavorable criticism. Such remarks as these; "It was a good lecture;" "The best this year;" "Fine;" "Plenty of facts and enough humor to hold the attention."—Prof. L N. Montgomery. Widney's Opera House, tomorrow night.

Blogett Felled to Floor.

Attempting to stop a quarrel in his poolroom at Woodburp, Von Blodgett the proprietor of the establishment, was attacked by Harrison Dollarhite and struck over the head with a billiard cue, receiving a terrible gash just above the temple and being crazed from the effects of the blow.

Blodgett was removed to his home, where he was attended by Drs. Moser and Betts He was quieted by hypodermic injections and to day an effort will be made to determine whether or not he has sustained a fracture of the skull. The physicians declare his condition to be extremely serious.

No attempt was made last night to apprehend Dollarhite, who is a young farmer living in the community. Dollarhite waspbut recently married and has always borne a good reputation in the community.

Blodgett came to Woodburn several weeks ago from Antwerp, O., and established a poolroom. He has a wife and several children and the family is wholly dependent upon him for support.

A message from Woodburn last night stated that Dollarhite and another patron of the house were engaged in a game of pool and that a dispute arose over who was to settle for the game. Blodgett interfered to stop the quarrel and something that he said apparently enraged Dollarhite, who struck him viciously with the end of the billiard cue, felling him to the floor.—Sunday's Journal-Gazette.

Our readers will remember Mr. Blodgett, having lived in St. Joe for some time before going to Antwerp.

Later.

As a result of the injuries received, as stated above, Mr. Blodgett died within thirty-six hours. Dollarhite is now in jail.

He Has It

One of the great pleasures of our village is to step into Dunkle's Drug Store and view his Christmas display, it is a pretty sight, clean and brilliant to look upon and when once you examine the quality and note the very reasonable prices, you can congratulate yourself for being amidst such an enterprise conducted upon good principles. We predict a successful holiday business.

Ends Winter's Troubles.

To many, winter is a season of trouble. The frost bitten toes and fingers, chapped hands and lips, chilblains, cold sores, red and rough skins, prove this. But such troubles fly before Bucklen's Arnica Salve. A trial convinces. Greatest healer of Burns, Boils, Piles, Cuts, Sores, Eczema and Sprains. Only 25c. at H. L. Dunkle's.

Basket Ball

On last Friday evening the Spencerville High School was favored by a visit from the two Harlan High School teams. Our first team composed of F. Steward, M. Erick, Hart. House and E. Steward took the Harlan boys to the tune of 29—18. It was very interesting throughout and both teams played excellent ball. The Harlan boys did fine passing but Spencerville seemed better able to drop the ball in the basket. The second team composed of B Erick, A. Place, Maxwell, M Place and S. Shott defeated Harlan's second team by a 21—9 score. The boys are gentlemen on the floor and desire the patronage of the people.

Attend the opera house rink next Saturday night at St. Joe.

FOSTORIA, O.—F. Eugene Baker entertained a good sized audience at the opera house, Tuesday night, as the third number on the lecture course. His subject was "The Lucky Number," and in the hour and a half that he talked, he convinced his hearers that he thoroughly understood his subject. Mr. Baker is not an orator as the term is usually applied, but he is more. He is a speaker with a happy, pleasing personality, and captures his hearers with his first sentence, and he manages to keep in touch with them till the finish. Oratory alone seldom does that. Mr. Baker did not come and manage to be here just long enough to talk and go. But he spent nearly a day with us. He got acquainted and made many friends who sincerely hope to hear him in all of his lectures.—Times. Hear him at Widney's Opera House, Dec 9.

The Prayer of a Horse.

The following appeal for the horse is to be found in almost every stable in New York city. It is from the pen of F. H. Bugher, first deputy police commissioner of the metropolis:

To Thee, My Master, I Offer My Prayer:—

Feed me, water and care for me, and when the day's work is done provide me with shelter, a clean, dry bed and a stall wide enough for me to lie down in comfort. Talk to me. Your voice often means as much to me as the reins. Pet me sometimes, that I may serve you the more gladly and learn to love you. Do not jerk the reins, and do not whip me when going up hill. Never strike, beat, or kick me when I do not understand what you want, but give me a chance to understand you. Watch me, and if I fail to do your bidding, see if something is not wrong with my harness or feet.

Examine my teeth when I do not eat. I may have an ulcerated tooth, and that, you know, is very painful. Do not tie my head in an unnatural position, or take away my best defense against flies and mosquitoes by cutting off my tail.

And, finally, O my master, when my useful strength is gone, do not turn me out to starve or freeze, or sell me to some cruel owner to be slowly tortured and starved to death; but do thou, my master, take my life in the kindest way, and your God will reward you here, and hereafter. You will not consider me irreverent if I ask this in the name of Him who was born in a stable. Amen.

Fall Footwear for the Fashionable and The Practical

A shoe that fits perfectly, outwears any shoe that fails of this object. It gives the wearer a satisfied feeling—with himself, with the world and of course, with the department whence the satisfying shoes came.

If you have been having "trouble with your feet" drop in upon us and let us show you what skilled shoe people and the right lines to select from will do for you.

We've made a study of feet and a study of shoes. A long, narrow foot requires one style of last; a short, broad foot requires another; a high instep foot still another, et cetera.

It is paying attention to these classifications of nature in fitting shoes that brings after-satisfaction to the wearer.

The fall lines for men, women and children are in. The line includes everything from the strictly practical working or school shoe to the strictly fashionable evening or dress shoe.

Ladies from

$1.75 to $3.00

We can also please the demand made by the Gents for fine and work shoes of different kinds. The Wonder, Lyconing and Sensation shoe sell for

$3.00, $3.50, $4.00

FUN WITH MAGNETIZED CANE

Trick May Also Be Performed With Table Knife, Billiard Cue or Similar Article.

The principles involved in magnetizing a cane as here described can be applied equally well to a table knife, a billiard cue, or any similar article, says Scientific American. No preparation is necessary. The article used is first stroked lengthwise by the performer's hand to apparently magnetize it. It is then taken in his left hand while he stands with his left side toward the audience, and while held at the center parallel to and against the extended palm, is pushed down toward the fingers by the pressure of the right hand fore-finger upon it from the rear. The remaining fingers and the thumb of the right hand are grasped around the wrist of the extended left hand as illustrated.

As seen by the spectators the article appears to hang unsupported by the left hand. Spreading apart the left-hand fingers and shaking the left hand up and down, strengthens the illusion. A considerably greater distance can be covered by the extended fore-finger than is generally supposed, and this, together with the fact that the right hand appears as a whole to be circling the left wrist, accounts for the effectiveness of the illusion.

MANY HARD WORDS TO SPELL

State-Wide Spelling Test to Be Conducted in Indiana Schools Next Winter.

E. G. Bunnell, assistant state superintendent of public instruction, to whom has been assigned by Robert J. Aley, state superintendent, the work of preparing for the state-wide spelling test for next winter among the pupils of the common and high schools of the state, has prepared a list of 100 words to be used by the best speller in every school in the state, from these to select the best in the township, town or city, from these the best in the county, and with the pupils thus selected to form the class for the state test, says the Indianapolis News. If arrangements can be made, the best spellers in the state will hold a contest with the best spellers from other states.

The 100 words chosen by Mr. Bunnell have been selected from a list of words commonly misspelled, and the list is designed to give the pupils an idea of the nature of the test. All the words selected probably will be used in the test. The list prepared by Dr. Bunnell follows:

Manila, Philippine, neuralgia, trafficker, separate, receive, believe, aeroplane, chauffeur, susceptible, sincerity, disk, humus, dirigible, icicle, inflammable, iniquitous, rigid, thoracic, vigorous, Rensselaer, February, benefited, embarrass, acquiesce, privilege, parallel, judgment, until, analysis, lettuce, precede, divisible, pursue, origin, fulfill, descendant, government, vertical, prejudice, noticable, miniature, umbrella, adjacent, similar, foreigner, hygiene, victuals, millinery, sovereign, laboratory, cistern, reverend, cemetery, mischievous, vinegar, bilious, sieve, clewis, celery, diphtheria, dissipate, khaki, harelip, erysipelas, vaccinate, legible, specimen, participle, auxiliary, censure, facilitate, license, serviceable, fugitive, audible, rhinoceros, versatile, bicycle, cynical, acetylene, indelible, millinery, alpaca, surcingle, mademoiselle, apparition, lachrymal, cavalier, inimitable, dexterity, agility, cylindrical, isosceles, corpuscle, chute, Delaware.

Didn't Deliver Them.

A young man called at the office of a justice of the peace and with some hesitation made known his business, which was to be married. The rustic replied that he thought he could perform the service and asked if the young man had his license.

"Yes, sir," the youth replied.

"Well, where is the young lady?"

"She's at her father's."

"Well, bring her here."

"She'd rather be married at home, squire."

"And you expect me to go there and marry you?"

"Yes, sir, if you please."

"Young man," said the justice, "this office of mine is like a department store. We sell matches here, but we don't deliver them at the house."—Youth's Companion.

DRESSING UP.

It is for other folk I wear
The ribbon that is on my hair,
For they can see it, fresh and bright,
Although for me it's out of sight.
In bows and ends my sash is tied;
For me it's on the other side,
But other folk will have the chance
To see it while I gayly dance.
It's just the same way with my curls.
I think it's kind o' little girls
To dress as nicely as can be
In things for other folk to see.

CUTTING IRON BY ACETYLENE

Intense Heat Has Recently Been Used in Marvelous Tool, Results Seeming Like Magic.

Most of our young folks have seen pictures projected on a screen by an oxyhydrogen "limelight" stereopticon. In this double "magic lantern" a bright light is produced by the intense heat of burning oxygen and hydrogen together against a small cylinder of lime. The heat makes the lime shine very brightly, on the same principle that a piece of iron glows when the blacksmith takes it from his forge. Though this familiar form of burning gases is very hot, it is far excelled in heat by burning acetylene (a gas) in oxygen.

This intense heat has recently been used in a marvelous tool, the results of which seem almost if not quite like magic. The Davis-Bournonville company has perfected a torch that burns oxygen and acetylene together and makes it convenient to apply this intense heat to cutting off or welding iron.

Running this penlike flame across a thick sheet of iron melts a very narrow strip and cuts it off about as you might cut a sheet of ice with a red hot poker. It will also melt the edges of two sheets or blocks of iron and enable a mechanic to fasten them together easily. Huge iron castings that have been broken may be repaired by running the flame around the edges of the fracture and "sticking" them together. From the mechanical point of view the possible uses of this new tool are very many. The intensely hot flame melts a narrow open space through a piece of iron, even up to half an inch thick almost as easily as would a red-hot wire melt through a very thin sheet of ice.—St. Nicholas.

NEW INDOOR GAME AMUSING

Object Is to Toss the Ball on Rubber Leash Into One of Holes on the Paddle.

The object of this perforated-paddle ball game is to toss the ball on the end of its rubber leash in such manner as to land it in one of the holes provided. The largest count is gained by first succeeding in jerking the ball up through the hole at the end of the paddle and then depositing it in one of the other holes.

"CANDLE TREE" OF PANAMA

Undoubtedly One of Wonders of Vegetable Kingdom Known as Parmentiera Cerifera.

One of the wonders of the vegetable kingdom is undoubtedly the "Candle tree" of Panama, known to botanists as Parmentiera cerifera. This tree says Prof. H. F. MacMillan in the Strand Magazine, produces from its stem and older branches a great profusion of yellowish, cylindrical, smooth fruits, 12 to 18 inches long, which appear exactly like wax candles, as the botanical name implies. So close is this resemblance that travelers, seeing the tree for the first time, are liable to be temporarily puzzled as to whether the candles of shops are made in factories or grown on trees. The candle-like fruits are suspended from the branches and bare stems by short slender stalks; dangling in the air they readily give the impression of the chandler's shop. As night falls, and the numerous fire-flies move among the fruit, the impression is intensified

WISE YOUNGSTER AN EXPERT

Garrulous Young Man Sure He Knew Fresh Oysters but Didn't Recognize Rubber Ones.

The garrulous young man who thinks he "knows it all," and some more besides, stood in front of the restaurant window.

"Fine jar of oysters you have in there," he commented.

"Yes," responded the corpulent proprietor, who was standing in the doorway.

"So plump and fresh-looking. When it comes to telling a fresh oyster by its appearance, I'm the candy."

"Regular expert, eh?"

"You bet! They say oysters are not running good this year, and yet those in that jar look the same as those you had in the window two years ago when oysters were plentiful."

And the restaurant proprietor's features relaxed into a pleasant smile.

"They are the same," was the quiet response. "Those are rubber oysters, for show only."

Ultra-Swell.

Little Madge of Shantytown is not so fortunate as her well-dressed sisters and is often forced to wear her mother's "hand me downs." When she appeared out on the river pier in a skirt that was so long she could scarcely walk all the gamins started to jeer her. "Get onto de umbrella cover she has on," bantered Jimmy Finn. "What do yer call it, anyhow, Madge?"

And Madge elevated her little sunpeeled nose and retorted:

"Get some sense about yer, Jimmy Finn, an' read de Paris styles once in a while. Dis is one of de new 'hobble skirts.'"

Melodrama.

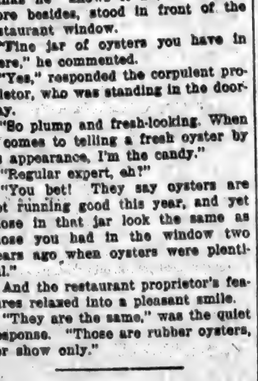
As the eighteen-carat villain leaped down from the pasteboard castle the beautiful heroine gave a shriek of despair.

"Harold McDuff!" she moaned, as the great crystal tears welled in her eyes, "you have been my undoing!"

Turning as white as a summer-boarding house sheet, the eighteen-carat villain vanished among the paper foliage. And the beautiful heroine spoke the truth.

By stepping on the train of her gown the arch conspirator had loosened two tiny hooks up near the neck.

AWFUL.



The Trust Magnate—They tell me that I am accused of being two-faced.

His Secretary—Worse than that. Why, the newspaper illustrators have run your face up into the hundreds.

The Silver Lining.

"Anyway," remarked the optimist, "there is one good feature about the tariff on wool."

"Huh!" sneered the pessimist. "I'd like to know what it is."

"Why," rejoined the optimist. "It will make it more expensive for the wolf to masquerade in sheep's clothing."

A Luckless Family.

"His father had a leg broken, his brother was run over by the trolley, and another brother had an arm broken while cranking up his auto."

"And did he escape all such serious things?"

"He got married."

A Resemblance.

"What drink is a complaint of bad electric service like?"

"I can't see that it resembles any drink."

"Why, isn't it a current whine?"

YOUTH EMULATES THE LARK

Follows Literally Instructions of His Father and Sits on Stile and Sings Blithely.

The old farmer came in from milking and found his son dreaming, with the bright sun shining on his pillow.

"Boy," he shouted sternly, "this is no time to be sleeping! After this you must get up with the lark."

"All right, dad," yawned the youngster, "after this I will."

The next morning the old farmer came in from his milking and found his son sitting on the stile singing as blithely as if there was no such thing as work.

"Why, boy," stormed the exasperated sire, "this is worse than sleeping! What do you mean by loafing on that stile and singing at the top of your voice?"

The lad grinned.

"Well, dad, you told me to be like the lark, and that's all he does when he gets up early."

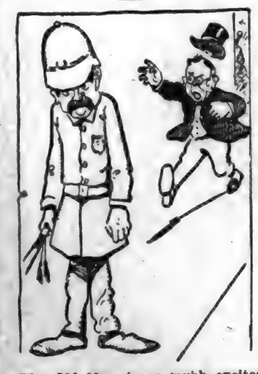
Changes of Time.

Ashley—It is wonderful how some people are changed by time. There's Doofier, for instance; I remember when he was unable to keep a single job—all his employers fired him just as soon as they possibly could. But for the last five years he has been working steadily. He is employed by a man who refuses to let him leave for any cause whatever. Several times Doofier has attempted to get away, but on each occasion the employer has headed him off and made him come back.

Seymour—Who is the employer?

Ashley—Mr. Lockhart, the warder of the penitentiary.

HE'D BE FAR AWAY.



The Old Man (very much excited)—Officer! Officer! There's a great big sailor murdering a man around the corner.

Policeman—Much obliged for the tip. I'll be out of this neighborhood in about a minute.

Wit and Wisdom.

Bjornstjerne Bjornson, in his hotel fronting the Tuileries gardens, received a few friends up to the last in Paris," said the continental agent of a typewriter firm.

"I had the honor to be among those friends, and I never wearied of the great Norseman's wit and wisdom.

"The last thing he said to me, it cautioning me not to give an important provencal agency to an easy going man of the world, was this:

"'Beware of the easy-going man. An easy-going man, you know, is one who makes the path of life very rough and difficult for somebody else.'"

Less Risk.

"So," said the brilliant attorney, as he swung around in his office chair and faced the youth just outside the railing, "you want to study law, do you?"

"No, I can't say that I do," replied the youth, "but I guess I'll have to."

"Why do you think you'll have to?" queried the legal light.

"Well," answered the youngster "it's like this: I wanted to be a burglar, but my folks wouldn't stand for it. They said by posing as a lawyer I'd get as much coin without taking any chances. See?"

Satisfied.

Inquisitive Press Representative (to stage doorkeeper)—And do you happen to know the identity of that heavily veiled lady who is seen so frequently in the famous actor's company?

Doorkeeper—Well, it just depends on how you mean. You see, on the boards she is the daughter; in private life she's his mother!—Liverpool Mercury.

Never Touched Her.

"My dear," said the long-suffering husband, "we could soon own our own home if you were not so extravagant."

"Yes, but what would be the use?" rejoined his alleged better half. "If we owned our home it would be only a matter of time until we'd have to sell it to pay the mortgage on it."

The Limit.

Bingles—They say old Skinem is awfully stingy.

Bangles—Stingy! Why, he's so stingy he wouldn't even give a drowning man a drink of water.

Naturally.

"That copper made me see stars."

"How?"

"He hit me with his night stick."

IN FIGHT FOR LIFE

MAN'S THRILLING ESCAPE FROM JAWS OF CROCODILE.

Story of an Old Sailor's Determination to Bag His Game After Being Injured in Encounter With Monster.

It is only a few months since the incidents happened that I am about to relate, writes A. Cavendish in Chamber's Journal. My work took me on a visit up a river to one of those timber-cutting camps where are felled and rafted the great hardwood logs so valued in the Chinese market.

G., the white man in charge, was a characteristic old "hard case," who had started life before the mast in a sailing ship and drifted in a beach-combing fashion to our colony, where he had been given, almost in charity, a subordinate billet in one of the large timber companies. Arriving in my boat at the little jetty or landing stage, I was astonished to find G. lying on a rattan couch within a few yards of the bank with a heavy express rifle across his knees gazing intently at a rough pagar or fence erected in the stream.

Hanging from this fence and a few feet above the water were the corpses of a monkey and several pariah dogs; while half a dozen ducks, each tied to the fence by the leg with a long string, flapped about on the water and quacked dismally in their efforts to escape. I was just wondering whether the whisky bottle or too much solitude accounted for this state of affairs, when I noticed that G.'s leg was swathed in rough bandages from knee to ankle.

Throwing myself down near him in the welcome shade I learned the following story: Two nights before G. was sleeping peacefully in his little palm leaf house in a clearing about 50 yards from the river bank when his dog began to growl and refused to be silenced. G. turned out and walked around the hut to ascertain the cause of the disturbance, but seeing nothing addressed himself to the dog in his usual lurid and picturesque sailing ship language and retired to bed again. Five minutes later he was once more aroused by a yelp from the dog, and this time really annoyed he seized a stick and sallied forth to inflict dire punishment on the disturber of his dreams. Suddenly a dark form glided swiftly from the shadows and G. felt himself seized by the right knee as in a vice.

Stooping to free himself, he found he was in the grip of a large crocodile whose teeth were firmly imbedded in flesh and bone. Backward and forward the struggle swayed, the crocodile striving to pull its destined victim to the water's edge and G., hampered as he was by his imprisoned leg, fighting for his life to reach higher ground. At last the beast, hurling its victim to the ground with a shake of its powerful head, began to drag him swiftly toward the water. Poor G., feeling, as he expressed it, that it was "all over bar the shoutin'," determined to make one last effort for his life, and taking advantage of a momentary halt as the brute was steering past a tree stump, he sat up and succeeded in getting both his thumbs into the reptile's eye sockets, the only vulnerable part of a crocodile's head.

The rest of the story is perhaps best told in G.'s own words, or as nearly as circumstances (and the editor) will permit: "So soon as I gets me thumbs made fast in 'is eyes 'e opens 'is mouth to shout and lets go my leg. Then first thing next mornin' the cook 'as lays 's breakfast for 'm, as you see, an' I gets into this chair, an' 'ere I stays if it's a month." Vainly I tried to persuade G. to come away with me to the next station and see a doctor. He refused to move from that chair until he had bagged his crocodile.

I met him again a week later in a hospital bed suffering severely, but quite happy in the knowledge that the bones of that crocodile were bleaching in the sun outside his house. Poor old G.! Only a few weeks afterward the habit of clearing creepers from his path in the jungle with the butt end of his loaded and cocked rifle proved fatal to him.

Fish Trained to Be Shy.

There are people in the world who will hardly believe that fish can be trained to be shy. Training, they apprehend, has the effect of producing confidence, and even boldness in some creatures. Shyness is a quality inherited by nature, they say, and is a trait, under some circumstances, to be eliminated. This is a case illustrative of the wonderful play which it is possible to place upon many of our English words. We are reminded of the Frenchman who enlarged upon this peculiarity of our tongue. "You say 'fine' for beef tings and 'fine' for cattle tings. You say elephant is 'fine' animal and the needle be 'fine.' You say 'fine' day when it is glorious, and the rain when it is 'fine,' very 'fine.'" After all, it very economical to be able to condense, so to speak, our vocabulary in this way and utilise one small word to convey so much. The fact is, we say that fish are shy when they really are cunning—but it is the kind of cunning which is indicated by this word—shy. We find also that there are degrees and varying qualities of shyness, judged by fishermen's parlance. The fish are said to be gut shy, hook shy, shy this and shy that, which indicates that the evolution along this line is going ahead.

Couldn't Be Thankful.

Bishop Charles W. Smith at a harvest dinner in Portland said of the harvest spirit:

"The harvest spirit is one of thankfulness, but there are some crabbed old farmers who couldn't be thankful if they tried.

"I said to such an old fellow as he conducted me over his farm on a golden autumn afternoon and showed me a record harvest:

"'Well, sir, this year, at least, you've got nothing, nothing whatever to complain of.'

"'I don't know about that, bishop,' he answered, with a shake of the head. 'I'm afraid there'll be no spoilt hay for the young calves.'"

Desperate Situation.

"There's no use trying to deny it," remarked Mrs. DeFlatt, "this is the worst cook we've had yet. There positively isn't a decent thing to eat on the table."

"That's right," rejoined DeFlatt.

"But," continued his wife," there's one thing in her favor. She can't be beat when it comes to washing."

"Pity we can't eat the washing," sighed the hungry husband.

FRUIT GROWERS' SEMI-CENTENNIAL

State Horticulture Society to Meet December 7 and 8.

WAS ORGANIZED IN 1860

Only Two Charter Members Are Still Living Who Were Present at the Birth of the Society—Many Subjects Will Be Discussed.

Indianapolis.—Officers of the Indiana Horticulture society have prepared a program of interest for its semi-centennial convention at the statehouse, December 7 and 8. The society was organized in 1860, and the only charter members still living who were present at the birth of the society are Abram Trueblood of Anderson, and E. Y. Teas of Centerville.

The convention will open on the afternoon of December 7, with an address by the president, C. N. Lindley of Salem, after which talks will be given on the following subjects: "How Many Times Shall We Spray the Apple for Codling Moth and Curculio?" by D. B. Johnson of Mooresville, president of the State Dairy association; "Growing Tomatoes for the Canning Factory," by C. C. Osborne of Irvington; "The Farmers' Orchard," by F. J. Heacock of Salem, and three-minute talks on interesting topics, by Chester Beaver of Glenwood; R. L. Beck of Liberty; H. M. Stout of Trafalgar; Omer Abraham of Martinsville; W. B. Flick of Lawrence, and S. A. Haslett of Greencastle. In the evening the following subjects will be discussed: "Poor Fruit and Pure Food," by Dr. H. E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner; "Some Apple Diseases Common to the Middle West," by J. W. Roberts, scientific assistant, bureau of plant industry, United States department of agriculture, and "Extension Work in Horticulture," by M. W. Richards of Purdue university.

On the morning of December 8, the district vice-presidents will make reports, which will be followed by talks on the following subjects: "Small Fruits for Home and Wholesale Markets in Northern Indiana," by W. M. Walton of Laporte; "The First Steps Toward Horticultural Salvation," by T. A. Farrand of Eaton Rapids, Mich., and "The Dilute Lime-Sulphur Sprays versus Bordeaux Mixture for Apple Diseases," by J. W. Roberts, a government expert. The afternoon session will be a business meeting. Several prizes and premiums will be given by the society for the best apples, pears, miscellaneous fruits and vegetables brought to the exhibit.

Cattle Rations Fixed.

Following the annual convention of the Indiana Cattle Feeders' association at Purdue, the experimental feeding of 70 beef cattle, to determine the value of different kinds of rations, has been begun at the Purdue farm. The questions to be determined are: Shall a full ration of corn silage in connection with corn, cotton seed meal and clover hay be used, or shall the silage be limited? What amount of cotton seed meal should be fed with a ration of corn, clover hay and corn silage?

The 70 cattle are divided into seven lots of ten each and are to be fed as follows: Lot No. 1, shelled corn, cotton seed meal, 2½ pounds to 1,000 pounds live weight, clover hay and corn silage; lot No. 2, shelled corn, cotton seed meal, 2½ pounds to 1,000 pounds live weight, and clover hay; No. 3, shelled corn, cotton seed meal, 2½ pounds to 1,000 pounds live weight, and corn silage; lot No. 4, shelled corn, cotton seed meal, clover hay and corn silage ad libitum; lot No. 5, shelled corn, cotton seed meal, 1¼ pounds to 1,000 pounds live weight, clover hay and corn silage limited; lot No. 6, shelled corn, cotton seed meal, 1¼ pounds to 1,000 pounds live weight, and clover hay; lot No. 7, for 60 days, corn silage and clover seed, then a full feed of corn and cotton seed meal in addition to roughage. The experiments will continue 150 days.

1,973,230 Books Are Read.

During the school year of 1909-1910, according to statistics compiled in the office of the state superintendent of public instruction, 1,973,230 school library books were read by school children in the state. The total number of books reported from all libraries to which school children have access was 1,172,251, but since one book taken by two children at two separate times is counted as two books, the number read is larger than the actual number on hand.

During the year there was spent for maintenance of commissioned high schools of the state a total of $1,784,793.63, or an average cost a pupil of $41.28. The average cost a pupil in the noncommissioned high schools was approximately two dollars more than in the commissioned high schools.

The estimated revenues from the special school sources and from the local tuition sources for the current school year make up a total of $9,278,452.11, of which $4,122,067.31 was estimated to be raised from local taxation.

Feasts Spread at Many Institutions.

In the benevolent and penal institutions of the city, county and state Thanksgiving day was observed as one for feast, entertainment and worship. The usual rigor maintained with prisoners behind bars was forgotten for a time and the day was one during whose hours all possible was done to make inmates feel "at home." Misfortune, which was the cause for the presence of others in the various benevolent institutions, called for a display of unusual sympathy and the spirit of the day prevailed everywhere. In some institutions entertainment was provided and in others religious services were held.

Turkey and "trimmings" was the fare for employes and convalescent patients at the City hospital. There was cranberry sauce in abundance, mince pie, celery and lettuce. Ice cream and cake were added to the regular fare.

Many patients at the City hospital were remembered by friends, and those who were not strong enough to partake of turkey were given something out of the ordinary in the way of lighter foods.

An unusual feast was served to prisoners in the city prison. The regular menu of bread and water was transformed, and those who spent the day behind the bars there were feasted on roast beef, cold slaw, cranberries, celery and cakes.

Each prisoner at the Marion county jail was allowed an even pound of roast beef, together with liberal servings of mashed potatoes, celery, cabbage, parsnips, bread and coffee. Rabbit headed the menu card at the Marion county workhouse and each prisoner received as much as he desired. In addition potatoes, onions, beans, soup, bread and pumpkin pie were served.

Inmates at the Indiana Central Hospital for the Insane were fed with 234 turkeys, and the 1,519 patients partook of a Thanksgiving dinner, including all the requisites. Between the hours of two and four o'clock the patients were entertained at a dance in the assembly hall.

The 16 boys and girls at the Juvenile Detention Home, 28 West North street, were given a chicken dinner. During the afternoon Rev. Samuel Franc, a divinity student at Butler college, conducted religious services.

Fund Suffers by Comparison.

The Pennsylvania state health department will do a great work for the state when thoroughly organized, declared Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the Indiana state board of health. Doctor Hurty has just returned from Baltimore, Md., where he delivered a lecture before the Laennec Society of Johns Hopkins university. On the return trip he visited the Pennsylvania health department at Harrisburg.

"The department was organized two years ago," said Doctor Hurty, "and is given $100,000 annually to spend for health purposes. Within a few years the death and sick rates of Pennsylvania will be reduced materially.

"All departments of the Indiana health organization are given but $44,000 annually. We need $10,000 more each year to do the work we ought to do, and will save the state ten dollars for every dollar invested in the health work. During the last ten years the death rate from diphtheria has been reduced one-half. The consumption death rate has been reduced six per cent, and the death rate of typhoid fever 20 per cent, within that time. The state board of health is not entitled to all the credit for this work, but it merits a good share. The public school is the place where the most effective work of the future can be done, because school children are the most willing to learn the value of protection against disease."

Doctor Hurty believes infantile paralysis will become a real scourge in this state within the next year. Infantile paralysis developed last summer and the history of the disease in other states indicates that it spreads rapidly. Doctor Hurty says the health department can do nothing to prevent its spread unless additional funds are provided for this purpose.

Indiana physicians are forming an organization for the purpose of inducing the next legislature to strengthen the pure drug law of the state. The organization is known as the Indiana Physicians' Pure Drug association, and the officers are: Dr. Edmund D. Clark, president; Dr. Charles E. Cottingham, secretary-treasurer, and Dr. Frank Morrison, Dr. F. C. Heath, Dr. Thomas C. Kennedy and Dr. G. H. Roberts, vice-presidents. All of the officers are Indianapolis physicians, the movement having originated in this city.

Already more than 4,000 personal letters have been sent to physicians all over the state, asking them to join in the movement and co-operate for the improvement of the pure drug laws. Many answers have been received, and the promoters of the association believe that practically all of the physicians in Indiana will fall in line.

Delegates Named by Governor.

Governor Marshall has announced the appointment of the following delegates to the national rivers and harbors congress, which will meet at Washington, D. C., December 7 to 9: Albert E. Metzger, B. J. T. Jaup and Frank O. Fitton, Indianapolis; L. A. Odell, Evansville; George Gifford, Tipton; W. H. Duncan, Terre Haute; W. K. Hatt, R. L. Sackett and W. C. Latta, Lafayette; Charles Kohler, Goshen; William A. Odon, Peru; William J. Hosey, Fort Wayne; R. W. Heath, Covington.

LEGISLATORS-ELECT INTERESTED IN LAWS

State Library Has Many Calls for Information.

MANY BILLS EXPECTED EARLY

Mr. Lapp Has Declined to Give Any Particulars as to Members-Elect Interested—Department Work Confidential.

Indianapolis.—Inquiries received by the legislative reference department of the state library indicate that while the bills already being drafted by legislators-elect cover a wide field, the greatest attention is being given to proposed liquor legislation. Copies of laws of other states or of bills obtained from other states, covering about forty different subjects of general legislative interest have been requested, according to John A. Lapp, head of the reference department.

The inquiries concerning liquor legislation indicate, it is said, a healthy consideration of the question, all the inquiries thus far received, which have come from a large number of the lawmakers-elect, are for copies of the Pennsylvania, the Massachusetts, or the Ontario (Canada) liquor laws. Mr. Lapp will not be able to supply the demand until additional copies can be obtained.

The work of the department is purely advisory, and is confidential. Mr. Lapp has declined to give any particulars as to which members-elect are interested in certain measures. He has the entire force, which has been increased for the approaching session, at work either collecting or sending out information or complying with requests for the drafting of bills.

Next to the liquor question, Mr. Lapp said that the chief interest, according to reports received, centers in employers' liability laws of other states, in workingmen's compensation and employes' pensions, and in the various provisions for legislation advocated in the Democratic state platform, which many of the legislators-elect seem to have taken as their outline in preparing their individual legislative programs.

It appears now that the first roll call for bills in both the house and the senate will see a flood of bills drawn to embody the provisions of the Democratic state platform, and especially will the bills to repeal the county option law and establish a regulating act be in evidence.

The Democratic state platform declares for a registration law, in the following sentence:

"To insure honest elections, we favor the enactment of a general registration law."

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Jeffersonville.—The first arrests here for violation of the order which clamped on the local "lid" were made when four negroes were taken into custody charged with being lottery venders. One of them, Amanda Ellis of this city, was released on bond. The others, all from Louisville, are in jail awaiting hearings. Since the order went forth gambling has been practically eliminated.

Huntington.—Two holdup men attempted to rob Francis Brown, who was passing along a Huntington street. They ran from the shadow of a building and grabbed the horse's head. Brown attempted to use a revolver, but it did not work. He finally beat off his assailants with the butt end of the weapon. The police have no clue.

Newcastle.—Burley Ballard, fifteen years old, on parole from the Plainfield reformatory, proved to be the thief who stole the horse and buggy of Ed Feed, a local liveryman, and also a hunting coat and gun from the May Hardware company. Ballard was apprehended at Greensburg and is now in jail in this city. He will probably be returned to the reform school.

Jasonville.—Because rats had built nests in the hose the Jasonville fire department was handicapped in fighting a fire on South Washington street, and for a time a number of residences were threatened. The residence occupied by Samuel Cullison was destroyed.

Rushville.—Chester Cross, son of Frank Cross, living north of here, was accidentally shot through the left hand while hunting. Amputation will probably be necessary. In climbing a fence he put his hand across the muzzle and the gun was discharged.

Marion.—Two turkeys and 60 dozen eggs were stolen from the packing house of Grant Bros. Ray Brooks and Nate Parks, both under age, were arrested and confessed to the thefts.

Laporte.—Frank Hohn, sixty-four years old, a former Chicago saloonkeeper, was the victim of a hunting tragedy at English Lake, this county. While attempting to crawl through a fence his gun was accidentally discharged. Hohn's dead body was found hanging in the fence several hours after the tragedy.

Frankfort.—The post office at Michigantown was burglarized, about $100 in cash being taken. No effort was made to take the stamps. This is the third time this office has been robbed. There is no clue to the thief.

How a Severe Case of Kidney Trouble Was Finally Conquered.

Byron Bennette, 1018 St. Clair Ave., East Liverpool, O., says: "Six months I was helpless in bed with kidney trouble. Kidney secretions were painful, my head ached terribly and my body bloated. I ran down until I weighed but 80 pounds and everyone thought I had consumption. A specialist gave me up and so did my home physician. Surprising as it may seem, I was able to leave my bed after using six boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and for six years I have remained free from kidney trouble. I confidently believe Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life."

The rector, who has a strong leaning towards forms of all kinds is fastening a festoon of evergreen about the baptismal font, when, enter Miss Dymple, who unceremoniously flings her hat upon the seat of a pew and comes to his assistance. The rector suddenly observes that she is hatless and remarks severely:

"Miss Dymple, it is particularly forbidden that women shall come into the church with uncovered heads."

"Oh, bother, I forgot!" responded the young lady irreverently. "Well," grabbing up the rector's derby and setting it jauntily on her pert little head, "will this do?"

No Union.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, at a luncheon at the Colony club in New York, urged on women the necessity for union.

"If we are to get the vote," she said, "we must stand together. Too many women face this question as they face all others—like the elderly belles at the charity ball.

END STOMACH TROUBLE NOW

Dyspepsia, Gas, Sourness or Indigestion Go Five Minutes After Taking a Little Diapepsin.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or you feel bloated after eating, and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lies like lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure Indigestion.

A large case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only fifty cents at any drug store here in town, and will convince any stomach sufferer five minutes after taking a single dose that Fermentation and Sour Stomach is causing the misery of Indigestion.

No matter if you call your trouble Catarrh of the Stomach, Dyspepsia, Nervousness or Gastritis, or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting at your drug store the moment you decide to begin its use.

Pape's Diapepsin will regulate any out-of-order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any fuss or discomfort, all of any kind of food you eat.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure any chronic case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Gastritis or any other Stomach trouble.

Should you at this moment be suffering from Indigestion, Gas, Sourness or any stomach disorder, you can surely get relief within five minutes.

There is not a vice which more effectually contracts and deadens the feelings than the desire of accumulating possessions.—Mant.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM—it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, In Plain English; or, Medicine Simplified, 1008 pages, over 700 illustrations, newly revised up-to-date Edition, cloth-bound, sent for 31 one-cent stamps, to cover cost of wrapping and mailing only. Address: Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Melton is slowly recovering from an attack of rheumatism... A few days ago I had the pleasure of making an inspection of the German American beet sugar plant at Paulding, Ohio. This is one of the largest plants of its kind in the U. S. and was erected at a cost of $750,000. It employs 300 men, runs day and night every day in the week during the season, using 800 tons of beets daily, and turning out 200,000 pounds of sugar a day. It is a wonderful process; and it was a piece of great luck for the town to obtain it. In a conversation with one of the citizens of the town largely instrumental in securing it, he said he thought the deciding factor with the company was that Paulding was a dry town. Sherwood, Ohio, was also anxious to obtain it and had a superior water supply which is a very great consideration in the matter; but the numerous booze joints did not look good to the men who were putting up the money. They knew that reliable and effective labor was always the output of sober workmen.

Died

At her home in Aurora, Missouri, Saturday, Dec. 3, 1910, Mrs. Margaret Gadsell, wife of M. D. Gadsell, after an illness of thirty-five months from cancer of the breast. She leaves a husband and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Obituary

Amanda Melton was born in Concord Township, DeKalb County, Indiana, December 13, 1844, departed this life at her home in St. Joe, December 3, 1910. She was born and lived her entire life in DeKalb County, Indiana. She was united in marriage to Isaac Meese at Newville, Indiana, March 24, 1866, by C. O. Lawrence. Five children Franklin, Bertha, Sarah, Ross and Orth were born to b'ess this happy union. Three children, Sarah, Ross and Orth have preceded their mother to their Heavenly Home.

Sister Meese confessed her faith in her Savior July 10, 1888 and was baptised by Elder T. A. Hedges. She placed her membership with the Christian Church at St. Joe, and has always maintained a high christian character, one that commanded the respect of the entire community. She leaves to mourn her departure a husband, son, daughter, one brother, one sister and six grand children. Sister Amanda will be greatly missed by her many friends and relatives, among whom she was regarded as a kind and sympathizing friend, but we know she has gone to be be with her Savior.

The funeral services were held in the Christian Church, conducted by Prof. L. W. Fairfield, of Angola, assisted by Elder J. A. Brown. A large concourse of people gathered to pay last tribute to the departed friend. The burial was in Riverside Cemetery at this place. Elza Kinsey funeral director.

Chas. Jenkins and wife, Samantha Hull, Mary E. Baker of Auburn, Mrs Ida Andress of Garrett and Mr. F. A. Zeigler of Pleasant Lake, attended the funeral Monday afternoon.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to express our thanks to the many friends and neighbors for their kindness and also to Dr. J. H Lake for his efficient service rendered us during the last illness of our dear wife and mother.

Notice to the Public

The time is drawing near when some child will be made happy by receiving Dolly's Favorite range. Here is the way we will do it. On Saturday, December 24, 1910, at 10 A. M., we will draw out the tickets. The thirteenth ticket out takes the range. The people who will have charge are Harry Kees and Fred R. Leighty.

All who can are requested to be here. If the party that holds the Lucky ticket is not present the number will be advertised for two weeks. If the number does not show up in two weeks then the tickets will be put in the box (except the one) and the drawing repeated and so on until the Lucky number shows up. Remember that the 13th ticket is the Lucky Ticket each time. We are advertising this week to see if the plan suits you. If not tell us and we will keep your name in confidence and change same to suit you. Don't forget to kick if it don't suit you.

Womanly Wisdom.

Some people grumble because the rose has thorns; they ought to be thankful that thorns have roses.

Bring the soul into command and make the body obey orders.

Cook prunes by pouring hot water over them and letting them stand on the back of the stove a few hours.

Don't make ginger cookies and then hide the jar. Nobody ever hid a cooky jar where a boy could not find it.

I find turkey fat, after it has been tried out, a splendid substitute for butter in making cookies or biscuits.

Gruels are more tempting to the sick if whipped to a froth with an egg-beater, and served in a pretty, dainty cup.

When your stocking feet are past mending, cut off the legs for bags to put over the broom when wiping walls or floors.

If the neck of a sweater becomes stretched too loose from wearing, shrink it by dipping it in clean, warm water, then drying.

To prevent woven carpet from unraveling, it is a good plan to unravel about two inches and tie together the ends of warp.

Some jars of nicely canned fruit, or glasses of jelly or pickles, make a Christmas present that is always acceptable to the recipient.

When you make doughnuts, remember that it isn't the hole that fills up a hungry boy's appetite. Put in some doughnut, as well as a great big hole.

If the kitchen window is kept open at the top while cooking such foods as cabbage, onions, etc., the unpleasant odor will go out of the window instead of spreading all over the house.

By keeping candle molds at hand, a few candles may be made at a time as the suet accumulates, and the ends of candles, and the droppings on the candlesticks, may be melted and run into fresh candles.

Is there anything better for breakfast these cold mornings than fried mush or corn griddle-cakes? Don't let the miller grind the meal too fine, and if he is tricky, keep an eye on him or you may not get the meal from your own corn. We like to pick out nice, sound ears, clean and dry enough to grind well. And when we shell them we leave about an inch of the tips on the cobs. Then we like to get all the cob chaff out, leaving nothing but the clean corn.

To corn beef for use in a week or two, wipe it, then rub hot salt into it until it all disappears; then add more salt and rub again until the meat will absorb no more. Place it in a crock in a cool place for a week, turning it each day; then it will be ready for use. To cook, wash and put it to boil in cold water. Bring slowly to the boiling point, add summer it thirty minutes to every pound. If it is to be served cold, allow it to cool in the liquor in which it was boiled.

CANDY SALES FALLING OFF.

"This feminine craze for being slender has knocked the bottom out of our business," said the man in charge of a downtown branch of a big candy concern. "Some men who were good for at least $10 worth of candy each week never come inside the door now, and when I see them trudging past the store with a package of fruit I made up my mind their wives and daughters or sweethearts have taken a stand against candy. One man with a wife and four daughters, who used to be a splendid customer, told me the other day that he'd as soon come home with a viper as with a 5-pound box of candy, although a year ago he used to buy two 5-pound boxes each week, says the New York Sun. We notice the same difference in small sales to women employed in offices. There's not half the number of calls for half-pound boxes, though our sales of sweet chocolate are always big, as lots of business women nibble it instead of taking a regular luncheon. The continual running in of office boys to execute commissions for the stenographers and telephone operators is getting to be a thing of the past, and lemon drops are about the only sweets these business girls will eat. Every mother's daughter seems to be dead set against gaining an ounce of flesh, and until it's fashionable to be plump again I suppose we'll notice this difference in sales."

From Wisconsin has come a wail at the dense ignorance concerning geography with which high and preparatory school graduates come up to the university. Recent tests made by the department of geology in first year physiography classes have developed difference of opinion among the freshmen as to whether the Rhine is in Asia or South America, has developed an astounding lack of information as to the location of such cities as Vienna, Venice, Lisbon and Hongkong, and in trying to tell the whereabouts of the Pyrenees, Caucasus, Himalaya and Sierra Nevada mountains and Mount McKinley, almost half missed two or three out of the five, says the Chicago Evening Post. In fact, in the examination, which included only such questions as any fairly informed person should know, only one-sixth of the 103 freshmen tested were recorded as making a satisfactory showing.

A young woman of Brooklyn broke a promise to her father and tried to pass through the New York custom house seven dutiable gowns she had purchased abroad. Her very foolish action cost the father about four times what the gowns were worth and the young woman was lucky to escape severe punishment for her action. Collector Loeb, who has been making a most successful war on smuggling, has served notice on all, men and women alike, that more severe penalties than fines will be imposed for flagrant violations of the law. In spite of this warning women more than men are still taking a chance, and probably will not stop until some of them are compelled to go to prison.

The departure of the United States battleships which are to visit French and English ports is a reminder of the famous cruise around the world. When the fleet is assembled at sea it will consist of sixteen vessels, the same number that made the earlier trip. There can be no doubt of the welcome that awaits the visitors. The one regret in connection with the proceedings is that this showing of superb American warships will accentuate the lack of an American mercantile marine.

A thief who stole a gold spike used to fasten the first rail of a new railroad in Pennsylvania found it was only gold plated. Such base deception as this, resulting in painful mortification and disappointment to a man acting in good faith, is plainly reprehensible and comes under the same category as selling a goldbrick.

The difference of 32,000 between the first count of Tacoma's population and the second is a measure of the mistake of too much enthusiasm in padding census returns. Had Tacoma been satisfied with a modest ten or fifteen thousand inflation it might have succeeded, but this overdoing of things is generally disastrous.

The Washington chief of police believes that wife-beaters should be lashed. Theoretically, this punishment, which exactly fits the crime, is indorsed and recommended on all sides. Practically, it is ignored even where the law has put it on the statute books. Naturally, the wife beating goes on.

When a man is his own janitor he wastes little time pounding on the pipes.

NEW ERA IN FINANCE

ACCURACY AND PUBLICITY PROVES TO BE A POPULAR MOTTO.

Prompt Response to Bold Move of President Vail.—"Accuracy" Reduced Western Union's Surplus $13,000,000.—"Publicity" Restored Confidence and Its Stock Went Up.

Are the great financiers of the country beginning to see a new light? Time was, until recently in fact, when the men at the head of the big corporations "kept their business to themselves," as far as the law would allow. Capable men at the head of the big concerns, long realized the weakness of their position, but what was needed obviously, as in all great reforms, was an unmistakable occasion and a courageous man. The occasion arose in the purchase of the Western Union Telegraph company by the American Telephone and Telegraph company, and the man appeared in Theodore N. Vail, President of the purchasing corporation.

It was last December when public announcement was made that the Gould holdings of Western Union had been taken over by the Telephone company.

On account of the high esteem in which the management of the telephone company is so generally held, great things were predicted as a result of the absorption of Western Union. By the press of the country the "deal" was most favorably commented on, it being widely pointed out that under the direction of such men as Theodore N. Vail and his associates, the telegraph company was bound soon to work itself into a position where it could offer the public far more efficient service than it had ever before been able to offer.

But a very few months had elapsed when it became apparent to the new management that a modern and up-to-date appraisal of the company's assets would make possible a far greater degree of efficiency of operation. "Here," they said to themselves, "we've bought control of this property and we know it's immensely valuable, but we don't know just how valuable. These appraisals of real estate and securities owned were made a long time ago. If we have a complete inventory made of every thing we've got we can announce the facts to the public, start a new set of books, and begin our responsibility to stockholders right there."

How Inventory Was Taken.

The most expert accountants and appraisers to be had were put at the task. Their labors lasted over eight months. Their report and its publication by the company marks an epoch in finance.

It began by recommending an adjustment of the difference between the appraised and book values by a charge of $5,596,089 against surplus. Book values of securities be'' were reduced to market values, b and doubtful accounts were "charged off," an allowance of $3,000,000 was made for "depreciation," another of $500,000 for "reserve," and so on, until the old surplus of $18,867,000 came down to $5,136,000.

It required courage, the publication of this statement to stockholders, saying in effect: "The property of your company has been revalued: the surplus isn't nineteen millions, as you have been led to believe, but five millions," but it was the truth, and President Vail did not flinch. "Accuracy and publicity," he declared, was essential. "The stockholder has a right to know. The shares of this company are scattered from one end of the Union to the other. This is more than a private corporation. It is a great national enterprise. The public is entitled to the facts."

The report was ordered published forthwith. Financiers of the school and speculators generally were aghast. What would happen? Why, the bottom drop out of Western Union when the shareholders realized that their propetry was worth $13,000,000 less than they had supposed? But the amazing thing happened. The stock went up and stayed up. The public had responded to this remarkable display of frankness and confidence; to the new motto, "Accuracy and Publicity."

The full significance of the action of the new board is stated concisely by Harper's Weekly in these words:

"Is this policy of publicity and of open-handed dealing with shareholders and public the forerunner of a similar movement on the part of other big corporations? Certainly it is to be hoped that it is. In the case of these big companies, dependent upon public patronage and doing business under public franchise, can there be any question of the right of the people to know?

"That right is being recognized. It is recognized now in this epochal act on the part of the telephone and telegraph interests. It is the dawn of a new era in corporation finance."

Bread and Butter for Babies.

There is no place in which bread and butter can be so beneficial or pernicious as in the nursery. The worst thing you can give a young baby under a year old is bread. But, later on, bread becomes useful. It should never be given new to a child at any age, but stale bread or toast, or bread baked crisp is excellent for children. We really want more crisp foods nowadays, and if this fact was taken to heart the next generation would suffer less from decayed teeth and weak digestion.

PUSS IN BOOTS

ACQUIT BALLINGER

MEMBERS OF CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE REPORT FAVORING INTERIOR SECRETARY.

HIS EFFICIENCY SUSTAINED

Critics of Cabinet Official Held Over-Zealous in Findings of Nelson and Colleagues — Coal Land Entries Taken Up.

Washington.—The Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee, after eleven months of work, made its final report to congress Wednesday. The majority report, which is signed by seven Republican members, completely exonerates Secretary Ballinger on all the charges brought against him and condemns his accusers as having been inspired by animosity, built upon a supposed difference of policy respecting conservation.

After stating that the evidence presented related in the main to charges of various kinds against Mr. Ballinger and that these came chiefly from two sources—L. R. Glavis and Gifford Pinchot—the majority announced the following conclusion:

"The evidence has wholly failed to make out a case. Neither any fact proved nor all the facts put together exhibit Mr. Ballinger as being anything but a competent and honorable gentleman, honestly and faithfully performing the duties of his high office with an eye single to the public interest."

This report is signed by Senators Knute Nelson, chairman; Frank P. Flint, George Sutherland and Elihu Root, and Representatives Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts, vice-chairman; Marlin E. Olmsted of Pennsylvania and Edwin Denby of Michigan, all Republicans.

A few months ago the Democratic members, Senators D. U. Fletcher and William E. Purcell, and Representatives Ollie M. James of Kentucky and James M. Graham of Illinois, with Representative Edmond H. Madison of Kansas, progressive Republican, issued another report, which they maintained to be a majority opinion, condemning the conduct of Mr. Ballinger as secretary of the interior. This report was made public after a meeting of the committee at Minneapolis last September, which was not attended by several of the Republicans who now have exonerated Mr. Ballinger. The natural minority became a majority and the Republicans who were present, with the exception of Mr. Madison, withdrew and broke the quorum.

In speaking of the "animosity" caused by differences respecting the conservation of natural resources, the majority of the committee said that the accusers evidently had this policy deeply at heart, and were "evidently disposed to take a most unfavorable view of the character and motives of anyone whom they supposed to be opposed to their views."

Labor Head Is Slain.

San Francisco.—In a riot between 300 union and nonunion workmen Wednesday Domingo Navarro, president of the Ship-scalers' union, was shot and killed by Augustino Navarreleo, a nonunionist. A number of others were badly beaten.

Shearer Gets Life Term.

Mason City, Ia.—Protesting his innocence John S. Shearer was Wednesday denied a new trial and was sentenced by Judge Kelley to imprisonment for life.

LIBERAL LOSSES WIPED OUT

CAPTURE FIVE UNIONIST SEATS IN THIRD DAY'S POLLING.

Hope of Changing Complexion of Government Has Become a Forlorn One to the Opposition.

London.—The third day's polling in the general election to decide control of the next parliament proved the most severe blow the Unionists have received. Going into the contest with a net gain of five seats, they came out with a net loss of one in the 299 seats now filled.

The Liberals captured five Union seats, Whitehaven, Coventry West, Southwark, Burnley and Woolwich. Against these decisive victories the Unionists have won only one seat, that of St. Helens in Lancashire, where they defeated a Laborite.

This net gain of four on the day's polling, added to the two Sunderland seats, wipes out the 12 Liberal losses, leaving the government with a net gain of one seat. As they went to the country with a majority of 124, this net gain of one, counting two on division, marks the beginning of the advance to a majority of 150 anticipated by the Liberal whips, and possibly to the 175 lugubriously predicted by the Unionist whips.

The voting has been remarkably steady. With the exception of Birmingham, where the Unionist plurality went down by 3,000, Liverpool, Preston, Nottingham and all the industrial towns, with a population of over 100,000, have recorded majorities for the Liberals. As far as the boroughs of London are concerned, the result of the election is a foregone conclusion, although there are still many boroughs to vote.

It is expected that the Liberals will win many of the county seats which they lost in January.

The complexion of the house of commons now stands: Government coalition, 152; Unionist opposition, 147.

The coalition consisted of: Liberals, 106; Laborites, 20; Nationalists, 26.

MOTHER MAKES FATAL ERROR

Gives Her Two Little Sons Tartar Emetic for Epsom Salts and They Die.

DeKalb, Ill.—Two sons of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Brown died within a few hours of one another from the effects of a dose of tartar emetic which was given them instead of epsom salts. The Browns were moving from Sycamore to DeKalb.

The children had complained of not feeling well, and the mother decided to give them a dose of salts. In the confusion of the goods which were packed and ready to be hauled to Dekalb, she picked up the wrong bottle, which contained tartar emetic and which had been used about the house to drive ants away. It was from this bottle she gave the children the dose which took their lives in a few hours. The grief-stricken mother is lying in a prostrate condition.

Blow at Tariff on Cattle.

Washington.—The first effort made in the present session of the house to have a change made in the tariff law was by the introduction Wednesday by Representative Sulzer of New York of a bill "to repeal the duty on meats and cattle."

Mrs. James McKinney Dead.

Washington.—Mrs. James McKinney, the wife of Congressman James McKinney of the Fourteenth district of Illinois, died here Wednesday of paralysis.

2ND SESSION OPENS

BIG CROWD IS PRESENT TO WITNESS THE "BEGINNING OF THE END."

CANNON QUITE UNPERTURBED

Many Members and Employees Entering Upon Their Last Service, but the Democrats May Retain Blind Chaplain.

Washington.—Thousands of persons thronged the capitol at the opening of congress Monday, and if their thoughts could be read it probably would be found that most of them were drawn to witness the preliminary proceedings by a desire to be in "at the beginning of the end," for be it known that as soon as this short session is over the control of the house of representatives passes from the Republicans into the hands of the Democrats.

Opening day in congress always draws a throng, but as a general thing the crowds which gather at the beginning of the first session when a new congress takes hold are much larger than those which come together to witness the proceedings on the opening day of the second session. Curiosity perhaps to see how men take defeat was responsible in large part for the overflowing attendance at the present opening.

Speaker Cannon looks at the Republican majority which sits at his left and understands with a resigned yet painful fullness of knowledge, that in a short time a Democratic speaker will have his place and will see sitting at his left an overwhelming majority of Democrats.

Speaker Cannon shows no sign of discomfiture in the defeat of his party and in his knowledge of the passing of personal power. His gavel comes down with the same old resounding whack and his smile for Democratic interrupters is as grim as ever it was. The blind chaplain of the house, Rev. Mr. Coudon, prayed at the opening without showing visible evidence that his own position as spiritual director of the lower chamber is in danger. The Democrats like the chaplain, it is said, and this feeling of kindliness, taken with the fact that the clergyman has been totally blind for many years, may save him his chaplaincy when the Democrats take charge of the offices and of the legislation in the lower house.

In the senate Vice-President Sherman occupies again the chair of the presiding officer. There are several vacant seats in the senate which at the last session were occupied. Three members of the upper house recently have died. There was a crowd in the senate galleries, as there was in those of the house. The Republicans will still control the senate after March 4, but notwithstanding this there are a good many senators who are just beginning the last session of their present service in congress.

Nearly all the officers of the house of representatives, except possibly the chaplain, are entering on their last few months of service. The veteran clerk, Alexander McDowell, who has been in the service for many years, will depart in March. Asher C. Hinds, the parliamentarian, who knows the rules and precedents better than any other man, will leave his place at the speaker's side to take a seat as a member of the house, for he recently was elected to congress from a Maine district. Altogether, four or five hundred house employees will be affected by the recent Democratic victory and most of them will be separated from the service.

DUVEEN BROS. OWE $5,000,000

Collector Loeb Announces Art Firm Has Defrauded Government Out of Vast Sum.

New York.—Duveen Bros., the greatest art and antique dealers and connoisseurs in America, owe the United States government $5,000,000, according to an announcement made by Collector Loeb Tuesday.

This vast sum represents the customs duties out of which the government has been defrauded by the Duveens since they established their famous house twenty years ago. The amount was arrived at by the government experts, who have been comparing the book values of the firm with invoiced values sworn to on articles entered at the New York custom house. The amount claimed does not represent the value of the imports, but the actual amount out of which it is alleged the wealthy Englishmen have swindled this government in tariff duties.

John B. Stanchfield, attorney for the Duveens both in the civil and criminal actions pending against them, has instituted negotiations with officials of the treasury department and department of justice at Washington to compromise the cases against his clients, one condition of which is that the criminal proceedings against them shall be stopped upon the payment of a large sum of money by them.

Cuts Off Man's Nose.

Muncie, Ind.—In a quarrel over $1.02, which Charles Conway said William Meyers, aged sixty-three, a well-to-do contractor, owed him, Conway Tuesday stabbed the elder man 11 times, cutting off Meyer's nose and fatally injuring him.

ROAD BUILDING THE TOPIC

AMERICAN ROAD BUILDERS' ASSOCIATION IN SESSION.

Representations From Many States and Canada Are in Attendance at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Ind.—As regards both attendance and expected results, the seventh annual convention of the American Road Builders' association, which opened at the German House Tuesday, surpasses any of the previous conventions. No effort has been spared either by the officers of the association or the local committees to make the gathering a success from every point of view. The convention city has been chosen with due regard to accessibility and to the other requisites of a meeting place for workers from widely separated communities; the convention building has been so selected as to offer every convenience for the holding of the sessions and the exhibition of materials and equipment; and in the preparation of the program, the showing of exhibits and the providing of entertainment for delegates and guests full advantage has been taken of the opportunity to make the convention the principal event of the year in road-building circles.

The American Road Builders' association is composed of men identified with and interested in the subject of highway improvement and includes in its membership most of the leading authorities on road building, street paving and kindred subjects. At the request of Governor Marshall, the governors of the other states and of the Canadian provinces have sent delegates.

JACK-POT STORY IS DENIED

Robert E. Wilson Testifies Before Senate Committee at Washington in Lorimer Case.

Washington.—The issue of whether or not William Lorimer is entitled to his seat in the United States senate will be submitted to that body before the Christmas recess of congress, according to the present plans of the sub-committee that is taking the evidence in the case. That was the program announced Wednesday by Senator Burrows, chairman of the committee on privileges and elections.

The announcement was made at the conclusion of the testimony of Robert E. Wilson of Illinois, the alleged distributor of the "jack-pot" of the last Illinois legislature. Wilson, after being much sought after, followed the footsteps of his predecessor on the witness stand—Lee O'Neil Browne—by entering a general denial to all the charges that he personally profited by the election of Lorimer to the senate, or that he gave out the "jack-pot" money in $900 packages to White, Link, Beckemeyer and the other southern Illinois "jack-potters."

MACVEAGH ASKS $748,414,861

Treasury Secretary Sends Estimates to Congress for Government Bureau's Expenses.

Washington.—The estimates of appropriations required for every branch of the federal government during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, aggregating $748,414,861, were submitted to congress Tuesday by Secretary MacVeagh of the treasury department. This grand total stands against estimates of $745,294,513 for the current fiscal year, which appropriation included over $10,000,000 for the census, over $10,600,000 for the postal deficiency and other deficiencies.

There are no particularly striking features in this year's estimates. Among the items are: Increase in the navy, $23,294,048, including $12,840,428 for construction and steam machinery and armor and armament in the proposed building program for 1912 and $3,000,000 for armor on vessels already authorized.

PATTEN PLEADS NOT GUILTY

Second Cotton Pool Indictment Returned Last August Is Opened at New York City.

New York.—The second cotton-pool indictment which was returned by the federal jury in August under seal, was opened and James A. Patten, Eugene Scales and William P. Brown, who were named in the paper appeared before Justice Hough in the criminal branch of the United States circuit court and entered tentative pleas of not guilty.

40,000 Strikers in Parade.

Chicago.—Striking garment workers, numbering 30,000 men, women and children, followed by 20,000 sympathizers, marched from their respective headquarters to Jackson boulevard and Ashland avenue Wednesday, in a driving snowstorm, and thence to the West Side baseball park, where they braved the chilly blasts and shivered in the cold while they listened to speeches from their leaders. Leaders pronounced it the greatest parade of hungry workers since the march of Coxey's army.

Rich Recluse Dies in Incendiary Fire.

Caldwell, O.—Mrs. Minerva Williams, eighty-five, a recluse, was burned to death in a fire that consumed her home near here Wednesday. Mrs. Williams, it was rumored, had $5,000 in currency concealed in the house, and it is believed thieves robbed her and set fire to the house.

Conversation, However, Reads a Whole Lot More Like a Scene in Real Life.

"And so your father refuses to consent to our union?"

"He does, Rodolphus."

The sad youth swallowed a sob.

"Is there nothing left for us, then, but an elopement?" said he.

"Nothing."

"Do you think, Clementine, that you could abandon this luxurious home, forget all the enjoyments of great wealth, banish yourself forever from your devoted parents' hearts, and go west with a poor young man to enter a home of lifeless poverty and self denial?"

"I could, Rodolphus."

The sad youth rose wearily and reach for his hat.

"Then," said he, "you are far from being the practical girl I have all along taken you to be."

And with one last look around on the sumptuousness that some day he had hoped to share, he sobbed and said farewell.—Browning's Magazine.

MERELY A THEORY.

Landlady—Dear me! What a peculiar odor! It smells like a piece of burning rubber.

Sarcastic Boarder—Perhaps. The cook has dropped a piece of the steak on the stove.

Admitted.

"Women already do a lot of governing," said Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, the brilliant suffrage leader, in an interview in New York. "Men, if they are observant and frank, admit that.

"An editor, about to marry, was asked by a friend:

"'What prompted you, old man, to propose to Miss Dash?'

"The editor, who was, like all editors, extremely observant and extremely frank, answered:

"'Well, to tell you the truth, I think Miss Dash prompted me more than anybody else.'"

Benny on Benevolence.

Benevolence is a great thing. When you have benevolence you cannot rest until you do something to make other people feel grateful to you. The other day my mamma went up into the attic to find a lot of old clothes to give to poor people who could not afford to buy any clothes for themselves. While she was hunting around she found a gold-headed cane worth $25 that grandpa had put up there 18 years ago, and forgot all about. Thus we see, dear friends, benevolence brings its own reward.—Benny.

The Big Show.

The personally conducted tourists were viewing the Egyptian pyramids.

"Goodness gracious!" ejaculated Mrs. Newrocks, "it must have cost a pile of money to build them."

"Surest thing you know," said Mr. Newrocks; "but don't imagine for a moment that any one tourist agency stood for all the expense—it was probably a jackpot affair!"

Good Humor and Cheerfulness From Right Food and Drink.

Anything that interferes with good health is apt to keep cheerfulness and good humor in the background. A Washington lady found that letting coffee alone made things bright for her. She writes:

"Four years ago I was practically given up by my doctor and was not expected to live long. My nervous system was in a bad condition.

"But I was young and did not want to die so I began to look about for the cause of my chronic trouble. I used to have nervous spells which would exhaust me and after each spell it would take me days before I could sit up in a chair.

"I became convinced my trouble was caused by coffee. I decided to stop it and bought some Postum.

"The first cup, which I made according to directions, had a soothing effect on my nerves and I liked the taste. For a time I nearly lived on Postum and ate little food besides. I am today a healthy woman.

"My family and relatives wonder if I am the same person I was four years ago, when I could do no work on account of nervousness. Now I am doing my own housework, take care of two babies—one twenty the other two months old. I am so busy that I hardly get time to write a letter, yet I do it all with the cheerfulness and good humor that comes from enjoying good health.

SERIAL STORY

Archibald's Agatha

By EDITH HUNTINGTON MASON

Author of "The Real Agatha"

Copyright 1910, by W. G. Chapman. Copyright in Great Britain.

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular and insolent young bachelor of London, receives news that he has been made heir to the estate of his Aunt Georgiana, with an income of $20,000 a year, on condition that he become engaged to be married within ten days. Failing to do so the legacy will go to a third cousin in America. The story opens at Castle Wyckoff, where Lord Vincent and his wife, friends of Terhune, are discussing plans to find him a wife within the prescribed time. It seems that Lady Vincent is one of seven persons named Agatha, all close girlhood chums. She decides to invite two of them to the castle and have Archie there as one of the guests. Agatha Sixth strikes Archie as a handpainted beauty. Agatha First is a breezy American girl. Lady Vincent tells her husband that Agatha Sixth already cares for Archie. He gains from Agatha Sixth the admission that she cares for him, but will require a month's time fully to make up her mind. Agatha First, neglected by Terhune, receives attentions from Leslie Freer. Four days of the precious time have passed when Terhune is called to London on business. Agatha First, on the plea of sickness, excuses herself from a motor trip planned by the Vincents. Later they see Agatha First picking flowers with a strange man. The Vincents discuss Agatha's seeming duplicity. The following day the party visits the ruins of an old convent. Terhune continues his attentions to Agatha Sixth. Then suddenly he transfers his attentions to Agatha First. Vincent scores him for his apparent fickleness. The last evening of the time allotted, in which to become engaged arrives. The following day Solicitor Burns will arrive from London, and the Vincents are anxious to consummate the engagement. Vincent discovers Agatha First and a man with his arm around her waist. Vincent decides that the man must be Terhune. The next morning Terhune and Agatha First are very friendly at the breakfast table, while Agatha Sixth seems somewhat displeased. Solicitor Burns arrives. The Vincents are anxious. In an interview of Vincent and his wife the latter cries in desperation over the puzzling condition of affairs. Solicitor Barnes arrives. The Vincent's are anxious. Will Terhune report an affianced or a free man? Terhune tells Lord Vincent that he proposed to Agatha Sixth and that she had refused to marry him.

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

"She was only trying you," I replied, taking Dearest's sayso as my authority for advancing this opinion. "She had a right to do that! Every girl does it, in fact!"

"She nearly tried me too far," he said doggedly. "But I'm sorry it all happened, and if I had known I wouldn't have risked my happiness for the world!"

There didn't seem much more that I could say after that, and I gave up trying.

"Well, anyway, it's a deuced shame," I ended. "I must go up and see what my wife thinks about it. Meanwhile you might be trying to persuade Barnes over there," I smiled at the stiff elderly gentleman on the hearthrug, "to give us more time. It can't be twenty minutes to one now, and I'm afraid it would take more time than that to persuade a certain young lady to change her mind, even if Dearest were to make the attempt." But I got no answering smile from Barnes.

"I have no voice in the matter whatever," he said. "I am here merely to carry out the instructions of my client, Mrs. James, to see that her injunctions in regard to the condition upon which Mr. Terhune is to inherit the piece of property in abeyance are obeyed faithfully and to the letter." Having finished this unfeeling speech, which he had couched in as formal phraseology as if he had been addressing judge and jury instead of poor old Arch and myself, he lapsed into meditative silence.

My friend, perceiving that there was no help to be had in that quarter, turned imploringly to me. "Go up and see what you can do, Vincent," he said, "there's a good chap!"

"With all the pleasure in life!" I replied. "And I may persuade her to relent, who knows? So cheer up, old fellow!" And I left them.

"What is all this about Terhune?" I asked excitedly, bursting into my wife's room without my usual preliminary knock, and quite forgetting William's caution that she did not wish to be disturbed.

"Do you mean to say that she has really refused the old boy? I thought you said—". But there I stopped, for there on the floor with her head in Dearest's lap, was Agatha Sixth, and I caught a glimpse of a little tear-stained cheek that smote my heart with a guilty sense that there were two sides to every question always, and that something here was very wrong.

"Will you be kind enough—" began my wife. She had been going to ask me to leave the room, I knew, but it wasn't necessary. Agatha Sixth got to her feet on a sudden and, with a murmur of gratitude to my wife, slipped past me with averted face and fled down the corridor to her room. We heard the door bang in the distance. I looked at Dearest, and Dearest looked at me.

"It's the cruelest thing I ever heard of," she said, speaking first, "and I should think you and your worthy friend would be proud of your work!" Yes, that's just what she said. I never was so taken aback in my life. Dearest speaking so to me. Why was I to blame, I wanted to know! And fancy referring to old Arch, whom Dearest had always petted and made even more of than I have, as my "worthy friend!" Really, it was amazin'!

"But, my dear girl," I said, "it isn't my work, and Terhune's more to be pitied than to be blamed, as far as I can see! He's awful unlucky, I'll admit, but, after all, making love to Agatha First on the sly isn't a hanging matter, is it?"

"Very well," I said. "Don't answer me if you don't choose, and I'll go fast enough. I don't care to stay any longer. But I think you're making a great fuss over nothing, and I don't see that the misfortunes of our friends is excuse enough for a row between us, at all!" I said this with much dignity and went toward the door. Reaching it, I threw a parting shot as I went.

"Besides," I said, "you know you'll have to see me pretty soon in spite of yourself. It will be time for luncheon in a quarter of an hour, and I suppose you intend to come down?"

She didn't answer, and I went down the corridor and descended the stairs in considerable of a temper, I admit.

"By Jove!" I said to Terhune, whom I found waiting anxiously for me at the foot of the stairs, "if I were you I wouldn't waste any more time over Agatha Sixth! She and my wife are in league, should think to prevent you from inheriting a fortune! The girl cares for you, I know. Dearest told me as much, but they're just contrary enough, the pair of them, to wait until it's too late to get your aunt's property before they admit it to you! Some Quixotic notion about love for love's sake only seems to have so possessed them that they will not actually be content until they've forced you to sacrifice the property. All women's nonsense, too, I say. There's no reason why you shouldn't have had both! But since they're so pig-headed about it, upon my word, I'd outwit them yet, if I were you!" I was thoroughly excited and sore, or perhaps I wouldn't have made this suggestion. "I wouldn't let them cheat me of my rights that way. This is a chance in a hundred to make yourself rich for life! I wouldn't wait for them, if I were you! I'd go ahead and ask Agatha First before the time's up. She'd have you in a moment!"

Covered the Distance in a Little Less Than an Hour.

"I'm not so sure," replied Arch, gazing longingly at his watch, as if to hold the minutes back by force. His self-confidence was perfectly shattered, poor old chap. I could see that. It was a shame, too! It was something I was always chaffing him about, but for all that, I was really fond of the egoism that was so characteristic of him. I had always delighted in his childish vanity.

"Come, Terhune!" I said, "be a man! There's Miss Endicott now! Go and ask her, before it's too late. It's a shame you should lose both the girl and the fortune!"

But to my astonishment, Terhune, whom I had always laughingly accused of being a mercenary beggar, when it came to a question of marrying, did not take my sporting suggestion at all well.

"Great heaven, Vincent!" he exclaimed, in a low, tense tone, and turned on me almost as if insulted by the idea, "can't you let me alone? What do you suppose I want with my aunt's beastly property if I have to get along without the girl?"

And by the way he said it I saw at once that there was only one girl for him, and that when it came to the point he found, in spite of all his old caution and calculating spirit, that love was the only thing in the world that counted, after all.

"Great Scotland!" I thought to myself, as I grasped the true inwardness of this fact. "If the old boy isn't actually in love! I didn't think he had it in him!" The idea occurring to me seriously, for the first time, only that moment, and I saved up the incident to tell Dearest when I should get the chance. Somehow I had been so busy trying to help Terhune gain his aunt's promised legacy that I had never had time to consider that there might be a sentimental side to the affair. It had all seemed so much like a game to me. It had been such a jolly lark to find myself mixed up in an affair of such an unusual description, and Arch had so long accustomed me to his mercenary attitude toward life, that I had found myself quite readily talking and advising in a manner that I would not have thought of doing if I had myself been the principal in the affair instead of Arch. This long explanation I make merely because I could not feel myself free from a sense of mortification when it had been so abruptly proven to me that my friend was, after all, capable of the finer feelings I prided myself upon. I may say that I even felt rebuked. And my respect and fondness for Archibald increased the more with the sense of my injustice toward him.

But at this moment, as we waited like two Mr. Micawbers, at the foot of the stairs for something or other "to turn up," a footman approached and informed me that there was some one to see me. Some one who had just come in an automobile and was waiting at the carriage entrance in his machine.

CHAPTER XII.

I hurried round to that part of the castle, followed more mechanically than inquisitively by Terhune, and saw on the stoop under the port-cochere, through the wide-open doors, a slight young fellow of about Arch's build, with a dark, anxious face, just relinquishing a long duster to his chauffeur. But even before I had perceived who it was, my eyes wandered back of him and took in the automobile he'd just stepped from, with a vague sense of having seen it somewhere before. But its owner surprised me more, for it was Murray Brancepeth—of all people! "What in thunder brought him here?" I wondered. I hadn't seen him in a year of Sundays!

"Hello, Vincent!" he cried, on seeing us. "And old Terhune, too!" And he caught our hands in a large, exuberant grip. Too exuberant, I could see Terhune thought, for he was frowning, and I must say I felt inclined to resent Brancepeth's familiarity, myself, for I had never known the fellow well, when he followed his handshake by a great slap on my shoulder. But by his next words it was explained and excused in the same moment as were many other things that had happened lately.

"Where's Agatha First?" he cried. "It's all right now! Miss Simplin has eloped and we can get married."

An enigmatical speech enough, I'll admit, and, of course, I don't mean to say that it alone was the means of enlightening Terhune and myself as to the new turn this rather complicated and stubborn affair of his aunt's property had taken.

It was only after a number of questions had been asked and answered that we understood him. When it appeared that he, Brancepeth, had been in love with Miss Endicott and she with him ever since the first Castle Wyckhoff houseparty, but that there was an obstacle to their marriage which prevented their acknowledging their attachment, which obstacle consisted of the inexorable determination of Brancepeth's sole relative, a wealthy uncle, that he should marry a certain Miss Simplin, an heiress herself, and a neighbor of his uncle's.

Brancepeth had not the faintest intention of marrying the lady of his uncle's choice, or anyone other than the lady of his own, but was still unable openly to disregard that uncle's wishes, having been entirely dependent upon him all his life. The young lady in question, Miss Simplin, had now decided matters for him by eloping with a poor young squire, in spite of a tacit agreement with her father that she would consider favorably the suit of young Murray. And by thus boldly securing her own happiness the young lady had at the same time opened the way for that of Brancepeth, a deed for which I thought, when I heard the tale, she deserved the commendation of the community. I like good sport. But this opinion of mine in regard to Miss Simplin's escapade did not apparently jibe with that of Brancepeth's uncle, for, as our visitor proceeded with his tale, we learned that he was indeed so enraged by the very act which so delighted us all that when his nephew, emboldened by the tidings of the elopement, confided to him his attachment for Miss Endicott, his aggrieved relative had seized with enthusiasm the chance of proving to the scornful and fugitive heiress that she was unregretted. He only awaited the appearance of Agatha First, it seemed, to take her to his arms and enshrine her brows with a diamond tiara that was to flaunt defiance and triumph before the jealous eyes of the poor squire's wife whenever the two might meet.

This exciting crisis in Brancepeth's romance having developed only that morning, it was friend Murray to his machine and on his way to Castle Wyckhoff without loss of time, and we were not at all surprised when he boasted that he had covered the distance between his uncle's place at the other end of the county and Wyckhoff castle in a little less than an hour. We had just succeeded in grasping these details of our friend's love affair, though he had not given them in full, as I have, but had rather sketched the story generally and rapidly, when Dearest appeared upon the scene and the whole wonderful tale had to be told again.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Kickers.

What is odious but noise, and people who scream and bewail! People whose vane points always east, who live to dine, who send for the doctor, who coddle themselves, who toast their feet on the register, who intrigue to secure a padded chair and a corner out of the draught. Suffer them once to begin the enumeration of their infirmities, and the sun will go down on the unfinished tale.—Emerson.

Highest Good in Life.

The highest good is found in the way of doing good, giving what we have, our best selves, to others. Let a man seek efficiency in his business, let him seek leadership in his profession, let him seek enriching some other lives. This is the myrrh that preserves to us all that we gain and perfumes all, while selfishness is the moth that breeds decay and death.

"No use," said paris green performer, "I'll do it anyhow after you have done with me." Doctor got mad. "If that's the way you feel about it, you fool," he said, "I'll not waste my time on you." Paris green performer much astonished and grieved. "Well," he said, "give me 24 hours to think it over." Doctor gave him 24 hours and went away. At the end of the time paris green performer telephoned, "I've thought it over and want to get well; come and see me some more."

MIX THIS FOR RHEUMATISM

Easily Prepared and Inexpensive and Really Does the Work, Says Noted Authority.

Thousands of men and women who have felt the sting and torture of that dread disease, Rheumatism, which is no respecter of age, persons, sex, color or rank, will be interested to know that it is one of the easiest afflictions of the human body to conquer. Medical science has proven it not a distinct disease in itself, but a symptom caused by inactive kidneys. Rheumatism is uric acid in the blood and other waste products of the system which should be filtered and strained out in the form of urine. The function of the kidneys is to sift these poisons and acids out and keep the blood clean and pure. The kidneys however, are of sponge-like substance, the holes or pores of which will sometimes, either from overwork, cold or exposure become clogged, and failing in their function of eliminating these poisons from the blood, they remain in the veins, decompose and settling about the joints and muscles, cause the untold suffering and pain of rheumatism and backache, often producing complications of bladder and urinary disease, and general weakness.

The following simple prescription is said to relieve the worst cases of rheumatism because of its direct action upon the blood and kidneys, relieving, too, the most severe forms of bladder and urinary troubles: Fluid Extract Dandelion one-half ounce; Compound Kargos, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. The ingredients can be had from any prescription pharmacy, and are absolutely harmless and safe to use at any time.

Triumph of Optimism.

"How are you feeling today, uncle?" asked the robust nephew of his aged and feeble kinsman.

"Pretty well, pretty well!" quavered that incurable optimist, "my rheumatix is bothering me a good deal and my erisipilis is worse than it was yesterday, I've got a slight headache and I went down to the dentist today and had all but two of my teeth pulled, but thank heaven those two are opposite each other!"

MRS. LEIGHTY, Associate Editor

Baker was O. K.

Citizens of St. Joe and vicinity, who failed to hear Mr. Fred E. Baker on the subject of "The Lucky Number" missed a rare treat. He dealt the believers of signs and lucky numbers some sledge hammer blows, and did it in such a kindly and genial manner that it would seem that no hearer could indulge in such fancies after listening to such convincing logic. In summing up his argument, Mr. Baker quoted from Sallust this sentence "Omnia faber suae fortunae est", the substance of which is, that each is the architect of his own fate. That true success lies not in fate, heredity or environment, but in a steady adherence to the laws which have always, and will always bring about these results. We feel no hesitancy in saying, that should Mr. Baker again appear among us he will be greeted by a full house.

Mrs Fred Thomas had for a guest last week, her mother from Hamilton.

Elmer Wyatt and wife were guests of Mrs. George Simanton of St. Joe, last Friday.

Mrs. Mary Mitchel spent last week with her daughter, Mrs. Krabill of near St. Joe.

Mrs. Ida Traxler was quite ill last week, with lagrippe. Dr. Cook of Hicksville, was called.

Mrs. Ann Aikins was called to Butler, Thursday, on account of the illness of her little grandson, Bruce Blair.

The revival meeting commenced Sunday evening at the U. B. church. Everybody welcome. Come and get interested in your own soul's welfare or somebody else's.

The U. B. S. S. gave an entertainment, and box social and lap supper combined, in the school house, Friday evening. Chas. Grice from Coleman's Corners, sold the boxes. All seemed to enjoy a good time. The proceeds were $18.50.

Birthday Reception

Saturday Dec 10, grandma DeLong came to the 89th mile stone in the journey of life and her relatives from Hicksville came over to G. W. DeLong's, where she lives and gave her a surprise and a fine dinner.

Sunday P. M., Mr. and Mrs. G. W. DeLong made a reception for grandma, only the bible classes of the Sunday School were invited. At five o'clock supper was served, the table in the dining room was covered with snow white linen and in the center was the birthday cake with beautiful colored candles burning brightly all over it, which gave a most beautiful effect to the table. Supper was served in courses and then the candles were removed and grandma cut the cake and gave to all a generous slice, then all went into the parlor where they joined in singing "Blessed be the tie that binds in fellowship and love." All join in wishing grandma many happy returns of the day. She received a number of beautiful post cards. We are glad to write this in detail, because it is seldom that more than once in a life time one gets to pay their respects to one of that age. Grandma DeLong is the only living charter member of the U. B. Church at this place. Those present at the reception were, Rev. Beauchamp, wife and son, Mr. and Mrs. Kain and daughter, Leitha, Mr. and Mrs Mack Leighty, John Waller and wife and Mesdames Martha Williams and Belle Miller. Grandma had a bright smile for every body.

Senator Fleming Indorses the Chapman Meetings.

When State Senator Stephen B. Fleming came home from New York yesterday churchmen and staff officers of the great evangelistic campaign now in progress in the city, appealed to him for an indorsement, and this is Senator Fleming's broad and manly response:

December 6, 1910.

Mr. Asher called on me today in respect to the meetings which they wish to conduct throughout the city in a number of the saloons and other places where people congregate, and after understanding his position in the matter I heartily indorse the same; their position being that their appeal to the people is an appeal to conscience, and their movement is not one on the basis of the Anti Saloon league where they are endeavoring to mix affairs of state with religion. I hope that their meetings wherever held will prove a success.

S. B. FLEMING.

The above clipping is from the Journal Gazette. After reading it, instantly there flashed across the contributor's mind the article which follows; one which he learned while at school, and which is an extract from the works of John M. Mason an American orator and divine.

"RELIGION HAS NOTHING TO DO WITH POLITICS! Where did you learn this maxim? The Bible is full of directions for your behavior as citizens. It is plain, pointed, awful in its injunctions on the ruler and the ruled as such; yet religion has nothing to do with politics! You are commanded "in all your ways to acknowledge Him." "In everything, by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, to let your requests be known unto God." "And whatsoever ye do, in word or deed, do it all in the name of the Lord Jesus." Can you persuade yourself that political men and measures are to undergo no review in judgement to come? That all the passion and violence, the fraud and falsehood and corruption, which pervade the system of party and burst out like a flood at the public elections, are to be blotted from the catalogue of unchristian deeds, because they are politics? Or that a minister of the Gospel may see his people in their political career bid defiance to their God in breaking through every moral restraint, and keep a guiltless conscience because religion has nothing to do with politics? I forbear to press the argument farther, observing only that many of our difficulties and sins may be traced to this pernicious notion. Yes if our religion had had more to do with our politics; if in the pride of our citizenship, we had not forgotten our Christianity; if we had prayed more and wrangled less about the affairs of our country—it would have been infinitely better for us this day."

Contrast these two articles, dear reader, "Senator Fleming's broad and manly response," with the one by John M. Mason the American divine Which appeals to your better nature, the one by Fleming, or the one by Mason? Senator Fleming, the manly (?) man very well knows, (the crafty old fox) that all efforts to banish the liquor curse, in which business he is financially interested, by an appeal to conscience will never stop the flow of shekels in to his or any other liquormans till. An appeal to conscience, would, however, if acted upon in a consistent manner, do everything to overthrow this gigantic evil. Isn't it a great thing to be represented in the state senate by a man of the "Steve" Fleming type? and yet many of the believers in the democrat party are followers of leaders who say, "That religion has nothing to do with politics," and who are planning a backward step by their avowed intention to repeal the County Option law. To quote my honored opponent Mr. Sherer, they are "Becoming tar buckets to "Steve" Fleming's beer wagons" Well we certainly had a deluge of tar buckets this fall, and the exultation, and over confidence, that political success has inspired in the ranks of the lovers of personal liberty, may be the rope with which these guzzlers will hang themselves. Jurors Drawn.

The following gentlemen have been drawn by the DeKalb county jury commissioners to serve at the next term of court which convenes next Monday. Grand jurors: Eugene Carper, Wilmington; George Duncan, Smithfield; Henry Beams, Concord; A. L. Schultz, Franklin; and Eli Fales, Concord.

Petit jurors: Levi Hewitt, Richland; Amos Rothgib, Grant; S. S. Casebeer, Stafford; Otto Blood, Newville; J. W. Henderson, Concord; J. W. Ammon, Keyser; Arthur Bishop, Wilmington; Adam Tuttaman, Franklin; Jefferson Clark, Keyser; H. H. Fretz, Richland; Alfred Kepler, Grant, and Grant Blaker, Stafford.

Talesmen: John Hook, Union; J. H. Grogg, Jackson; C. O. Krise, Wilmington; Joseph Kelham, Butler, and F. J. White, Concord

It is not probable that the grand jury will be called at this term of court as there is little or no business to come before that body.

REPORT OF 285 STATE BANKS

Bilhimer to Turn His Office Over to O'Brien.

AUDITOR GIVES OUT FIGURES

Shows Increases in Totals Between September 30, the Close of Fiscal Year, and November 10, the Date of the Recent Call.

Indianapolis.—The final report of the two hundred and eighty-five state banks in the state to John C. Billhelmer, auditor of state, made preparatory to his turning the office over to W. H. O'Brien, his successor, shows the following increases in totals between September 30, the close of the fiscal year, and November 10, the date of the recent call:

Resources—Loans and discounts, $1,-$13,049.69; overdrafts, $52,146.24; banking house and fixtures, $65,137.04; other real estate $9,648.20. Total increase in resources, $1,756,353.53.

Liabilities—Capital stock paid in, $221,831.80; surplus, $61,500.48; undivided profits, net, $205,101.61; deposits, $1,102,115.99; bills payable $123,906.81; notes, etc., rediscounted, $41,896.84. Total increase in liabilities, $1,756,353.-53.

Decreases in resources were reported as follows: Bonds and other securities, $35,051.91; cash, $178,575.73. Total, $213,627.64.

A decrease of .89 per cent. in the cash reserve was noted.

The report of the condition of all the state banks follows:

Resources—
Loans and discounts	$52,759,759.19
Bonds and other securities	4,598,718.63
Overdrafts	308,796.61
Banking house and fixtures	1,584,634.65

Bills payable	343,935.57
Notes, etc., rediscounted	123,017.00
Total	$79,372,360.54

One Prisoner, One Fee.

The state board of accounts, in a report just made public, has charged Warren D. Wells, former recorder of Steuben county, with having failed to account for $20.72 in fees collected during his term. Under the law, Wells is entitled to 30 per cent. of the amount when settlement is made, or $6.21, making his net alleged shortage $14.51.

W. A. Dehority, chief examiner, and Amos W. Butler, secretary of the board of state charities, have jointly issued a circular letter to officials of the state, setting out the following points, concerning which numerous questions have been asked of the board of accounts:

Sheriffs are entitled to one "in and out" fee for every prisoner committed, and are not entitled to a "key" fee, or a fee for every time the prisoner is taken from or replaced in the county jail during the time of his legal custody therein. Sheriffs are not entitled to "in and out" fees for persons not formally committed to jail, as in the case of tramps who receive shelter for the night.

Township trustees are not permitted to exceed the statutory amount in providing poor relief without authority from the board of county commissioners.

Children cannot be supported in a public orphan asylum unless made public wards by an official authority, either a circuit judge or a juvenile court judge.

J. H. Fry at Head of Oil Inspection.

Governor Marshall has announced the appointment of James H. Fry of Fort Wayne as supervisor of oil inspection, to succeed Sid Conger, whose commission will expire January 1. Mr. Fry is a Democrat, the first to occupy the office. Conger is a Republican. On announcing the appointment of Mr. Fry, the governor transmitted to him all letters containing applications for appointment to the place of supervisor and to the various deputyships over the state, together with whatever recommendations had been received by him concerning candidates.

The governor said that he had made one request of Mr. Fry in the matter of deputyships, and that was to carry out a promise made several months ago to Thomas F. Bresnahan, who when he died was city editor of the Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette. Bresnahan had been promised by the governor first the Allen county deputyship would be given him. Bresnahan when he died left a widow and five daughters. Two of the daughters were then contemplating their preparation for college. Bresnahan, on receiving the governor's assurance of the place, said he would devote the entire proceeds of the office to the higher education of his children.

Make Modest Demands.

The specific appropriation to be asked for the Indiana state prison at Michigan City for the next two years, as presented to the legislative visiting committee, shows net decrease of $67,985, as compared with the amount asked for in 1909. The appropriation asked includes funds for the maintenance of the hospital for the criminal insane. This building was started in 1907 and is expected to be ready for occupancy about June 1, 1911.

An increase of $1,500 is asked in the amount provided for the supervision and rewards of paroled prisoners. The law provides that each paroled prisoner be given $5, a suit of clothes and transportation. The law also provides for officers who travel over the state finding employment for paroled prisoners and keep supervision over them.

Ward A. Gardner, acting warden, told the committee that the work of the visiting agent was of the greatest importance in the placing and supervising of paroled prisoners, but that with the increase in the number of men on parole it would be impossible to attend to this matter properly without more money than has been heretofore provided. At present only one man is provided to look after about 300 men, who are scattered all over the state.

The report of the board of trustees shows $85,203.23 to have been the earnings of the institution during the fiscal year ending September 30, 1910.

A blinding snowstorm was in progress when the committee arrived from the members up with a splendid dinner before taking them over the grounds and buildings.

Plans for a Good Roads Meeting.

A good roads meeting will be held in every county in Indiana soon if the plans of the Indiana Good Roads association hold. Letters have been sent to a number of citizens in each county appointing them delegates to the American good roads congress in this city, December 6-9, and asking them to interest others in organizing a local good roads association in their county.

The suggestion is that a general meeting be called to which all citizens in the county who are interested in obtaining better roads for Indiana, shall be invited and that short addresses shall be made by those present. The Indiana Good Roads association officers will furnish information and data if application is made to the secretary, Will J. Dobyns, in the Board of Trade building, Indianapolis.

At these various county meetings organizations are to be perfected with the usual officers, and all delegates elected to the American Good Roads congress in Indianapolis will receive credentials from the state headquarters. The real purpose of this organization, however, is to help crystalize sentiment in the various communities in favor of good roads legislation by the general assembly.

The county organizations will be affiliated with the state association, and the officers of the local branches will be kept fully informed of the progress of the campaign.

Poultry Men After Prizes.

Indianapolis and Indiana poultry and pet stock dealers will have numerous entries in the mid-western poultry and pet stock show which is to be held in the Chicago Coliseum December 8-14. Theodore Hewes of 25 West Washington street is secretary and treasurer of the association this year and announces forty-five entries from this state. There are twenty-seven states to be represented in the exhibition as well as two provinces in Canada, and, as a special exhibit, Mme. A. F. Van Schelle of Belgium will enter 129 birds of a breed never displayed in the United States before.

She is the wife of the former American minister to Belgium and is a specialist in raising fine birds. There will be ten judges to preside at the show and $3,000 in prizes will be awarded winners. Of the prizes Mr. Hewes has purchased eleven $50 silver cups in this city to be added to the collection already in Chicago. The show will occupy every available foot of space in the big Coliseum, and thus far 2,231 single entries have been registered, not counting 187 breeding pens which will contain extra displays.

Millions in School Funds.

A report compiled by John I. Hoffmann, deputy state superintendent of public instruction, shows that $8,732,046.20 was held in trust by the various counties as the common school fund on June 1, 1910. The interest on this money for one year amounted to $523,-923.77. There was transferred among the various counties last year of the common school fund $165,000, of which $148,000 was transferred from Marion county. The balance of interest due on the common school fund December 1, 1910, was $268,495.25. Examiners from the state board of accounts discovered that twenty-one counties have not accounted for $7,963.03 which should have been applied to the common school fund March 16, 1908. The errors were corrected and the amount placed in the common school fund in June, 1910. The interest on this money from March 16, 1908, to November 1, 1910, amounted to $744.01.

INDIANA SCHOOL SYSTEM PRAISED

Surprised With the Progress Made by State in Education.

IN LOVE WITH THE STATE

Express Thanks for Courtesies Extended by Hoosiers on Recent Tour and Laud State's Progress in Rural Teaching.

Indianapolis.—Unstinted praise for the Indiana educational system is given in letters received by Charles A. Greathouse, superintendent of public instruction, from several southern educators who visited the consolidated schools of Montgomery and Tippecanoe counties recently. The educators were surprised with the progress made by the Hoosier state in rural education. Mr. Greathouse, E. G. Bunnell, assistant superintendent, and County Superintendent Otis Hall of Montgomery county were complimented for assistance given in the study of the Indiana educational system. The recent visitors had just reached home.

A. P. Bourland, secretary of the Southern Educational board, with offices at Washington, D. C., wrote:

"Returning to my office for the first time after our tour, I felt myself constrained to write my first letter to Superintendent Otis Hall of Montgomery county, to whose inexhaustible kindness and wise planning the success of our tour in Indiana was largely due.

"The second letter must needs go to you to attempt to express the acknowledgement we feel to you, Mr. Bunnell and other people in Indiana. For one thing we saw that country people can provide for their children educational opportunities equal to those enjoyed by the city child. Closer relationship with Indiana would bring to us incalculable benefits."

"I fell complacently in love with the state and with the people," wrote J. D. Eggleston, Jr., superintendent of public instruction of Virginia. "The people of Indiana are thinking seriously about the educational question and are making it a serious business. What a magnificent field you have."

W. K. Tate, state supervisor of elementary rural schools of South Carolina, congratulated Mr. Greathouse on the educational work in progress in Indiana. F. M. Bralley, state superintendent of the Texas schools, thanked the Indiana people for courtesies extended while on the tour of the state.

"You and your people place the state superintendent of the south under lasting obligations for the many courtesies extended," wrote R. L. Jones, state superintendent of Tennessee.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Kokomo.—Finding a woman's watch and chain in a pocket of her husband, Mrs. Sarah J. Heatcoate took possession of them and refused to deliver them over to her husband when he demanded their possession. A rough house followed in the Heatcoate home, with the result that there was a separation. A suit for divorce has been filed and the watch and chain are to be made exhibits at the trial. The Heatcoates are joint owners of land valued at $12,000.

Logansport.—A well-dressed stranger entered the Seybold dry goods store and made purchases which amounted to $3.20. He asked that they be delivered, and that the delivery boy have change for a $20 bill, as that was the smallest amount his wife had in the house. The boy found the man waiting on the porch. He handed over the $16.80 in change, and the stranger disappeared into the house, which was found to be vacant. There is no clue.

Tipton.—An orchard that shut off the view and caused the recent interurban wreck in which six lives were lost has disappeared. The owner sold the orchard to the Indiana Union Traction company and the trees were chopped off by section men. The owner agrees to plant no crop that will grow higher than the fence or in any way obscure a clear view of the track.

Princeton.—Policeman Sam Finney's love of dogs brought him material gain. The officer's sympathy was aroused by the piteous barking of a dog on the street. The animal proved to be the Irish setter extensiviey advertised for by Bell & Chappell of Oakland City, for which a reward of $50 had been offered. Finney received the reward money.

Laporte.—Mayor Lemuel Darrow passed under the surgeon's knife for the second time within a week. A week ago Mayor Darrow was operated on for an infection of the deep glands of the left side of the throat. The infection spread to the right side of the throat, which necessitated another operation.

Apple Suet Pudding.

Chop finely one cupful of suet and dust it with one-quarter cupful of flour. Peel, core and slice three or four good cooking apples and dust with one-quarter cupful of sugar. Mix these together well, adding one-half cupful more flour and one-quarter teaspoon salt. Beat one egg, add one-half cupful of milk and stir into dry mixture, then add another half cupful of flour and one teaspoon of baking powder. Steam in covered mold at least two hours and serve with whipped cream or hard sauce.

At Lunch.

Mrs. Steppines—How nice all your things taste! Did you cook them all in your fireless cooker?

Mrs. Youngwedder—Oh, no. The pickles and the butter I bought already cooked.

Matching the Species.

"I saw a girl in a store today doing a queer thing."

"What was it?"

"She was buying mouse-colored hair."

Too Honest.

Grately—It is impossible for any one to be too honest.

Fledderhas—I don't know about that; the other day my wife found a chicken in a grocery egg and went back to the grocer's to pay for the bird.

Coming to Him.

"He says he's got a beastly headache."

"That is the kind of a headache a saw-dox should expect."

THE IMPORTANCE OF HEALTHY KIDNEYS.

Weak kidne, s fail to remove poisons from the blood, and they are the cause of backache, headaches, urinary troubles and dizzy spells. To insure good health keep the kidneys well. Doan's Kidney Pills remove all kidney ills.

Mrs. E. E. Dewey, Neligh, Neb., says: "In 1909 I had a dreadful attack of dropsy, my face being so puffed I could hardly see and my feet and hands were terribly swollen. Doan's Kidney Pills were advised and I began taking them. It required only short use to restore my kidneys to a normal condition."

16 YEARS OF SKIN DISEASE

"For sixteen long years I have been suffering with a bad case of skin disease. While a child there broke out a red sore on the legs just in back of my knees. It waxed from bad to worse and at last I saw I had a bad skin disease. I tried many widely known doctors in different cities but to no satisfactory result. The plague bothered me more in warm weather than in winter and being on my leg joints it made it impossible for me to walk, and I was forced to stay indoors in the warmest weather. My hopes of recovery were by this time spent. Sleepless nights and restless days made life an unbearable burden. At last I was advised to try the Cuticura remedies [Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills] and I did not need more than a trial to convince me that I was on the road of success this time. I bought two sets of the Cuticura Remedies and after these were gone I was a different man entirely. I am now the happiest man that there is at least one true cure for skin diseases. Leonard A. Hawtof, 11 Nostrand Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., July 30 and Aug. 8, '09."

Old Pete's Little Joke.

Foolish questions and funny answers were under discussion in the Trenton avenue and Dauphin street police station the other day, and after listening for a while to some amusing instances, Sergeant McCay told the following:

"Old Pete Flood was the attendant in the Franklin cemetery some years ago, and it became the custom to ask him how business was, just to hear his reply. It came in a heavy bass voice:

"'Ain't buried a living soul today.'"—Philadelphia Times.

Saw Only Physical Idea.

One of his friends once asked Mr. Darwin's gardener about his master's health, and how he had been lately. "Oh!" he said, "my poor master has been very sadly. I often wish he had something to do. He moons about in the garden, and I have seen him stand doing nothing before a flower for ten minutes at a time. If he only had something to do I really believe he would be better."

Acme of Cautiousness.

Seymour—Ypung Ticer looks like a cautious man.

Ashley—He is cautious; he's so cautious that he wouldn't ask the prettiest girl in all the world to let him see her home unless he had learned how far away she lived.

Miss Brejetta's Halloween

By SUSANNE GLENN

Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press

"Miss Brejetta," called Squire Brown, beckoning to the trim little figure passing his gate. "Miss Brejetta, hadn't you better decide to take the school again after Christmas? The new teacher doesn't seem to give satisfaction, some way, and the folks are all asking for you. You'd better say, now, that you will take it and have that over with."

"Well," answered Miss Brejetta, hesitating, "maybe I will, Squire Brown. I'll think it over."

As Miss Brejetta walked homeward over the sunburned grass and under the crimsoning maples her thoughts were busy. Yes, she would doubtless be better with the school to look after than she was alone in her quiet cottage. It had seemed at first when her mother left her that she could never stand the loneliness of coming home every night to the empty house. But now she was beginning to think that she could not endure the lonely aimlessness of these uninterrupted days and nights. Tears dripped over Miss Brejetta's delicate, spirited face in a way never guessed of by her friends.

From his vine-covered porch Richard Dayton, her life-long friend and nearest neighbor, watched her approach with the tender interest he felt in all her doings. How dainty and sweet she looked; so frail and incompetent, yet so supremely self-sufficient! Almost as far back as he could remember he had longed to care for her, to protect her, to let his love show itself, yet never in any smallest way had she allowed him to serve or approach her.

This strong man, capable of making the world yield him his honest rights, stood irresolute and defeated before the sprightly indifference of this pretty but independent woman.

Unwilling to allow her to pass without a word, the man sauntered to his own front gate in time to intercept her. And Miss Brejetta, seeing him approach, dried her eyes covertly, while there was a little added emphasis to the sugar coated sharpness with which she always treated him, born of her fear lest he should see upon her face traces of her recent weakness.

"Just been pulling my last beans," remarked Dayton, displaying his earth-stained hands smilingly. "Won't you let me fix yours for you this evening, Miss Brejetta?"

He glanced over the dividing fence at his neighbor's garden.

"Indeed no, thank you," refused Miss Brejetta emphatically; "I shall enjoy doing them myself! It is just play to care for that tiny garden, and it gives me something to be interested in, you know."

"It must be lonely for you now," remarked the man with a solicitude that made Miss Brejetta stiffen with resentment. "Do you never feel nervous at night all alone in the house?"

"Why should I be afraid? And, besides, Mr. Dayton, what cannot be cured must be endured. I am alone in the world and so must make the best of it."

Dayton longed with his whole heart to tell her of a solution to her difficulties that would bring her a devoted protector, but the tilt of her pretty head warned him to desist, and he merely suggested lamely:

"You know my housekeeper would be glad to go over and sleep in the house, and I really think you ought to have her, Miss Brejetta, with so many tramps as there are about just now. Won't you let her come tonight, anyway? The boys will be playing pranks that may be unpleasant for you."

Miss Brejetta smiled serenely and exasperatingly into his pleading face.

"The boys will do nothing to annoy me, I am sure, Mr. Dayton," she remarked, pressing on to her own gate.

But when her own front door had been closed with quiet precision, Miss Brejetta's calmness vanished and she flung herself with angry and undignified haste into an easy chair.

"I wish he would stop it," she cried stormily. "I will not have him pitying me, and looking after me all the time! Now I shall have to gather those horrid beans or he will never cease pestering me about them! I can just imagine the remarks that would be made in this town if I allowed him to make my garden!"

And Miss Brejetta, having eaten a hasty supper, pinned up her spotless linen skirt, put on her stoutest garden gloves and, inwardly consumed with wrath, sought her diminutive bean patch.

"I had better get it done with," she whispered to herself after the fashion of lonely people, "because it will be too wet in the morning and too warm during the day. But it just makes me furious to be breaking my back out here when I haven't even cut the leaves of that new magazine yet."

The sunbaked earth seemed loath to part with the vines it had so carefully nurtured through long months, and Miss Brejetta's strength was not great. Her own cozy piazza beckoned enticingly, but the gleam of a cigar end on the neighboring porch held her to her task.

In the welcome dusk she stole into the house, barring doors and windows carefully.

"You are tired," she cried defiantly at her reflection in the hall mirror, "and you just hate gardening. You are lonely, too, and you know you nearly die of fright every night of your life. Why don't you own up to it and let people help you when they want to?"

The nearest neighbor had watched Miss Brejetta at her bean-pulling with almost angry impatience.

"I wonder why she does it—certainly not because she enjoys it. And she splits her kindlings in the shed so I cannot see her—as if I could not hear! And she locks the doors and windows and nearly smothers herself these sultry nights!

"I honestly believe," he mused, "that she would be fond of me if she allowed herself to be. She has always managed pretty well by herself so far, but there will come a time when she will not be so self-sufficient. And, by jove, I almost wish something would happen to take down her pride a little, poor girl!"

For a long time he sat quietly thinking. Then Richard Dayton, one of the most respected and highly honored man of his town, did a strange thing.

Up in the close, clustered attic he stole with a tiny flickering candle for light, and when he came down noiselessly, he carried some dark, shapeless garments over his arm.

Long After Miss Brejetta had retired she lay awake thinking miserably. Scarcely discernible footsteps seemed haunting the darkness, but she comforted herself thinking it was boys on their midnight Halloween pranks. Unaccountable night-sounds caused her to shrink nervously, but at last she slept in fitful snatches.

Suddenly she sat up, every sense alert. The vibration of the old brass knocker still echoed through the hall. For a moment she cowered among the pillows, then the thought of some one in trouble nerved her to action. Tremblingly she lighted a lamp, slipped on some clothing and hurried to the door. Without waiting for her courage to fail, she slipped the bolt, swung back the door, and let the light shine across—a vacant porch! But down by the gate stood a slouching figure with hat pulled low.

"Mr. Dayton—Richard!" called Miss Brejetta faintly, almost dumb with terror.

"Here!" called a familiar voice reassuringly, and the nearest neighbor sprang over the end of the porch rail and took the lamp from her trembling hand. Drawing her out to the shadowed piazza and into his arms, he held her breathlessly.

"I heard the bell," he explained, "and feared you would be frightened! See, dear, it is that strawman—just a Halloween joke! But you do need me, don't you, Brejetta?"

"Oh!" she sobbed, her face against his coat. Then with intoxicating sweetness she surrendered completely.

"Dick, I want you to hoe the garden, and split the kindling, and do the whole miserable business! And I perfectly hate living alone, and I have been lonely and afraid, and I'm glad I've been scared into my senses!"

"And do you love me a little, Brejetta?" anxiously.

"Do you suppose," she cried in exasperated tenderness, "that I should have used you so shamefully if I hadn't loved you? Oh, you dear, stupid man!"

Use Majesty in Love Messages.

A decision of the courts of Trieste is causing great indignation among young people in Austria. Henceforward lovers will be liable to a summons for lese majesty if they vary the official position of a postage stamp whether on a card or on a letter, to indicate their sentiments. To stick a postage stamp at a certain angle to express "undying love," "disappointment," "tender memories" and so forth is decidedly a mark of disrespect to the sovereign, say the courts. The sender of a post card at Cattaro who had used the Emperor's effigy to tell his sweetheart that he would love her always has been condemned and fined for the offense.

Caller—I didn't know your son was at college. Is this his freshman year?

Mrs. Bunderby—Oh, no, indeed; he's a sycamore.

Constipation causes many serious diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One a laxative, three for cathartic.

As Time Passes.

"Before you were married you used to send your wife flowers."

"Yes," replied Mr. Meekton. "Now it takes a diamond necklace to make her as enthusiastic as she used to be over a five-dollar bunch of roses."

Thousands of country people know that in time of sudden mishap or accident Hamlins Wizard Oil is the best substitute for the family doctor. That is why it is so often found upon the shelf.

The Way to Find Him.

"My wife and I are going to spend a few months with her people at Strong's Corners," said the meek little man, "and I want you to mail your paper to me——"

"Yes," said the clerk, "what's your name?"

"Well—er—to make sure, I guess you'd better address it: 'Mary Strong's Husband, Strong's Corners.'"

YOUR STOMACH FEELS FINE.

Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sourness, Gas and All Stomach Misery Ended In Five Minutes.

This harmless preparation will promptly digest anything you eat and overcome a sick, sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach within five minutes.

If your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of Indigestion.

Get from any drug store here in town a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain regulator for out-of-order stomachs, and besides it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disorder.

Remember, if your stomach feels out of order and uncomfortable now, you can get relief in five minutes by taking a little Diapepsin.

Thorough.

"You are an optimist?"

"I am," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "I not only hope for the best, but I make practical arrangements to get it."

For an early breakfast nothing so good Mrs. Austins Pancake Flour.

People Who Work Indoors With Their Hands

Seamstresses, watch-makers, artists, draughtsmen, and many others, cannot properly handle their tools with cold, stiff hands. Many a lost hour or two on cold winter mornings results from the delayed heat of furnace or stove.

The Perfection Oil Heater in a few minutes gives the temperature that assures the worker warm hands and pliable muscles. The quickly gives heat, and with one filling of the font burns steadily for nine hours, without smoke or smell. Has automatic-locking flame spreader which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so the wick can be quickly cleaned.

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Absolutely smokeless and odorless

It has a damper top and a cool handle. Indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font. The filler-cap does not need to be screwed down; it is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain, and cannot get lost.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, because of a new device in construction, and consequently, it can always be easily unscrewed in an instant for rewicking. The Perfection is finished in japan or nickel, is strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

In the best of all medicines for the cure of diseases, disorders and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is the only preparation of its kind devised by a regularly graduated physician—an experienced and skilled specialist in the diseases of women.

It is a safe medicine in any condition of the system.

THE ONE REMEDY which contains no alcohol and no injurious habit-forming drugs and which creates no craving for such stimulants.

THE ONE REMEDY so good that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient on each outside bottle-wrapper and attest to the truthfulness of the same under oath.

It is sold by medicine dealers everywhere, and any dealer who hasn't it can get it. Don't take a substitute of unknown composition for this medicine of KNOWN COMPOSITION. No counterfeit is as good as the genuine and the druggist who says something else is "just as good as Dr. Pierce's" is either mistaken or is trying to deceive you for his own selfish benefit. Such a man is not to be trusted. He is trifling with your most priceless possession—your health—may be your life itself. See that you get what you ask for.

Splendid Crops in Saskatchewan (Western Canada)

800 Bushels from 20 acres of wheat was the thresher's return from a Lloydminster farm in the season of 1910. Many fields in that as well as other districts yielded from 25 to 35 bushels of wheat to the acre. Other grains in proportion.

LARGE PROFITS are thus derived from the FREE HOMESTEAD LANDS of Western Canada.

This excellent showing causes prices to advance. Land values should double in two years' time. Grain growing, mixed farming, cattle raising and dairying are all profitable. Free homesteads of 160 acres are to be had in the very best districts; 160 acres pre-emptions at $3.00 per acre, with, in certain areas, Schools and churches in every settlement, climate unexcelled, soil the richest; wood, water and building material plentiful.

For particulars as to location, low settlers' railway rates and descriptive illustrated pamphlet, "Last Best West," and other information, write to Supt of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or to Canadian Government Agent.

Obituary

David Andress was born in Bedford County, Pennsylvania, October 8, 1828 died at his late residence at Hicksville, Ohio, December 5, 1910, aged 82 years 1 month and 7 days. On December 23, 1847 he was united in marriage to Julia A. Bowman. To this union was born seven children, three of whom Mary C., John H. and Burdette having preceded him in death. Those remaining are Adelbert S., Chicago, Ill., Mattie G. Northrup, Coburntown, Merrill K., Kalamazoo, Mich., and Marshall H., of St. Joe, Ind. Mrs. Andress died February 26, 1897. In 1861 he heard the call of duty in defense of his country and accordingly enlisted in the 44th Reg't Ind Vol Inf'y and served his country faithfully for three years. He was always at his post of duty either with gun, or a driver of the ambulance wagon to care for his wounded c mrades. In 1855 he became a resident of DeKalb County and for 54 years resided in the Coburns Corners neighborhood. His health having failed he moved to Hicksville about a year ago. In 1873 he united with the Church of Christ at Coburn's Corners and remained a faithful and consistent member until his death. An opportunity to help the needy was never lost sight of, in his desire to be of some use to his fellowmen. Verily his deeds of kindness and help to others will ever remain as a living monument to his memory. On October 9, 1898 he was again united in marriage to Mrs. Martha Davis, with whom he traveled life's pathway most happily until death. The funeral services were held at Coburntown last Wednesday at 2 o'clock conducted by his former pastor, Rev. J. A. Brown and his remains laid to rest in the Alton cemetery.

THE FUTURE BRIGHT.

Emancipation of Youth One of Its Glorious Possibilities.

That Albany youngster who presented a revolver at his father's head and demanded a check for $2,200 as the price of uninterrupted existence, says the Baltimore Sun, will be honored, no doubt, in future ages as a bold pioneer and heaven-kissing hero. Judged by our present moral standards, of course, he is simply an extraordinarily bad boy who deserves a walloping, but our present moral standards, as every one knows, have long shown signs of decrepitude, and in a few more years, perhaps, they will be definitely abandoned as ridiculous.

The philosophy of the future, for which the young Albanian stood up so nobly, will be a philosophy divested of all sentimentality. The grotesque notion that a father should be allowed to interfere with impunity in the affairs of his son will be cast upon the scrap heap of dead superstitions. Is there any sense in it, that it should be preserved and revered? Not at all.

A young man of 19, it is apparent, must necessarily have a surer vision and a clearer mind than his father of 45 or 50, if only for the fact that he has lived fewer years in a stupid world, and in consequence has acquired fewer barnacles of prejudice, tradition, and delusion.

The emancipation of youth is one of the noticeable signs of the times. In the old days filial obedience was regarded as one of the greatest of virtues, but those days are done. To-day it is coming to be generally admitted that the duty of obedience, if any such duty exists at all, is upon the other side. It is the duty of a father to see that his son has the wherewithal to cut a figure in the world—that he has a plentiful supply of Egyptian cigarettes, chromatic waistcoats, rolled-up pantaloons, and malt liquor—that he has leisure to engage in football, poker, musical comedy, and all the other pursuits and sciences necessary to the education of a gentleman.

And it is the duty of a mother to see that her daughter is protected from coarse and ignoble labors; that she remains a stranger to the broom, the dishpan, and the dusting cloth; that she has all the clothes she needs and all the confectionery and novels; that she is allowed to sleep undisturbed until 11 a. m., and welcomed affectionately on her return home from rout and masquerade at 3 a. m.

Such are the duties prescribed by the morality of the future. For the present there is still some lingering of ancient superstitions. Youths of 16 who essay to smoke cigars in the parlor are still brutally assaulted with rattans and laths, and girls of 15 who refuse to peel potatoes on the ground that a new novel is just out—such girls are too often cruelly punished by being penned in their rooms. But barbarism is dying out, and a brighter day is drawing. Brave pioneers like that Albany boy show the glorious possibilities of the future.

One on the Drummer.

An Indianapolis traveling salesman picked up in Montreal exactly the sort of sealskin jacket he knew his wife had for a considerable period silently longed for. About a hundred miles out of Niagara on his journey back to the States a woman wearing a sealskin coat entered the car. She would have to pay no duty, he reflected, as the garment was part of her immediate wearing apparel. Directly across the aisle sat another woman, also by herself. She was young, stylishly gowned; but she was not wearing a sealskin; and a sudden inspiration came to the drummer. Why pay that atrocious, heartbreaking, purse flattening duty? Why not— And he had crossed the aisle.

Of course she was willing to accommodate him when he had explained the little difficulty that beset him. "No trouble at all," she said. "I shall really enjoy wearing it immensely."

She was indeed as good as her word in this respect; for when the gauntlet of the customs officials had been safely run and Mr. Drummer turned to thank her, saying: "I shall now take my jacket, if you please," her answer was a stony stare of surprise.

"Your jacket!" she exclaimed. "I don't understand you. This jacket is mine."

And it was; for she added significantly, "You had better go along now or I shall speak to the police."

J. A. Provines, P. Ins.

O. H. Widney was elected delegate to the State Encampment and Elijah Inhofe alternate delegate. The following were elected Trustees, to serve one, two and three years: Benj. Hamilton, J. Y. Davis and J. D. Leighty.

Three designs for a Monument, which the Post, by the help of the citizens of St. Joe and vicinity, hope to erect in the spring, were shown. The gentlemen exhibiting them were present and each give a minute explanation of what they thought were the strong points in the excellence of their respective designs. After some discussion, as to cost and beauty of design, a vote was taken, which resulted in the selection of the one shown by Fogel Bros. of the town of Churubusco. It will cost about $2000. It is seven feet and four inches at the base and stands twenty-two feet and six inches high. All to be of the best quality, light and dark Barre Granite

Through the intercession of Senator Albert J. Beveridge, the sentence of Don M. George, a naval deserter, has been reduced to eight months' imprisonment, with a chance to still further cut down the time to five months by good behavior. George is a DeKalb county resident, who enlisted in the navy two years ago, finally deserting. He managed to avoid capture for a long period of time, but was finally arrested and turned over to the naval authorities.

E. J. Armstrong, one of the prominent farmers of south Jackson township, this county, met with a rather serious accident while returning home from Garrett, where he had driven with a load of hay for his brother. When crossing a high embankment south of Auburn his team shied to one side of the road and Mr. Armstrong was rolled off the hay ladders and down the high embankment. An instant later the wagon followed and he was pinned underneath, where he lay unconscious for nearly a half hour. Finally the team moved forward and he worked himself out from under the heavily loaded wagon. He attempted to walk to a nearby farm house, but fell a couple of times before reaching aid.

AGE AND HUMAN USEFULNESS.

At what age are men at their best? The pessimistic theory attributed to Doctor Osler, which he afterward repudiated, that the golden age is thirty-five, or thereabouts, that it is followed inevitably by waning powers, and that there should be provision for chloroforming all who threaten to survive the age of sixty, has never had many serious adherents, says the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin. It is generally conceded that thirty-five is rather the beginning than the end of the prime of life, and that the vigorous human individual who lives sanely and cheerfully may do more in some important fields of activity after he has acquired the ripe judgment that comes with experience than in the heyday of the thirties and forties. Dr. T. M. Crothers of Hartford, Conn., has come forward with a declaration that is quite as interesting as the one Doctor Osler disowned, and that ought to attract equally wide attention. He says that "there are many reasons for believing that we carry around with us great reserve powers, and unknown energies which are seldom used, and that in old age appeal to these powers may give a certain vigor entirely unexpected, which lengthens our life and practically overcomes disease." He also says that "the man past sixty and from that on to eighty ought to be at his very best because life is then no experiment, and he has attained a position where he can use all his powers to the best advantage." Doctor Crothers insists that there is no theory in this, but that it "is sustained by a great variety of facts which fortunately are becoming more realized as the years go by."

A traveler in the west a decade ago was much amused at the vehicles he saw. They were all kinds of "contraptions." Buggies, "dearborns"—any old thing to ride in. The people out there were living close, faring hard and—saving money, says the Philadelphia Press. That's why the per capita savings bank account of Kansas excels that of all other states. It is astonishingly different today. At the Leavenworth county fair some days ago dozens of farmers came to the grounds in motor cars. They had paid for them, too. They had raised the wheat and corn to do it. The mere sensation of gliding swiftly over the roads where a year or so back they had condemned the "buzz" wagons which frightened their horses, gave them confidence and a new satisfaction. This is what the automobile has achieved in our country districts. It has made a modest toiler a man of new resources. It has put a machine in his hands and said, "Use it." And he is using it. He feels himself on a par with any millionaire who can afford to buy a new model every year.

The rapidity of development in this age is such as to cause many to lose sight of the fact that some of our chief industries are of comparatively modern origin. Cotton spinning has come to be one of the foremost of manufactures in this and other countries, says the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin. But in the present form it has been in existence less than a hundred years, the first cotton-spinning mill in the United States having been started in 1811 at Fall River, Mass. That city is preparing to observe the centenary of the business, and next year will have an imposing celebration. It may be of interest to know that when cotton manufacturing was started there Fall River was known as Troy, a name which was retained until 1834. Cotton goods of various kinds are made in Troy, N. Y., and vicinity, and the anniversary of the origin of cotton spinning will enlist attention.

Wonders never cease. A woman in Minneapolis is suing for a divorce on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment because her husband persists in kissing her too often and ardently. And others complain because they are never kissed. No wonder the poor men have been trying unsuccessfully to strike a happy medium since the world started.

Boston is developing a taste for shark meat. There is some uneasy feeling in Wall street lest the taste spread to Gotham.

A Virginia school board has established a rule that its school teachers of the softer sex must not attend dances. The board should explain whether this action is taken because the teachers are not good enough to appear at dances or because they are too good.

Only Surrender When 200 or More Are Killed and Wounded—Senate Declares a Seige—Scoutship Joins in Seditious Movement.

Rio Janeiro.—The soldiers at the fortress on Cobra island revolted Friday night, captured the fortress and withstood a bombardment lasting from 5:30 Saturday morning until 11 o'clock at night. The rebels were almost annihilated by the fire from the land batteries and warships, losing over 200 killed and wounded.

The scoutship Rio Grande do Sul joined in the rising, but the mutinous sailors soon were subdued by their officers and a part of the local garrison that remained faithful.

The seditious movement, it is believed, has now been completely throttled, but the senate, despite the opposition of Ruy Barbosa, the former president of that body, voted to declare a state of siege for 30 days.

The guns of the land batteries were trained on the island, which lies in the bay of Rio Janeiro, only a short distance from the city and opposite the marine arsenal.

A heavy fire was directed against the rebels, and this continued without cessation for five hours. Then a white flag appeared, and it was believed that the rebels were ready to surrender, but they asked only for an armistice, probably for the purpose of removing the dead and injured.

Two land batteries and two loyal warships took part in the bombardment, and the artillery duel continued with great violence for many hours.

The detonations of the big guns caused the whole city to tremble.

Many persons were killed along the shore and in adjoining streets.

The fight against the Rio Grande do Sul lasted three hours, and among the killed was one officer. Small bands of rebels climbed into launches and drew near the front of the Palacio Cattete, but they were forced to retire.

JURY FREES MENLO MOORE

Theatrical Man Acquitted of the Slaying of Wealthy Indiana Oil Operator.

Vincennes, Ind.—"Not guilty" was the verdict of the jury in the case of Menlo Moore, manager of a circuit of theaters, who was charged with murder in the killing of Charles E. Gibson, a wealthy operator in the Indiana-Illinois oil fields.

When the verdict was read the crowd in the courtroom broke into a cheer, and men rushed to the platform and carried Moore from the courtroom. The court made no effort to stop the demonstration.

The trial had been in progress for about ten days, and was one of the most sensational ever held in southern Indiana.

CUSTOMS CRUSADE KEPT UP

SMUGGLERS AND UNDERVALUERS OF IMPORTS MUST SUFFER.

Wickersham Tells Congress What the Government's Legal Department Has Been Doing.

Washington. — In his annual report sent to congress Monday, Attorney General Wickersham shows that more than $6,000,000 either has been collected by the government or is involved in judgment cases against firms and individuals for smuggling and under-valuation of imports. He promises a continuance of the investigation now in progress and believes more indictments for customs frauds will follow.

There have already been fifty-eight convictions in the southern part of New York, says he, and at least a score more indictments will be found. In this same connection the attorney-general asks congress to pass a law forbidding revenue men from accepting perquisites from importers and another law granting immunity to accused persons who turn state's evidence and assist the government in the prosecution of others. It is also demanded that a heavier penalty be placed upon the statute books for importing firms which refuse to show their books upon the request of the collector of any port in the United States. The present penalty is a $100 fine.

The attorney-general briefly reviews three of the most important cases ever brought before the United States Supreme Court, all of which are now pending. They are the suits to dissolve the Standard Oil Trust and the American Tobacco company—the "tobacco trust"—and the suit to determine the constitutionality of the corporation tax law. All these arguments will be presented in January.

Mr. Wickersham wants the salaries of the federal judges raised and intimates that the government could do better work in the prosecution of trusts if higher fees were paid its attorneys. He points out that corporations are noted for the big sums they pay their counsel.

President Taft granted one hundred and eleven pardons during the year. Only one woman was committed to a federal penitentiary although nineteen women were sent to state prisons. The number of men sent to federal and state penitentiaries were 1,143.

FOUR ARE FOUND MURDERED

Aged Woman and Three Men Clubbed to Death—Former Hired Men Suspected.

Kansas City, Mo.—Mrs. Emeline Bernhard, aged seventy-five; her son George, aged forty; Tom Morgan, a trapper, aged seventeen, and a hired man named Worth were found murdered on the Bernhard farm, in Kansas, near Martin City, Mo., 30 miles south of here Saturday, according to Prosecuting Attorney James Little of Johnson county, Kan., who telegraphed the information to this city. All the victims had been clubbed to death.

Robbery is believed to have been the motive, as the pockets of the dead were turned wrong side out. Former hired men and a stranger seen near the farm recently are suspected.

LORIMER ACQUITTED

SENATOR IS CLEARED OF BRIBERY BY U. S. SENATE PROBERS.

REPORT IS MADE UNANIMOUS

It Now Goes to Full Committee and Later to Upper House for Ratification—Allegations Are Unsustained by Testimony.

Washington.—The subcommittee of the congressional committee on election which investigated charges of bribery in the election of Senator William Lorimer Monday unanimously voted to report to the committee on elections that the charges were without proof.

The committee took up the evidence in its entirety at an executive session. It canvassed the testimony, weighed the evidence and the arguments and took into consideration all of the facts that have been advanced in connection with the charges concerning Lorimer's election and decided there had been shown no foundation for the charges that bribery had entered into the case in connection with Mr. Lorimer's election.

The motion finally was offered to report to the full committee of the senate that the charges had not been proved. On this motion there was no dissenting vote in the subcommittee. Following this action the subcommittee's report will be prepared for the full committee at once, and the report will be sent to the senate within a short time.

The charge that Senator Lorimer had purchased his seat in the United States senate was first made publicly when the confession of Charles A. White, a member of the Illinois legislature from O'Fallon, was published on April 30, 1910. The names of Robert E. Wilson, Lee O'Neil Browne, H. J. C. Beckemeyer and Michael Link were mentioned as having been involved in the purchase of the senatorial toga. White confessed that he had been paid $1,000 for his Lorimer vote by Lee O'Neil Browne, the minority leader in Springfield. White himself was a Democrat, and Senator Lorimer had been elected by a combination of Democrats and Republicans.

Immediately after the publication of the story all the legislators involved were summoned to the state's attorney's office in Chicago. Under a grilling examination lasting several days and under the threats of prosecution on perjury charges, confessions of the truth of White's charges were gotten from Link and Beckemeyer. An indictment was returned at once in Cook county charging Lee O'Neil Browne with bribery, and another indictment was returned in Sangamon county carrying a similar charge against State Senator John Broderick.

Robert E. Wilson was also indicted for bribery and Joseph Clark of Vandalia was indicted on a charge of perjury, he having denied receiving any portion of the money alleged to have been paid him for the Lorimer vote. The indictments against Broderick, Wilson and Clark are still pending in Cook and Sangamon counties.

Lee O'Neil Browne was tried twice in the criminal court of Cook county. The first time the jury disagreed and the second jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

JUSTICE WHITE NOW CHIEF

Louisiana Man Is Confirmed as Head of the United States Supreme Court.

Washington.—President Taft Monday sent to the senate the nomination of Associate Justice Edward Douglass White to be chief justice of the United States Supreme court and the senate immediately confirmed it.

The president also sent in the following nominations:

To be associate justices of the United States Supreme court, Judge Willis Van Devanter of Wyoming and Judge Joseph Rucker Lamar of Georgia.

To be judges of the new Court of Commerce:

Martin A. Knapp, now chairman of the interstate commerce commission, for a term of five years.

Robert W. Archbald, now United States District judge for the middle district of Pennsylvania, term of four years.

William H. Hunt, now a judge of the Court of Customs Appeals, formerly United States District judge of the district of Montana, term of three years.

John Emmett Carland of South Dakota, term of two years.

Julian W. Mack, now judge of the appellate circuit court of the First Illinois district, term of one year.

To be members of the interstate commerce commission: B. H. Mayer of Wisconsin and C. C. McChord of Kentucky.

OVER 100 CHRISTIANS SLAIN

BEDOUINS MASSACRE TURKISH GARRISON IN SYRIA.

Attack Made In Revenge for the Execution of a Chief—Tribesmen Hold Fortress.

Constantinople.—More than 100 Christian inhabitants of the town of Kerak, in the Turkish vilayet of Syria, together with the Turkish garrison at that place, were massacred by Bedouins, in revenge for the execution of one of their chiefs, according to a dispatch from Jerusalem, Friday.

The Bedouins, the dispatch adds, hold the fortress, in the vicinity of which there has been desultory fighting between the tribesmen and the government troops for the last year and a half.

Kerak, formerly the capital of Moab, has a population of 8,000, of whom 6,000 are Moslems. The town is the last on the road from Damascus to Mecca, where Christians may reside. It stands on the mountains of Moab and may be seen from Jerusalem, 50 miles away.

There are no American missionaries there, the only missionary station being that of the British Church Missionary Society for Africa and the East. This is a branch of the organization at Es Salt, and is composed of one missionary, his wife and one native worker.

Frequent atrocities and massacres against Christians in Asiatic Turkey have occurred within the past year, the most serious of which was in April, 1910, when 5,000 were slain near Alexandretta. Two Christian villages on the Palas coast were burned and hundreds of persons murdered.

The United States sent warships to Turkish waters to protect American missionaries.

U. S. CENSUS IS 91,972,266

Including Dependencies and Territories Count Is 101,000,000—Showing Big Gain.

Washington.—The inhabitants of the United States number 93,402,151, according to the figures announced by the census bureau Saturday. This number includes all of the states, territories, District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii and Porto Rico and is exclusive of the Philippine Islands. The increase in the population of the nation during the last decade was 16,145,521, or 20.9 per cent. In 1890 the population was 62,979,766.

In the continental United States the population is 91,972,266, an increase of 15,977,691, or 21 per cent. over 75,994,575 in 1900.

The stars and stripes float over 101,100,000 souls in the United States and insular possessions. This includes 7,635,426 in the Philippine Islands as enumerated to the census of 1903 and the estimates of the population in the Island of Guam, the American possessions in Samoa and persons in the Panama canal zone.

Kentucky Court Nullifies An Election In Which "Drys" Use Scriptures As An Emblem.

Frankfort, Ky.—Because the "drys" of Powell county, Ky., used the Bible as an emblem on their ballots in a recent local option election and carried the county, the state court of appeals has declared the election void. On each ballot was the picture of an open book with the words "Holy Bible" under it. The "wets" for an emblem used the picture of a whiskey bottle and a glass, out of which protruded the head of a snake.

Does Your Cat Cough?

Poor pussy! As if the immemorial charges against her of keeping us awake o' nights and of eating canary birds whenever she gets the chance were not enough, the doctors have just discoveredthat for years she has been responsible for the spread of diphthetria. Dr. G. J. Awburn of Manchester, England, having traced an epidemic of this disease in a suburb of that city to a pet cat belonging to one of his patients, has found, after much clever investigation, that all cats are peculiarly susceptible to diphtheritic affections of the throat. He has therefore recently been warning all families who own cats to watch them carefully, and, if they develop coughs, to forbid their being hugged and petted. Dr. Awburn further recommends that if the cough persists and the cat begins to grow thin to have the animal destroyed at once. The only really safe way, he says, is to let the first wheeze be pussy's death warrant.

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular and indolent young bachelor of London, receives news that he has been made heir to the estate of his Aunt Georgiana, with an income of $20,000 a year, on condition that he become engaged to be married within ten days. Failing to do so the legacy will go to a third cousin in America. The story opens at Castle Wyckoff, where Lord Vincent and his wife, friends of Terhune, are discussing plans to find him a wife within the prescribed time. It seems that Lady Vincent is one of seven persons named Agatha, all close girlhood chums. She decides to invite two of them to the castle and have Archie there as one of the guests. Agatha Sixth strikes Archie as a handpainted beauty. Agatha First is a breezy American girl. Lady Vincent tells her husband that Agatha Sixth already cares for Archie. He gains from Agatha Sixth the admission that she cares for him, but will require a month's time fully to make up her mind. Agatha First, neglected by Terhune, receives attentions from Leslie Freer. Four days of the precious time have passed when Terhune is called to London on business. Agatha First, on the plea of sickness, excuses herself from a motor trip planned by the Vincents. Later they see Agatha First picking flowers with a strange man. The Vincents discuss Agatha's seeming duplicity. The following day the party visits the ruins of an old convent. Terhune continues his attentions to Agatha Sixth. Then suddenly he transfers his attentions to Agatha First. Vincent scores him for his apparent fickleness. The last evening of the time allotted in which to become engaged arrives. The following day Solicitor Burns will arrive from London, and the Vincents are anxious to consummate the engagement. Vincent discovers Agatha First and a man with his arm around her waist. Vincent decides that the man must be Terhune. The next morning Terhune and Agatha First are very friendly at the breakfast table, while Agatha Sixth seems somewhat displeased. Solicitor Burns arrives. The Vincents are anxious. In an interview of Vincent and his wife the latter cries in desperation over the puzzling condition of affairs. Solicitor Barnes arrives. The Vincent's are anxious. Will Terhune report an affianced or a free man? Terhune tells Lord Vincent that he proposed to Agatha Sixth and that she had refused to marry him. Terhune declares that if he cannot have the woman of his choice that he will sacrifice his aunt's fortune. An automobile arrives.

CHAPTER XII.—Continued.

"So you were the man in the drawing room the other night?" she exclaimed, when he had finished telling her, and she opened her beautiful gray eyes very widely at young Murray.

"By Jove, yes!" I added, "and it wasn't old Terhune, after all!"

"And it wasn't old Terhune, either, who was with Agatha First the day you saw the red automobile in the woods," she said.

"By Jove, no!" I said excitedly. "I knew I'd seen that machine of Brancepeth's before." And as I glanced at it again the whole significance of the mystery we had made in regard to Agatha First and Arch came to me with the force of revelation. I turned to explain it all to Dearest, but, as usual, she was ahead of me.

"It was you all the time!" she said to Murray, but with a smile of such ineffable relief that I wondered, until she turned to Arch and I saw what bearing that fact had on the situation in regard to Agatha Sixth and Terhune's aunt's property.

"I'm so sorry!" she said, holding out her hands to the old boy. "We did you an injustice, Mr. Terhune!" And she told him briefly of the scene she and I and Agatha Sixth had been witness to the other night in the drawing room and our suspicions of him in connection with it.

It took him a moment or two to grasp what she meant, and what her discovery that our suspicions were unjust might mean, and I spoke before he did.

"And now it will be all right, Dearest," I said, "about Agatha Sixth. She will see that she was unjust to Arch and you will tell her, won't you?" And I looked at her eagerly. But to my surprise, just as I thought everything explained, everything arranged and the road clear to a reconciliation and engagement between my friend and my wife's friend, toward the accomplishing of which object we had invited both parties to come to Castle Wyckhoff, Dearest seemed inclined to spoil the whole thing by refusing to act as mediator between the two. And a mediator was necessary, that is if they were to be brought together in time to make the engagement a fact before the fatal hour had arrived, for Miss Lawrence was still looked in the fastness of her room.

"I say!" I implored, seizing Dearest's hand, "don't hesitate now! At such a crisis. Go and tell Agatha Sixth the news and get her to come down before it's too late! By Jove, it is hard on poor old Terhune to lose a fortune because you choose to have whims!" I was so earnest I was almost angry. "One would think a fortune was a matter of no importance to him at all!"

"That's just it!" replied my wife sadly; "it's of too much importance! The only reason that I hesitate to do as you ask is because I've seen all along that the fortune has been the only important thing to you men! What a pity!" And the eyes I love best in the world filled with tears. And it was then that the whole thing came to me and I saw at once what was the other obstacle I had to face in my attempt to obtain a fortune for my friend. Now that Agatha Sixth's mistake in regard to his fondness for Agatha First had been dissipated by Brancepeth's revelations, the only impediment to the satisfactory conclusion of Arch's affair was Dearest's refusal to co-operate with me at this crucial moment because of her belief that Terhune's wish to marry Agatha Sixth was purely a mercenary one. And as I at length comprehended what I might have seen a long time ago if I had only stopped to think, I understood in a second her scornful and almost resentful attitude toward myself on several occasions, for apparently supporting my friend in his meretricious designs. With this new grasp of the situation suddenly given to me, I couldn't begin fast enough to try to make my wife understand what I had so lately learned myself, that Terhune sincerely loved Miss Lawrence. As quickly as I could speak I began to tell her, as proof, of Arch's repudiation of my suggestion in regard to asking Agatha First instead, a moment ago in the hall. I judged, and judged rightly, as events proved, that the recital of this incident from my lips would convince my wife as nothing else could, that I was right in believing that Terhune had come at length to see that love, more than anything else in the world—even fortune—was the only thing worth considering when it came to a question of getting married.

"Don't you see," I ended, "he refused to do as I suggested, refused to go and ask Agatha First, although he believed thoroughly that she would accept him, solely because he was in love with Agatha Sixth, and would rather have had no fortune at all than a fortune with any other girl?" I laid my hand on her arm appealingly. My last trump had been played, but not in vain. Grasping my meaning with lightning-like rapidity, Dearest was on the instant all action. "The time, Wilfred, the time!" she urged, her cheeks aflame, her gray eyes black.

"Six minutes of one," I answered, as she pulled the watch from my hands.

"Archibald Terhune! Do you hear that?" she almost shouted to Arch in uncontrollable excitement. "It's six minutes of one! Find Agatha Sixth and ask her to marry you, for heaven's sake!" Then, as Terhune only stood and stared at her with dropped jaw, she stamped her foot vehemently.

"Don't stand and stare like that!" she cried. "Do as I say! Hurry! Run for your life!"

And Arch was gone at the word, though I don't think he had until then any idea that there was still time to retrieve the day and a fortune.

To do him justice, I don't think he had any other thought subsequent to Brancepeth's story and the revelations that followed in regard to Agatha Sixth's reason for refusing him, than that she was more likely to change her mind and marry him after all, since her suspicions had proved unfounded. And this thought, to give him all his due, had been sufficient to make him happy without any thought of his aunt's property. In fact, I think he had forgotten the latter in the first bliss of the moment, but when Dearest raised her warning and inspiring cry he had realised that after all a fortune like that his aunt's property represented was quite well worth the having. I'm not attempting to deny, you see, that there was enough of his old self left, in spite of the changes love had brought about, not to make him rather certain, now that Dearest had reminded him of it, that Aunt Georgy's Australian farm would not make half a bad sort of wedding present. At least I noticed that he lost no time in obeying her mandate, for no sooner were the words out of her mouth than Terhune was in full cry for the staircase, with Dearest and myself hard after him, while a couple of fox terriers that had sprung from dear knows where added to the confusion by yapping at our heels and otherwise impeding our progress, in a praiseworthy attempt to be in at the death. And even as I tripped and stumbled over them and laughed and whooped with Dearest, I heard that chump of a Brancepeth out on the stoop shrieking, "Gone away! Gone away!" as if he were possessed. It is no wonder, then, having admitted the childish state of excitement in which Terhune's last throw for a fortune against time had thrown us, that in the confusion we all three succeeded in running into Agatha First, as she came round the corner of the hall on her way, I suppose, to find out what all the noise was about. Dearest stopped a moment to explain things to her and I could see over my shoulder, even as I hurried after Arch that the two had given each other a swift embrace before Agatha First hurried on to meet her lover.

We had just reached the staircase, however, when Dearest overtook us.

"What are you going to do?" she asked Arch, who was just about to ascend.

"Go up and find Miss Lawrence," replied the distracted lover, "as quick as I can."

But Dearest glided past me and stood in front of him on the stairs, barring the way.

"Wait!" she commanded. "She's in her room, you can't do that! You can't go and scream the good news through her door very well. It wouldn't do at all! You must have more regard for the appearance of the thing!"

"But, good heavens!" cried poor Terhune, "this is no time to think of appearances—it's three minutes of one!"

But my darling paid no attention to him. "Hold him, Wilfred," she ordered me, and as I sprang to obey was gone in the shadow of the hall above.

Two and a half minutes later, and not a second after, she appeared, leading Agatha Sixth by the hand, though it is true the latter looked weepy-eyed, to say the least, and gave every appearance of reluctance.

This vanished, however, at sight of Terhune, red-faced and somewhat warm from his vain efforts to free himself from my embrace, and she flew down the stairs to meet him and by sheer force of arms, not to be facetious, compelled me to relinquish my position in her favor. Something I was jolly well pleased to do, by the way. Arch is a hard man to hold when he's rilled, and that two and a half minutes of suspense had made me his debtor for a couple of knocks and one well-kicked shin.

But just how the miracle of Agatha Sixth's change of heart had been accomplished, or in what manner Dearest had so presented her case as to achieve such speedy results, I am not prepared to state. I only know that it was nothing more than I had expected of the cleverness of my wife, and as for Terhune, I think he was too happy to know or care.

CHAPTER XIII.

As for the rest of us, including Solicitor Barnes, who had been rescued from the library by some maid or footman, we repaired immediately to the dining room, where the wedding luncheon, of Dearest's creation, awaited us, and had all taken our places before the big clock on the mantel quite ceased booming the hour. Of course the bridal nature of the table decorations made a hit—as my Americanized wife persists in saying—with those two ardent lovers, Brancepeth and Agatha First, and they admired and exclaimed quite as if the whole thing were gotten up for their especial benefit. And it was during this meal that we gathered fuller details of the trials and tribulations that had beset the path of this now happy pair, which explained and accounted for many hitherto unaccountable happenings of our own experience.

Among other things it appeared that Brancepeth was, of course, the owner of the checked coat I had seen in the automobile in the woods, and that the coat we had found in Terhune's closet later had only borne a resemblance to it. The young man had run down from his uncle's place in his machine that day, he told us, to meet Agatha First in the woods, by prearrangement with her, which, of course, explained the business of her assumed headache and refusal to go to Northbury with us.

They had been obliged to keep their attachment a secret evidently enough, on account of Brancepeth's uncle's determination to marry him to Miss Simplin. But when we protested against their having left us out of their confidence, Brancepeth explained they had thought it best because they feared that Cecil Chiltern, who, it seemed, was a great friend and political ally of his despotic uncle, would find out from us, probably through my wife's friendship for his wife, about Brancepeth's engagement to Agatha First, in which event Brancepeth felt convinced Chiltern would feel it his duty to inform said despotic uncle. "Thereby," as the young man himself put it, "raising the deuce of a row for nothing, don't you know."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Your Thoughts.

Don't go to sleep with a frown on your brow. A drawn-down mouth and screwed-up eyes help to bring wrinkles.

But really one needs to think pleasant thoughts in the daytime, too. Pleasant thoughts bring a serene expression to the face, which, as the years go on, becomes permanent.

The people you meet who have pleasing faces are the ones who have never allow hard or unkind or discontented thoughts to find a resting place in their minds, and there is urgent necessity for cultivating serenity to fall asleep with.

Too Valuable.

"What you want to do is to have that mudhole in the road fixed," said the visitor.

"That goes to show," replied Farmer Corntossel, "how little you reformers understand local conditions. I've purty nigh paid off a mortgage with the money I made haulin' automobiles out o' that mudhole."

Out of Place.

"Everything a woman has she puts on her back."

"Then my wife will look funny wearing that new breastpin I gave her yesterday."

Assistance Refused.

Doc—Well, you'll certainly find it a safeguard to boil the water.

Blinks—Darn the water! Let it heal itself!

Rabbi Potts Says Education Would Remove Prejudice.

M. E. CONVENTION SESSIONS

Meeting Is Not Held for the Purpose of Collecting Money As Many Suppose—It Is Purely An Educational Gathering.

Indianapolis.—The home missionary convention of the Indiana Methodist conference, now in session here, is a meeting of more than ordinary importance. It is not, as many supposed, a meeting for the purpose of collecting money. A few books are sold, but at prices that barely cover the cost of printing and binding. It is purely an educational meeting, at which the question of dollars and cents is not mentioned.

The Methodist ministers and prominent church workers from the whole of southern Indiana are in attendance. The pastors of the Methodist churches of Indianapolis came in a body. These ministers and church workers were addressed by prominent speakers from all parts of the country, and from these speakers come the words of instruction in home mission work—how to carry on the work of Christianizing the people in America that it may affect the work of the foreign missionaries.

On the program were the names of such men as Bishop Earl Cranston of Washington, D. C.; Fred H. Wright, superintendent of the Italian missions in the United States, who was a Methodist missionary at Rome for five years; Rev. C. B. Mitchell, pastor of the St. James church, Chicago; Rev. Ward Platt, secretary of home missions and church extension; Rev. Dr. Benjamin S. Haywood, superintendent of missions in Porto Rico; Bishop William A. Quayle of Chicago; Rev. I. L. Thomas of Baltimore, field secretary of Maryland; Rabbi Louis M. Potts of Dubuque, Ia.; Rev. Suenoskin Kawashima, a Japanese missionary, living at Oakland, Cal., and Rev. L. J. Naftzger of Muncie, general committeeman of this conference district.

The address of Rabbi Louis M. Potts gave an idea of the scope of the work. He said it was simply a question of whether the Jew should be Christianized or Americanized, and he urged the people to do those things that will break down the barriers between the orthodox Jew and the Gentile—that the Jew should be shown that he is not an object of hatred on the part of the Gentile and that the Christian people know no family, tribe or race. The orthodox Jew, Rabbi Potts said, has been taught from early life, by tradition and history, to hate the Gentile because the Gentile, he thought, hated him.

"When it is shown to the Jew," concluded Mr. Potts, "that the Gentile is not his enemy, the Jew will come knocking at the door for admission. The way to bring this about is by means of education."

"The greatest challenge ever flung into the face of Jesus Christ is the modern city," exclaimed Rev. Charles B. Mitchell of Chicago, in his address before an audience of several hundred people at the Methodist church, where the sessions are held.

Case Doctor Under Fire.

Dr. Charles D. Pettigrew of Logansport, arraigned before the state board of medical registration and examination at the state house to show cause why his license should not be revoked, was subjected to a severe grilling by members of the board and by former Judge Frank E. Gavin, counsel for the board. Doctor Pettigrew appeared to answer charges that he had made fraudulent assertions in advertisements published in a Logansport daily newspaper. The case was continued until a future meeting of the board. The case against Doctor Pettigrew is the first of its kind ever heard by the medical board.

Doctor Pettigrew was cited to appear on an affidavit filed by Dr. R. E. Troutman, president of the Cass County Medical society, alleging that an advertisement inserted in a Logansport newspaper June 14, 1910, was "false, misleading, obscene, licentious and immoral."

Upon cross-examination Doctor Pettigrew admitted he had not even read the advertisement of June 10 before having had it published, but that he had clipped it from another paper and had ordered it run with his own picture. He also admitted that perhaps half a dozen other advertisements had been inserted in daily newspapers without an examination of their contents to determine whether statements made were not superior to what he knew he could accomplish.

Pensions for Indianians.

Pensions were granted Indianians as follows: James M. Bailey, $30; Ellen Belford, $12; Charles G. Blythe, $12; William Draper, $15; Rebecca A. Durment, $12; William H. Everman, $15; Nancy M. Goodnight, $12; Harry E. Helfrich, $6; minor of Alfred Hicks, $12; John H. Lewis, $20; William McCullough, $16; Walter J. Maddox, $20; William C. Moffitt, $12; Leslie H. Moore, $30; William L. Powell, $17; Cornelius V. Tanner, $15; James Ross, $24; James Shackelford, $6; Labor System Is Condemned.

A general condemnation of the prison labor system in force in the state prison and the state reformatory is expressed in the report of the special committee of the State Federation of Labor, which recently visited the prison and reformatory for the purpose of making recommendations to the federation concerning convict labor. A copy of the report has been placed in the hands of the governor by O. P. Smith of Logansport, chairman of the committee, through President Hughes of the federation. The governor will go over it carefully before making any recommendations to the general assembly on the subject concerned. The report in full is as follows:

"The committee on prison labor of the Indiana State Federation of Labor, to which was assigned the duty of inspecting the penal institutions of the state of Indiana, respectfully submits the subjoined report for your excellency's consideration.

"In submitting this report, the committee desires to state by way of explanation that nothing contained herein should be taken as a reflection on the management of either of the penal institutions visited by the committee, neither do we wish to be understood in the light of criticizing either the present or past state administrations.

"We are of the opinion that the state has done the best it could under the circumstances, and we do not wish to place the blame for the unsatisfactory conditions that exist both in Jeffersonville and Michigan City, on either officials or individuals. Whatever censure or complaint may appear in this report is aimed at the system and present practises at these institutions.

"On Monday, November 21, we visited the Jeffersonville reformatory and were shown through the institution by Rev. L. C. Murr and M. J. Farrell, the latter foreman of the foundry, this, of course, by the direction of Superintendent Peyton.

"Without going into harassing details of the events attending our visit to the southern reformatory, our deductions as a result of our investigations are about as follows:

"The shirt contract should be abolished as speedily as practical and this work should be discontinued, as it is an injury to the inmate and is in every way detrimental to the industry. A limited number might be employed at this work, however, but not in a competitive sense, and the products of these inmates should never exceed the requirements of the penal institutions of the state.

"The foundry we visited several times and made as thorough an investigation as time would permit. We are emphatically of the opinion that there should be a most radical change in this department.

Farm Boys In Organization.

The good effect following the late Boy's State Fair school and the meeting at the recent County Farmer's Institute of nearly two hundred farm boys is apparent in the organization by County Superintendent of Schools Prof. Edgar C. Pruitt of the Farm Boy's Brigade of Sangamon county.

Mr. Pruitt was a member of the state commission, having charge of the Boy's State Fair school, and has been much impressed with the eagerness of the farm boys of this county to take an active part in any movement having for its object the study of the most advanced method of successful agriculture. On Wednesday of the 1910 state fair he was successful in having nearly every rural school in the county represented at the great agricultural and industrial exposition by the brightest boy in his class.

The farm boys of the county are thoroughly enthused as to the great possibility for usefulness in promoting the agricultural interests of the county and only need the co-operation of their parents to insure results that will add largely to the wealth of the county by the more general adoption and practise of the most advanced and successful methods of farming.

The Farm Boy's club that was organized by County Superintendent Pruitt will try to do a few things thoroughly and in a way that will be most creditable to the boys of this county.

The first proposition to be considered is the sending to the state college of agriculture next month at Urbana of a large number of boys to the short course of study in corn and live stock judging and lectures on various phases of agriculture and animal husbandry. In January, 1909, more than forty farm boys from this county attended the short course of instruction at the college of agriculture. An earnest effort will be made to have at least one hundred boys from this county present at the short course at Urbana, January 16-28, 1911.

The second matter that will receive the attention of the Farm Boys' Brigade of this county will be a corn growing contest next spring.

Interested in Indiana.

Gifford Pinchot, who recently traveled over a large part of Indiana during the political campaign, is taking a great interest in the conservation movement in Indiana, and is keeping in touch with the work of the Indiana branch of the National Conservation association. William Holton Dye, president of the Indiana branch, has received the following communication from Mr. Pinchot:

"I am delighted with the admirable work the Indiana branch of National Conservation association

CONDEMNS STATE LABOR SYSTEM

Special Committee Makes Careful Investigation.

SEND REPORT TO GOVERNOR

He Will Go Over It Carefully Before Making Any Recommendations to the General Assembly on the Subject Concerned.

Indianapolis.—A general condemnation of the prison labor system in force in the state prison and the state reformatory is expressed in the report of the special committee of the State Federation of Labor, which recently visited the prison and reformatory for the purpose of making recommendations to the federation concerning convict labor. A copy of the report has been placed in the hands of the governor by O. P. Smith of Logansport, chairman of the committee, through President Hughes of the federation. The governor will go over it carefully before making any recommendations to the general assembly on the subject concerned. The report in full is as follows:

"The committee on prison labor of the Indiana State Federation of Labor, to which was assigned the duty of inspecting the penal institutions of the state of Indiana, respectfully submits the subjoined report for your excellency's consideration.

"In submitting this report, the committee desires to state by way of explanation that nothing contained herein should be taken as a reflection on the management of either of the penal institutions visited by the committee, neither do we wish to be understood in the light of criticizing either the present or past state administrations.

"We are of the opinion that the state has done the best it could under the circumstances, and we do not wish to place the blame for the unsatisfactory conditions that exist both in Jeffersonville and Michigan City, on either officials or individuals. Whatever censure or complaint may appear in this report is aimed at the system and present practises at these institutions.

"On Monday, November 21, we visited the Jeffersonville reformatory and were shown through the institution by Rev. L. C. Murr and M. J. Farrell, the latter foreman of the foundry, this, of course, by the direction of Superintendent Peyton.

"Without going into harassing details of the events attending our visit to the southern reformatory, our deductions as a result of our investigations are about as follows:

"The shirt contract should be abolished as speedily as practical and this work should be discontinued, as it is an injury to the inmate and is in every way detrimental to the industry. A limited number might be employed at this work, however, but not in a competitive sense, and the products of these inmates should never exceed the requirements of the penal institutions of the state.

"The foundry we visited several times and made as thorough an investigation as time would permit. We are emphatically of the opinion that there should be a most radical change in this department.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Gary.—Mayor Thomas E. Knotts was shorn of most of his power when seven members of the city council passed the rules ordinances over his veto, thereby vesting all committee appointments in themselves. Incidentally they also paved the way for the abolition of the city controllership in order to give themselves the power to name a successor to the mayor in case of impeachment proceedings, which may come from the council or arise from indictments, which the grand jury at Crown Point is expected to return.

Noblesville.—In the case of Cora Lockwood, next friend of Flossie Manship, against the Indiana Union Traction company, for damages on account of the death of Miss Manship, Judge Vestal held the complaint insufficient and threw the case out of court. The ruling involved a point which, it is said, has never been passed on by the supreme court. An appeal will likely be taken.

Terre Haute.—The barking of a bulldog which her husband had recently purchased probably saved the life of Mrs. Ralph H. White, wife of the sporting editor of the Terre Haute Tribune, when fire destroyed the White home. White had gone to the office and Mrs. White was sleeping, when she was aroused by the dog's barking to find the room filled with smoke and flames bursting from the roof. The fire started in the furnace flue.

Auburn.—The explosion of an ordinary gasoline street lamp in the William Budd blacksmith shop at Corunna, nearly cost the owner and his helper, Jay Clark, their lives. It did kill the horse Mr. Clark was shoeing, wrecked the building and buried the two men in the debris, where they were pinned fast and held until citizens, aroused by the noise, reached them. Mr. Budd was saved by the anvil at which he was working, holding the roof off him and Mr. Clark by the dead animal at whose side he fell. The cause of the explosion is a matter of conjecture.

Basket Ball

The Zorbea Boys received the small end of a 72-8 score last Saturday on the Spencerville floor. Despite the one sided score the game was interesting and showed that our boys had developed wonderfully in the last week. Mention however must be made of the absence of Willenar from Waterloo, who was unable to be present on account of sickness. Next Friday evening, Dec. 23, the All-Hoosiers, from the Tri State College, will be the attraction.

Ends Winter's Troubles.

To many, winter is a season of trouble. The frost bitten toes and fingers, chapped hands and lips, chilblains, cold sores, red and rough skins, prove this. But such troubles fly before Bucklen's Arnica Salve. A trial convinces. Greatest healer of Burns, Boils, Piles, Cuts, Sores, Eczema and Sprains. Only 25c. at H. L. Dunkle's.

A Good Laugh is Next.

Just two weeks to-night the second number of the Citizens Lecture Course will be pulled off in the opera house. Mr. Ned Woodman—Cartoonist will entertain you. His entertainments are interspersed with readings from popular humorists, delivered in a spirited and highly pleasing manner, while his original humor is of that quaint, dry sort that crops out where it is least expected. Wholesome, instructive features are not omitted, for his appreciation of serious things is as deep as his sense of humor; but whatever he offers his audiences in the way of sober material is generally so pleasantly flavored as to be decidedly "easy to take." Come out and have a good laugh. A season ticket can be secured for 75 cents for the remaining four numbers and each one of them promises to be good. During the Autumn of 1903 he was engaged by the Chicago Record-Herald to invent and draw a remarkably ingenious and amusing series of puzzles and pictures which they published in the form of full pages in colors. He utilizes this peculiar inventive faculty on the platform in the production of surprising transformation pictures. Reserved seats at the News Office.

Wants to Help Some One.

For thirty years J. F. Bovey of Fertile, Mo., needed help and couldn't find it. That's why he wants to help some one now. Suffering so long himself he feels for all distress from Backache, Nervousness, Loss of Appetite, Dizziness and Kidney disorders. He knows that Electric Bitters work wonders for such troubles. "Five bottles," he writes, "wholly cured me and now I am well and hearty." It also positively guaranteed for Liver Trouble, Dyspepsia, Blood Disorders, Female Complaints and Malaria. Try them. 50c at H. L. Dunkle's.

Lands Big Job.

Last Saturday December 10, 1910 was a dead tired bunch on the Grand R. post of St. Joe this evening when W. E Moudy representing the Columbus Carriage Works, for a large soldiers monument which when finished will be one of the finest in the state. It will be made of [illegible] granite and will be [illegible] two feet and 6 inches high, two feet west, four inches in perimeter at the base. It represents all the [illegible] of first cap, which is four [illegible] and seven feet from ground. On the ball are 4 inches in diameter, and presenting cannon balls. On each side is a large polished raised G. A. R. badge. The cap on top of the four large polished balls and on which is a soldier statue standing at parade rest.—Journal Gazette.

The monument is the best in the state and will cost nearly $2,000.

Girls Making A Hustle

The fourth week of THE NEWS Popular Voting Contest will soon be over, and great interest is being created among some of the contestants. Free coupons have been sent out in each paper for four weeks and yet many of them have not been gathered up. This is done to assist the contestants in getting started and will be discontinued within a few weeks. Each contestant should aim to call on everyone within their reach and urge them to become subscribers or to pay a dollar if they are readers already. The girl who makes the greatest hustle up until the first counting, which will be January 10, will receive $10.00 in cash. Many people are willing to help in this contest and are only waiting for you to call on them and show that you really mean business. Make your wishes known. Remember also that Mrs. Alice Warner, Sol Barney, J. C. Hill, E. R. Kinsey, J. W. Bulwell & Son, Geo. Milliman, L. & B. Coal Yard, and W. L. Wernert of Spencerville are interested in this contest and will give a 25 vote coupon with each cash purchase. The key to the ballot box is held in the bank. Farmers who have occasion to draw up contracts, agreements, notes, checks, etc., should remember that the safest plan is to employ pen and ink for this work—never use a lead pencil. The law will recognize the lead-pencil, but the writing may be erased too easily, and the amount or terms may be changed. If pen and ink are not at hand when drawing up such papers, use an indelible pencil.

In the olden times the farm was a general loafing place in the winter. The farmer loafed at the store or smith shop; the cows loafed in the stable, as the milk pails proved; the horses loafed and grew soft and fat in their stalls, and the very hens loafed on the roost waiting for spring before beginning to lay eggs. A wonderful awakening has come! The modern farmer is on the job every day of the winter; the cows are doing their best to provide plenty of fifty-cent butter, and the cheerful cackle of the hens on these bright December days attests the fact that they are inspired by the twentieth century determination to make good at forty-five cents a dozen.

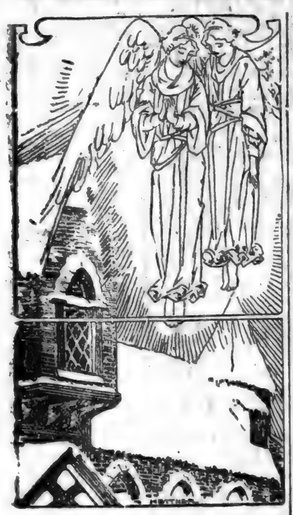
The Christmas Carol



THE twenty-fifth of December, rather the week about that time has been celebrated for many ages with rejoicing. Long before the Christian era the pagan astronomers decided that these were the shortest days before the sun returned to northern lands to bring another spring and seed time and harvest. The dreary winter was at its worst, and the coming days would have longer hours of light and sunshine and the reawakening of nature. Therefore sing and be joyful. The Egyptians held a festival in honor of the birth of their god Horus. The Romans called it "the birthday of the invincible sun," and dedicated it to Bacchus, rejoicing with him that the sun was about to return and revivify the vineyards. The Persians held a festival of uncommon splendor as the birthday of Mithras, the mediator, a spirit of the sun. In the north country among the worshipers of Odin it was a nature festival of riotous feasting, because the fast of winter was approaching its end. It has been a time of universal celebration according to ancient written history since the beginning, and obscure tribes in remote nations have legends of their own about what we call Christmastide the feast of peace and good will.

As Christianity brought its blessings to follow the good of past religions, it seems only right that the birth of Christ should come at a time of general rejoicing. It made it easier for the pagans to turn to the Saviour of Light, at a time when the returning sunshine in the skies was symbolical of the feeling of brotherly kindness which was taught in the love of a little child. And so as early as the second century the church celebrated Christmas day when the heathen were honoring their gods.

The Christmas celebration, as we know it, is but a reincarnation of the Yuletide of the Anglo Saxon tribes. Singing is a proper way to manifest joy. It delights the singer and gives pleasure to others. The churchly carols were not enough for the hearty feeling. The pagan feasting remains. And so with that divine old carol, "Adeste Fidelis," are convivial songs.

Come hither, ye faithful;
Triumphantly sing;
Come, see the manger,
Our Saviour and King!
To Bethlehem hasten,
With joyous accord!
Oh, come ye, come hither,
To worship the Lord!

The contrast lies in "A Carole Brynging in Ye Bore's Heed."

Capri apri defero,
Reddens laudes dommo.
The Bore's head in hand bring I,
With garlands gay and rosemary;
And I pray you all sing merely,
Quis estis in convivio.

The church of the early days had some of the wisdom of modern social service. It entertained its parishioners in a wordly way as well as instilled religious doctrine. The mystery, miracle plays and mummeries enacted under the direction of the clergy rehearsed the scene in the stable. These plays gave rise to a number of legendary carols. The "Cherry Tree Carol" was popular in London in the last century. It related the story of the Virgin begging Joseph to pluck some cherries for her, and when he refussing, the unborn babe speaks and tells his mother to reach out her hand and the tree will bow before her, and the carol goes on to say:

"Then bespake Joseph,
I have done Mary wrong," etc.

Another carol of this time is full of beautiful imagery.

"As Joseph was a-walking,
He heard an angel sing—
The night shall be born
Our heavenly king;
He neither shall be born
In house nor in hall,
Nor in the place of Paradise,
But in an ox's stall," etc.

This is in the same spirit as our familiar:

"While shepherds watched their flocks by night
All seated on the ground,
The angel of the Lord came down
And glory shone around.

"Fear not," said he (for mighty dread
Had seized their troubled min);
"Glad tidings of great joy I bring
To you and all mankind."

And who would forget the swing of melody, and the charity taught in "Good King Wenceslaus looked forth On the least of Stephen."

He saw the beggar gathering fuel in the snow that lay "round about," and calls to his servants to bring him robes and wine and to fetch the poor man in from the cold.

In the rural districts the nature festival lived long after the church had taken the feast. There were remains of tree worship and sacrifice to Pomona in Cornwall as last as 150 years ago. The peasants used to go into the orchards on Christmas day with pailfuls of cider and roasted apples. The health of the trees was drunk to song, and libations poured upon the roots. In various sections of northern Europe it is the custom to decorate trees out of doors. The fir trees as evergreens, and fruit trees for their promises, were trimmed with long streamers of ribbon or paper.

The Christmas tree finds its ancestor in the German ash Ygdrasil, a great tree whose top reached to Walhalla, the home of the gods, and whose roots were fast in the earth.

The Germans have a wealth of carols, but nearly all are of a religious nature.

"Oh, Tannenbaum! Oh, Tannenbaum," or the song of the fir tree at Christmas time, has become world wide. Who could count the households that gather around the tapers lighted and the tree loaded with gifts to sing this in unison.

In the English household the song is:

"Gather around the Christmas tree,
Ever green has its branches been
It is king of all the woodland scene."

Or it may be:

"Carol, brothers, carol,
Carol joyfully,
Carol for the coming of Christ's nativity."

The good old custom of singing from house to house on Christmas eve has crept across the water from England to America. It was a part of the program of the season to learn these carols and to gather in bands, going from house to house across the snow and singing before the doors. The neighbors knew they were coming, preparing cakes and warm drinks, and sometimes gifts of money. Whoever has heard "God rest ye, merry gentle men, let nothing ye dismay," sung heartily in the frosty air has a thrill and an experience that returns to him every Christmas after.

And every Christmas morn is awakened with the stirring strains of "Shout the glad tidings exultingly sing."

But we must not think that England or Germany sing all the carol music. France had a quaint literature of its own. Here is one of Nowell, or Noel, and from north to south there are delightful variations of it:

"Nowell, nowell, nowell, nowell,
This 'is the salutacyon of the angell Gabryell,
Tydings true ther be cum nen sent fromе the trynyte,
Be gabryell to nazareth cety of galile.
A clene maydyn and pure virgyn thorow her humylyte,
Hath concoybyb the person secund in deite."

Pere Noel comes down the chimney and gives gifts just as Father Christmas does across the channel, and the little French children sing:

"Noel, Noel, Noel, Noel singeth clear,
Holpen are all folk on earth
Born is God's son so dear."

L. M. McCAULEY.

A Christmas Prayer

O GOD, our Father, the shining stars of the cold December sky remind us again of the patient mother and the rock-hewn manger in lowly Bethlehem where lay cradled Thy Love for the world. In the shadows of the silent stall we stand beside the Child and praise Thee for Thy best great gift to sinful men. Speak to our souls as we wait. Let the sweet, loving, trussing spirit of the Child steal into our lives until it calms all weak and anxious fears and soothes all bitterness and pain. In willing surrender and holy longing let us take the Christ Child into our hearts, that henceforth we may live as He lived, love as He loved, and follow in His footsteps, bringing help to the needy, courage to the weak, comfort to the sorrowing, hope to the downcast, and strength and love to all. Grant that the spirit of loving kindness may so prevail among us and among all people that they who know Thee not, shall be gathered into Thy fold and Thy kingdom.

"OF SUCH IS THE KINGDOM OF HEAVEN"

Crown the Christ Child King

At Christmas time we celebrate the birthday of our King. The wise men came from the far east, attracted by the light of the star, to find and worship the King. This blessed day is lighted by a star that ought to attract our attention and lead us in the same direction and to the same end. This time of music and glad festivities should lay especial emphasis on the kinship of Jesus of Nazareth. It is our privilege to see, in the Babe of Bethlehem, the King of kings and Lord of lords. That vision should be more clear to us than to the wise men of old. They had none of the helps that quicken our eyesight. We may remember the life he lived, the work he did, the sacrifice he made, and the influence he has exerted and is exerting to this very hour.

"Never man spake like this man," concerning God, man, sin, life, death, truth, immortality, and "the vast forever." He has drawn the intellect of the world to himself.

His ideals have inspired civilizations and turned the currents of history into new channels. He has compelled the world to accept his ideas of greatness and the value of human life. He has drawn the art of the world to himself, for the greatest paintings of the ages reflect his glory. He has drawn the music of the world to himself, for the mighty masterpieces of this realm tell the story of his work and influence. He has drawn the thought of the world to himself, for there never was one about whom so many books have been written. His life and words have been the inspiration of the modern altruism that is doing so much to lift humanity to higher and better levels. He is rapidly drawing the heart of the world to himself—is drawing the lives of men to himself.

He shall reign, "King of kings and Lord of lords." Because he humbled himself and made himself of no reputation, and took on him the form of a servant, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross, therefore God hath highly exalted him and given him a name that is above every name. If we will not crown him Lord of all in our hearts here, we shall yet be called upon to crown him King of eternity. Let us crown the Christ Child our King in the here and now.

Keeping Christmas Joy

Christmas is a day of joy, but joy should not be allowed to die out of our lives next morning. It should stay with us ever after. We should sing the Christmas songs all the new year. We should carry the peace of God in our hearts continually hereafter. We should learn from this time to find the beauty and the good will in all things, and to show the world that we believe what we say we believe—that since God loves us, and Jesus Christ is our friend, "all's well with the world." They who receive and tell of God's unspeakable gift of Christ as a Redeemer may carry the gladdest sort of Christmas around with them all the year in their hearts.

Our early days will not, indeed, come back; yet is Christmas an Indian summer evening to the venerable—a reviving reminiscence of youth.

THE PRINCE OF PEACE

By JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL

"What means this glory round our feet,"
The Magi mused, "more bright than morn?"
And voices chanted clear and sweet,
"Today the Prince of Peace is born."

"What means that star,' the shepherds said,
That brightens through the rocky glen"?
And angels, answering overhead,
Sang, "Peace on earth, good-will to men."

And they who do their souls no wrong,
But keep at eve the faith of morn,
Shall daily hear the angel's song,
"Today the Prince of Peace is born!"

The Way

"When they saw the star they rejoiced with exceeding great joy."

For men in banked cabins in the arctic snows and men in the wind beaten ships on remote seas, for men in tropic jungles and men in forgotten wastes, this day is Christmas. We who spend the day in the friendly security of cities and draw about us the familiar intimacies of home and daily friendships are apt to forget the wonder of this, and the significance. But whether they realize it or not, men draw together during these hours. And this is to follow the star the wise men saw over Bethlehem.

Christmas for most of us is given to the closest of ties and the spirit of it is only a warmer glow of well used affections. But the deepest and mightiest things are the nearest, and in the heart of this day is the hope of the race. Two thousand years ago there was one who spoke from a mountain. His message was the brotherhood of all men. Another time he said: "I am the way, the truth, and the life." To day men follow the way though they do not know, and obey the truth though they do not see, and live the life though they are unconscious of its pulse beat through the world. For the way is the way of the race marching painfully to its far goal.

The life of the individual and the lives of nations are borne upon the bosom of a great tide. Wise men call it by different names, but no man lives effectually save in its full current. Whether we state it in terms of religion, or of philosophy, or policy, its law is but the divine platitude of the brotherhood of man.

The wise man begs to express much more than proverbial wishes that his entire clientele may enjoy the merriest of merry Christmases.

The Human Heart

The heart is a wonderful double pump, through the action of which the blood stream is kept sweeping round and round through the body at the rate of seven miles an hour. "Remember this, that our bodies will not stand the strain of over-work without good, pure blood any more than the engine can run smoothly without oil." After many years of study in the active practice of medicine, Dr. R. V. Pierce found that when the stomach was out of order, the blood impure and there were symptoms of general breakdown, a tonic made of the glyceric extract of certain roots was the best corrective. This he called

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

Being made without alcohol, this "Medical Discovery" helps the stomach to assimilate the food, thereby curing dyspepsia. It is especially adapted to diseases attended with excessive tissue waste, notably in convalescence from various fevers, for thin-blooded people and those who are always "catching cold."

PERFUME FAVORED BY QUEENS

Royal Family of England Remain Faithful to "Ess Bouquet"—Czarina Is Fond of White Violet.

Queen Mary is not a lover of perfume. She uses eau de cologne occasionally, but avoids scents as much as possible. A west end chemist told the writer recently that neither is Queen Alexandra very fond of perfumes, although she remains faithful to the "Ess Bouquet," which has been in use by the royal family of England since 1822. This perfume is composed of amber mixed with the essences of roses, violets, jasmine, orange flowers and lavender.

On the other hand the Czarina is passionately fond of perfume. Her apartments in the royal palace are daily sprayed with essences of lilac, jasmine, and white violet. Her Majesty's favorite essence is violet, and for several weeks in the early spring hundreds of women and girls may be seen at Grasse gathering the blossoms from which the Czarina's perfume is made. The finished product is tested, bottle by bottle, at the St. Petersburg Academy of Chemistry before being sent to the imperial store.

The Queen Mother of Spain uses as perfume eau d'espagne, manufactured in Madrid, and also obtains a perfume for her toilet from Paris. Its composition is a secret which the perfumer only half discloses. "It is made," he says, "of rosewater, cocoanut oil, and—the rest is a mystery."

The young Queen of Holland is a great believer in the virtues of eau de cologne; while "Carmen Sylvia," Queen of Roumania, uses a special perfume made from the finest herbs, which she says "is the best tonic for the skin she has yet discovered."

His Means.

"You are charged with vagrancy, prisoner at the bar."

EAGER TO WORK.

Health Regained by Right Food.

The average healthy man or woman is usually eager to be busy at some useful task or employment.

But let dyspepsia or indigestion get hold of one, and all endeavor becomes a burden.

"A year ago, after recovering from an operation," writes a Michigan lady, "my stomach and nerves began to give me much trouble.

"At times my appetite was voracious, but when indulged, indigestion followed. Other times I had no appetite whatever. The food I took did not nourish me and I grew weaker than ever.

"I lost interest in everything and wanted to be alone. I had always had good nerves, but now the merest trifle would upset me and bring on a violent headache. Walking across the room was an effort and prescribed exercise was out of the question.

"I had seen Grape-Nuts advertised, but did not believe what I read at the time. At last, when it seemed as if I was literally starving, I began to eat Grape-Nuts.

"I had not been able to work for a year, but now after two months on Grape-Nuts I am eager to be at work again. My stomach gives me no trouble now, my nerves are steady as ever, and interest in life and ambition have come back with the return to health."

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre, 25,000 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 125 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

The Silver Cup

at the recent Spokane Fair was awarded to the Alberta government for its exhibit of grains, grasses and vegetables. Reports of excellent yields for 1911 come also from Saskatchewan and Manitoba in Western Canada.

Free homesteads of 160 acres, and additional preemptions of 160 acres (at $3 per acre) can be had in the choicest districts.

THRESHING RETURNS FROM WESTERN CANADA.

They Reveal Larger Averages of Wheat and Oats Than Anticipated.

The returns from the grain fields of Western Canada as revealed by the work of the Threshers, show much larger yields than were expected as the crop was ripening. It is a little early yet to give an estimate of the crop as a whole, but individual yields selected from various points throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta show that the farmers there as a rule have had reason to be thankful over the results. Excellent yields are reported from many portions of Manitoba and a large district of Saskatchewan has turned out well, while the central portion of Alberta is splendid. There will be shown at the land exposition at St. Louis a sample of the Marque's wheat—a new variety and one that appears to be well adapted to the soil and climate of Western Canada—that yielded 53 bushels to the acre. The exhibit and statement will be supported by affidavits from the growers. This wheat weighs well, and being a hard variety will find a ready market at the highest prices obtainable for a first-class article. It is interesting to point out that a field of one hundred acres of this wheat would give its producers 5,300 bushels. Sold at 85 cents a bushel would give him $45 an acre. Counting all the cost of interest on land at $20 an acre, getting the land ready for crop. Seed sowing, harvesting and marketing, the entire cost of production would not exceed $8 an acre, leaving the handsome net profit of $37 an acre. Is there any crop that would yield a better return than this, with the same labor and initial expense? Cotton fields will not do it, apple orchards with their great expense of cultivation and the risk to run from the various enemies of the fruit cannot begin to do it. While what is considered an exceptional case just now is presented, there is no doubt that this man's experience may be duplicated by others who care to follow his example. As has been said the growing of this wheat is but in its infancy, and wheat growing is still largely confined to other older varieties that do not yield as abundantly. Even with these we have records before us of farmers who have grown 40 bushels to the acre., others 35, some 30, and others again 25 bushels. Taking even 20 bushels, and some farmers report that amount, it is found that the returns from such a yield would be $17 an acre. This wheat will cost to get to market, including all expenses, about $8 an acre, and the farmers will still have a net profit of about $9 an acre. Certainly the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba are progressing, settlement is increasing and there is a general contentment all over the country. The social conditions are splendid, the climate is excellent, and there is every condition to make the settler satisfied. At the farming congress, held at Spokane in October, wheat shown by the Alberta Government, took the silver cup, awarded by the Governor of the State. It completely outclassed all other specimens on exhibition, and it was but an ordinary selection, hundreds of fields in Alberta and Saskatchewan being able to duplicate it. There are still available thousands of homesteads, as well as large areas of first-class land—that is being offered for sale at low prices. The agent of the Canadian Government from whom the above facts have been learned expects that the rush to Canada will next year largely exceed the numbers who have gone this year.

Russia's Growing Population.

This year's census of the Russian empire adds another five millions to the population as enumerated in 1908. The czar's subjects now number 160,000,000 and increase every year by 2,500,000 despite wars, epidemics and internal disturbances. As there is no lack of cultivated soil in Russia there seems no reason why this big annual increase should not continue.

SAVED OLD LADY'S HAIR

"My mother used to have a very bad humor on her head which the doctors called an eczema, and for it I had two different doctors. Her head was very sore and her hair nearly all fell out in spite of what they both did. One day her niece came in and they were speaking of how her hair was falling out and the doctors did it no good. She says, 'Aunt, why don't you try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment?' Mother did and they helped her. In six months' time the itching, burning and scalding of her head was over and her hair began growing. Today she feels much in debt to Cuticura Soap and Ointment for the fine head of hair she has for an old lady of seventy-four.

"My own case was an eczema in my feet. As soon as the cold weather came my feet would itch and burn and then they would crack open and bleed. When I thought I would flee to my mother's friends, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I did for four or five winters, and now my feet are as smooth as any one's. The attorney for the Second Assistant Postmaster General of the United States has ruled that in the future no "dunning" postal cards shall be sent through by public service corporations and delinquent tax collectors.

The word "dunning" is defined to cover postal cards that refer directly or indirectly to any bill owing to sender in any way containing a threat as to what will happen in event of the bill not being paid by a stipulated time.

This ruling means that no statement of taxes may be sent on a postal card and that no "second" or "final" notices may be sent on postal cards. In addition it is declared that postal card notices of overdue bills cannot be sent by gas companies, light companies or other public service corporations.

The result of the order will be that all tax notices, gas, light and telephone notices must be enclosed in an envelope. As the city and county delinquent tax collectors have fee offices and pay all expenses including rent, clerk hire, and stationery this order will mean an additional expense to the collectors for envelopes and stamps.

Many public service corporations have been accustomed to send their monthly statements on postal cards with the amount of the reduction for prompt payment and later postcard notices containing information as to what would happen if the bill was not paid.—Walkerton Independent.

Last Wednesday evening the ladies of the L. L. C. entertained their husbands at the pleasant home of Jacob Sechler and wife. A fair crowd was present and most delightfully enjoyed the evening. The entertaining committee was prepared for the occasion and kept the crowd in the stage of laughter continually. The initiating of the men into the club fellowship caused much merriment for the ladies but it was not so funny for the candidate. Games were played after which the gentlemen sought their partners and were served to an elegant luncheon by the good ladies of the club. It was an evening well spent together. The home was decorated in seasonable style.

The newspapers reaching our exchange desk last week were filled with glowing advertisements announing the glad Christmas day. A number of our editor friends made special efforts in the way of getting out special editions namely Waterloo Press, Garrett Clipper and the New Haven Register. They showed many weeks of hard labor and the merchants represented in the issue also appreciated the efforts of the publishers. The editions are a credit to the town as well as to the publisher.

The Concord Township Sunday School Convention was held in the Lutheran Church Sunday afternoon and evening. The attendance was small but the interest was good, each subject was thoroughly discussed by the parties assigned. The evening session was along the line of Sunday School work and proved very interesting. One very peculiar thing happened in the afternoon session. While the speakers were telling how to interest the parents and children in the Sunday School, their own children were on the ice skating and yet they could tell what influence the parents should have over their children. The whole thing is this in a nut shell, parents do not do as they should, consequently the children are not influenced in the right way.

Notice to the Public

The time is drawing near when some child will be made happy by receiving Dolly's Favorite range. Here is the way we will do it. On Saturday December 2, 1910, at 10 A. M., we will draw out the tickets. The thirteenth ticket out takes the range. The people who will have charge are Harry Kees and Fred B. Leighty.

All who can are requested to be here. If the party that holds the Lucky ticket is not present the number will be advertised for two weeks. If the number does not show up in two weeks then the tickets will be put in the box (except the one) and the drawing repeated and so on until the Lucky number shows up. Remember that the 13th ticket is the Lucky Ticket this time. We are advertising this week to see if the plan suits you. If not tell us and we will keep your name in confidence and change same to suit you. Don't forget to kick if it don't suit you.

Mrs. Corn Very Low

It will be remembered by our readers that Mrs E C. Corn was called to Toledo, on account of her sick mother, a couple of weeks ago. A week later word came that the sick lady had passed away. The latter part of last week word came from Rev. Corn stating that Mrs. Corn had a severe attack of Pneumonia. Word came Tuesday that her condition is quite serious and Rev. Corn desires that the members pray for her recovery. It is the desire of the M. P. Church that her friends remember her with post cards. Address: Station E, R. Mrs. Lockwood is on the sick list at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Reasoner.

Mrs. Belle Miser and daughter, Chelma, of Auburn, visited with Marshal Andress and F. M. Monroe and their families over Sunday.

During the two years Ralph L. Thomas has served as sheriff of DeKalb county he has had as prisoners in the county jail one hundred and thirty-eight people. This is an unusually large number of prisoners to be handled in two years. Although many of the prisoners have been of a desperate character, not one has escaped from the custody of Mr. Thomas. The record made is surely a good one.

Our Position is This

In regarding a few evening rest in accordance to our agreement with other merchants in closing evenings, we expect to live up to it only when called SPECIAL so in case of sickness you are at liberty to call me and I will cheerfully answer to your necessary request.

Forsket Ferrell, of Auburn, visited among friends Sunday and Monday.

Mr. J. M. Raymond of Chicago, S. S. Hendricks and son Dilvin, and J. W. Sanders of White Pidgeon, Michigan, were the guests of E. E. Hendricks and family over Christmas. On Tuesday evening Mr. Hendricks invited a number of friends and neighbors to his pleasant home in Hamberg to an evening's entertainment. Mr. Sanders plays the clarinet, Mr. Hendricks the violin and his son the trombone, while Mr. Raymond plays the base and snare drums, violin and cornet. Mr. Raymond is a well known and famous drummer of Chicago. When at the age of 14 years he served as drummer boy in the war of 1861 to 1865 in the 11th Michigan Volunteer Infantry. He is now a man of 64 years and can handle the drumsticks to perfection, is an excellent reader and able to play any instrument given him. He traveled for years on the road giving entertainments and always met with success. His services are in great demand in Chicago but he with the rest of the boys decided to meet at St. Joe for a short vacation. THE NEWS was given several views of Mr. Raymond and also his music room in Chicago we appreciate very much. Popcorn, candy and apples were served.

The following officers were elected at the Christian Sunday School, Sunday:—Superintendent, Mr. John May; Ass't. Supt., Dr. Sheffer; Secretary, Lena Coburn; Organist, Hazel Herrick; Chorister, Mary Scholes; Treasurer, Frank Johnson.

Mrs. Chris Curie was at Bryan, Ohio, last Friday attending the funeral of her uncle, Mr. Ben Conrad, one of the oldest residents of the city. He has lived there since 1856 continually. Was a soldier, and for the past 25 years has been custodian at the court house. He was a man well thought of.

The board of commissioners of DeKalb county is considering the advisability of constructing two insane wards within the walls of the county jail to care for patients who have to be held during the time intervening of their admission to the asylum. During the past month there has been confined in the custody of the sheriff several patients who became violent and smashed up furniture and fixtures as well as all the windows they could reach. This has not only been expensive to the county, but has caused the sheriff considerable annoyance, hence the decision to build the insane cells. According to the plans which will be finally decided this week one cell will be built on each of the two floors, and will be located near the center of the building so that it will be impossible for an insane patient to smash the window panes when confined therein. A cell for each sex will be constructed.

Those comprising the load were the Misses Grace and Avis Sechler, Gladys Morris, Ethel Berry, Frankie Baltz and Messrs Ralph Patterson, Harry Hursh, Merritt Sechler and Foraker Ferrell. The young people thoroughly enjoyed the sleighing.

Ned Woodman's Pictures

Ned Woodman, the cartoonist, furnished the entertainment for the second number of the lecture course at the opera house last week Wednesday evening, and the universal testimonial of the entertainment was that it was a great hit. Mr. Woodman is a cartoonist of more than the ordinary, and at the same time he draws his pictures he talks incessantly and says lots of funny things besides giving the characteristic life of the picture he portrays. In other words he illustrates his stories by his cartoons, and at the same time illustrates his cartoons by stories.

The audience was well pleased and would be delighted to have Mr. Woodman return to Waterloo again.—Press.

He will appear in the opera house at St. Joe, on Thursday evening, January 5th.

We wish a Prosperous New Year to You.

AN APPRECIATION

A New Year is about to begin and at the close of 1910 we feel an eminent satisfaction on account of the success that has attended our business during the past year.

We are not unmindful, however, of the patronage that has made possible this progress and we thus express our hearty appreciation to the good people of this and adjoining vicinities.

The increase of business during 1910 prompts us to believe that many people appreciate our treatment and are willing to trade at "The Home Store". Our constant endeavor throughout 1911 will be to supply the demands of the buying public with full and honest values in return for the money they spend.

Again we thank you for the patronage of the past year and invite you to make "The Home Store"

WORLD GROWING BETTER.

Every issue of a newspaper which tries to record the most important events of the day seems to be on its face an indictment of the human race and modern civilization. Stories of greed, oppression, wrongs and crime often take up most of the space in its columns. The effect upon the reader is sometimes to make him think, for the moment at least, that the world is growing more hard and cruel, and that society, as it is constituted, is a failure. But such a view is all wrong, and the thoughtful reader soon realizes it. The world is growing better all the time, and humanity is steadily advancing from one plane of life to another. The, reason there seems more wickedness is that the people of the earth are in closer communication with one another than they were only a few years ago, says the Cleveland Leader. Crimes which once remained unknown to all but a comparatively few are now revealed to the entire civilized world, that it may know the sort of men it must suppress, the extent of the harm they inflict and the manner in which they are dealt with. Wrongs which once flourished because they were hidden are now dragged into the light of day and exposed in all their meanness in the pages of the newspapers. Modern civilization, through its most powerful agency for progress, the public press, lays bare the hitherto hidden wounds inflicted upon society, that they may be cured and their repetition prevented. No, the world is not growing worse. There is less of poverty, crime and suffering than existed only a few years ago. Life is easier, more profitable and more full of joy. The man with the shovel gets more out of it than did the man with the two-handed sword in his castle, a brief remove back in the life of the race.

Exchanging professors with American institutions of learning is an increasing practise among educators abroad. For several years the interchange has been going on between this country and Germany, and some of the ablest of our teachers have served in Berlin and elsewhere, while German professors have done similar work in American universities and colleges, says the Troy Times. Now a prominent business man of Copenhagen has given $100,000 to the Scandinavian-American Society to promote the interchange of professors between American and Danish universities. The Rhodes scholarships, through which American students receive the benefit of advanced courses at England's great university of Oxford, furnish another illustration of the solidarity of learning which incidentally must tend to draw nations nearer to one another.

Runaway matches have been known to turn out ideally, but not often. Their average course is toward wreckage and wretchedness. The very need of secrecy and flight is generally indicative of a fault in the scheme somewhere, and young girls who are willing to defy parental love and care and marry by stealth need feel no surprise when their idols' feet turn out to be clay, and a poor variety of that. Spite of the jokesmiths, the cartoonists and the waggish poets, marriage is the most serious step in the lives of men and women, says the Boston Post. Even the mature ought to give it at least as respectable consideration as they would any other investment. Boys and girls need to take advice on the matter, not railroad trains to a quick-service city clerk's office somewhere "across the line."

The many exposures of smuggling by rich women shows a curious cast of the feminine mind. In nearly every instance the culprit was aware of the law and that she was violating it; but few, if any, regarded the statute seriously and doubted even in the event of detection that it would be applicable to her own individual instance. Most women of this class have never come in contact with the law, having lived in a realm in which their own will was sovereign. That the law is no respecter of persons they have had to learn, and those who will take to themselves the lesson should be better citizens and certainly more familiar with the institutions of their country.

Among the fashion notes of the day is one to the effect that there is war between the large and the small bonnets. In such a strife no doubt the principal weapon of offense and defense wielded by the ladies will be the hatpin.

When the czar and the kaiser met they kissed; but the salutation of the governor of North Carolina and the governor of South Carolina had far more spirit to it.

BLAST KILLS 13; NEW YORK SHAKEN

125 Hurt in Destruction of Railway Power House.

STREET CAR IS HURLED FAR

Four Lose Lives as Coach Falls Upon Auto—Scare in Hotels Near Grand Central Station.

New York.—Nine persons, including two women, are known to have been killed; four missing workmen are believed to have perished; 125 people were injured and property was damaged from $500,000 to $1,000,000 by an explosion of illuminating gas in the auxiliary powerhouse of the Grand Central station, located in the heart of the city.

Of 125 injured, 98 were removed to hospitals. Of those eight may die. An investigation by the police, the district attorney's office and the coroner's office is under way. Traffic on the New York Central railroad ceased entirely for some hours and was disorganized for the remainder of the day, but the new station itself, now in progress of construction, was not damaged.

The dead are Nicolo Galucci, laborer; Patrick Jordan, laborer; E. B. Livermore, Pullman car inspector; C. McMarrow, laborer; Edith Offner, stenographer; Mary B. Pope, residence Boston, Mass.; Charles Roberts, expressman; Frank Stagg, watchman, and John Ryan, laborer.

A passing surface car carrying seven passengers was lifted from its tracks and hurled into an automobile running alongside. Four of the seven passengers were killed outright, but the chauffeur of the motor car was only cut and bruised.

For some hours it was believed that dynamite alone could have wrought such havoc, but Fire Chief Croker said he was convinced the whole explosion was due to a mixture of air and illuminating gas, used in lighting railroad cars, touched off by an electric spark. The gas had accumulated in the auxiliary powerhouse from a broken pipe snapped off by a runaway passenger car.

Foundations were jarred, walls were shaken out of plumb, windows were blown in by the thousands, ceilings came crashing down on the heads of those beneath and the pavements were littered with a crisp tinkling fall of pulverized glass that topped the shoe soles.

The full amount of the property damage is as yet unavailable, and may exceed the rough and conservative estimate of $500,000. The loss to the New York Central Railroad company includes the physical damage done to the power house, which was utterly wrecked; the delay to construction work and the damage done to cars standing near the power house. The loss to shopkeepers and property owners in the vicinity will spread over a wide range of items. Whole fronts of buildings were left without a window, like sightless masks.

As nearly as can be determined this is how the accident occurred: A train load of empty passenger cars, hauled by an electric motor, in charge of Albert Seagroatt, got out of control of the brakes; crashed into a steel and concrete buffer post, snapped the post off and rammed a pile of lumber behind the post into a two and one-half inch gas main, connecting with the taps from which the tanks of the passenger cars are charged at 150 pounds to the square inch.

GUILTY, FACE ENORMOUS FINES.

Railroads Convicted of Rebating Are Denied a New Trial.

Philadelphia. — The United States district court here has refused to grant a new trial to the Philadelphia & Reading railway, the Lehigh Valley railroad and the Bethlehem Steel company, recently convicted on charges of rebating. There are a large number of counts in the indictments against the three companies and if the maximum penalty were imposed against each defendant Bethlehem would have to pay a fine of $3,200,000, Lehigh $2,500,000 and Reading $1,740,000. The jury, however, recommended mercy.

NO INDICTMENT FOR LYNCHERS.

Men Who Burned Mexican at Stake Go "Scott" Free.

Rock Springs, Tex. — The federal grand jury here adjourned without returning an indictment against any of the men who participated in the recent lynching of Antonio Rodrigues, the Mexican who murdered Mrs. Lem Henderson. No testimony was given which the jury considered would justify it in bringing in an indictment.

Munich Professors in Revolt.

Berlin.—A dispatch to the Lokal Anzeiger from Munich Saturday says that the oath disavowing modernism required of theological professors by the Vatican has caused a schism in the faculty at the University of Munich.

Women May Smoke in Hotel.

New York.—One of the new fashionable hotels in New York, under international management, has lifted the ban and now permits women to smoke in any part of the house.

TAFT ALLAYS WAR SCARE IN NATION

Declares Country Is at Peace With Entire World and Probably Will Remain So.

Washington. — President Taft, in addressing the closing banquet of the American Society for Judicial Settlement of International Disputes, allayed "the so-called war scare, which has furnished matter for the newspapers during the last few days."

He said: "There is not the slightest reason for such a sensation because we are at peace with all the nations of the world, and are quite likely to remain so."

Moreover, the president declared he does not find our army ineffective and inefficient, though he said more trained officers are needed and that we ought to have ammunition and guns enough for ready use in cases of emergency.

"A little more forethought, a little more attention to the matter on the part of congress," he said, "and we shall have all of the army, and all of the munitions and material of war that we ought to have in a republic situated as we are, 3,000 miles on the one hand, and 5,000 miles on the other, from the source of hostile invasion."

Incidentally the speech was a blow to Secretary of War Dickinson, in that the president did not hesitate to take issue with him on his opinion as to the condition of the American army.

The sharp difference evident in the views of the president and the secretary of war gave rise to a report that the latter intended to resign his portfolio. There is no reason to believe this report is correct, but undoubtedly Mr. Dickinson is not happy at the publicity which his difference with his chief has been given.

The president declared the United states had excellent coast defenses for every important harbor that an enemy would enter. He summarized the preparedness of the country for war by saying:

"We probably ought to see to it that we have ammunition and guns enough for ready use in cases of emergency. We have a small but efficient army of 80,000 men. We have a militia of about 126,000 men. The army is so constituted that we could enlarge it from a skeleton organization into a much larger body. We ought to have more trained officers so as to furnish the teachers to a larger body of men that war might require us to enlist.

DIETZ BONDS TOTAL $55,000.

Members of Family Bound Over on Attempt to Kill Charge.

Hayward, Wis. — John Dietz, Mrs. Dietz, Myra, Clarence and Leslie were bound over to the circuit court by Municipal Judge J. F. Riordan, after preliminary hearing on the charge of assault with intent to kill John Rogich, John Hefft and others July 25, 1906. The court announced that it was considering as reasonable bail $50,000 for John Dietz, $2,000 for Leslie and $1,000 each for Myra, Mrs. Dietz and Clarence.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN IS DEAD.

Brig. Gen. Henry C. Hasbrouck, Retired, Succumbs to Paralysis.

Newburgh, N. Y. — A series of paralytic strokes ended in the death of Brig. Gen. Henry C. Hasbrouck, U. S. A., retired.

General Hasbrouck was seventy-two years of age. He was graduated from West Point in 1861 and served through the Civil war and in various expeditions against the Indians. He was for six years commandant of the cadets at West Point and was retired in 1903.

ORIGINAL BRYAN BOOMER DEAD.

Dr. Gapen Said to Have Started Stampede at 1896 Convention.

Madison, Wis. — Dr. Clarke Gapen, aged sixty years, died while asleep in a chair. Death was caused by heart and kidney troubles.

Dr. Gapen was credited with having started the stampede which resulted in the nomination of William J. Bryan for president at the Democratic national convention in 1896.

Dr. Gapen was widely known throughout the state and in the middle west as an alienist.

ALBERTI SENTENCED FOR FRAUD.

Ex-Danish Minister Given Eight Years for Bank Peculations.

Copenhagen. — Former Minister of Justice P. A. Alberti, the revelation of whose banking frauds in 1908 scandalised the country, was sentenced to eight years' penal servitude. Alberti suffered a physical collapse in March, 1909, while awaiting trial.

His peculation amounted, he said, to about $2,300,000, and the money had been lost in South African and American mining ventures.

Chile Minister to U. S. Dies.

Washington.—Senor Anibal Cruz, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary from Chile to the United States, was stricken with heart failure Monday and died ten minutes later.

Pledge $22,000 for Dietz.

La Crosse, Wis.—As the result of the personal solicitation of Myra Dietz, daughter of John F. Dietz, the "outlaw of Cameron dam," business men of Bangor, Wis., Monday pledged themselves to furnish $22,000 bail for her father.

The Hermit of Rocky Hole

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Mrs. Stevens panted into the sitting-room where her boarder was sewing in the sunny bay window. It was Saturday and the school-teacher's holiday.

Grace Winton looked up from her mending and smiled at Mrs. Stevens' eager countenance. "You look as if you had news to tell," she suggested, threading her needle.

The other woman tossed aside her knitted shawl and warmed her hands at the drum stove where the apple-wood smoke curled fragrantly from the cracks. "There's more news than common," she wheezed asthmatically. "You've heard tell about the hermit of Rocky Hole?" she asked.

"I've heard the children tell tales about such a person," admitted Grace, with interest. "I thought he was a mythical personage—is there really an hermit in Pendleton?"

Mrs. Stevens nodded her head emphatically. "I should say there was! Rich, too, and lives in that cave high up on the west mountain. Rocky Hole, they call it, because you can't get anywhere near it without being heard; there are so many rocks around they go tumbling down the hillsides at every footstep you take. He's mighty unsociable, too, they say."

"Hermits have that reputation, I believe," said Grace demurely. "Do tell me, is your news about this hermit?"

"Yes. You see, he's been coming here for years. Every spring when the first robin comes that hermit makes his appearance; nobody ever gets very close to see him for he has a big dog to keep folks off. And I don't know how he gets his foodstuff because he don't trade in the village—maybe lives on roots and berries and such truck. He's an old man with a long white beard and he walks with a stick as if he were lame."

"What becomes of him in the winter?" asked Grace curiously.

"Some say he goes to the city and plays an organ on the street corner. I've heard those folks make lots of money. He owns half the mountain, they say. Well, what I was going to tell you about is this: Mr. Lane, the storekeeper, says he believes the old man is sick or dying or something."

"Do You Want to Go on a Picnic With Me, Lon?"

"Why?"

"Somebody heard him calling for help yesterday morning, some hunter who was passing along the upper road that's seldom used—it leads almost underneath where the Rocky Hole is. So the man hollered up and asks if anything is the matter. Just then the hermit began to throw stones down on him, round stones, big enough to knock a man senseless. So the hunter says, says he, 'Go to the dickens—I guess there ain't much the matter with you!' Mr. Lane says there wasn't any smoke coming from the mountain this morning and he reckons something's the matter."

"What is going to be done about it? Surely, somebody will go up and see the old man," said Grace pityingly.

"I don't know who wants to get stoned. Maybe he's crazy—like as not he is. Anybody who'd want to live where there wasn't nobody to talk to must be crazy! There I've got a cake to make now to take to the meeting—we're going to pack a barrel for some of them savages; you want to come, Miss Winton?"

The school-teacher was looking off toward the west mountain slopes with misty eyes. She turned her head to Mrs. Stevens. "Not today, thank you," she said gently. "I'm going on a little picnic this afternoon—with one of my scholars."

"It's a nice day for a picnic if you're well wrapped up. There's plenty in the pantry to put in your basket and you can help yourself, you know," said the other hospitably.

An hour after dinner, Grace Winton set forth with a covered basket on her arm. She stopped once or twice and made additions to the generous lunch Mrs. Stevens had provided, a can of soup and a glass of jelly from the grocery and a bottle of blackberry wine from the little drug store. Then she walked briskly over the bridge, turned into the road that led past the mill and hailed the miller's little lad who was fishing in the tumbling stream.

"Do you want to go on a picnic with me, Lon?" she called.

"Yes, ma'am," he called delightedly and after obtaining permission from his mother he joined his teacher and together they walked through the woods where the fallen leaves crisped under foot and where the odor of birch and sassafras smelled strong and sweet.

"Lon, do you know the way to the hermit's cave?" she asked quietly.

Lon stared at her with paling cheeks. "You're not going there, Miss Grace?" he faltered.

"Yes, I am, my dear. If you don't go with me and show the way I must go alone, for an old man is hurt there and perhaps dying. Before we enjoy our own picnic we must see him. You can turn back now if you want to." She looked at him, confident of his answer.

"You can't go alone, Miss Grace; he might hurt you. I'll go with you; if he throws stones I'll—I'll lam him one!" Lon frowned fiercely at his imaginary foe and thoughtfully cut himself a stout stick with a knobby handle.

"Thank you, dear," said Grace. "I was sure you'd go along to take care of me."

Lon straightened his shoulders and his ears reddened with pride and embarrassment as he led the way through a tangled thicket and by devious other ways until they stood in a narrow path, well defined and covered with a clear white sand.

"That leads to the cave," whispered Lon cautiously. "Me and some fellows found it one day—it comes from over the mountain—I guess that's the way he goes to and fro. We was after bird's eggs last summer—there's millions of birds around here—and the old man came and chased us off."

Grace reserved her reprimands for some future date and told Lon to go ahead and she would follow. At last, they stood before the mouth of the cave which opened onto a plateau covered with small loose stones of various sizes. Their carefully guarded footsteps sent several stones rattling down the hillside with a suprising din. A dog barked hoarsely.

"Who is there?" called a feeble voice from within the cave.

"Friends!" replied Grace cheerily. "Are you in trouble?"

"Yes—fell and sprained my ankle yesterday and I've been suffering tortures since then. I've tried to get help from outside but everyone acts so confoundedly idiotic every time a stone rattles down the hillside that I'd about given it up. Wait a moment please and I'll come out."

"He's got a nice voice," whispered Lon to his teacher as they waited for the hermit's appearance.

"Very likely he's the nicest old gentleman you ever met," she smiled back at him. "Here he comes now."

With that expression of tenderest pity lighting her face Grace Winton saw a man drag himself painfully from the opening of the cave. Her eyes widened as she realized that this was no old man—young, handsome and athletic looking, the picture of health, save for a certain drawn look in his face that intense suffering might have placed there, he half crept, half hobbled to a sitting position in the mouth of the cave and then he fainted dead away.

When Grace and Lon had recovered from their astonishment and bent themselves to resuscitate the stranger, the boy spoke:

"This isn't the hermit, Miss Grace."

"Never mind," she said absently, as she propped his head against her shoulder and forced some of the blackberry wine between his lips. "He's in need of help anyway. Unbandage his ankle, Lon—carefully my dear—there, it is black and blue and dreadfully swelled. Can you fetch water from the stream? Doesn't it run above here?"

Lon dashed away with a pail and when he returned with the icy water he found the young man recovered and rather ashamed of his momentary weakness. Sitting with his injured foot in the cold water he told the two that his uncle, the hermit, was none other than Waynewood Stone, well-known ornithologist who had used the cave as a summer point of observation to study his beloved birds. Now that the old man was crippled with rheumatism and confined to his beautiful city home, this nephew, Frank Stone, had come to take his uncle's place and gather the necessary data for the old man's forthcoming book of bird-lore.

"Now we must get a doctor up to you at once," said Grace, preparing to leave after Mr. Stone had wrung the story of their coming from her unwilling lips. "And you will want a man to keep house for you if you insist on remaining up here—Mrs. Stevens' son might come and take care of you."

"I believe I'll get the doctor to take me down to the hotel in Pendleton," said Stone thoughtfully.

"There ain't no birds down there," ventured Lon diffidently. "Leastways not new ones."

"There is one new to me—a winter red bird," returned Stone without looking at Grace, as she hastened away, her heart fluttering with his warm thanks of appreciation.

"I'm glad I'm not an old hermit," he added to himself as he waited patiently for the coming of the doctor.

Months afterward, Mrs. Stevens held up her hands in astonishment. "Land alive, Miss Winton, now that you're going to marry Mr. Stone, there won't be no hermit that can live safely on the mountain—all the girls will be going up there to see if he ain't as rich and good looking as your husband!"

Mistletoe Is Dangerous.

Few people who know mistletoe only as a desirable feature of Christmas decorations understand that the plant is a parasite dangerous to the life of trees in the regions in which it grows. It is only a question of time, after mistletoe once begins to grow upon a tree before the tree itself will be killed. The parasite saps the life of the infected branches. Fortunately, it is of slow growth, taking years to develop to large proportions. But when neglected, it invariably ruins all trees it reaches.

English Women Smoke Pipes.

The latest fancy of the woman-smoker is a pipe—not the tiny affair that suffices for the Japanese, but a good-sized brier or a neat meerschaum. The pipe is boldly carried along with a gold card case and chain-purse. For some time now the cigarette has given place to a cigar, small in size and mild in quality. Women said they were tired of the cigarette, and wanted a bigger smoke.—London Mail.

Cripple Rides Bicycle.

George Anstey, aged 12, a cripple, of Leicester, England, is one of the most remarkable cyclists in the country. Both his legs are withered and useless, but the Leicester Crippies' Guild has provided him with a two-wheeled pedalless machine, with a padded tube covering the axle bar. Across this he lies face foremost, and with wooden clogs strapped to his hands he propels himself along the streets and roads in a marvelously rapid manner. He has complete control of the machine, his hands acting as pedals, steering gear, and brake combined.

Pretty Good Definition.

We hear some funny things in Fleet street sometimes, and the following definition of the height of aggravation, by a gentleman in rather shaky boots, whom we encountered in a well-known hostelry the other day, struck us as being particularly choice.

"The 'eight of haggravation, gentlemen," said this pothouse humorist, setting his pewter on the counter and looking round proudly, with the air of one about to let off a good thing, "the 'eight of haggravation—why, trying to ketch a flea out o' yer ear with a pair of boxin' gloves."—London Tit-Bits.

An Alaskan Luncheon.

Runners of woven Indian basketry, with white drawnwork doilies at each of the 12 covers, were used on an oval mahogany table. The doilies were made at Sitka. In the middle of the table a mirror held a tall central vase of frosted glass, surrounded by four smaller vases, all filled with white spring blossoms. The edge of the mirror was banked with the same flowers. Four totem poles were placed on doilies in the angles made by the runners.

Place cards were water colors of Alaskan scenery. Abalone shells held salted nuts, and tiny Indian baskets held bonbons. The soup spoons were of horn, several of the dishes used were made by Alaskan Indians, and the cakes were served on baskets.

The menu was as follows: Poisson a la Bering Sea (halibut chowder), Yukon climbers (broiled salmon, potatoes Julienne), snowbirds avec auroraborealis (roast duck with jelly), Shungnak river turnips, Tanana beets, Skagway hash (salad), Fairbanks nuggets (ripe strawberries arranged on individual dishes around a central mound of powdered sugar), arctic slices (brick ice cream), Circle City delights (small cakes), Klondike nuggets (yellow cheese in round balls on crackers), Nome firewater (coffee).—Woman's Home Companion.

Acknowledgment.

"You will admit that you owe a great deal to your wife?"

"I should say so," replied Mr. Cumrox. "I wouldn't be invited to any of her receptions or musicales if I wasn't married to her."

Disqualified.

Her—My brother won first prize in that amateur guessing contest, but they ruled him out as a professional.

Him—A professional?

Her—Yes. He's employed in the government bureau, you know.

Lightning Change.

The Manager—Can you make quick changes and double in a few parts?

The Actor—Can I? Say, you know the scene in "Love and Lobsters," where the hero and the villain are fighting, and a friend rushes in and separates 'em? Well, I played all three parts one night when the other two fellows were ill.

Not Altogether Dead.

Mr. Robert Butler of Marlborough, England, has had the peculiar experience of hearing his death announced. He was attending the poor law conference at Exeter when one of the delegates moved that, in consequence of the death of Mr. Butler, which they all regretted, another gentleman, whom he named, should be appointed to fill his place as one of the representatives of Wiltshire on the central committee. Mr. Butler rose from his place on the platform and announced to the conference, amid much amusement, that, so far as he was aware, he was still alive and in good health, and would be pleased to continue in the office if the conference desired.

Bankers and Bank Notes.

Four men, three of whom were connected with brokerage concerns in the Wall street district, were discussing United States paper currency and the disappearance of counterfeits. "We are so sure nowadays," said one of the party, "as to the genuineness of bills that little attention is paid to them in handling, except as to denomination." To prove his assertion he took a $10 yellowback from his pocket, and, holding it up, asked who could tell whose portrait it bore. No one knew, and by way of coaching the broker said it was the first treasurer of the United States. Again no one knew the name. "Why, it's Michael Hillegas," said the man proudly. "But in confidence, I'll tell you, I didn't know it five minutes ago."—New York Tribune.

Vivid at Least.

Dr. Hiram C. Cortlandt, the well-known theologian of Des Moines, said in a recent address:

"Thomas A. Edison tells us that he thinks the soul is not immortal; but, after all, what does this great wizard know about souls? His forte is electricity and machinery, and when he talks of souls he reminds me irresistibly of the young lady who visited the Baldwin locomotive works and then told how a locomotive is made.

"'You pour,' she said, 'a lot of sand into a lot of boxes, and you throw old stove lids and things into a furnace, and they you empty the molten stream into a hole in the sand, and everybody yells and swears. Then you pour it out and let it cool and pound it, and then you put it in a thing that bores holes in it. Then you screw it together, d paint it, and put steam in it, and it goes spiendidly; and they take it to a drafting room and make a bluep rint of it. But one thing I forgot—they have to make a boiler. One man gets inside and one gets outside, and they pound frightfully; and then they tie it to the other thing, and you ought to see it go!'"

Echoes of Munchausen.

It was an absent-minded traveler who had lately taken to ballooning.

"Yes," he observed impressively. "It was a fearful journey. The machine, a thousand feet up, and no more ballast, headed straight for Siberia, and the rarefied air—well, you know as well as I do what effect that has on a balloon.. Yes, the peril was terrible." Then the old habit was too strong for him. "The wolves detected our presence. A desperate race ensued. We felt their hot breath on the nape of our necks."—London Globe.

Largest of Whales.

The largest whale of its type of which there is scientific record was captured recently off Port Arthur, Tex. He measured sixty-three feet in length, and was estimated to be about three hundred years old. Captain Cob Plummer, mate of a United States pilot boat, sighted the monster in the shoals off the jetties, and the crew of his vessel captured the mammal. The huge body was towed ashore, exhibited and much photographed before being cut up.

Rat Bounty Excites Merriment.

Seattle, fearing the introduction of bubonic plague by rats, has offered a bounty of ten cents a rat. This moves Tacoma, safe from infection from the sea, to raucous laughter, and the Ledger says that the bounty, "though not intended for rodents of Tacoma, Everett, Bellingham and other populous and busy centers, has been finding its way into the pockets of non-residents of Seattle for non-resident rats. But the joke would be on us if it were found that our rat population had found its way into the Seattle census."

Two Very Old Ladies.

We have heard a great deal lately about long-lived people, but it is probable that the oldest two people in the world today are Frau Dutkievits and another old lady named Babavaslika.

The former lives at Posem, in Prussian Poland, and was born on February 21, 1785. She is therefore one hundred and twenty-five years old. The latter, however, is nine months her senior, having been born in May, 1784.

She is still a fairly hale old woman, and for nearly one hundred years worked in the fields. Her descendants number close on 100, and these now make her a joint allowance. She lives at the village of Bavelsko, whose neighborhood she has never quitted during the whole of her long life. She remembers events which happened at the beginning of last century much more clearly than those of the last 20 years.—Dundee Advertiser.

Too Ardent a Lover.

Georgotto Fontano, an embroiderer who lives in the Rue Sevres in Paris, has found herself condemned to a month's imprisonment for what seems to her a harmless act.

She was going home from a concert a few evenings ago when she decided she would like to see her fiance. As he happens to be a fireman whose station is in her own neighborhood it occurred to her it would be very easy to summon him to her side by breaking the glass of the fire alarm and sounding a call.

She did so and in a few moments fire engines came from several directions, all laden with firemen, of course, but alas! her fiance was not among them, and more than that all the firemen were angry, and before she knew what had happened she was taken to a magistrate, who proceeded to make the course of true love run unsmoothly by sending her to prison for a month in spite of her tears and protests that she thought it would be a simple way of bringing her fiance to her side.

The Bright Side.

Nebuchadnezzar was lurching in his accustomed style.

"All flesh being grass," he reflected, "this must be Beef a la Mowed."

And chuckling hoarsely, he took another chaw.—Puck.

Kindly Intentions.

"A man who enjoys seeing a woman in tears is a brute."

"I don't know about that," replied Miss Cayenne. "One of the kindest husbands I know takes his wife to see all the emotional plays."

Takes Himself Seriously.

Nicola Tesla, dining by himself in a hotel's great dining room, takes a table where he can be seen. Throughout his meal he wears a deeply studious, a completely absorbed, attitude. He may bring to the table a portfolio filled with papers. These he may scan with prolonged solemnity. In any event, he sits an eloquent tableau of profundity.—New York Press.

Holidays in the States.

Washington's birthday is a holiday in all states. Decoration day in all states but Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas. Labor day is observed everywhere. Virtually every state has legal holidays having to do with its own special affairs—battle of New Orleans in Louisiana, Texan independence and battle of San Jacinto in Texas, Admission day in California, and so on. Mississippi is like the federal government in lack of statutory holidays, but by common consent Independence day, Thanksgiving and Christmas are observed. A new one is Columbus day in a few of the states.

Planting Wedding Oaks.

Princess August Wilhelm, wife of the kaiser's fourth son, has set herself the task of reviving one of Germany's oldest customs, that according to which newly wedded couples immediately after the marriage ceremony plant a couple of oak saplings side by side in a park or by the roadside of their native town.

The town of Mulchausen, in Thuringia, is the first to respond to the princess' appeal. A municipal official appears at the church door after every wedding and invites the bride and bridegroom to drive with him in a carriage to a new road near the town and there plant oak saplings.

The tree planting idea was started by a former elector of Brandenburg with the object of repairing the ravages caused by the 30 years' war. The elector forbade young persons to marry until they had planted a number of fruit trees.

An Unnecessary Confession.

A hearty laugh was occasioned at the Birmingham police court by a prisoner who gave himself away in a very delightful manner. The man was the first on the list, and the charge against him was merely one of being drunk and disorderly. He stepped into the dock, however, just at the moment when the dock officer was reading out a few of the cases which were to come before the court that morning, and a guilty conscience apparently led him to mistake these items for a list of his previous convictions.

He stood passive enough while the officer read out about a dozen drunk and disorderlies, but when he came to one "shopbreaking" the prisoner exclaimed excitedly, "That was eight years ago, your honor," Everyone began to laugh, and the prisoner, realising the blunder he had made, at first looked very black indeed, but finally saw the humorous side of the matter, and a broad smile spread over his face. His blunder did not cost anything.—Birmingham Mail.

That Suit for Libel

Against the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Gave a Splendid Chance to Bring Out Facts

A disagreement about advertising arose with a "weekly" Journal.

Following it, an attack on us appeared in their editorial columns; sneering at the claims we made particularly regarding Appendicitis.

We replied through the regular papers and the "weekly" thought we hit back rather too hard and thereupon sued for libel.

The advertisement: the "weekly" attacked us about claimed that in many cases of appendicitis an operation could be avoided by discontinuing indigestible food, washing out the bowels and taking a predigested food Grape-Nuts.

Observe we said MANY cases not all.

Wouldn't that knowledge be a comfort to those who fear a surgeon's knife as they fear death?

The "weekly" writer said that was a lie.

We replied that he was ignorant of the facts.

He was put on the stand and compelled to admit he was not a Dr. and had no medical knowledge of appendicitis and never investigated to find out if the testimonal letters to our Co. were genuine.

A famous surgeon testified that when an operation was required Grape-Nuts would not obviate it. True.

We never claimed that when an operation was required Grape-Nuts would prevent it.

The surgeon testified bacteria [germs] helped to bring on an attack and bacteria was grown by undigested food frequently.

We claimed and proved by other famous experts that undigested food was largely responsible for appendicitis.

We showed by expert testimony that many cases are healed without a knife, but by stopping the use of food which did not digest, and when food was required again it was helpful to use a predigested food which did not overtax the weakened organs of digestion.

When a pain in the right side appears it is not always necessary to be rushed off to a hospital and at the risk of death be cut.

Plain common sense shows the better way is to stop food that evidently has not been digested.

Then, when food is required, use an easily digested food. Grape-Nuts or any other if you know it to be predigested (partly digested before taking).

We brought to Court analytical chemists from New York, Chicago and Mishawaka, Ind., who swore to the analysis of Grape-Nuts and that part of the starchy part of the wheat and barley had been transformed into sugar, the kind of sugar produced in the human body by digesting starch (the large part of food).

Some of the State chemists brought on by the "weekly" said Grape-Nuts could not be called a "predigested" food because not all of it was digested outside the body.

The other chemists said any food which had been partly or half digested outside the body was commonly known as "predigested."

Splitting hairs about the meaning of a word.

It is sufficient that if only one-half of the food is "predigested," it is easier on weakened stomach and bowels than food in which no part is predigested.

To show the facts we introduce Dr. Thos. Darlington, former chief of the N. Y. Board of Health, Dr. Ralph W. Webster, chief of the Chicago Laboratories, and Dr. B. Sachs, N. Y.

If we were a little severe in our denunciation of a writer, self-confessed ignorant about appendicitis and its cause, it is possible the public will excuse us, in view of the fact that our head, Mr. C. W. Post, has made a lifetime study of food, food digestion and effects, and the conclusions are indorsed by many of the best medical authorities of the day.

Is it possible that we are at fault for suggesting, as a Father and Mother might, to one of the family who announced a pain in the side: "Stop using the fried, greasy meats, gravies, mince pie, cheese, too much starchy food, etc., etc., which has not been digested, then when again ready for food use Grape-Nuts because it is easy of digestion?"

Or should the child be at once carted off to a hospital and cut?

We have known of many cases wherein the approaching signs of appendicitis have disappeared by the suggestion being followed.

No one better appreciates the value of a skilful physician when a person is in the awful throes of acute appendicitis, but "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Just plain old common sense is helpful even nowadays.

This trial demonstrated Grape-Nuts food is pure beyond question.

It is partly predigested.

Appendicitis generally has rise from undigested food.

It is not always necessary to operate.

It is best to stop all food.

When ready to begin feeding use a predigested food.

It is palatable and strong in Nourishment.

It will pay fine returns in health to quit the heavy breakfasts and lunches and use less food but select food certainly known to contain the elements nature requires to sustain the body. May we be permitted to suggest a breakfast of fruit, Grape-Nuts and cream, two soft boiled eggs, and some hot toast and cocoa, milk or Postum?

The question of whether Grape-Nuts does or does not contain the elements which nature requires for the nourishment of the brain, also of its purity, will be treated in later newspaper articles.

Good food is important and its effect on the body is also important.

Merchants Coupons

THE NEWS voting contest has caused quite a demand for Merchants vote coupons and in order that everyone might understand who is entitled to them we make the following explanation. The contest began on December 1, 1910 and is to continue for three months, during which time any person making a purchase at any of the stores named in the ad on the inside of this paper, amounting to $1.00 in cash, they will be entitled to a 25-vote coupon. The giving of coupons does not apply on any purchase made previous to December 1, 1910, and it would be inconsistent to ask for tickets in such a case. In fact, they will not be given out. Please remember that you are entitled to coupons in making your purchases now and don't fail to ask for them.

Ends Winter's Troubles.

To many, winter is a season of trouble. The frost bitten toes and fingers, chapped hands and lips, chilblains, cold sores, red and rough skins, prove this, but such troubles fly before Bucklen's Arnica Salve. A trial convinces. Greatest healer of Burns, Boils, Piles, Cuts, Sores, Eczema and Sprains. Only 25c. at H. L. Dunkle's.

LOCAL ITEMS.

The Bakery gave away two large sticks of Christmas candy last Saturday. A number of cash register checks were put in a large bowl and the person guessing the nearest number of dollars there was in the bowl would receive the large stick, etc. Orange Herrick receiving first prize and Pauline Andress second prize.

The Railroad Question Simplified

On an inspection trip over his railroad last week, President Delano of the Wabash was asked about general business conditions and if his road had not earned more money the last fiscal year of operation (June 30, 1910) than in previous years.

"Last year," said Mr. Delano, "the Wabash earned in round figures $29,000,000 gross. After paying all operating expenses, and interest on our bonded indebtedness, there was a surplus of $500,000. The figures are too large to indicate the true conditions to the average man. Let us state the case in simpler terms; let us say that the Wabash earned $29,000 total gross and after paying all charges had a surplus of $500. Now you can better understand the situation. What would a banker think of a merchant, who, after transacting a business of $29,000 in the year was able to show only $500 to the good. If the merchant could not do better than that on such a volume of business, he could not borrow any money of the banker to make improvements.

"That is the way with the Wabash, and no doubt other properties. We have managed to earn enough to pay the operating expenses and the interest charges, and that is something that we did not do in the last two years preceding. It was the best year since 1907, and yet the freight rates are so low that when the business is at high tide there is nothing left after paying the expenses. We pay no dividends."

Mr. Delano intimated that if the company is permitted to increase the freight rates, the placing of orders for more locomotives and more cars would no doubt be one of the things to follow. Business, he admitted, was never larger in volume, but the charges for service are so low that there is no profit in the work, really not enough of a margin to maintain the property and the equipment as it should be maintained.

A Substitute for Alcohol.

The tendency of people to contract some sort or another habit is shown by the common use in various countries of tobacco, tea, coffee, opium and the like. In Abyssinia and parts of Arabian Turkey the place of alcohol is taken by the kat plant, which the natives almost universally chew. In parts of Abyssinia certain tribes chew the leaves of the kat plant commonly when they are compelled to exert special or long-continued effort, the immediate effect of which is to produce an agreeable sleeplessness and stimulation. The freshly-cut leaves have a rather pleasant taste, and produce a kind of intoxication of long duration, with none of the disagreeable features of ordinary inebriety. Messengers and soldiers are enabled, by chewing the leaves, to go without food for a number of days.

In parts of Arabian Turkey there are cafes for the consumption of the kat plant which correspond to the cafes in Europe and America, where coffee and alcohol are used.

Basket Ball

The Spencerville City Basket Ball Team gained another victory on Friday evening, Dec 23, when they defeated the All Hoosiers from Angola by a score of 42 26. The local fans were at first disappointed and victory seemed certain in the Angola Camp for in the first five minutes of play the visitors succeeded in caging two fouls and two fields thus making the score 6-0 But steady playing and good shooting brought the locals the best end of the first half, an 18-16 score.

The second half was characterized by more teamwork and Spencerville dropped the Ball into the Basket a sufficient number of times to realize a 24-10 count.

The lineup:

Spencerville 42		Angola 26
Beams	R. F.	McGinnis-Hursh
Kelley	L. F.	Crall
Wearley	C.	Walker

Notes of Game

Every business house in town was paraded by a large delegation.

Quotation by Angola,—"Spencerville has more true spirit than is needed in ten towns of its size."

Walker, who opposed Wearley at center, spent Friday night and Saturday with him. They played on the same team at Marion last year.

W. W. Fischer is wearing a new hat. His former hat received injuries by getting in the way of a wild toss.

Main Street was illuminated by a great bonfire started after the game.

The First Team in the High School defeated the second by a 16-6 score, which was played as a preliminary.

A number of the business men were brought from their business places and raised above the crowd. Several responded with short talks.

Angola—"We are satisfied."

Dear Grandma:—

Well, here I am in England. When I was in Indiana I never thought it would be my luck to be over here. We left Philadelphia one month ago. On the third we put to sea and after quite a rough passage we sighted land the evening of the fourteenth. Past the Cliffs of Dover, the Isle of Wight, and other places of interest we came and anchored off a town named Greenhite, five miles above Gravesend on the Thames. Week ago Thursday, I got four days leave. A tourist company, for $1.25 each, took a great many of us around and the guides pointed out the principle places. The Strand Cheapside, Pall Mall, Fleet St.; Bond St; The Embankment, Hyde Park, and the Tower, where arms of many generations and the Crown Jewels, which I saw, were kept. The axe and block, and the sword, used for beheading people then; and the rooms in which they were confined were of much interest. The largest diamond in the world is in the Tower. A beauty. Also the finest ruby that ever came out of India. The Royal United Service Museum, where relics of England's Wars are kept, the National Art Gallery, Westminister Abbey, containing bodies of some of England's great men, and works of sculpture, both past and present, the Houses of Parliment, where England's Laws are formed, the throne of the king and queen, the old Coronation Chair with the stone under it brought from Scotland, and the fine paintings representing different periods of history, were viewed, Friday afternoon. Thursday evening I went to the theatre, Coloseum, the largest in the world. Friday evening the Garrick Theatre came. Saturday and Sunday I went hit and miss. Street cars are in the suburbs. Subways are in plenty and many motor-busses. Two cents U. S., or one penny English, is the fare. Everyone goes to the left of the street or sidewalk. The uniform is more respected here than in the States. Fog is some thick here. My regards to one and all. Good health and a Merry Xmas. From

Your Grandson,
Carlisle Smith.

SERIAL STORY

Archibald's Agatha

SYNOPSIS.

Archibald Terhune, a popular and insolent young bachelor of London, receives news that he has been made heir to the estate of his Aunt Georgiana, with an income of $20,000 a year, on condition that he become engaged to be married within ten days. Failing to do so the legacy will go to a third cousin in America. The story opens at Castle Wyckoff, where Lord Vincent and his wife, friends of Terhune, are discussing plans to find him a wife within the prescribed time. It seems that Lady Vincent is one of seven persons named Agatha, all close girlhood chums. She decides to invite two of them to the castle and have Archie there as one of the guests. Agatha Sixth strikes Archie as a handpainted beauty. Agatha First is a breezy American girl. Lady Vincent tells her husband that Agatha Sixth already cares for Archie. He gains from Agatha Sixth the admission that she cares for him, but will require a month's time fully to make up her mind. Agatha First, neglected by Terhune, receives attentions from Leslie Freer. Four days of the precious time have passed when Terhune is called to London on business. Agatha First, on the plea of sickness, excuses herself from a motor trip planned by the Vincents. Later they see Agatha First picking flowers with a strange man. The Vincents discuss Agatha's seeming duplicity. The following day the party visits the ruins of an old convent. Terhune continues his attentions to Agatha Sixth. Then suddenly he transfers his attentions to Agatha First. Vincent scores him for his apparent fickleness. The last evening of the time allotted in which to become engaged arrives. The following day Solicitor Burns will arrive from London, and the Vincents are anxious to consummate the engagement. Vincent discovers Agatha First and a man with his arm around her waist. Vincent decides that the man must be Terhune. The next morning Terhune and Agatha First are very friendly at the breakfast table, while Agatha Sixth seems somewhat displeased. Solicitor Burns arrives. The Vincents are anxious. In an interview of Vincent and his wife the latter cries in desperation over the puzzling condition of affairs. Solicitor Barnes arrives. The Vincent's are anxious. Will Terhune report an affianced or a free man? Terhune tells Lord Vincent that he proposed to Agatha Sixth and that she had refused to marry him. Terhune declares that if he cannot have the woman of his choice that he will sacrifice his aunt's fortune. An automobile arrives. Murray Brancepeth, a young man who resembles Terhune, steps out of the machine. He has been in love with Agatha First, and was the man in the checkered suit. It now lacks three minutes of the time that Terhune has for announcing his engagement. Vincent rushes Terhune to urge Agatha Sixth to accept him. Solicitor Barnes is notified and the ceremony is performed.

(CHAPTER XIII.—Continued.)

He had at first, it appeared, called upon Agatha Endicott when she was staying at Chiltern house, and courted her openly, but on hearing of the Simplin complication, Chiltern, who hated the possibility of being dragged into a family row, as much as he disliked to be responsible for offending his powerful friend and ally, had objected vehemently and had forbidden a continuance of their intimacy, at least for as long as it was in his power to demand obedience. That is, while the girl was a guest under his roof, which decree had forced Brancepeth to cease his attentions temporarily, when our invitation to make one of our house party had mercifully removed the other principal in this romance to Wyckhoff castle. A change of scene, which while it did not utterly remove her from the sphere of danger, since a chance visit on the part of either her former or present hostess to either mansion might reveal all, still afforded her a better opportunity to see her lover.

A state of affairs which naturally explained Agatha First's reluctance to have my wife make the trip to Chiltern house, where she feared mutual revelations might be made which must necessarily expose the secret of Brancepeth's courtship of her, continued as it was, in spite of and against Mr. Chiltern's expressed wish. It was also made plain to us that Agatha First's devotion to Terhune sprang from two sources. It was assumed partly to throw Mrs. Chiltern off the scent in case she should make any attempt to find out whether Brancepeth were still continuing his attentions. In case of awkward questions she wished my wife to be able to say with truth that her guest was interested in some one else. That some one else chancing to be Terhune. She had also indulged in her flirtation with Arch, she admitted with a most engaging laugh and teasing glance at her lover, partly because she had conceived a fondness for the old boy, but softened this shaft by adding that she liked to talk to him because she had discovered that he knew Brancepeth, and she was therefor able to talk about her lover, though she could not often see him. Terhune's fondness for her society—for being with Agatha First—I thought, could be explained even more simply. He had quite given himself away that time when he had so naively confided to me his belief that the girl was in love with him.

"By George!" said young Murray, feelingly, as he finished his part of the duet the two had been giving for our benefit, "how I love that squire, or farmer, or whatever it was she married! I'll never forget to my dying day what I owe him for cutting me out like that! Keen about his cheek, aren't you, Vincent?"

He's awfully young, Brancepeth, but rather a decent sort on the whole, and I can see that he's grown steadier and more of a man than when I knew him a year ago. And I'm glad of that. Agatha First is a fine girl and deserves a fine man.

"Well, I never did in all my life!" said Dearest, as a sort of l'envoi to the romantic tale of our guests. "What will happen next, I wonder? What is there left to happen?"

"Nothing possibly," said the three of us together. Solicitor Barnes, by the way, had taken no part in the discussion of these interesting events—but we spoke too soon. For even as the words left our mouths I saw Brancepeth, who faced the French windows of the dining room, which opened out on to the side veranda, pointing with his finger at some apparition which had evidently just come within his range of vision.

"Look!" he said.

I turned around, but before I could exclaim, Dearest had pushed back her chair with a cry of pleased suprise and started forward. "Why, it's the Chilterns," she said.

And so it was. Our friends from the next county had arrived in our midst, unheralded even by the noise of their motor car, which now made itself plainly audible as it chugged its way slowly to our garage, so intent had we been upon the telling of Agatha First's and Brancepeth's tale.

"Friends," said Chiltern in the wearied, bored tones that have become habitual to him as chairman of innumerable political meetings, "we have come to tell you—"

"We feel it our duty to tell you," put in Agatha Fourth.

"That you are undertaking a great responsibility in allowing our former guest, Miss Endicott, to receive the attentions of—" There he stopped short, for he seemed to perceive for the first time Brancepeth and Agatha First, astonished tidingful eyes upon him, but we let him get no further.

"It's all right! Don't worry. Have some lunch, do, Cecil, old boy. You look done!" added young Murray cordially. And it was a rippin' hot day, too.

But Cecil was not to be beguiled.

"I feel it my duty," he reiterated manfully. But we would have none of it at all.

"Oh, hang your duty," urged Brancepeth, lightly. "It's all right, I tell you. We're go to be married, Miss Endicott and I."

"Miss Simplin eloped this morning," supplemented Agatha First.

"And my uncle has given us his blessing," finished Brancepeth. And at this astounding intelligence Chiltern succumbed entirely and was as clay in our hands.

Seizing him each under an arm we had him sitting at the table in no time. Brancepeth was even solicitously tucking a napkin under the dignified gentleman's chin when he came to and pushed him aside with a frown.

"Take that thing away," he said; "I'm not a child!"

Then he caught his wife's eye as Agatha Fourth, very beautiful in a pale blue outfit placarded down the middle with lace, was graciously allowing Dearest and Agatha First to seat her at the table, and they laughed—the two of them—Agatha Fourth relievedly, Chiltern a trifle shamefacedly.

"It seems my fervor of duty was quite wasted," he said. "But, upon my word, I meant well. Mrs. Chiltern and I did our best to persuade Miss Endicott, there, to give the thing up long ago, until matters arranged themselves. But she was very headstrong, very indeed!" And he shook his head whimsically at his late guest and smiled. She smiled back at him.

"And you see it didn't do any harm after all!" she told him brightly, "my being headstrong. Everything has all worked out for the best!"

"Rather!" remarked Brancepeth, ardently, and threw her a glance that made her fine color rise.

Agatha Sixth.

seated tranquilly side by side at the table. But in spite of this damper, he struggled bravely on with what he had evidently come with his mind made up to say. By this time we, Dearest and I, had gotten an inkling of what that was. He had come, we could see, to warn us against encouraging the affair between Brancepeth and Agatha First the report having at last reached him in some way or other that it was being carried on more furiously than ever under our protection, but we had no doubt, however, that, aside from his personal interest in putting a stop to the thing, the man was convinced that he was acting for Brancepeth's interests as well in interfering, since it had been true enough that the lad was so placed that he could not well afford to offend his uncle. Chiltern is a fine fellow, all right, but he's a good deal older than I am, and a conservative in private life as well as public. But in spite of his tendency to preach, and an obnoxious habit of expecting everyone to toe the mark as rigorously as he does himself, I rather like the old cock. He's deuced popular with men, certainly, and is unanimously returned by his borough every election. And then, as another excuse for what might otherwise seem his uncalled for interference in this affair, I rather think he fancied he was doing Dearest and myself a kindness in informing us of the true inwardness of the situation, that we might at least be able to act with our eyes open. That he meant well, I felt no doubt.

Nevertheless, I could see that the part of informant was distasteful to his wife, who, in all probability, had been the means of delaying execution of that duty so long.

These things having become clear to us, we also perceived that the Hon. Cecil Chiltern could not possibly be aware of that morning's events, the elopement of Miss Simplin and consequent sanction of Brancepeth's uncle upon his marriage with Agatha First. So, with one voice and mind, we undertook to enlighten him, Brancepeth and Miss Endicott having grasped the object of his visit on the moment of his arrival.

"I feel it my duty," Chiltern began again, then paused. He seemed to have difficulty in proceeding, with all our pulses, so that we were unable to find out what the fun was in that sort of thing at all.

It was only when we had quieted down somewhat, the girls and Brancepeth and myself, that Solicitor Barnes, who had heretofore been giving his undivided attention to his luncheon, condescended to speak.

"Where are Mr. Terhune and his—ah—er—fiancee, if I may ask?" he said. "One would have supposed that my client's nephew, Mr.—ah!—Mr. Terhune—would have had more curiosity as to the exact value of the property to which he has only just become heir."

"I suppose they're still standing on the stairs, just where we left them," said my wife, ecstatically. "The dears!"

"Not a very comfortable place to make love in I should say," commented the solicitor dryly—he was a bachelor himself. "But I presume they hardly realize where they are, poor things." And his thin lips parted slightly in a smile of infinite pity.

But nobody else at the table seemed at all to comprehend his sarcasm.

Quietly, unobtrusively, my wife and I exchanged glances, and irritatingly enough Brancepeth and Agatha First, and even the impassive Chiltern and Agatha Fourth did the same. We none of us saw anything at all queer or out of the ordinary in the conduct of Agatha Sixth and Terhune. You see, we'd been there ourselves.

And as a needle to its magnet, so did the hands of Dearest and myself, as we sat cat-a-cornered at the table, seek each other under the cover. And with that clasp the last remnant of the illfeeling the exciting events of the past few days had tried to make between us vanished, and I vowed, as I lost myself in the depths of those dear gray eyes, that even as it had been our first misunderstanding, by Jove! it should be our last.

THE END.

SUCCESS TURNS MANY HEADS

Average Man Assumes an Importance to Which He Actually Is Not Entitled.

It is rather a remarkable illustration of the weaknes of our nature that there should be so many persons whose heads are completely turned by attaining even the slightest degree of success. Instead of realizing that the achievement which won him fame is a thing of the past, and therefore buried in oblivion, except to those nearest to him, the average man imbibes a goodly portion of self-satisfaction and drinks to his own conceit. His one success looms very large upon his narrow horizon, and the temporary adulation of a fickle public magnifies its proportions and appears to give him an importance not realy his due. This self-importance is apt to be reflected in all his further efforts, if indeed it does not forbid effort of any sort, and once a man becomes obsessed with an exaggerated idea of his attainments there is small chance of his ever duplicating those attainments. It is just here, however, that so many persons make the mistake of their lives by believing that having once established a record for themselves there is no need to live up to it. If they could only forget their successes, or hide them away in the dim places of their own minds to be peeped at only for inspiration, their self-aggrandizement would give way to a correct valuation of their ability, which would go far toward helping them to new accomplishments. A man's most serious thoughts should be of what is to come, of what he is to do in the future, not of what is passed or of what he has already accomplished.

MADE A GOOD ADVERTISEMENT

Row of Tempting Pies Attracted Musical Students to the Boarding House 'Round the Corner.

Pie, the national dish, has been the subject lately of pure food investigations, fumigation and of an eating contest, in which the champion pie belt of the world was won. But still more recently, in Boston, it was used as an especially clever advertisement. In a certain kitchen window in a certain apartment house that backed up against a certain court, around three sides of which lived certain musical students and other people who dined at restaurants—in this kitchen window was displayed each day a row of tempting pies.

The crust was flaky and delicately brown. Oozing through fancy little pricks in its top was juice so rich and plentiful that the mouth watered at the sight. Occasionally a faint pie odor would float across the court and drive the restaurant frequenters wild with longing. Day after day that kitchen window was pie-filled. Then some student asked the owner of the windof if she took boarders. "No," she replied, with the selfpossession of one who had been awaiting the query, "but those pies are made by a friend of mine on the next street. No doubt she could board you." And she did.—Boston Herald.

Origin of Nuptial Kiss.

The nuptial kiss, with a meaning akin to that of the kiss of peace, had its origin in a most serious and practical church ceremony known as the espousals. Among mediaeval people, as among some classes of Jews today, it was customary for the bridegroom and the bride to meet before witnesses in the church some days or even weeks before the marriage and there make a pledge of future union, and at such times a ring was usually presented by the prospective husband. Sometimes, however, the man was too poor to buy the ornament, and instead presented a kiss, which was doubtless more pleasant, and was considered a binding pledge before man and God.

COMMITTEE PRAISES WORK OF WOMEN

Women's and Girls' State Institutions Are Inspected.

ASK FOR NEW HOSPITAL

Compliments Highly Trustees and Superintendents for Success in Management of Indiana Women's Prison and Girl's School.

Indianapolis.—The only state institutions in the world that are managed by women were inspected by the legislative visiting committee. They are the Indiana Woman's prison and the Indiana Girls' school at Indianapolis. At each place the superintendent and members of the board of trustees are women. Members of the committee expressed the belief that the men in charge of other state institutions will have to look to their laurels to equal the record set by the women, both in the financial management and in the care of the inmates.

At the woman's prison the contrast between the conditions now existing and those under which the prisoners were kept when the prison was part of the Jeffersonville reformatory were held especially striking, and the trustees and superintendent were highly complimented by the committee.

The committee visited the girls' school and were taken over the grounds by Miss Charlotte Dye, acting superintendent, and Mrs. Sarah E. Campbell of Anderson, president of the board of trustees. The purpose of the school is to give delinquent girls, committed by the courts, a thorough training in domestic work and the principles of right living. Girls are taken between the ages of ten and and eighteen and kept until twenty-one, unless paroled because of good conduct. The capacity of the institution is 245. The girls received during the last year number 114. The enrollment is 304, exceeding the capacity by 59 and making necessary the converting of the sitting rooms into dormitories.

Among the appropriations asked is $75,000 for the erection and equipment of two additional cottages, $24,500 for a hospital and $38,000 for an administration building.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Kokomo.—Officers searched the boot shop of Joel Mason and found whisky and other liquors and a quantity of empty bottles hidden in various parts of the place. Mason said the stuff was for private consumption and that he was waiting for his wife to come and help him take it home. Mrs. Mason, however, denied this. Mason finally confessed, and because he is a cripple threw himself on the mercy of Bloomington.—L. R. Thompson, a prominent lodge man of this city, who has been conducting a successful general store at Sanders, has disappeared. He left informing his wife that he was going to Louisville to buy Christmas goods, and saying he would be back Saturday night. Failing to return, Mrs. Thompson called up the wholesale house where he traded, and the manager said Thompson had not been there.

Wabash.—When Harry Kerr, a wealthy farmer living south of the city, awoke he found his wife almost a nervous wreck. During the night burglars had entered the house and ransacked the lower rooms. Mrs. Kerr was awakened, but did not awaken her husband, fearing he would descend and be shot. She lay awake while they worked and informed her husband. Jewelry, clothing and much of value was taken.

Kokomo.—The estate of the late E. B. Keller can now be settled. Final action has been postponed on account of the disappearance, three years ago, of Roscoe Keller, a son, from whom not a word had been heard in months. He has finally been located in Oklahoma, learning from a newspaper article of his father's death. The court proceedings will now be completed.

Fort Wayne.—With a can filled with boiling water as a weapon, Mrs. Nagy Moses Szigal, living in the rolling mill district, drove Assessor John Miller and Township Trustee Henry Branning from her home. Her husband aided her a bit, coming to the front with a stove poker with which he whaled Miller over the head. The trouble arose when Miller and Branning tried to collect the poll tax.

Fort Wayne.—The first of three freewill offerings for the evangelists who have been conducting the three weeks' campaign in this city was taken in all the gatherings. The evangelists will also receive freewill collections Sunday night. Everything except the evangelists' salaries has been paid out of the general expense fund, which amounted to $5,000.

Fort Wayne.—A subpoena was filed with Sheriff Reichelderfer instructing T. P. Riddle, named as secretary of the Northwestern Indiana Hay and Grain Producers' and Shippers' association, to be present and produce the records of the organization at the injunction hearing set for the Allen circuit court December 27. Mr. Riddle is located in Lima, O., but makes frequent trips to Fort Wayne and the fact that he has been instructed to produce the records indicates that the state intends to make an exhaustive examination into the workings of the corporation.

THE CENSUS OF CANADA

ITS GROWTH IN TEN YEARS PAST.

A census of the Dominion of Canada will be made during 1911. It will show that during the past decade a remarkable development has taken place, and, when compared with the population, a greater percentage of increase in industries of all kinds than has ever been shown by any country. Commerce, mining, agriculture and railways have made a steady march onward. The population will be considerably over 8,000,000. Thousands of miles of railway lines have been construction since the last census was taken ten years ago. This construction was made necessary by the opening up of the new agricultural districts in Western Canada, in which there have been pouring year after year an increasing number of settlers, until the present year will witness settlement of over 300,000, or a trifle less than one-third of the immigratio to the United States during the same period with its 92,000,000 of population. Even with these hundreds of thousands of newcomers, the great majority of whom go upon the land, there is still available room for hundreds of thousands additional. The census figures will therefore show a great—a vast—increase in the number of farms under occupation, as well as in the output of the farms. When the figures of the splendid immigration are added to the natural increase, the total will surprise even the most optimistic. To the excellent growth that the western portion of Canada will show may largely be attributed the commercial and industrial growth of the eastern portion of Canada. All Canada is being upbuilded, and in this transformation there is taking part the people from many countries, but only from those countries that produce the strong and vigorous. As some evidence of the growth of the western portion of Canada, in agricultural industry, it is instructive to point out that over 100,000 homesteads of 160 acres each have been transferred to actual settlers in the past two years. This means 25,000 square miles of territory, and then, when is added the 40,000 160-acre preemption blocks, there is an additional 10,000 square miles, or a total of 35,000 square miles—a territory as large as the State of Indiana, and settled within two years. Reduced to the producing capacity imperative on the cultivation restriction of 50 acres of cultivation on each 160-acre homestead within three years, there will be within a year and a half from now upwards of 5,000,000 additional acres from this one source added to the entire producing area of the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

In 1901, at the time of the last census of Canada, successful agriculture in the Provinces of Monitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta was an experiment to many. There were skeptics who could not believe that it was possible to grow thirty, forty and even fifty bushels of wheat to the acre, or that as high as one hundred and thirty bushels of oats to the acre could be grown. The skeptics are not to be found today. The evidence of the hundreds of thousands of farmers is too overwhelming. Not only have the lands of western Canada proven their worth in the matter of raising all the smaller field grains, but for mixed farming, and for cattle raising there is no better country anywhere. The climate is perfectly adapted to all these pursuits as well as admirable for health. The Dominion government literature, descriptive of the country, is what all that are interested should read. Send for a copy to the nearest Canadian government representative.

A Tripe Famine.

"I want to get two pounds of tripe," said the lady, entering the shop.

"Sorry, ma'am," replied the keeper, "but we haven't any tripe today."

"No tripe? Why, it's in season."

"No, ma'am, there's no tripe being shot just now."

"No tripe being shot! Why, what are you talking about?"

"I—I should say, ma'am, that the fisheries commission won't allow tripe to be caught now."

"Are you crazy, man? I don't want fish! I want tripe."

"Well, what in thunder is tripe, ma'am?"

"Why—why, I don't know just what it is, but if you haven't got any I'll try some other place."

The Modern Way.

A couple of young men on the Market street viaduct the other evening offered a new version of an old one. After they had passed a couple of auburn-haired damsels one of the young men took his stand at the curb and gazed up and down the bridge.

"What are you looking for?" inquired his companion.

Pointing to the red-headed girls, the young man answered: "I'm trying to see a white automobile."—Youngstown Telegram.

Kept Umbrella Thirty Years.

A faithful old umbrella which has shielded the family of Dr. James A. Mullican of Greenwood avenue from the storms of 30 years, was stolen on Sunday. During the rain on that day the physician lent the umbrella to E. A. Seck, and while the latter was in a store some one stole it.

"The umbrella belonged to my father and has been in the family for more than thirty years," said Doctor Mullicon the other night. "It has been covered several times.

"To persons who are unable to keep the same umbrella for more than thirty days this may seem incredible, but it is true," concluded Doctor Mullican with a smile.—Chicago Tribune.

Stepmother of Mint Julep.

Romance and poetry have delighted to weave garlands with which to celebrate and perpetuate the glory of the blue grass in old Kentucky, famed for its fine horses, beautiful women and mint.

Kentucky has been designated as the home of the mint julep, and its colonels have become famous all over the world for the easy and graceful way in which they drink whisky with a little dash of sugar and a sprig or two of mint in order, chiefly to overcome the necessity for a large amount of water in the beverage. The true Kentuckian doesn't want his whisky drowned.

It transpires, however, that the real home of the mint and the mint julep is right here in Missouri, whose crop of mint last year amounted to 7,653 pounds, or enough to make 1,224,320 juleps. This amount includes the marketed product only, no account having been taken of the countless thousands of juleps which were compounded during the year with a base of the undiluted moonshine whisky that never paid a cent of tax.—St. Louis Star.

WONDERED WHY.

Found the Answer Was "Coffee."

Many pale, sickly persons wonder for years why they have to suffer so, and eventually discover that the drug—caffeine—in coffee is the main cause of the trouble.

"I was always very fond of coffee and drank it every day. I never had much flesh and often wondered why I was always so pale, thin and weak.

"About five years ago my health completely broke down and I was confined to my bed. My stomach was in such condition that I could hardly take sufficient nourishment to sustain life.

"During this time I was drinking coffee, didn't think I could do without it.

"After awhile I came to the conclusion that coffee was hurting me, and decided to give it up and try Postum. I didn't like the taste of it at first, but when it was made right—boiled until dark and rich—I soon became fond of it.

"In one week I began to feel better. I could eat more and sleep better. My sick headaches were less frequent, and within five months I looked and felt like a new being, headache spells entirely gone.

"My health continued to improve and today I am well and strong, weigh 148 pounds. I attribute my present health to the life-giving qualities of Postum.

GIVES FIGURES ON PAROLES GRANTED

Shows Advantage of Indeterminate Sentence Law.

REPORT ON MONEY EARNED

Paroled People Earned for Themselves During Their Parole Period $1,540,310.55 and Spent $1,266,180.66.

Indianapolis.—Amos W. Butler, secretary of the board of state charities, has prepared for the forthcoming annual report of the board a report on the results of the indeterminate sentence law in Indiana. It is understood an effort will be made to repeal this law in the coming session of the general assembly.

On September 30, the close of the fiscal year covered by the report, the law had been in operation 13½ years. In that time 5,690 persons were paroled under its provisions. Of these, 5,515 were men and 175 women. Of all this number, 26 per cent. proved delinquent during their parole period, which, under the law, is at least one year.

Of the total number paroled, 103, or two per cent., died; 3,160, or 55 per cent., served satisfactorily the full parole period and received their final discharge; the sentences of 444, or eight per cent., expired during the parole period, and 517, or nine per cent., were reporting to the parole officials at the time the report by Mr. Butler was compiled.

These paroled persons earned for themselves during their parole periods, an aggregate of $1,540,310.55, and spent $1,266,180.66, leaving a saving of $274,122.89. The average saving is thus $48.17.

"The indeterminate sentence law has not only been a great encouragement to those who have gone out and a help to those who have proved true to the trust imposed in them," said Mr. Butler, "but it has also been a great assistance in the administration of prisons operating under it. The improvement in administration, discipline and conditions has been as great as has been the better showing in results. It has been demonstrated again and again that the indeterminate sentence and parole laws can be administered under the merit system only and that where institutions are conducted on the "spoils" system there is failure. It will be remembered that the Indiana law and practice were used as a basis for discussion of this subject at the recent international prison congress at Washington, D. C., and upon that was formulated the resolution indorsing the indeterminate sentence and parole system through which it will be offered to all the governments of the world."

Insurance Company Sues State.

The Continental Insurance company of New York has filed suit in superior court to recover $1,970.01, the amount of interest paid to the state by the company at the time it made a settlement of taxes which, it was contended, had been wrongfully withheld by James H. Rice when auditor of state. The company alleges that the interest was not legally due the state, but that it was paid by the company under coercion, John C. Billheimer, auditor, having threatened to revoke the company's license unless it made such payment.

The complaint recites that the auditors and other state officials construed the law as meaning that settlements of taxes should be made with the auditor. This was done by the companies. Until the decision of the supreme court in the David E. Sherrick case, no other construction had been put on the law. The court then held that payment made to the auditor was not legally a payment to the state. It developed, it was contended by the state, that Rice, as auditor, had not turned over all the insurance taxes to the state, hence the companies were served with notice that they should pay to the state the amount Rice had retained. The Continental company alleges that it paid $3,456.81 as such taxes and was also required to pay an additional $1,970.01 as interest.

The supreme court in an opinion in a suit brought by the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York to recover taxes and interest paid in the same manner as that paid by the Continental, held that the insurance company was entitled to recover interest but not the taxes. Suits by the insurance companies to recover the interest are considered advisable by the state auditor's office in order to protect that office in making the payments to the companies, inasmuch as a judgment is believed necessary to legalize the payments.

Opinion by Greathouse.

An interpretation of the law by Charles A. Greathouse, state superintendent of public instruction, is to the effect that a member of a school board may not legally, while a member, contract with the board to teach in the schools over which the board has jurisdiction. The question was presented in a letter to the state superintendent, in which it was explained that the school board in question was in need of a teacher and that it contemplated employing one of its members.

Says Children Are Too Deaf.

In presenting the report of the Indiana State School for the Deaf to the legislative visiting committee, Superintendent Richard O. Johnson declared that there are children in nearly every public school in the state that are really too deaf to be properly cared for in the public schools, although the fact that the child is partially deaf is often suspected by the teacher or even by its parents.

Mr. Johnson explained that this made it impossible for these children to be properly educated in the large classes and the general class work of the public school, and as a result they are designated as lazy and stupid, while in reality they are bright pupils. Being left behind in the race, they become discouraged and indifferent and acquire a tendency down the scale to delinquency, too frequently to depravity, he said.

Discussing the prevalence of deafness, Mr. Johnson told the committee that in all parts of the country where appropriation and capacity permit it the enrollment in schools for the deaf constantly is increasing.

Mr. Johnson said that Indiana has been limited in both capacity and appropriations.

"When these are made sufficient, and through the aid of the compulsory education law and systematic effort, the enrollment in the state will be very greatly increased," he asserted. "Every deaf boy or girl in the state should be given an opportunity for education, and their parents compelled to avail themselves of the opportunity presented.

"The school has been established solely for the benefit of its pupils—to promote their highest intellectual, religious, moral, physical and industrial well-being, to the end that they shall go out from its portals God-fearing, righteous men and women, and honorable, self-sustaining citizens of our state.

"A state-wide view of the lives and occupations of the former pupils of the school confirms the statement that we have been successful and their efforts in after life have rebounded to the interests of the state in every conceivable manner. In fact, it is believed, in proportion to their numbers and according to opportunities presented, a greater percentage of the deaf have attained to worthy citizenship than have the hearing."

Committee Visits State Home.

The report of the Indiana State Soldiers' Home at Lafayette, as presented to the legislative visiting committee, shows the present enrollment of the home to be 1,401, with 300 out on furloughs and a waiting list of 300, whose applications for admission have already been approved by the board of trustees.

To partially relieve this crowded condition the committee was asked to recommend an appropriation of $50,000 to erect and furnish a building with accommodations for 150. Col. W. S. Haggard, commandant of the home, told the committee that because of the limited capacity it was necessary to refuse readmission to the home to members on furlough after an absence of ten days. In order to get back into the home these soldiers must take their turn on the waiting list.

Colonel Haggard stated that this crowded condition was largely due to the fact that in Indiana the wives and widows of the soldiers are admitted to the home, which is done in no other state soldiers' home in the country, and because under the laws of Indiana all honorably discharged soldiers, sailors and marines who have served the United States in any of its wars are eligible for admission after one year's residence in the state.

He asserted that large numbers of soldiers from other states were moving to Indiana in order to gain admission to the home, and that if they could show one year's continuous residence there was no way in which they could refuse to accept them, although they had never fought in any Indiana regiment.

Seeks Hall for Oratorical Contest.

Business relating to the state oratorical contest for college students, which will be held in Indianapolis February 24, was taken up at Indianapolis by the members of the executive committee of the Indiana Intercollegiate Oratorical association.

One of the chief matters discussed was that of a suitable auditorium. The committee sought to obtain Caleb Mills hall for this purpose, but John E. Cleland, business director of the school board, sent word that the use of the Shortridge hall for public meetings had been discontinued because of an order by the city building inspector. The college men believed they should be granted permission to use the hall as it had been announced that the American Historical society would be allowed to meet there this month. A representative of the association will confer with the school board.

The names of a number of educators who would be acceptable as judges in the oratorical contest were submitted to the executive committee by the various colleges. The orchestras of the Indianapolis high schools will be invited to provide music.

VERACITY OF THE BIBLE

After a Visit to the Holy Land Even a Skeptic Must Be Convinced.

One thing cannot fail to impress every visitor to Bethlehem, and, indeed, to the Holy Land generally, who is imbued with true Christian faith and a proper sense of the sanctity of the location and of the events that have transpired there, and that is the more than remarkable correspondence between the things and places shown us today as having been associated with the life and work of the Saviour and other events that enter into the structure of our religious faith and the descriptions and accounts of them, as furnished us in the pages of the Holy Scriptures. They agree with them in every respect and it is impossible, after carefully considering and comparing them, to doubt their identity, so exactly are they in accord with the Bible narrative.

The work in the fields, the arrangement of the buildings, the very articles of diet and clothing of ancient days are plainly recognizable in the doings and surroundings of today. Indeed, where modern methods have not become obtrusive the manners and customs of the people remain much the same as in the days of the presence on earth of the Saviour. Between the descriptions given in the Bible of localities, climatic and geographical conditions, distances, etc., of these times and those of today there is hardly any discrepancy. Even a skeptic, considering this remarkable accord of circumstances with the Biblical narrative, cannot but be convinced of its veracity; to the believer it comes as a wonderful conviction, a satisfactory corroboration or encouragement to see things as those who described them so graphically saw them so long ago.—Columbian Magazine.

Fresh Air in Winter

In winter, it is hard to get fresh air in certain rooms. Some rooms in a house are usually colder than others, and if you open the windows it is hard again to heat the room properly.

If you keep the windows closed you don't get fresh air; if you keep them open you cannot quickly reheat the room. The solves the difficulty. You can leave the windows in a room open all day in winter, and when you close them apply a match to a Perfection Oil Heater and heat the room to any temperature you desire in a few minutes.

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Absolutely smokeless and odorless

The Perfection Oil Heater is finished in japan or nickel. It burns for nine hours. It has a cool handle and a damper top. It has an automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that the wick can be quickly cleaned. An indicator always shows amount of oil in the font.

The filler-cap does not need to be screwed down. It is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, because of a new device in construction, and consequently, it can always be easily unscrewed in an instant for rewicking. The Perfection Oil Heater is strong, durable, well made, built for service, yet light and ornamental.

Your correspondent had for Christmas guests only her daughter and two little grandsons. Our Christmas gatherings are getting thinner and fewer each year. The most of our loved ones have gone to sit at the table with the Lord, and we think of them and miss their pres nce from our table at our family gathering, but expect to meet them again in the sweet by and by.

The dance in the Newville hall, last Thursday evening, turned out just what such things generally turn out, a fight and blood shed. Julian Day was the man that used the hammer, Orin Cook was the unlucky man. Dr. Brunson was the man that sewed up the wound in Cook's head. Day after he had downed his man run north, but Hugh Traxler ran after and caught him and brought him back to face the music. Cook was pretty badly hurt. No arrests have yet been made

Special Bonus Offer

Holds good until the first count Monday, January 9.

The Judges for the piano contest are:

S. W. Tustison, assistant cashier of St. Joe Valley Bank.

C. A. Patterson, manager of Patterson's Department Store.

H. C. Hathaway, Bakery-Grocery.

The big prize voting contest is attracting more attention every day, so as an incentive to all contestants we have decided to give the following special bonus votes:

For every seven new subscriptions 4,000 extra, making a total of 8,200.

For every seven renewal subscriptions 3,000 extra, making a total of 6,500.

For every seven back subscriptions 3,000 extra, making a total of 4,800.

The above special bonus offer will hold good until the first count, on Monday, January 9th, at which time the votes will be counted by the judges, who will award $10.00 in gold to the contestant who receives the largest number of votes up to the first count.

Remember the $10.00 in gold to be given the contestant having the largest number of votes on Jan. 9th is a special prize offered by the NEWS. It will in no way affect the standing of the winner of the contest. A few contestants have thought that the winning of this $10.00 would affect their vote for the piano. All votes found in the ballot box on January 9th will be included in the final count which will decide the winners of the piano and other prizes.

One on the Drummer.

An Indianapolis traveling salesman picked up in Montreal exactly the sort of sealskin jacket he knew his wife had for a considerable period silently longed for. About a hundred miles out of Niagara on his journey back to the States a woman wearing a sealskin coat entered the car. She would have to pay no duty, he reflected, as the garment was part of her immediate wearing apparel. Directly across the aisle sat another woman, also by herself. She was young, stylishly gowned; but she was not wearing a sealskin; and a sudden inspiration came to the drummer. Why pay that atrocious, heartbreaking, purse flattening duty? Why not— And he had crossed the aisle.

Of course she was willing to accommodate him when he had explained the little difficulty that beset him. "No trouble at all," she said. "I shall really enjoy wearing it immensely."

She was indeed as good as her word in this respect; for when the gauntlet of the customs officials had been safely run and Mr. Drummer turned to thank her, saying: "I shall now take my jacket, if you please," her answer was a stony stare of surprise.

"Your jacket!" she exclaimed. "I don't understand you. This jacket is mine."

And it was; for she added significantly, "You had better go along now or I shall speak to the police."

Culture Club

On last Wednesday evening at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Hamilton, on Widney Avenue, the Culture Club held one of the most delightful events of the season. This being the annual Christmas meeting. Every thing was harmonious, the house being beautifully decorated with holly and scarlet bells.

The following was the program.

Piano Solo	Pluma Hamilton
Reading	Harriet Johnson
Vocal Solo	Rose Widney
Recitation	Lucile Woodcox
Piano Solo	Flossie Copp
Xmas Story	Alice Copp
Vocal Solo	Lucile Woodcox
Roll Call	Humorous Stories

After the program a nut contest followed in which Mrs. Deama Curie won the prize. Also a contest of names in which Miss Flossie Copp won first prize. Following this was the annual Xmas exchange after which the dining room was thrown open and the guests invited to partake of the elaborate banquet which had been so nicely planned by Mrs. Hamilton, assisted by Mrs Pluma Hamilton.

This room was certainly a marvel of beauty. A long table extended the full length of the room and twenty-four covers were marked by dainty gold-edged place cards on which was tied a spray of holly. Suspended from the ceiling directly above the center of the table was a large bell decorated with smaller bells. From the ribbons of green and white were drawn to the four corners of the table. An elegant menu consisting of Bread and Butter sandwiches, Pressed chicken, Waldorff salad, Pickles, Celery, Marshmallow cake, Fig Newtons, Fruit salad, Coffee and Marshmallows, was served by the hostess.

The evening was enjoyed by all very much and each departed to their various homes after thanking Mrs. Hamilton for the very pleasant evening spent.

Obituary

Elizabeth Flint, daughter of Lemuel and Mary Miner Flint, was born at New Lyme, Ashtabula, County, O., February 9, 1830, and died at Hicksville, December 28, 1910, aged 80 years 10 months and 14 days. When a child of but a few years, she moved with her parents to Ann Arbor, Michigan, where they resided about one year, when they came to DeKalb County, Indiana, locating on the St. Joe river near the old home, where her girlhood years were spent. On February 4, 1849, she was united in marriage to Harmon Gee by Elder James Hadsell. To this union were born eight children six sons and two daughters, one son dying in infancy, the rest growing to manhood and womanhood on the old farm, where the husband and father died February 19, 1899. She still lived in the old home with Sherman, her youngest son until he too was taken away in November 1905 After which she made her home with her children.

At the age of eleven she gave her life to Christ, uniting with the church at Coburn's Corners, of which she remained a faithful member to the end. Her daily life and practice was always an influence for good leaving her children the legacy of a life well spent. And although her last days were full of suffering yet she bore it patiently until relieved by the peace and rest which comes to all.

The funeral services were conducted from the Coburntown Church on Monday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock by Rev. F. A. Thomas assisted by Elder J. A. Brown. Henry Beams, undertaker. Burial in the Alton cemetery.
